NAME SHIP FOR CIO WAR HERO:

A new Liberty Ship, launched this week at Richmond, Calif., was named after Lawrence Gianella, member of the CIO American Communications Assn., who gave his life in fighting the Nazis. Above, christening the vessel, is the hero's sister, Miss Rose Gianella, who received the Distinguished Service Medal, awarded posthumously. Gianella gave his life in the torpedoing of the S.S. Prusa, sunk in the Pacific in December, 1941. He remained on the rapidly sinking ship, which went down in nine minutes, in a vain attempt to rig an emergency radio antenna. He is the fourth radio officer to receive the DSM. All four were ACA members.

Dem. Head Backs CIO Demand For Army Vote Bill

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31 — A leading spokesman for the Democratic Party this week came out strongly for the right of soldiers to vote. The spokesman was Postmaster General Frank C. Walker, chairman of the Democratic Natl. Committee. His stand was taken in answer to identical telegrams sent to both Democrats and Republicans by Sidney Hillman, chairman of CIO's Political Action Committee.

"There can be but one honest answer," Walker wired Hillman, "to your appeal for the privilege of those in our armed services for voting at the coming election. If any citizen of this country has a right to cast his ballot in the determination of those entrusted with the duty of deciding on the policies which may mean life or death to those devoted men and women, that right pre-eminently belongs to the people who are offering their all for the defense of our democracy.

"The process should be made as simple and easy as possible," Walker added. "It is hollow to talk of the right to vote unless we also guarantee the opportunity to vote. There is no suggestion of partisan politics about it. It would be a strange democracy that singled out for disfranchisement the citizens who are giving the greatest service for democracy."

HILLMAN'S WIRE

The Hillman telegrams to the party chairmen, urging speedy action, said in part:

"We remember with appreciation your support and endorsement as the chairmen of your party of the original Green-Lucas Soldiers' Vote Bill in public hearings before the Senate Privileges and Elections Committee.

"We believe that the re-affirmation at this time of your unequivocal support for a uniform, simple Federal ballot, administered by a bi-partisan Federal ballot commission, would do much to reassure the families of our heroic servicemen."

Hillman pointed out that "unless Congress acts promptly upon its return to Washington to pass a practical, uniform Federal ballot, the right of our fighting men to vote will inevitably become a major political issue in 1942."

Cooperate On Lynn Politics

Lynn, Mass., Dec. 31—The United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers this week won promises of cooperation from editors of both daily newspapers here in connection with the union's political action drive in 1944.

The promises were made at a union-editors conference, first such ever held here. The full scope of labor's political program was discussed. Union officials expressed the feeling that the conference will lead to better public relationship.

Nazis Stew Over Murray Statement

Washington, Dec. 31—The Office of War Information this week revealed that CIO Pres. Philip Murray's recent plea to European workers urging them to sabotage the Nazis has worried some of the big shots in Hitler's hierarchy more than they care to admit.

One of them—Dr. Siegfried Horn, diplomatic correspondent for DNB, the German news service—took the trouble to quote Murray by name in trying to refute his statements that the Nazis are the slave drivers of Europe.

Horn toots a tune that only weakly attacks Murray's basic point — that the Nazis have crushed labor unions in their drive to grab more profits by destroying the conditions the workers of Europe enjoyed under the limited democracies that preceded Hitler's dictatorship.

Venturing into the realm of fantasy, Horn says that "it is interesting that immediately after Roosevelt's return to America, the President of CIO tries to make up for the failure of Cordull Hull."

Horn's argument approaches the infantile when he says that Murray did not address one or the other of the working classes of the different European nations but called upon European workers as a whole, thus "bowing unwillingly before the unity of working peoples in different European countries who show their allegiance to the common cause by working for the European destiny."

The broadcast, incidentally, was short-waved to Bulgarian workers, who were urged by Murray not to become dupes of the Nazis by going to Germany to take jobs at poor pay and under wretched conditions.

BERLIN, Sept. 8.

IN past centuries the world's attention very often was attracted by, even centered about, what was happening in Germany; very often in the past the world at large has observed the spiritual and mental as well as political development of our people with surprise and amazement, sometimes even with suspicion. This is probably due to the fact that the Germans are a people of their own kind. They no doubt do look at things and take them very earnestly, very seriously and very thoroughly. The geographical position of Germany in the heart of Europe and the fate of the country have educated the German people not to take things lightheartedly.

Foreigners have always understood this. In the end, however, the world at large has admired mostly Germany's accomplishments after carefully investigating and sizing up the results of such German developments, which in a good many respects, spiritual as well as political, have ultimately been forward strides in the spiritual as well as political realm, not only for Germany but for the world at large. At this point amazement and suspicion were replaced then by confidence and collaboration.

If we consider our Nazi development in Germany and what unique and new accomplishments it has brought about, we must admit, no wonder foreign countries cannot possibly understand what is the meaning of all this.

The outstanding feature of our whole development is the strong, unique personality of Adolf Hitler. The mental revolution the leader has brought about in all hearts is stupendous. One success of amazing importance is his unifying the Reich and people as well.

Most likely, the far-reaching importance and dimensions of the Nazi revolution and its factual results are what have brought about in other countries such amazement and even suspicion. But now we think that other countries, as in times past, should try to size up what Germany with justice.

Second, what about legal security in Germany?

Usually I answer the first question by saying the following:

Just 20 years since the Great War. The world, however, is not at ease as yet. The nations live apart from one another, every one of them burdened with enormous political as well as commercial.

These sorrows are common the world over and could only be handled by common peaceful endeavors.

Hearst Paid by Nazis

Chief outlet for native fascist propaganda in this country is the chain of yellow dailies owned by William Randolph Hearst. By length of service and scope of operations, the Hearst papers are even ahead of The Chicago Tribune-New York Daily News combination as "interpreters" of the Axis war on humanity.

Of course, Hearst made his fascist propaganda activities pay—even back in 1934. A few months after German manufacturers brought Hitler's anti-labor, cut-throat regime to power, Hearst concluded a deal with the new government.

Ostensibly, it was only a purchase of the Hearst news service by the German propaganda division for 1,000,000 marks ($400,000) annually. But Germany was already well supplied with American news through the Wolff Bureau, which had a mutual exchange agreement with the Associated Press. This did not cost Germany a penny.

An examination of Hearst files, however, throws light on the deal. On this page are presented some photostatic copies of bylines and headlines appearing in The New York American in 1934.

Frequent contributors were Fascist Premier Benito Mussolini of Italy; Nazi Air Minister Hermann Goering, Hitler's second in command; Dr. Alfred Rosenberg, Nazi "educational" director; and Franz von Papen, then vice chancellor.

Fascism was established mainly for one purpose: to crush labor. This was true in Italy, in Germany, in Spain and in certain Balkan countries. Like Hearst, it is essentially anti-union and has never come to power anywhere except at the instigation of reactionary capitalists.

There are forces in this counrty which would rather see fascism here than the New Deal. Who they are can best be learned by following the native fascist press.

Safety Law Enforcement Up to Labor, Unions Warned

NEW YORK, Dec. 31—Enforcement of health and safety laws in this country is largely up to the labor unions, the Industrial Health Committee warned in making public a survey of state regulations in the major industrial areas.

Regulations cover 15 health and safety measures, ranging from respirators and exhausts of poisons to safety shoes and lunchrooms. Reason enforcement depends so much on the unions is lack of inspectors. Principal states provide inspectors as follows:

	Plants per Inspector	Workers per Inspector
New York	205	7,214
Pennsylvania	118	9,459
Ohio	288	21,579
Illinois	216	12,660

Most states have improved their safety laws in the past few years, the committee reports. Total industrial hygiene expenditures in 1935 were about 1/50 of a cent a worker. Today they are more than 1/30 of a cent.

New York leads in protective measures for workers. Ohio and Illinois are a close second, California and Pennsylvania are next. Of the states surveyed, Connecticut has fewest safeguards.

Workers' Education Pamphlet Published

Washington, Dec. 31—A bird's-eye view of workers' education today and how it got that way is given in a 64-page pamphlet just published by the American Labor Education Service, Inc.

Called "Yearbook of Workers' Education," the pamphlet, which starts off with a letter of greeting from Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, contains a dozen or so articles on various phases of the movement.

Among CIO contributers are Lawrence Rogin, educational director of the Textile Workers Union; Clinton S. Golden, assistant to the President of the United Steelworkers of America, now on leave to the Government; and Svend Godfredsen, educational director of the United Packinghouse Workers.

The Yearbook may be obtained from the American Labor Education Service, 437 West 59 St., New York City; 50 cents a copy.

Louisiana Labor Sets Up OPA Adv. Group

Baton Rouge, La., Dec. 31—Labor now has its own voice in the Office of Price Administration in Louisiana. At a meeting of the central OPA advisory committee here, CIO and AFL representatives set up an independent committee of labor members to formulate suggestions to the OPA. They are planning a complete labor advisory setup, including the appointment of an OPA committee within each union local.

Recommendations already made by the labor advisers to the OPA include:

1. More vigorous enforcement of OPA regulations.

2. Appointment of labor representatives to OPA price panels.

3. Union boycott of black markets.

4. Support of Pres. Roosevelt's subsidy program.

CIO Steelworkers Win Retroactive Pay Point

U. S. Labor's '43 Production Effort Speeded Axis' Doom

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1—Paul Joseph Goebbels, the Nazi lie chief, dipped briefly into the truth when he told the Germans that "nobody would be sorry to see 1943 end"—but he forgot to add that American labor was one of the chief sources of Nazi emotion over a year that went badly for the Axis from beginning to end.

For it was this year just past that saw the "miracle of production" that enabled the Allies to take the offensive against the Axis first in Africa, then Sicily and Italy, that helped the Red Army to smash forward from Stalingrad to the Dnieper and beyond, that made possible the brilliant attacks on the Japanese in the Pacific.

PRODUCTION MIRACLE

This "miracle of production" actually is no miracle at all, and will be repeated and magnified, as CIO President Philip Murray has promised, in the year to come, until the Axis is finally destroyed by the combined drives pledged at the Teheran conference.

The "miracle" took place because the CIO made it possible; because the CIO was big, strong and united behind Philip Murray and President Roosevelt for one single purpose—the job of winning the war and winning a just people's peace from the war.

Looking over the year's record, we can easily understand why Goebbels snivelled and whined to the Germans about the year that ended so badly for them. Here, in summary form, are only a few of the highlights of American labor's year, as reflected in the growth and power of labor's leading organiaztion, the CIO.

5,285,000 MEMBERS

To begin with the organizational strength of the CIO: over 1,100,000 new members, men and women both, joined in 1943. CIO's biggest union, the UAW, hit over the million mark alone; the United Steel workers were pushing that record as the year ended; the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers climbed to 600,000.

In the same period, 1,150,000 members in good standing were in the armed forces. The total membership, excluding those in the forces, stood at 5,285,000 when Murray reported to the 6th convention in November.

This organizational growth, of course, continues all the time. As an example, the CIO won in the 12 months between July, 1942, and July, 1943, 1,752 NLRB elections of the 2,304 it took part in, with 503,718 votes of the total 893,000 polled.

WIN-THE-WAR GOAL

These are the bare figures of CIO's growth during the past year. They by no means tell the whole story of CIO's achievements and its work for victory in 1943, but they do show very clearly that the American working man and woman recognizes the CIO, wants to join it and does join it whenever given the opportunity.

The reason why American workers approve of the CIO is not only measured by the protection they derive from it, not only by the wage increases, the security, the improved living and working conditions they get from membership.

They approve of the CIO, and they made it even stronger than ever before during the past year, because CIO's every activity is aimed at speeding the nation's victory in the war and at uniting the nation's resources behind the offensive fighting fronts.

Take CIO's year long struggle with Congress as an example. Here the record of black-and-white achievement isn't so plain to see, but it's there, and the workers know it.

STRUGGLE WITH CONGRESS

The struggle began with the opening of the new Congress—the 78th—in January, 1943. Loudly self-advertised as the "Victory Congress," it immediately began to establish itself as anything but.

The opening weeks set the tone of disruption that the majority of Congress was to follow throughout the year—disruption aimed not only at organized labor as such, but at the government's war agencies and war policies, at economic stabilization necessary to win the war, and at the pocketbook and food basket of every American.

There is no need to recite the dreary list, beginning with the re-

FDR Order Corrects WLB Mixup; Mills At Full Production

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 31—The steel mills of the nation were roaring at full production this week, with members of the United Steelworkers of America back on the job and satisfied, after brief stoppages. They were assured that the principle of retroactive pay would be applied to current wage negotiations.

USA Pres. Philip Murray urged full compliance with a War Labor Board order, reversing a previous WLB decision, which established the principle of retroactive pay within the limits of the wage stabilization policy.

In wiring the complete text of the revised War Labor Board directive to all USA locals, district directors and staff repersentatives, Murray said:

"This action on the part of the Natl. War Labor Board at the direction of the President of the United States, will correct the grave situation created by the WLB on Thursday, Dec. 23." The Board on that date voted to deny the principle of retroactive pay, despite the fact that negotiations on the USA's demands for a 17-cent-an-hour increase obviously would extend beyond a Dec. 24 expiration date for contracts affecting more than 300,000 workers.

The Dec. 23 Board decision was corrected by order of President Roosevelt. The order met Murray's full approval, as evidenced by a wire to John Brophy, CIO representative on the WLB. The wire to Brophy, sent Dec. 27, said:

WIRE TO BROPHY

"I am asking that you present to the Natl. War Labor Board at seven o'clock this evening the following telegram which I have forwarded to the directors and representatives of our international union in the field:

"In accordance with the telegram of the President of the United States addressed me yesterday I am directing you to urge upon the members of our organization the need of continuing uninterruptedly the production of steel and steel products essential to the war needs of our nation. This is in conformity with our organization's no-strike policy. I am informed that this evening at seven o'clock the labor members of the Natl. War Labor Board will offer a motion to the Board that a directive be issued consistent with the President's telegram which I have every reason to believe will be supported by the public members of the Board."

Murray, in his telegram to USA officials instructing them to comply with the revised WLB directive on retroactive pay, ordered them:

1. "To include in all extension agreements the directive of the National War Labor Board, which was issued at Washington tonight.

2. "You will make sure that the incorporation of this directive in all extension agreements will be precisely as stated without qualification."

NO-STRIKE POLICY

The telegram concluded:

"You are further advised of the need of continuing uninterruptedly the production of steel and steel products essential to the war needs of our Nation. This is in conformity with our organization's no-strike policy.

"All necessary measures should therefore be taken by the officers and members of our Local Unions to promptly comply with this policy, and to assure the representatives of your organization the opportunity to negotiate by peaceful means the perfection of a satisfactory wage agreement, with the understanding that if the new agreements include any wage adjustments, such adjustments shall be computed retroactively to the date when your contract would have expired."

The complete text of the telegram to union district directors was sent to the Local Unions with this preface:

"A telegram has been forwarded to the director of your district. Full compliance with the provisions of this telegram are absolutely essential on the part of all Local Union Officers and members. Please extend every degree of cooperation to your director in fulfillment of these instructions."

A Sales Tax Or . . .

In its campaign for a sales tax, the national Chamber of Commerce claims to have unearthed some workers who favor this method for making the poor shoulder the rich man's tax burden.

As evidence that "widespread sentiment" exists for a sales tax, the Chamber's Washington Review reports that "a small, eastern steel distributing company conducted a poll among its workers which showed 104 votes for a 10% retail sales tax . . . "

Remarkable! But wait a minute, this is only half the story. The report continues with "17 votes for a 10% increase in the withholding tax, and 3 not voting."

In other words, the workers were apparently asked which they preferred, a 10% sales tax or a 10% increase in their withholding tax.

Caught between the devil and the deep blue sea, most of them evidently decided that a devil of 10% more docked from their wages was worse than floundering in a sea of 10% higher living costs.

This incident is typical of the phoney sales tax propaganda. Actually the choice is not between two alternative methods of soaking the lowest paid. It is between taxing the wealthy according to ability to pay, or making those least able to pay bear most of the burden through a sales tax.

If these workers had been asked if they preferred a 10% sales tax to higher taxes on upper incomes and war profits, we don't think the sales tax would have received a single vote.

On Compromises

The air is thick with talk of compromises on most of the big issues awaiting action by the next session of Congress.

The popular demand for food subsidies to keep down living costs has led Senator Taft to propose a compromise severely limiting the use of subsidies, instead of banning them altogether.

The anti-polltax bill (HR. 7) has gained such momentum that there is renewed talk of reviving the constitutional amendment proposal as a "compromise."

Similarly, the Senate's action in virtually denying the right to vote to the armed forces has stirred up such a storm of public indignation that few politicians dare openly to defend its stand. Instead they are talking of compromises such as a constitutional amendment or federal collection of the soldiers' votes, leaving the states free to count them or not.

In one sense, some encouragement may be drawn from all this compromise talk. For those who are sure of their position and confident of public support don't talk compromise, and the fact that opponents of subsidies, polltax repeal and the soldiers' vote are now doing so indicates they realize the weakness of their position.

On the other hand, their alleged compromises should be recognized for exactly what they are—attempts of the tories to gain by weasel-worded confusion of the issues what they are losing hope of gaining in an open and clear-cut fight.

For instance, nothing but federal action along the lines of the Green-Lucas bill will really assure all our fighting men their voting rights. Compromises will simply continue the disfranchisement of millions of them while aiding opponents of the soldiers' vote to hide themselves from public wrath.

The constitutional amendment "compromise" on the polltax is nothing but a complete sidetracking of the issue, making polltax repeal virtually impossible. But it would furnish an "out" for politicians who claim to oppose the polltax while actually supporting it.

As for food subsidies, any of the proposed limitations on them would be flirting with inflation and allowing living costs to go up first "just a little" and then more and more.

Urge your representatives in Congress to stand firm against any compromise on the basic principles of food subsidies, passage of HR 7 to end the polltax, and federal provision of votes for soldiers.

The anti-democratic tory crowd are on the run on all these issues and are worrying about the 1944 elections. Let's keep them on the run. And let's remember there's another word for compromising with such forces. That word is "appeasement," and everyone knows what appeasement did for Hitler.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

"WHY do you use that nasty word 'profiteer?' " writes "New Reader." "I don't see it in any other papers I read. They all say high taxes make profiteering impossible in this war."

Well, let's take a peek at the profit picture, and then if you know of a better word, let's have it.

Corporation profits today are four times higher before taxes and more than twice as high after taxes as they were before the war.

True, the total paid in wages has also increased substantially. But this is divided among millions of additional workers working many more hours than before the war, while the hugely increased profits go to about the same number of investors as before, without any more effort on their part.

Furthermore, corporation profits are figured after all expenses. If wages were similarly figured, you would subtract taxes, increased living costs, etc., leaving a "loss" rather than a "profit" in most cases.

Then too, today's huge profits are largely guaranteed under government cost-plus-profit contracts, without risk to the investor. Most additional capital has been put up by the government, and some corporations have admitted counting taxes as part of their costs and increasing prices to cover increased taxes.

But, it may be said, doesn't the government get back these big profits later anyhow, through income taxes on the individual coupon-clippers?

If Congress had not turned down the $25,000 limit on individual net incomes, and if it had closed the many loopholes through which the wealthy escape fair taxation, there might be more truth to this contention.

In any case, the corporations are holding on to their big war profits, instead of passing them on in dividends. Only about half of war profits are being paid out in dividends.

Money-making corporations have piled up some $16 billion in undistributed profits from 1941 to 1943, and about $19 billion since 1939, which they are holding to divide among stockholders after the war, when income taxes are lower.

But again, it may be asked, how can such huge war profits be accumulated, when there is a 90% excess profits tax?

This tax is as full of loopholes as most of the rest of the taxes affecting the wealthy.

In the first place, there is a 10% refund, so the net tax is only 81%. Then corporations have a choice of yardsticks for measuring excess profits.

If they made huge profits on invested capital before the war, they can continue to make the same rate of profit without paying any excess profits tax.

If, on the other hand, they have a big invested capital as compared with profits, they can measure their exemption on the basis of this invested capital. And there are many more loopholes.

Then, too, there are dozens of ways in which corporations can conceal their war profits.

One of these is through "depreciation and depletion reserves," and corporations are buying about $5 billion worth of new plants and equipment from the government out of their war profits.

Another method of concealing war profits is through huge salary increases, and Undersecretary of War Patterson reported it to be quite common for corporation salaries to increase from $5,000 to $50,000, or from $10,000 to $100,000.

In addition, the corporations still have a claim on the money paid to the government in war taxation.

Congress has provided that if they have losses after the war, they may get refunds from the Treasury on these taxes.

By the end of 1944 there will be a $26 billion reserve for such refunds, which is enough to guarantee the corporations normal profits for two years after the war.

Wouldn't it be nice if Congress would similarly guarantee all war workers their normal wages for two years after the war, out of taxes paid during the war?

For the above insight into war profits, we are indebted to an illuminating article by Nathan Robertson in the December American Federationist.

This column has summarized a few of his main points, quoting some of the government figures he has assembled. They should be enough to show why labor demands tax legislation that will really reach into war profits and relieve low-income groups from such threats as the sales tax.

LABOR DRAFT FLOP AS AID TO MANPOWER

CIO Political Parley Slated For '44—Murray

NEW YORK, Dec. 31—CIO's Political Action Committee will hold a national convention in 1944, prior to the Republican and Democratic national conventions, for the purpose of drafting and presenting to the American people "a specific set of principles for the general welfare," CIO Pres. Philip Murray revealed this week in a signed article in the current issue of American Magazine.

"Then, after the Republican and Democratic political conventions," Murray said, "we can decide what action to take regarding the two parties and the individual candidates, whether for state or national offices, or for the presidency."

NOT A THIRD PARTY

The CIO Political Action Committee, financed with a contribution of $700,000 from CIO unions, "is not a Labor Party or a Third Party," Murray wrote. "There is no present intention to form such a party."

In tracing the factors that prompted the organization of the Political Action Committee, Murray flayed Congress, the farm bloc, some war-time agencies that allegedly have a "pronounced anti-labor bias," and said that the committee will work to prevent the re-election to Congress of "ignorant, selfish and short-sighted men."

On the basis of a "long study by the CIO Post-War Planning Committee," Murray declared that "we believe the government should at once set up a federal agency to plan for transition to full peace-time consumption, employment and production. It should be headed by a policy board, with representatives from agriculture, labor and government."

MUST GUARANTEE JOBS

Murray contended that the government must be prepared to operate $20,000,000,000 worth of government-owned war plants, once the war is over, if private industry cannot operate them to "benefit the people rather than the few." He added, "if private enterprise can pay a fair price for them, and can operate them with reasonably full production and employment, well and good.

"President Roosevelt has traditionally been a friend of the working man," Murray stated, "but the present Congress has witnessed the most violent and continuous attacks ever made on labor and labor's rights.

"The failure of Congress to control inflation has been a scandal and a disgrace; acting chiefly under the pressure of the so-called farm bloc, which is really made up mostly of big businessmen and profiteering middlemen masquerading as farmers, Congress has systematically crippled all effective efforts to hold down the cost of living, and has opened the door wide to a really dangerous inflation."

Murray characterized the Political Action Committee, which already has held conferences in Philadelphia, Birmingham, Dallas, Minneapolis, Detroit, Seattle, San Francisco, Los Angeles and Cincinnati, as the first American organization to be founded "to protect the rights of the working man, the farmer, the small business man, and the so-called common man." He predicted that, since the program has been well received, the nation-wide organization will be perfected within a few months.

"In choosing the directors of the 14 original regional offices," Murray stated, "we shall not confine ourselves to union men, but sympathy with and knowledge of the labor movement will naturally be required." He declared that the committee, "through its legally exercised educative powers, will have more influence on events in the crucial year of 1944, than any third political party could wield."

Time Out!

A Madrid dispatch this week quoted a diplomatic source as saying that Benito Mussolini died 10 days ago. The report may be grossly exaggerated but it makes darned pleasant New Year reading!

Funniest quote of the week!—Col. Robert R. McCormick, publisher of the Chicago Tribune, declining to be considered as a Presidential candidate in the Illinois primary, said, "It would be a great mistake for me to give up the activity which has proven to be so useful to undertake one of uncertain value to my country. . . ."

* * *

There may be some doubt about the Colonel's usefulness as a publisher, but there's absolutely no question about the fact that his value to the country as President would be decidedly uncertain.

* * *

Some Congressmen who want polltaxes "killed" by constitutional amendment are flirting with the idea of applying the same "solution" to the soldiers' vote bill. The Congressmen are sure that by the time the next war rolls around it won't make any difference to them whether the servicemen have at long last obtained the right to cast their ballots.

newal of the Dies committee, coming on down the line to the Smith-Connally bill, the Frey rider hamstringing the Wagner Act, the attempts to wreck price control, the refusal to allow the needed rollback on food prices, the outrageous spare-the-rich tax bill, and all the long and discouraging list of Congressional majority monkey business during 1943.

FIGHT NOT OVER

The point to remember is—and this is the encouragement in the whole picture—that the CIO fought every step of the way, and, in fighting, armed the people for the next rounds coming up after this Congressional holiday recess is over.

The first step in this fight was the formation, under President Murray's leadership, of an organized CIO legislative arm, acting through the national office under Nathan Cowan and the cooperation of all CIO affiliates here in Washington and throughout the nation.

For the first time, labor in America took to the legislative job as a full-time affair, not something that can be done in a fire-alarm fashion, dashing out full speed at a time of crisis and meekly creeping back after the crisis is over.

Today, CIO's legislative pressure is felt in Congress—not enough, of course, because Congress still runs hog-wild on many issues—but it registers, because CIO organized the legislative job in 1943 and made it a continuous, steady affair involving millions of voters.

VISITS TO CONGRESSMEN

When a Congressman goes home nowadays, for example, he doesn't look forward to a pleasant interlude of building political fences. The CIO—and the CIO Women's Auxiliaries along with it—see to it that the Congressman spends his recess hearing from the folks who sent him to Washington.

This was part of CIO's contribution to the nation's security during 1943. The greatest development, however, came in July, when President Murray asked Sidney Hillman to head up CIO's Political Action Committee.

This also was something new in labor history, contributed by the CIO. Previously, labor had more or less limped along under the old Gompers theory of "reward your friends and punish your enemies," with no serious attempt at large-scale, continuous political action on an independent basis.

The response from the people shows show ready they were for this new political independence. From its announcement as a Committee in July, CIO's new venture now has grown to a nation-wide organization, with regional offices, staff, connections with labor and all progressive organizations—and, most significant to the professional politicians—money, $700,000 worth of it, as a starter.

PEOPLE WANT ACTION

The people want political action. They're looking forward to 1944. They demand something better from Congress than the record of disruption and sniping at the war that has marked pervious sessions. All they need is the organization and the apparatus to make their demands articulate—and in 1943, CIO gave them this organization.

Add another first on political action; the enrolment of women on a large scale as a progressive force in American political life. This new factor, stated by President Murray in a speech to the CIO Congress of Women's Auxiliaries, will bring the strength of millions of wives, sisters, mothers of CIO members to the win-the-war, liberal side in the 1944 election and beyond.

Organization, legislative work, the formulation and pressing home of programs to strengthen the nation for victory and a just peace, nation-wide political action, the great campaigns for better wages to meet rocketing living costs—these advances marked CIO's year on the home front in support of the fighting fronts abroad.

INTL. LABOR UNITY

In previous years, issues such as these—the so-called "domestic issues"—marked the limits of labor's action. But just as the home front and the fighting fronts are tied inseparably together, so are the "domestic" issues tied in with "foreign" affairs.

CIO, under Philip Murray's leadership, showed again in 1943 that foreign affairs and domestic affairs are tied in, and that labor will not confine itself to the one at the expense of the other.

Acting early in the year, President Murray pressed the demand of the CIO for genuine international labor unity, based on full equality and recognition of all the trade unions of all the United Nations.

Urging this point, to the intense displeasure of certain AFL officials and to the annoyance of their likes in Britain, Murray succeeded in getting the conference called in London for next June that will lay the groundwork for just this kind of unity—unity of all workers of the United Nations to win the war and make a good peace after the victory.

HOME FRONT TOO!

This heightened interest of labor in its fellow-workers in other countries reached a high point at the 6th CIO convention, where Murray welcomed the invitation to the London meeting and where the delegates unanimously approved his actions.

Unity on the international fronts demands unity at home, and here again the CIO, with its consistent fight for unity of all races and all national origins in this country stands out in the record of 1943.

Acting in January, Murray set up American labor's first functioning Committee to Abolish Racial Discrimination, headed by CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey. CIO's record on this issue is known throughout the U. S. and the world. In setting up a permanent committee of the national CIO, Murray acted to implement still further CIO's policy of rigid opposition to discrimination or Jim Crow in any form.

As Philip Murray points out, the record in 1944 will be an even greater one, more significant than ever before to the security and well-being of the American people, more important historically to the people of the entire world.

1944 will be the year of the great coalition offensive that will end fascism forever. And there'll be no Goebbels to scream on the Nazi radio at the year's end. Goebbels, his master Hitler, Tojo, and all their crew, will be gone—and the CIO will have played its full part in sending them on their way.

New CIO NEWS Masthead

The CIO NEWS this week inaugurates a new masthead, indicative of many changes to come during 1944.

Among changes contemplated for the near future are more and bigger features, a weekly comic strip, and a four-page supplement, which will provide more in the way of background material than the CIO NEWS heretofore has published in its efforts to keep the membership fully informed on "spot" news developments.

Smith Smear Group Grabs FEPC Files

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31—As the fight against discrimination on the southern railroads went to President Roosevelt from the Fair Employment Practices Committee, Rep. Howard Smith (polltaxer, Va.) stepped in to help Jim Crow and strike a blow at national unity.

Smith's action, typical of the monkey-wrench work of his Committee in the House, came with sizure of all FEPC records by committee counsel Aaron Ford. This is designed to do a double job: (1) To provide material for a smear on the FEPC, and (2) to hold up and sabotage its work by removing all its files.

Similar tactics were used by the notorious Smith in his probe of the Natl. Labor Relations Board five years ago when he employed every possible device to cripple the Board's work while conducting a mud-slinging campaign against it and against the Wagner Act.

Smith's Committee did this job on FEPC while Congress was in recess. The next time you write your Congressman, remind him again that you don't like the way committees like Smith's, like Dies', and like the one Gene Cox used to run, operate against the public interest.

Congress to Return Jan. 10—Watch It!

By ELEANOR FOWLER

Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

Congress will have some of the most important home front issues of the war before it when it reconvenes January 10. Let's be sure that our Congressmen and Senators also have overwhelming evidence of where the people stand on these issues so they'll vote right.

The subsidy fight will go on. The end of February is now the deadline for the present program. CIO auxiliaries have been doing a fine job so far. We had a big delegation here in Washington at the Emergency Conference called by the Congressional Committee for the Protection of the Consumer.

Faye Stephenson, our national president, spoke at the meeting. Dorothy Keene and Catherine Gelles, president and secretary-treasurer of the United Automobile Workers auxiliaries, were delegates. Six women from the auxiliary of the Transport Workers Union came down. Katherine Beecher, educational director of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers auxiliary was here. And all of these women went with their state delagations to Congressmen and Senators.

Just before Christmas Sisters Guay and Dugas from the Lewiston, Maine, Textile auxiliary were in Washington on other business. They took time out to see their Senators on subsidies and poll tax.

ACTIVE IN FIELD

Auxiliary women have been active in the field, too. The Los Angeles Auxiliary Council worked with the CIO Council there on printing and distributing 40,000 copies of a leaflet explaining the importance of subsidies. They took them door to door in the districts of the Congressmen who voted against subsidies.

NMU Auxiliary members in New York spent several days on the shipping floors at the union hall explaining subsidies to seamen just leaving to deliver the goods. They sent in over 500 cards to Congressmen and Senators.

WORK REALLY HELPS

Does all this work help? Of course it does! Here's a story to encourage you. All this year UE Auxiliary 1138 in Hopkins, Minn., has been writing to Congressman Gale. He voted wrong on subsidies in June. He had a hot session with the union and the auxiliary in July, at which he told them he was against subsidies, and they told him why subsidies are necessary to assure working people the food they need to produce for a quick victory.

The union and auxiliary got more and more cards in to Congressman Gale. He heard every day that the people in his district wanted subsidies. And he was one of 15 Republicans who voted right on subsidies in December.

See that your Senators and your Congressman get that kind of pressure. Urge them over and over to vote for subsidies; for a bill to assure every service man and woman and every member of the merchant marine a chance to vote in 1944; for the anti-poll tax bill; for an adequate social security program.

W. Coast Probe Shows Labor Baiting Not 'Dead Dodo'

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31—Labor is working so hard these days to turn out all the things needed to win the war that it hasn't been paying much attention to what dirty tricks, if any, the anti-union bosses are up to now.

And so two reports describing some pretty low-down business that labor-haters were engaged in during the years from 1935 to 1940, submitted to the Senate last week by Sen. Robert M. LaFollette of Wisconsin and Sen. Elbert D. Thomas of Utah for the Senate Civil Liberties Committee have a strange, ante-bellum sound.

The war has probably put a stop, at least for the duration, to the conspiracies, the lavish sums spent on anti-labor outfits, and the alliances formed with local police to fight labor, told about in the two volumes recently released by the Civil Liberties Committee. These volumes, the sixth and seventh of a series of 10 parts constituting the report upon the Committee's extensive field investigation and hearings held on the West Coast recall that such things went on not so long ago, and might be revived.

After the National Labor Relations Act had been upheld by the U. S. Supreme Court, the report states, "business and industrial leaders determined to nullify it not only by negative but by positive action" and "engaged in a series of organized conspiracies to destroy labor's civil liberties."

The Committee's inquiry in Los Angeles, the report says, is "the most extensive analysis of the integrated labor policy of employers' associations in one metropolitan area ever undertaken by this Committee.

"In this analysis, the origin, structure, finances, labor policies, and activities of seven employers' associations operating in Los Angeles were studied."

These included the Merchants & Manufacturers Assn., the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, Southern Californians, Inc. The Neutral Thousands, which purported to be an organization of women and consumers interested in labor relations as a community service, and three separate but related trade organizations.

The report analyses the operations of the "community of opposition" and finds the groups guilty of "the mass application of common anti-union devices such as labor espionage, the use of professional strikebreakers, the use of industrial munitions, the blacklist, discriminatory discharge and a host of similar weapons."

A significant aspect of the conclusions of the Committee report was the determination, based upon the record, that the actions of the anti-union and anti-labor activities of the organized employers were backed and sponsored by other groups in the city, such as the banking and financial groups, certain leaders of the local press, and until recently, many of the public officials.

The Committee noted that Los Angeles, notorious during the 1930's as a stronghold of anti-union industry, presented in its most intense form the problems which are prevalent in other urban and industrial areas where influential forces dominating the entire community refused to accept the national labor policy.

The city, the report states, "is but a symbol of many other areas in various parts of the Nation where the exercise of labor's rights and the practice of collective bargaining are met with hostility of an organized 'community' character, engendered by the strong industrial or agricultural groups who stand to gain from an anti-union labor policy."

By HOLLACE RANSDELL

One of labor's bitter gripes has long been that it does not get a fair break with the nation's school kids. Labor claims textbooks on social sciences used in schools either give students a prejudiced notion about unions and collective bargaining or ignore their existence entirely.

Now comes a book with the avowed intention of remedying this. "The American Story of Labor and Industrial Relations," a 315-page illustrated book issued by the New York State Joint Legislative Committee on Industrial and Labor Conditions, records in the preface a "conviction that a specific course in industrial and labor relations should be offered in every high school in this state."

Although prepared with the primary aim "of providing a unit of study" for New York high schools, the book is also written to appeal to the "interested citizen, whether or not he is immediately concerned with the management of a business or with its operation as a worker."

"The American Story of Labor and Industrial Relations" is a well-intentioned book, and a good start in the right direction.

It fails, however, to give an adequate idea of the struggles of the labor movement, the idealism that fired its leaders, or the blood and violence suffered, such as the killings in the Colorado mine fields, the Pullman railroad strikes, the murders committed against steel workers in the 1919 strike, or the more recent Memorial Day massacre of steel workers in Chicago in 1939.

DEVELOPMENT TRACED

Beginning with the concept of unions and the place of workers in American life more than 150 years ago when the Federal Society of Journeymen Cordwainers, a craft union of shoemakers, was organized in 1792, the author traces the development of union ideology down to the present, pointing out that for three-quarters of a century, the craft union was the only form developed by American workers.

Part 2, called "The rules of the game," describes the anti-union practices of employers — blacklisting, yellow-dog contracts, labor spies and other coercive devices that made it necessary for legal protection to be given labor to organize although its right to organize had been recognized by the courts since 1815.

Part 3 takes up the challenge of the war and the peace to industrial and labor relations in America.

Start a Vineyard In Your 'V' Garden

By SUNNY PRESSMAN

Staff Writer, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

The new year is here and it's not too early to be making your resolutions for a bigger and better victory garden this spring and embarking on a new venture in gardening—starting your own vineyard.

After finally being discouraged last year about growing a vineyard in my back yard I decided to look into it further, and I discovered that it can be done, and you can have a vineyard and your own home-made wine.

A vineyard is something that belongs on a graceful slope in a special climate and can hardly be expected to grow in one's own back yard. But it really is not so impossible when you get the facts.

First of all, you have to be prepared to wait for three years for your first full crop of grapes. The actual care of the vineyard is no more difficult than caring for tomato plants.

You can plant your vines 6 feet apart in rows that are 8 feet apart. Between the vines you can plant all your vegetables. Tomatoes, cabbage and pole beans can be planted in the same row with the vines, while the rest of your vegetables can be planted in between the rows.

TIPS ON PLANTING

To plant a vine, cut it down to two "eyes" so that it looks like a stemmed "v." Then trim the roots to 4 inches. Plant in a deep hole with just the two eyes—the pronged end—showing, spread out the roots and pack the earth firmly around them. Put in a 6-foot stake next to the vine for it to climb on, just like tomatoes. As the vine grows tie it once or twice to the pole to keep it growing straight.

The first year the shoot may grow to 5 or 6 feet. One thing, however, you'll have to watch for. Vines have to be sprayed with a light bordeaux mixture, following the directions on the package, about two or three times during the summer. The first spraying should come when the vines are six inches high, the second towards the end of June, and the third around the first of August.

During the first year the object is to get a permanent straight trunk for each vine. When the young vine begins to "push" each of the eyes will give off a shoot. When these shoots are about two inches long, simply rub off the weaker one, so that all growth is concentrated in the single shoot.

You can plant vines in the spring as soon as you can work the ground. If you can't plant the vines as soon as you get them, dig a hole, put the bundles of vines in it and cover it lightly with earth so they won't dry out. When ready to plant, lay out your vineyard in rows dig out your vines and put roots into a bucket of water. Dig your hole, pick out a vine from the bucket and trim for planting.

There are several hardy varieties that are recommended. Write to the Dept. of Agriculture, Washington 25, D. C., for further information.

Let us all here and now resolve under the leadership of our great president, Philip Murray, to make the year 1944 a banner year; a year of victory for our nation and our organization; determined to go on with the crusade with unflinching spirit and resolved to organize the unorganized into the CIO! We wish for all of our affiliated unions, officers thereof, regional and sub-regional directors and staff of the CIO a HAPPY AND PROSPEROUS NEW YEAR.

Govt. 'Down Under' Has Close Tie with Labor

Sydney, Jan. 1 (ALN)—The close ties between Australia's labor movement and Prime Minister John Curtin's Labor government were demonstrated this week when Deputy Prime Minister Frank Forde, Supply Minister John Beasley, and Transport Minister E. E. Ward attended the al-ports conference of the Watersiders Federation.

All the cabinet members reiterated their promises to work in close contact with labor. The Watersiders backed the Moscow, Cairo and Teheran conferences, pledged to increase production and elected James Healy, federation general secretary, as delegate to the forthcoming New Zealand Watersiders conference.

Murray Writes For 'Look'

Washington, Dec. 31—Pres. CIO Philip Murray this joined AFL Pres. William Green and Louis Stark, labor reporter for the N. Y. Times, in presenting labor's side of the case in a two-page spread on the subject, what labor and industry see for 1944, published in the January 11 issue of Look Magazine.

Murray said that labor "will strain itself to the limit" to break production records in support of our troops, will demand wage adjustments to protect workers' health, will call for full application of the Administration's economic stabilization program, and will work hard to elect a real "victory Congress" in 1944.

Japanese Prisoners Report

Grip of Militarists On People Weakening

By ISRAEL EPSTEIN

(Fifth in a series of exclusive Allied Labor News articles on Japan, based on information from former Japanese workers now prisoners of war in China. Next week: Japanese anti-fascists give their program of aid to United Nations.)

CHUNGKING, Jan. 1 (ALN)—The great strike movement of 1941, which agitated not only Japanese industry but also Japanese agriculture, in which rent strikes of the peasantry began to take a menacing form, came to a temporary halt with the beginning of the Pacific War on Dec. 7. This was not wholly the result of suppression and wartime regimentation. Just as at the beginning of the China war the militarists had been able to fool the people with a temporary war boom and the pretense of freeing China from misrule, so now, when after four years the people were thoroughly tired of the seemingly endless war in China, they held out promises of the expulsion of white imperialsim and the common prosperity of all the Asiatic nations.

But at the end of 1942 the strike movement began again. It began because exploitation had reached a point where it could go no further, and because with exhaustion came questioning. Many victories had been won, but the war with China had also begun with victories, yet had never ended.

Now new sacrifices had been made, much greater than those that had called forth the protests of 1941. The whole country was conscripted. Work was the most intense and makes the lowest in human memory. Soldiers and sailors were killed, merchant ships were sunk, workers fell ill or went mad from exhaustion, homes were broken and juvenile delinquency increased.

People Wanted Peace

The people saw schools closed, their daughters become prostitutes and their sons turn into child gangsters. Still there was no end in sight. The people of Japan began to want peace more than any other thing in the world.

All recent Japanese prisoners in China agree that the hatred of the war, the government and the capitalists have risen to unprecedented heights. The only reason the people continue to follow the government is fear that the country and they themselves will be destroyed if they do not. The people are always thinking of some way of stopping the war —and achieving a peace that will bring not victory but freedom, food and relief from their crushing burden.

It is because they can see no such peace and no such way out that the new and very extensive wave of small strikes in the factories, mines and among rural labor that began at the end of last year has not taken on the proportions of a revolutionary wave or even of the general unrest of 1941.

Strikes Spreading

Yet prisoners say that the strikes are widespread and growing, and that there is evidence from Japan itself that this is so. Even local officials of Japan's fascist "party to end parties," the Imperial Rule Assistance Association (which amalgamates all political organizations in the country) have begun to cry out urgently for a lightening of the workers' load, sensing a crisis if this is not done.

At the so-called central cooperating conference (national convention) of the IRAA last spring, fascist delegates from the industrial districts made a declaration: "The feeling of the Japanese people toward cooperation in winning the war is weakening. Is not the working class the only group that makes sacrifices, while the people on top do nothing and make money?"

Japanese anti-fascists in China say that if the United Nations address the people of Japan in the spirit of the Moscow declaration concerning Italy and Austria, the anti-war movement within Japan will be greatly stimulated. Such a declaration would show them that there is a third way besides continuing this senseless war or the destruction of their country—and that this third way lies in unconditional military surrender, the complete overthrow of the militarists and the renunciation of all conquests and imperialist gains.

They say that if it is proved to the Japanese people that the defeat of the militarists will leave them peace, national independence, food and the opportunity to establish a democratic government, then the best elements of the working class and other groups will begin to work conscientiously for the defeat of their own army. The "self defense" propaganda of the militarists will be countered and their lies exposed.

British War Workers Start Tour of U. S.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31—An international exchange of visits between British and United States war workers reached its third phase today with the arrival here together of four British rank-and-file trade unionists and four American workers who have spent a month in British war plants, workers' homes and U. S. military installations abroad.

After a week in Washington conferring with government and labor officials— British and American, American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations—the Americans will return to their home plants, each taking one of the four British men for an intensive study of the living and working conditions of the men and women who work in United States war factories.

Later the British workers separately will visit other war plants, and the American workers will return to their production jobs. The eight will leave Washington January 5 or 6.

James Henry Ward, aircraft fitter from the Armstrong Whitworth factory in blitzed Coventry, will go to Burbank, Calif., with Stanley Ceizyk, of Lockheed Aircraft, who is a member of the Int. Asso. of Machinists, AFL. Ward is a veteran of the last war and has been active in the great British Amalgamated Engineering Union for 18 years.

Pat J. Carey, of Handley Page Aircraft, London, will accompany Joseph Smith, of Chrysler Corp., to Detroit. Carey, like Smith, is a sheet-metal worker, and has been active in that union, as Smith has been active in his local union of the United Auto Workers, CIO.

John Henry Jones, who has worked in the Lancashire Steel Corp. near Manchester for more than 30 years, will be taken to the Bethlehem Steel Corp. plant at Bethlehem, Pa., by Hugh Mahoney, Bethlehem worker and member of United Steelworkers of America, CIO. Jones is a member of the Iron and Steel Trades Confederation, chairman of a Ministry of Labor & National Service Tribunal and has been active in municipal affairs in his community.

John G. Clark, of Imperial Chemical Industries, Billingham, will go to East St. Louis, Ill., with Otto O. Butler, of the AFL Chemical Workers to visit Butler's home plant, Monsanto Chemical Co. Clark, son of a village blacksmith, has worked in his factory for 23 years, and is active in the Transport and General Workers union.

The international exchange of visits is sponsored jointly by the Office of War Information and the British Information Service, with the cooperation of other agencies of both Governments and the labor movements of both countries. Regional labor representatives of the War Production Board, working with British consulates and other war agencies, will schedule the visits of the British workers during the next four or five weeks.

During their stay in Washington the eight workers will visit Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, high Army and Navy officials, the War Labor Board, the War Production Board, the War Manpower Commission, and other agencies concerned with labor and war production. They will be entertained by Ambassador Halifax at a tea at the British Embassy.

Parker, with $1,267.74 back pay, bought $1,000 worth.

OPA Fights Smith, Defends Policies Of Price Control

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31—For one of the few times in recent Congressional history, a government war agency has turned around and hit back at a smear committee—this time, the OPA in a sharp reply to Rep. Howard Smith (polltaxer, Va.) by Administrator Chester Bowles.

Smith's attack on the OPA, which has been going on since his special disruption committee was set up early in the session just past, included such helpful charges as "illegal, absurd, useless and conflicting regulations" by OPA, OPA's alleged misuse of its powers to "sentence citizens of the U. S. to starvation," and the like.

A particular point of Smith's charges was that OPA should administer the Price Control Act so that nobody could possibly be forced out of business for any reason whatever. Replying to this, Bowles wrote to Smith:

"To require OPA to adjust every maximum price so that no seller would have to sell any commodity at a loss would compel prices to be fixed to cover the prices charged by the highest-price, highest-cost, least efficient seller in every industry, and to rise with every increase in his cost or decrease in his efficiency.

"Nothing more inflationary could be imagined. Prices set by free competition have always forced high-cost marginal firms out of business in great numbers every year."

Replying in great detail to other charges, Bowles showed that OPA's legal record, its record of keeping up to date on cases, etc., is good throughout the country, and that therefore no hardships were being inflicted on business.

Says Pacific Has No 'Paris,' Servicemen Need More Letters from Home

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31—"I am sending you a clipping from Newsweek—it will give you an idea about something in the Pacific." That was the way a letter received by a member of The CIO NEWS staff began this week. The letter was from a Navy friend who's a solid CIO member, who isn't too much dis- turbed by "the same old routine, day in and day out," but who wants the folks back home to know just how badly the boys stuck on some of the South Pacific islands need some cheering letters to keep up their morale. Excerpts from the clipping follow:

"The worst thing wrong with the Pacific, so far as servicemen are concerned, is that it hasn't any Paris—or anything else, either. The islands the men garrison, no matter how large, are just specks in the immensity of ocean. Leave is a term covered by regulations, but it doesn't mean a thing. The troops know they're stuck on their islands.

"What affects the men is not so much individual homesickness as a sense of somehow losing contact with the United States. (They jest among themselves as to the fates of their units. Long after the war, they say, some brass hat will remark to another: 'Say, whatever happened to the Blank Division? My God we forgot all about them! We've left them on Bougainville for fifteen years!') They think constantly of gong back, even if only for a few weeks.

"The boys strive to keep some contact with home, particularly by writing letters so as to get letters back.

"On none of the ten islands I have visited was there anything that could be called a morale problem. Being in the Army, the men long ago resigned themselves to sweating it out. However, they write hundreds of poems, of varying degrees of printability about the Pacific. Here are a couple of stanzas from a typical one:

'And a Christmas card in April is considered up to date;
'Where we always have a payday, yet seldom draw a cent,
'But we never miss the money, because we'd never get it spent.

'On a South Pacific island, ten thousand miles from home
'Where beards grow long and stubby, and your hair's too short to comb;
'Where you're sure of going to heaven, for anyone can tell,
'This God-forsaken outpost is a substitute for hell.'"

CIO Still Goes to Town

UE Wins 6 Elections in Week; 15,000 Workers Involved

NEW YORK, Dec. 31—Six important NLRB elections involving a total of more than 15,000 workers, all employed in vital war plants, were won by the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers during the last week in 1943, bringing the union's organizational gains for the year to a climactic end.

At the giant Singer Manufacturing Co. plant in Elizabeth, N. J., the CIO electrical unon won a Labor Board election by almost 2 to 1, receiving more than 2,500 votes. A year's drive by the union finally broke through the long established paternalism in the Singer plant. Formerly engaged in makng the world-famous sewing machines, the Singer shop is now employed practically exclusively on war work.

Other UE victories included elections won at the Westinghouse plant in Cleveland, where an independent union was defeated by a 3-to-1 majority; and Bendix Aviation Corp., at Philadelphia, where the UE received 2,694 votes.

Workers Quit District 50, Vote CIO in Eight NLRB Elections

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 31—A revolt of employes of the Harbison-Walker Refractories Co. against District 50 of the United Mine Workers, which started about a year ago, is going full speed ahead, with the CIO this week winning its eighth consecutive Labor Board election.

It is significant that in each of the eight elections at plants of this company, starting in October, 1942, District 50 had had contracts. But the futility of that "catch-all" group started the rebellion with the result that the regional CIO office here, drected by Anthony Federoff, was swamped with demands for the CIO.

In the Labor Board elections the CIO polled a grand total of 1,011 to a paltry 37 for District 50. In elections at three other plants of the same company, District 50, which had been conducting organzing drives, retreated before election day and hastily withdrew from the ballot.

Thus the CIO is exclusive bargaining agent for all 11 plants.

Here are the election scores:

	CIO	Dst. 50
No. 1 Plant, Clearfield, Pa.	195	0
No. 2 Plant Clearfield, Pa.	142	3
Barrett Works, Barrett Pa.	121	8
Retort Works, Pow'l'tn, Pa.	81	0
Chester, Pa. Plant	194	12
Wallaceton Works, Wallaceton, Pa.	64	1
Lower Woodland Plant Mineral Springs, Pa.	60	1
Hays Plant, Hays, Pa.	154	12

The three elections in which Dstrict 50 withdrew from the ballot are:

	CIO	No Un.
No. 3 Plant Clearfield, Pa.	149	4
Machine Shop Cl'field, Pa.	35	26

Texas Labor Baiting Flop; Vote Goes CIO

WAXAHACHIE, Tex., Dec. 31—One of the worst samples of labor baiting this territory has ever seen this week disgraced this town which calls itself the "queen city of the cotton belt."

The baiting was contained in a recent issue of the Waxahachie Daily Light, which darkened its six pages with no less than a page and a half of Chamber of Commerce advertisng urging employes of the Waxahachie Garment Co. to vote against the Amalgamated Clothing Workers in an NLRB election.

The ads, which spotted almost every page in the paper except page one falsely tied the CIO to the mine workers' strike, questioned the patriotism of CIO workers, tried to split soldiers away from workers and declared that the CIO "can't win wage increases."

"Just think a minute. Can you face 'your boy' when he comes home and say, 'I voted for the CIO'? Be sure to vote 100 percent. Waxa. C. of C."

P. S.—Despite the rash of labor baiting, the Waxahachie workers voted 243 to 231 for the union.

Martinsville Va., Dec. 31—Employes of the Jobbers Pants Co. this week chose the Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union to represent them. The vote, in an NLRB election, was 292 for the union to 285 against.

How to Win Friends & Influence People

Washington, Dec. 31—Here's proof that heat from the home folks counts in Congress, and that you too can win friends and influence people on Capitol Hill.

It comes in a letter to Irving Richter, UAW-CIO Washington Legislative representative, and was published in "News Flash" by UAW Vice-President Richard T. Frankensteen. The letter, signed by Local 645 Pres. Jack Anderson, of Dallas, Tex., says:

"Since our visit to Washington all the Senators and Congressmen have written myself and other officers of the local quite frequently. When I insist that they support bills that come up before the House they always advise us immediately what their positions are, and I must say that their position has been fair since our vist to Washington."

Post-War Lecture Series Slated By CIO Engineers

New York, Dec. 31—The Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists & Technicians announced today the inauguration of a program for war and post-war planning to be initiated with a series of lectures entitled "Planning In War and Peace." The lecture series, under the auspices of FAECT's Planning Committee, will include discussions on community, city, national and international planning, and social and economic analyses.

The series will include: "Planning In the U. S. S. R.," by Hans Blumenfeld, internationally famous architect and former member of the Russian State Planning Institute; "City Planning in Europe," by Jose Sert, architect and city planner; and "Education for Planning in the U. S. A.," by Professor Serge Chermayeff, a distinguished British architect.

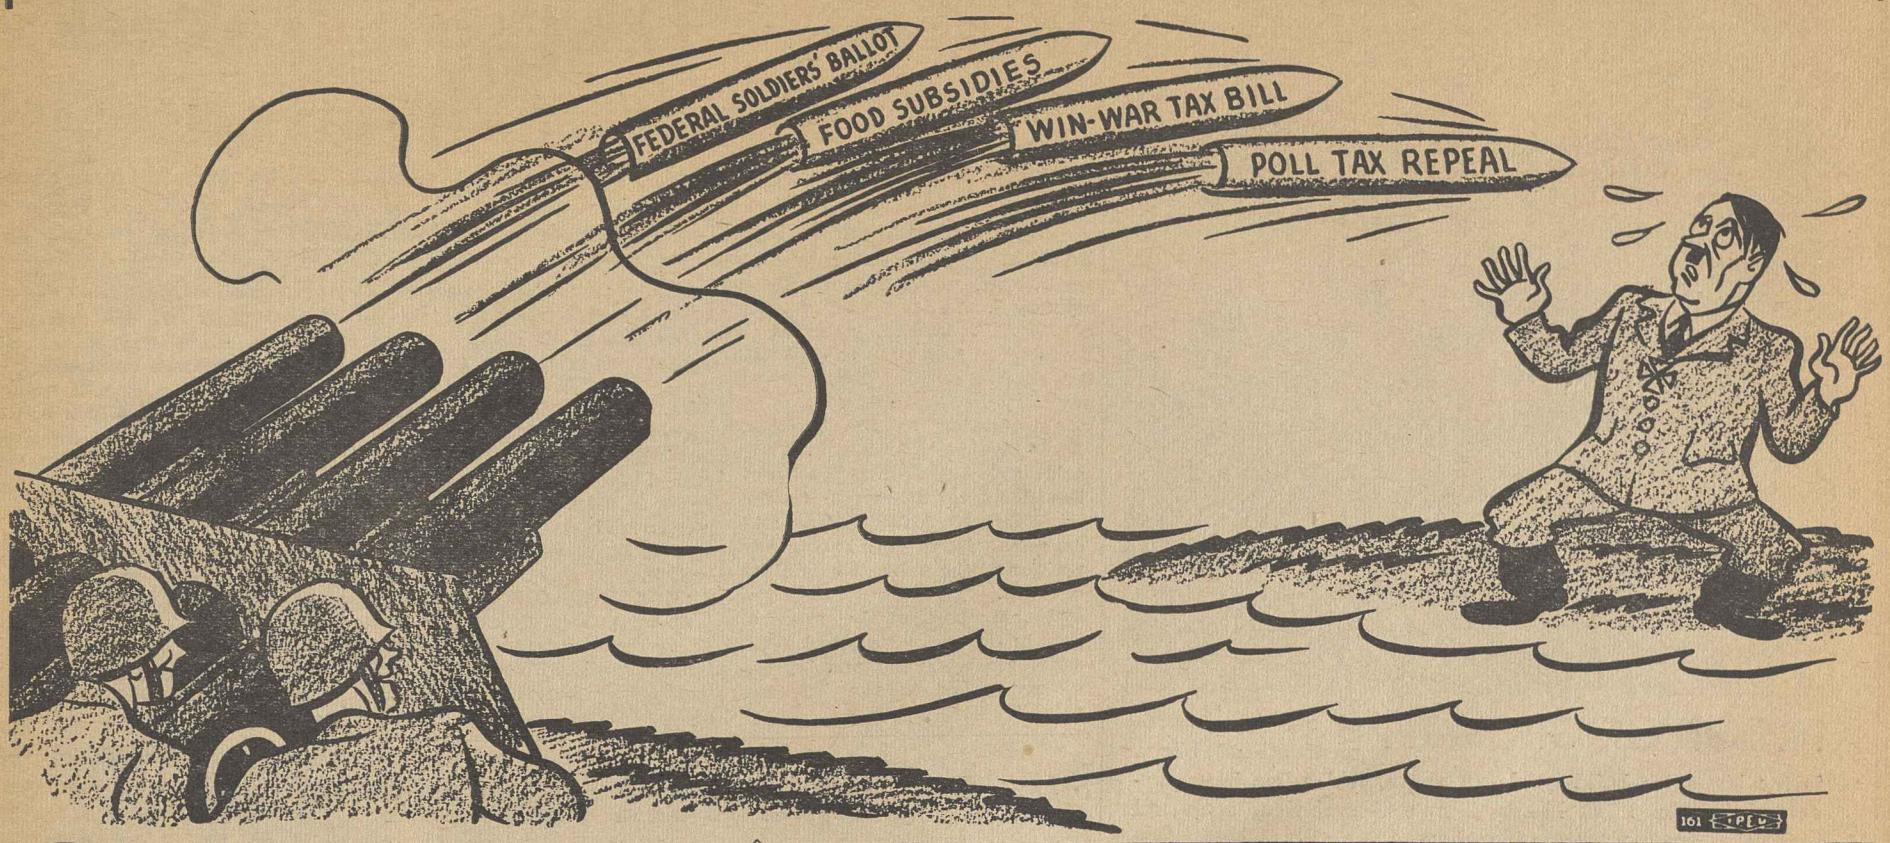
Home Front 'Present' for Hitler



Congress May Fight Wrong War

Congress is back this week—Jan. 10—in what the daily papers like to call a "fighting mood."

The question, who's Congress going to fight—Hitler or American labor—depends on the job YOU did during the recess and the job you're going to do from now on.

From all indications in Washington, Hitler and Tojo will not be the main targets. The reactionaries on both sides have had a signal to cut loose with an even more violent blitz against unions and all win-the-war forces than before.

The blitz can be countered, just as the Axis blitz has been beaten down, if every worker, his wife, his neighbors and all his fellow citizens do their duty by themselves and their country.

Remember this: Congress is not all just polltax Democrats and tory Republicans. Congressmen can be influenced; they can be persuaded to work and vote for a win-the-war program, for labor—but only by YOU.

Main Issues to Work On

Here are the main issues to work on:

UNIONS: The blitz most likely will come with such bills as the Austin-Wadsworth forced labor act, new attacks on the Wagner Act, new and more virulent forms of the Smith-Connally Act, etc.

Demand: an end to anti-union provocations which hamper war production, no labor draft, repeal of Smith-Connally, end of Frey rider on Wagner Act that legalizes company unions.

SERVICEMEN'S VOTES: The only way the armed forces and merchant marine can vote is by a Federal system of issuing, collecting and counting the ballots. This is provided in HR 3895. Accept no substitutes or "compromises" because they aren't compromises at all, but surrenders.

Demand: support from your Representative for HR 3895, opposition to all compromises from whatever source. Keep after your Senators for a similar bill.

LIVING COSTS: The fight for subsidies to cut food costs and increase output is where it stood in December. Here again proposed "compromises" are phony as a nine-dollar bill. Use of public funds to hold down prices saves from $4 to $12 on every $1 invested.

Demand: support from your two Senators for extension of CCC bill (HR 3477) without Section 3 that bans subsidies, full use of funds as needed to keep down prices to the war workers, and costs to the government—which you pay in taxes.

Note: Taxes, too, are now a big part of living costs. Keep them from getting still bigger by demanding a win-the-war tax bill based on ability to pay.

POLLTAX REPEAL: This elementary step to full democracy is long overdue. The same "compromise" line must be rejected once more. You can't compromise on democracy; either 10,000,000 Americans will or won't get the right to vote.

Demand: immediate Senate debate and passage of HR 7, the repeal bill; no stalling either on constitutional amendments or by filibuster.

965% Profit! Yet Management Wants Check Reins Loosed!

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8—The "national scandal" that would result from the attempt in Congress to block re-negotiation of profit-swollen war contracts was again blasted this week with release of a minority report from a group of Senators headed by Sen. David I. Walsh (D., Mass.).

The report, which follows a warning by U. S. Treasury Sec-retary Morgenthau some weeks ago that a "national scandal" was brewing in the war profits grab, listed some 200 instances of inflated profits in 1942, one of which reached as high as 965 percent on net worth in 1942, after taxes.

The new disclosure is expected to be a powerful force in throwing back a Senate attempt in the current tax bill to wipe out present re-negotiation provisions that allow at least a half-way chance for the government to end the most flagrant cases of profit-stealing.

Four concerns were named in the report, the rest left anonymous. Of the four, the most shameless was the Warner-Swasey Corp. of Cleveland, which made four times its pre-war average in 1942 after taxes, an average of 49 percent of the company's worth. Warner-Swasey is one of the firms that is loudest in proclaiming the poverty of big business through ads in the daily press.

The Timken-Detroit Axle Co., another big firm, scooped up $8.25 million in 1942, again after taxes, for another 400 percent increase over pre-war years. The Elastic Stop Nut Corp. cleaned up almost $3.5 million, compared to $400,000 for its best pre-war year—also after taxes.

"These cases are not exceptional instances," the minority report said. "Similar profit figures are general for such articles. In 1942, the profits after taxes of 19 companies making perishable tools were 11 times their pre-war average.

"The 1942 profits of 25 woolen textile companies had increased nine-fold. Profits of 10 lumber companies for the same period quadrupled. Fifty-three cotton textile companies realized eight times as much profit after taxes in 1942 as the average pre-war years. These figures represent profits before re-negotiation."

KEY TO FIGHT

This last phrase of the report—"before re-negotiations" — is the key to the fight now going on Capitol Hill by the big war profiteers and their agents in Congress, who persuaded the majority of the Senate Finance Committee to amend present re-negotiation clauses in the tax bill to make them meaningless.

"To wage this war," the Walsh report said, "the nation must expend its substance and the lives of its young men on an appalling scale. Measured by their sacrifice, any lesser contribution of time, or effort or money seems but a paltry mite. Equality of sacrifice there can never be.

"But if we cannot match their supreme sacrifices we must do our best to spread the burdens of the war as fairly as we can. Above all else, we must make certain that no group or class shall exploit the war for its selfish benefit."

UAW BOOKSTORE:

The largest union in the nation this week opened its own, non-profit bookstore, under the auspices of the UAW-CIO Education Dept. It sells books to union members at a considerable reduction. Looking over what the shop has to offer, at 5021 Woodward Ave. in Detroit, are: UAW Pres. R. J. Thomas, left, and Sec.-Treas. George H. Addes, with Education Director William H. Levitt doing the honors.

PROOF OF GROWTH of the CIO movement in Flint, Mich., is the big office building shown above, which has been purchased by the Flint Labor Temple Association, composed of the elected officers of various Flint CIO locals. The structure, to be named "CIO Building," will provide a center for practically all CIO activities—a far cry from the Flint of 1937 when CIO organizers were driven from the city and union members were shot by police.

ACA Wins Big Wire Victory, Retains Pact

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8—By a vote of 10 to 2, the AFL members opposed, the War Labor Board this week extended the contract held by the American Communications Assn. covering 15,000 Postal Telegraph employes who are now working in the newly merged Western Union.

The contract, which brings substantial benefits which are not enjoyed by other Western Union employes covered by AFL agreements, was due to expire on January 7. An emergency meeting of 50 ACA leaders, gathered in Washington this week to deal with the situation, hailed the award as a victory for the union.

Commenting on the decision, ACA President Joseph P. Selly said: "We believe that the board has done a real service to the war effort, the public interest and organized labor in granting the petition of the union to extend its contract.

"I am particularly gratified that in this case the board acted without forcing the membership of my union to the breaking point."

The AFL not only opposed extension of this contract at the War Labor Board hearings but also sought an injunction to restrain the company from dealing with the ACA. The District Court of Washington threw out the AFL's suit last week. AFL leaders had contended that Postal Telegraph workers should be treated as new employes of Western Union without any rights, privileges or union protection.

HEARINGS ON ELECTION

At the present time hearings are being held before the National Labor Relations Board to determine whether or not there shall be a national election among all employes of the company to determine the bargaining agent.

ACA is opposing an election for the duration of the war on the ground that it will lead to strife and disputes which will be injurious to the war effort and to the best interests of the employes. ACA is asking for the establishment of a Telegraph Stabilization Committee, comprising representatives of labor, management and the government, to negotiate a single contract covering all employees, freezing jurisdiction of all unions in the field for the duration, and outlawing raids, strikes, lockouts, etc.

Red Caps Hit Court OK of AFL Race Bias

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8—Reconsideration by the Supreme Court of a decision handed down Dec. 6 which has the effect of forcing Negro employes to belong to a union that bars them from membership is being asked by the CIO United Transport Service Employes of America in behalf of 45 Red Caps employed by the St. Paul Depot Co.

The Red Caps' case originated in a rule by the Natl. Meditation Board, agency created by law to administer the Railway Labor Act. The board ordered them to accept the AFL Brotherhood of Railway & Steamship Clerks as their bargaining agency, although this union refused to accept Negroes into membership.

The Red Caps wanted to be represented by the United Transport Service Workers, at that time an independent union which has since become affiliated with the CIO.

The St. Paul Red Caps' case was upheld repeatedly by lower courts which declared the Mediation Board's order null and void. The Court of Appeals, in upholding the District Court, declared that failure to give redress to the Red Caps' grievances was so palpably unjust and so opposed to the primary principles of the act (Railway Labor) as to make the board's decision upholding it wholly untenable and arbitrary."

Meanwhile, the Supreme Court, in another case involving a jurisdictional dispute between the Switchmen's Union and the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen on the New York Central, had refused to pass on the merits of the case on the basis that rulings of the Meditation Board were not subject to court review, thus reversing the lower court and upholding the findings of the Meditation Board which had issued a ruling in favor of the Trainmen.

When the St. Paul Red Caps case reached the Supreme Court on Dec. 6, the court, citing the New York Central case, reversed the lower courts and upheld the findings of the Mediation Board in a one-sentence opinion.

CIO's 'Labor for Victory' Show Tells of Plans For Postwar America

NEW YORK, Jan. 8—CIO's plans for postwar America received an airing last week over the Natl. Broadcasting Co. CIO "Labor for Victory" program. Participating in discussion which reached millions of listeners on a nation-wide hookup Sunday afternoon, were CIO Sec.-Treas. James B Carey, Director of Industrial Union Councils John Brophy, and Director of Research & Education J. Raymond Walsh.

"One fact is clear," Walsh said in opening the discussion. "The U. S. during the war has achieved a miracle of cooperative effort, a Niagara of production, and 100 per cent employment for all able-bodied Americans willing to work. After a long depression, we learned again that we are rich in the skills, the resources, the machines necessary to black out poverty, and provide abundance. So the CIO says simply that peace can and must bring all:

"A job at union wages, or a farm, business or profession that pays.

"A well-built, convenient home, decently furnished.

"Good food, clothing and medical care.

"An income through social insurance in case of sickness, old age, early death of the wage earner, or unemployment"

Carey and Brophy joined in stating that American industry must be operated in a planned and intelligent manner so that all workers will be guaranteed a decent standard of living—"human welfare must be placed first in deciding what is to be done," they declared.

Radio Show To Feature Textile Union

Washington, Jan. 8 — CIO's next "Labor for Victory" broadcast will feature the story of the birth and growth of the Textile Workers Union of America, dramatizing the struggles the union has had to win to become one of the largest in CIO.

The program will be heard over NBC Red Network stations at 1:15 p.m. EWT Sunday, Jan. 16.

Check your local NBC station to see if it is going to carry the program. If not, please advise the CIO Publicity Dept., 718 Jackson Pl. N.W., Washington 6, D. C.

Art Young, Famed Labor Artist, Dead

(See Drawing Below)

New York, Jan. 8—Art Young, famed artist and cartoonist who devoted his talents to the cause of labor, is dead. Greeting cards received this year by his friends showed Art Young in his "Christmas whiskers" plodding toward 1944 and the "Four Freedoms," but he did not quite make it. He died unexpectedly in his suite at the Hotel Irving, Dec. 29. He was 77.

Some of Art Young's best drawings were noted for a rare combination of humour and sharp social protest. He was outstanding in the ability to make a guy grin even while he got hot under the collar.

One of his best known cartoons is typical of this. It shows a hot, bedraggled woman beside a stove reminding her fagged out husband that he has nothing to kick about—he's been working in a nice cool sewer all day.

At the time of his death, Art Young was at work on a book. He was the author of a number of others, including "On My Way," "Art Young, His Life and Times," and "The Best of Art Young."

UFW Chalks Up 40 Vote Wins in '43

New York, Jan. 8—The United Furniture Workers of America wound up 1943 in a spurt of action, winning four NLRB elections, to bring the yearly victory total to 40, it was announced this week by Pres. Morris Muster.

Muster cited the four victories, and a Natl. War Labor Board order granting $30,000 in back pay and a union contract to employes of the Lewittes Furniture Co. at Beacon, N. Y., as harbingers of what can be expected during 1944.

The four elections were won at: Brooklyn Cooperage Co., Brooklyn, N. Y.; Duane Chair Co., Dalton, Ga.; Denny Roll & Panel Co,. High Point, N. C.; and the two plants of the Jamestown Table Co., in Jamestown and Salamanca, N. Y.

Monty-Ward Fight Backed By CIO

Washington, Jan. 8—A resolution passed by the Chicago CIO Council pledging support to Local 20, United Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employes in its dispute with Montgomery-Ward, was sent out to all CIO Councils this week by CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey, who recommended that it be brought to the attention of all affiliated locals.

Charging that the CIO union had made employes "fear, dislike or distrust" the company, Monty-Ward is suing the union for $1,000,000. The Chicago CIO resolution pledges full support to Local 20, which it says is putting up a fight in the interest of the entire labor movement.

CIO Asks Vote At 'Pan-Am'

Miami, Fla., Jan. 8—Petition for an election among some 2,000 maintenance employes here for the internationally known Pan-American Airways has been filed with the Nat'l. Mediation Board by the CIO Transport Workers Union of America.

As a "carrier," labor relations of the giant Pan-American fall under the jurisdiction of the Mediation Board, agency which administers the Railway Labor Act.

In announcing the petition, the union said that if the CIO is successful in obtaining and winning the election it will mark the first major step in bringing an important new section of American workers into the CIO.

A CIO election victory, the union stated, would "mean the complete repudiation of the slanderous and vicious anti-Semitism and red-baiting" campaign being conducted by the AFL.

USA Takes Another

Maywood, Calif., Jan. 8—Workers at Henry J. Kaiser's steel plant in nearby Fontana this week chose the United Steelworkers of America to represent them as bargaining agent. The vote in an NLRB election was: USA 606, AFL Metal Trades Council 348.

Thomas Hits Move to Hike Detroit Rents

Detroit, Jan. 8—Three hundred thousand members of the CIO United Auto Workers Union this week were advised by UAW Pres. R. J. Thomas not to pay any increases in rent as proposed by real estate interests which are seeking to change the fair rent date set by the Office of Price Administration.

The real estate interests are seeking to change the fair rent date from April 15, 1941 to March 15, 1942, which Thomas charged would boost rents 8.75 per cent.

"Efforts of real estate interests in the Detroit area to change the rent control date are motivated solely by a purely selfish desire to profiteer at the expense of the war effort and the people of our city," Thomas said.

NEW YORK, Jan. 8—Leaders of labor, government, church and Negro groups will speak and lead discussions at a conference on full employment to be held here next Friday and Saturday by the CIO's Political Action Committee. Sidney Hillman, chairman of the committee, will preside.

Out of the conference, the CIO Committee hopes that a preliminary statement of labor's program for full employment will emerge. Attainment of the goal of full employment in the post-war period is not in the interest of labor alone, Chairman Hillman stated, but is essential if all Americans—farmers, business men large and small, and professional workers "are to enjoy the full and abundant life which our resources and technical equipment make possible."

SPEAKERS LISTED

At Friday's meeting, the conference will take up Reconversion and Post War Needs; with Alvin H. Hansen, special economic adviser with the Federal Reserve System as main speaker, and J. Raymond Walsh, CIO research director, leading the discussion.

Pres. James G. Patton of the Natl. Farmers Union will speak on "Agriculture: Full Production and Employment," with discussions by Pres. Donald Henderson, CIO Cannery, and Agricultural Workers, Robert W. Hudgens, Farm Security Administration; and Monsignor Ligutti, Exec.-Sec'y., Natl. Catholic Rural Life Conference.

Morris L. Cooke, former Rural Electrification Administrator and government adviser, will speak on Small Business and Full Employment, with discussion by Robert K. Lamb, CIO United Steelworkers, and Father Benjamin L. Masse, associate editor of "America." Herbert Emmerich of the Federal Public Housing Authority, and Sec'y.-Treas. Philip H. Van Gelder of the CIO Marine & Shipbuilding Workers will speak on Housing and Public Works.

Pres. R. J. Thomas of the CIO United Automobile Workers will preside at the Friday afternoon session which will discuss Reconversion and Full Employment. Discussion leaders include Clinton Golden, vice-chairman of the War Manpower Commission, and a number of head officials of important CIO unions. John Green, Reid Robinson, Walter P. Reuther, Julius Emspak, Sherman Dalrymple, Richard T. Frankensteen, O. A. Knight and Grant W. Oakes, are all scheduled to speak.

Van A. Bittner will preside at the Friday evening session on the subject of A National Security Program, with Sen. Robert F. Wagner of New York as the main speaker. Discussion leaders will be UAW Sec'y-Treas. George Addes, USA-CIO Sec'y-Treas. David J. McDonald; the Rev. James W. Myers, Fed. Council of Churches, and Monsignor John A. Ryan, Catholic University.

VETS' PROGRAM

Also schedued for Friday night is a discussion of A National Program for Veterans, led by Pres. Albert J. Fitzgerald of the CIO Electrical Workers, with CIO Sec'y-Treas. James B. Carey on the discussion panel. Max Lerner of PM will give a summary of the day.

USA Sec'y-Treas. McDonald will preside at the Saturday morning session on the subject of Full Employment. On the discussion panel will be Allan Haywood, CIO director of organization, and presidents of four CIO unions, Emil Rieve, Lewis Merrill, Milton Murray and Samuel Wolchok.

Full Employment and Women Workers will be discussed by Dorothy J. Bellanca, vice-president, Amalgamated Clothing Workers, and Ruth Young, United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers.

Full Employment as it affects Negro Workers will be taken up by Pres. Willard Townsend of the CIO Transport Service Employes; Pres. Philip Randolph, Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters; Pres. Walter White, Natl. Assn. Advancement of Colored People; and Sec'y Ferdinand C. Smith, Natl. Maritime Union.

CIO Pres. Philip Murray is scheduled to speak at a luncheon on Saturday at the close of the conference, along with Mayor F. H. LaGuardia.

Murray Hits Smears, Cites Output Record

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8—CIO Pres. Philip Murray this week issued a sober statement built on facts that ripped the ground from under attempts of the anti-labor press to make political capital out of the recent outburst against labor by a so-called "high source" among Washington officials.

In a telegram to Chairman Donald Nelson of the War Production Board, with a copy to Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff of the U. S. Army, Murray pointed out that the steelworkers of the nation broke all production records in 1943 and were prepared to break them again in 1944.

Murray noted, however, that the steel management has scheduled the industry to operate below capacity, with some 64 open hearth and electric furnaces out of production.

Citing a detailed list of furnaces that have been shut down by management, Murray said that if they were put into production they "would give the nation an additional 12,500 tons of steel every 24 hours or approximately 87,000 tons a week."

Murray said this steel is enough for 2,900 tanks, or seven 12,000-ton cruisers or 18 new Victory ships a week.

PLEDGE WORK TO WIN

"We, now, at the beginning of 1944 assure you that we are prepared to help break the world's record of 1943, but the present idle capacity, idle through no fault of the union and perhaps through no fault of management, creates a definite handicap," Murray wired Nelson. "This nation either needs a maximum output of steel to win the war or it does not.

"More than 90 million tons of steel were poured at the enemy last year," Murray said. "There must be little 'psychological comfort' for the enemy in this amazing record.

"When our bombers fly over Europe they drop steel-encased bombs and not psychology. When our ships roam the high seas they are steel ships loaded with steel-encased shells rather than psychology. Our tanks, our long-range guns, our machine guns, our rifles—all are made of steel and not psychology.

"In making reference to psychology," Murray added, "I am referring particularly to the term used by the unnamed 'high Washington official' in his recent irresponsible attack on this organization."

In a windup paragraph, Murray declared:

"If the arsenal of democracy is so filled with steel that present operating figures will meet all of our war needs, then I again urge you to see that the excess capacity is immediately turned into essential civilian goods. Can I count on your help?"

WPB Hails Workers' Production Records

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8—"American workers deserve the thanks and congratulations of the entire nation for their invaluable contribution to the outstanding record of war material production we achieved in 1943." That was the lead sentence in an article praising the patriotism, skill and sacrifice of the men and women at the point of production and written by Clinton S. Golden and Joseph D. Keenan, vice-chairmen of the War Production Board.

"The flood of planes, ships, guns, tanks and munitions which came from our factories last year, could not have been produced without the devoted and increasing application of the skills and know-how of our workers," Golden and Keenan wrote.

Citing the fact that over 85 per cent of American war industry is covered by collective bargaining agreements, the officials said:

"Unions have aided in increasing production, in keeping down absenteeism and turnover, in changing workers from industry to industry and from one locality to another."

Shipyards Exceed Goal

Washington, Jan. 8 — American shipyards—the overwhelming majority of them organized by CIO or AFL—have broken all-time production records during 1943, to exceed by more than a million tons the construction goal set for them by President Roosevelt.

The production report came this week from Admiral Emory S. Land, War Shipping administrator, who announced that 208 vessels, totalling 2,044,239 deadweight tons, came off the ways in December to guarantee the record breaking.

The total number of ships built in 1943 was 1,896, with a deadweight tonnage of 19,238,626, Land declared. The goal set by President Roosevelt for the WSA was less than 18 million tons.

Aircraft Job Draws Praise

Washington, Jan. 8—"Our aircraft workers, men and women alike. have done what Adolf Hitler was sure that an unregimented people could not do—outthink, outwork and outbuild his robots."

Gen. H. H. Arnold, Commanding General, Army Air Forces, this week paid this tribute to workers in the American aircraft industry for their production record in 1943. In his report to the Secretary of War, Gen. Arnold said that steep increases were accomplished in that period as a result of cooperation of labor unions, manufacturers and government agencies.

The General stated that our Air Forces have only half as many planes as are needed in spite of the fact that labor productivity increased so much in 1943 that five workers produced what it formerly took eight to produce.

Anti-Labor Blasts Scored By Thomas

Detroit, Jan. 8—Scare statements about the Nazis' propaganda use of the rail and steel wage disputes have been exploded by government reports showing that the Nazi radios have not been playing on this theme, Pres. R. J. Thomas of the United Auto Workers Union pointed out this week. Thomas added:

"It's high time that the American press and the America radios stopped puffing up this 'official' but phony expert. At a time when all the nation's energies and resources are needed for the final blow against our enemies, we can't afford to stir up one section of the people against the other. Labor has reiterated its no-strike pledge and we intend to stick to that pledge until victory.

"Congress," Thomas said, "is now being invited to try pushing through some more anti-labor laws. We call upon Congress to keep its eye on the ball. American soldiers and sailors don't like strikes in wartime, but they want to no part of a plot by domestic fascists to destroy democracy at home while they are fighting for it abroad.

"They know that the destruction of labor unions would be but the beginning of an all-out drive against the freedom and the standard of living of all citizens."

Annual Wage

CIO Pres. Philip Murray has focussed national attention on a minimum guaranteed annual wage for industrial workers as one of the major issues of 1944.

Murray has also advanced it in a number of public statements as one of the general issues on which the CIO will campaign in the 1944 elections.

He has called attention to the glaring contrast between the insecurity which faces war workers and returning servicemen, on the one hand, and the well-padded security so carefully provided for American corporations and their coupon-clippers, on the other.

Undersecretary of War Robert Patterson recently testified that money-making corporations by the end of 1944 will have the equivalent of a post-war reserve of more than $42,000,000,000.

The corporations have been carefully husbanding their huge war profits, concealing them in many ways from the tax collectors and holding them in reserve rather than paying them out in present dividends.

From 1941 to 1943, they accumulated almost 12 billion dollars in undistributed profits, and money-making corporations alone have piled up about 19 billion dollars since 1939—all of which is waiting to be divided among the stockholders after the war.

In addition, Congress has provided that even money already paid in war taxes may be refunded to the corporations after the war, if they suffer losses then.

By the end of this year, there will be a reserve of 26 billion dollars in the Treasury to guarantee security-plus to American stockholders after the war—virtually guaranteeing them normal profits for two full years.

Contrast this government-guaranteed security for well-heeled coupon-clippers with the ghastly insecurity that at all times casts its shadow over American working people and looms particularly threateningly in the post-war years.

The social security laws provide only a minimum of subsistence or less for a limited period and for a limited number of workers.

Even the extension of their coverage and the expansion of their benefits for which the CIO is campaigning will still leave plenty of insecurity for millions in periods of depression and dislocation.

Why then should not the profit-rich corporations, out of their plentiful reserves, be required to show some comparable consideration for the workers who make their profits possible as they show to the stockholders who garner them in?

Aside from the security and peace of mind it would give to workers assured of at least a minimum living wage the year around, a guaranteed annual wage would also serve as an inducement to corporations to maintain continuous production and avoid the alternating rushes and layoffs that cause so much economic dislocation.

It would mean continuous purchasing power and better business for all in industrial communities.

This is a proposal that should enlist the active support not only of working people and of servicemen but of all Americans who hope to see a greater degree of national security and prosperity in the post-war years.

Renegotiation Scandal

Attempts of the profiteers' lobby to filch billions of dollars more of the taxpayers' money through preventing renegotiation of war contracts are having one good result.

The controversy has given publicity to case after case of scandalously exorbitant war profits.

It is inconceivable that Congress can so far defy public opinion as to forbid the government to recover some of these tremendous over-payments through renegotiating contracts, as is proposed by the House and the Senate Finance Committee.

But even if the government retains its present powers, the profit figures revealed reinforce CIO arguments for drastic increases in taxes on corporation profits and excess profits, to tap some of the enormous war profits that are reached neither by present taxes nor by renegotiation.

They should also create renewed demand for the $25,000 limit on individual net incomes which Congress has so far refused to consider.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

THE furore in the press and Congress over the New Year's Eve outburst against labor attributed to General Marshall follows a familiar pattern that is peculiarly sinister in this decisive war year of 1944.

Regardless of the statement's intentions, it has been seized upon with delight by the worst labor-hating, division-seeking and anti-war forces in the country.

A terrific propaganda campaign is now under way to create hatred and division between labor and the armed forces, to turn group against group, to play partisan politics against and administration and Commander-in-Chief, and to pressure Congress into passing disruptive anti-labor legislation.

Big-business profiteers and their tory political stooges are promoting the uproar to "do a job" on labor and the administration.

At the same time anti-labor isolationists and defeatists, with their tongues in their cheeks, are posing as defenders of labor against the General's attack and hoping to fish in the muddied waters.

It is hardly a coincidence that anti-labor propaganda campaigns of this type have been launched by the big-business press in similarly concerted fashion at the beginning of every year lately—on whatever pretext is handiest at the time.

In 1943 it was Rickenbacker who fired the opening shot for the huge press campaign against labor on "absenteeism"; and 1942 started with an equally phony, reactionary and well-financed drive on the non-existent "40-hour week."

It so happens that a new session of Congress starts in January of each year. Each of these campaigns therefore has been designed to create public hysteria against labor and the administration, under cover of which Congress may pass reactionary and union-busting legislation.

This year's campaign is particularly dangerous, however, since it comes on the eve of the invasion of Europe, when our country urgently needs the highest degree of national unity of effort and purpose.

Responsible organized labor is the last to defend wartime strikes, and the CIO, for its part, has done more than any other agency to prevent strikes, to maintain uninterrupted production, and to boost war production to record levels.

Judging from all authoritative checkups on Nazi propaganda, it is evident the enemy made little use of the rail and steel wage disputes and is actually making far more propaganda today out of the present disruptive anti-labor campaign.

The unfairness and one-sidedness of the abuse now directed against labor is also resented by American workers, who have been the backbone of our war effort, not only through their record-breaking production but also in combatting the profiteers, obstructionists and other saboteurs of the home front.

The CIO fought almost singlehanded for months to induce selfish business and sluggish government to convert industry betimes to war production—and to the degree it speeded up this process helped to save countless soldiers' lives.

The CIO has also led the fight to stabilize our war economy, accepting wage stabilization and demanding real price control, rationing and fair taxes to make the whole anti-inflation program effective.

The chief blame for present wage disputes rests with a profiteer-coddling Congress, that rejected the $25,000 income limit while soaking the poor, that sabotaged price control, prevented rollbacks and fought food subsidies—thus pushing living costs far beyond frozen wage levels and making imperative an upward adjustment of wages to restore price-wage stability.

There is little to be gained, however, by prolonged arguments about the rights and wrongs of what the General said or didn't say. What is more important is to remedy some of the damage already done.

This the CIO can best do by the vigor with which it promotes its splendid program for all-out united effort for victory above all else.

In so doing labor can avoid the trap set by defeatists and tory politicians-as-usual, who seek to turn to their own advantage labor's resentment against unfair attacks and against the anti-labor policies of some of the administration's "palace guard."

Labor can also help to restore national unity by increased political activity, to make Congress lay down the pistol with which it has been threatening labor and the war effort for the benefit of price-boosting, self-seeking profiteers.

CIO Demands

Jobs, Security, a Decent Living

The United Nations at war are conquering tyranny abroad. The United States in peace must conquer unemployment and poverty at home. Victory will provide us a challenging opportunity to realize for all Americans the kind of life for which the CIO has worked unceasingly.

is beyond question that we have the knowledge, skills, machines and resources to produce a "gold standard of living" for every American.

Farm operators, share croppers, wage earners, business men, professional men and housewives—all can enjoy genuine freedom from want and fear if we, as a nation, are determined to achieve it. No longer need they be worried about a job, about hunger, about doctor's bills, about fear-ridden and poverty-pinched old age.

A job at union wages or a farm, business or profession that pays.

An adequate income through social insurance, in case of sickness, old age, early death of the wage earner, or unemployment.

Already our soldiers are asking, "Will there be jobs when we return?" Workers wonder whether their plants will shut down. Farmers and business men stir with similar concern.

The CIO NEWS this week begins a series of articles from "As We Win," a new pamphlet based on the report of the CIO Post-War Planning Committee. As CIO Pres. Philip Murray says in the foreword of the pamphlet (see complete review of it below), "Everywhere there is increasing awareness that the basic decisions on reconversion and demobilization must be made now. . . . The closer the nation comes to military victory, the greater is the uncertainty on the economic front." "As We Win" is a step to help offset the uncertainty so that American servicemen will come back to a nation that will provide them with jobs, not the "opportunity" to sell apples.

The eyes of the world are upon us, as war-torn nations wait to see how we use the vast resources that have given us world leadership. American ideals and institutions of which we are so proud will be tested as never before. Organized labor must be in the forefront of the battle for these ideals.

National unity is at stake. Unless there are sufficient jobs, servicemen will be set against war workers, young against old, men against women, whites against Negroes. Widespread unemployment is an evil that saps family welfare and national morale. No government or economic system that permits it can long survive.

Labor has no assurance of adequate, stable income or security after the war. For many workers, earnings will be slashed by part-time operation or ended by lay-offs. Present unemployment insurance laws will not guarantee an adequate substitute until new jobs are found. Some employers may seize the opportunity to try to undermine democratic union processes.

Business Has Billions

Yet corporations and the owners of business will be protected in many ways during reconversion. During the war, they are receiving record-breaking incomes, of which it is estimated they will retain 20 billion dollars after payment of taxes and dividends.

They will have an additional post-war reserve of some 25 billion dollars in the form of depression write-offs under liberal amortization provisions and possible refunds from excess profits taxes.

These figures include the four years through 1944, assuming that 1944 figures are like 1943 and that Congress will not stop the government from recapturing abnormally high profits through contract renegotiation.

Here are 40 billion dollars to cushion business after the war, a sum almost equal to total national income in the year 1932. Labor wishes reasonable security for itself, along more modest lines.

Many conversion problems are already upon us. War orders are being cut back, surplus goods are being sold, and manufacturers are clamoring to reconvert to civilian production and to buy government-owned plants. Servicemen are already being returned to civilian life.

Government and private agencies of necessity are giving attention to these problems. Many important decisions concerning them have already been made or will be shortly. Other decisions must be reached without delay if widespread unemployment and suffering is to be prevented. The kind of world we shall have five years from now is being shaped today by inaction as well as by conscious intent.

The CIO Post-War Planning Committee has been entrusted with special responsibility as it confronts the problems of reconversion and demolization. We have been increasily impressed with the importance of immediate constructive planning by the government with effective labor participation.

On our recommendations, the CIO Executive Board in July, 1943, adopted a resolution urging that "a new agency should immediately be established to plan for peace at home." In recent months, both Congress and federal administrative agencies have been giving increased attention to reconversion problems. But authority is divided and preparation entirely inadequate.

Labor's needs and views are far too little considered in the decisions that are made.

The task of reconversion is a tremendous one, far greater than after the last war. The armed services are very much larger, and two-thirds of our industrial production is designed for war. No matter how effective advance planning may be, millions of people will be without jobs at some time during the transition period, and whole communities built around war plants will face difficult readjustments.

The goal in planning must be to speed civilian production and to minimize human suffering and waste. If the choice is between economic waste and human suffering, human values must prevail.

Military developments of course will greatly influence reconversion and demobilization problems. A sudden end to hostilities in Europe would mean a tremendous decline in the need for war materials and might have disastrous repercussions in this country because of our unpreparedness to deal with wholesale cancellation of war orders.

The more gradual the decline in war activity, the easier will be an orderly transition to full peacetime production. But artificial continuation of war production and retention of men in the armed services would be serious wastes. Such drastic measures may be necessary in a crisis but are far less desirable than immediate use of men and machines for constructive civilian work.

Acute Problems

The problems will vary tremendously among industries. Many plants, for example, that make clothes, radios or gasoline will be able to convert quickly to produce goods which civilians have waited for and are eager to buy. Auto plants, too, will almost certainly have an excellent market. Their employes, however, and those of other kinds of plants converted for war may be out of work for months as machinery is changed back to civilian purposes.

Shipyards, arsenals, and new airplane assembly plants—these will have no market approximateing war demands. They may be idle for years unless definite plans are soon developed for using them in peace.

Were the war in Europe to end abruptly, profound dislocations and widespread fear might keep people from buying even the goods they have long desired. As a result, industries of all types would slow down and the nation might descend into a depression deeper than we suffered in 1932.

CIO Urges U.S. Job Planning

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8—Postwar conversion of industry for full employment requires that a "federal agency should be set up at once to plan for a speedy and orderly transition to full peacetime consumption, employment and production," the CIO Postwar Planning Committee said today in making public the first of a series of reports.

The report, prefaced with a foreword by CIO President Philip Murray, was signed by John Brophy, director, Industrial Union Councils; Clinton S. Golden, assistant to the president of the United Steelworkers of America, CIO; and J. Raymond Walsh, CIO director of research and education.

The "federal agency," the report says, should be headed by a "Policy Board, with representatives from agriculture, labor and business. It should coordinate the programs of all agencies, secure necessary information, analyze problems, and develop policies." In turn, each industry should have "an industry council made up of representatives of labor, business and government."

Postwar planning, the report, adds, "must be based on clear-cut recognition of the responsibility of the Federal Government for securing and maintaining full employment, production and consumption. Of course business must be encouraged and aided to achieve these basic goals. But the nation cannot risk another economic breakdown. We cannot afford to wait until business alone succeeds or fails."

As part of this federal responsibility, the nation should plan now for a vast program of "public works for the public good," not only on construction projects alone but also to utilize the services of professional and white collar people in increasing the amount of health services, education, etc.

In concluding the report, the CIO Postwar Planning Committee says: "This CIO program is based on faith in the common man, whether wage earner, white-collar worker, farmer, professional man, storekeeper or housewife. Their welfare should be the nation's chief goal and they should be given full opportunity to participate in economic and political decisions which affect them."

A pamphlet based on the report has been prepared by the CIO Education and Research Department as one of its Facts for Action series. It has the title "As We Win" and sells at 5 cents a copy, quantity orders at reduced rates. Order from Publicity Dept., CIO, 718 Jackson Pl. N.W., Washington 6, D. C.

Time Out!

Congress came back to work this week, with 1944 ahead of it. On the basis of 1943's record, any resemblance between legislation passed and that needed to help win the war will be purely coincidental—unless the boys on the "Hill" hear from the folks back home.

A diplomat arriving from Berlin was quoted as declaring that the majority of the German people believe that the war will end in 1944. After the glorious victories handed them by Der Fuehrer at Moscow and Stalingrad, it is a safe bet to say they may believe anything Hitler doesn't tell them.

* * *

If the daily press continues to quote un-named news sources on important issues, the leads of a lot of Washington stories will soon be like this:

"Washington, Jan. 00—A responsible government official today quoted an un-named source who said that a man whose identity cannot now be revealed has announced that it is generally believed that if all indications are correct the war may be won in 1945, if not sooner or later."

Ask Annual Pay As Security Aid

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 8—Workers are entitled to the same protection that industry has secured for itself, CIO President Philip Murray said here this week in discussing the annual wage clause in the USA-CIO contract proposals.

Postwar tax refunds, enormous reserves and the like help to give industry the security it seeks for postwar adjustment, and similarly, an annual wage would help in the re-adjustment necessary by workers.

"The annual wage is a sensible way of combatting widespread unemployment," Murray said. "If we're going to spread income and afford workers a just share of the national income, it can only be done through this proposal."

This would be done, Murray said, by a clause in the USA-CIO contract now being negotiated with the steel employers which would require the employer to make up the difference between the amount of time worked and the amount required to reach the annual minimum.

Murray added that the CIO's entire national apparatus would be mobilized in the campaign for the annual wage, and that the CIO Political Action Committee would also get behind the proposal.

"So far as we know, this is the first time that a labor organization anywhere has undertaken to seek the establishment of an annual minimum guaranteed wage through collective barganing," he said.

Employer Sheet Plugs Annual Wage Plan

Philadelphia, Jan. 8—Here's an encouraging note from a big daily newspaper, showing that the editorial writers on occasion know what's good for the country. It comes from an editorial in the Philadelphia Bulletin which comments on the contract demand of President Murray of the USA-CIO for an annual wage, and says:

"But when peace returns, the precarious nature of a worker's income will reappear. In normal or even prosperous times the steel industry never ran for a whole year at maximum capacity. Men were laid off for long intervals, and though they may have made good wages while working, their annual income was small...

"In view of the great resources of this country as revealed in the war, a future guaranteed annual wage cannot be dismissed as utopian."

Keep Your Eye On Congress

Congress is back this week (Jan. 10) with the ground laid for an anti-labor smash that can outdo anything tried before—unless labor and all win-the-war forces unite to stop it.

The ground was laid by the "high personage" (reported to be Chief of Staff General Marshall) who blasted labor during the New Year's weekend. The blast found a ready response from those Congressmen and Senators who have always led the way in anti-union legislation, and will be used by them to revive old repressive laws and press for new ones.

Already the reactionaries and anti-war forces have started the build-up for the Austin-Wadsworth forced labor bill (S 666, HR 1742), the Hobbs so-called "anti-racketeering" bill (HR 653) which prohibits normal union activities, the Johnson bill (HR 1876) which would draft workers absent from their jobs regardless of the cause, and dozens of similar measures.

What happens to these anti-labor schemes depends entirely on you—on the amount of work you did with your Senators and your Congressman during the recess and on the work you do from now on.

Besides these new and revived threats to the unions and to war production, there are still the major issues such as soldiers' vote, taxes, subsidies, polltax repeal, etc., left unresolved from the December recess.

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION

Europe Starving, Needs More U.S. Aid

By ELEANOR FOWLER

Sec.-Treas., CIO Women's Auxiliaries

The terrific importance of increasing food production is brought home to us vividly when we read about conditions in the European countries occupied by Hitler.

We know that the moment at which American and British forces will land in Western Europe is not far off. We know that we can count on the aid of every patriotic French, Belgian and Dutch citizen. But we shall find them half starved and our very first job will be to provide them with the necessities of life.

The diets of average families in these countries in 1941 and 1942 contained only about half the calories needed by an adult and were especially deficient in vitamins. The situation has become even worse since then.

The pamphlet "Health of Children in Occupied Europe," issued by the International Labor Office, brings home to us what this means in terms of the growth and development of the 40,000,000 children under 15 living in European countries occupied by Hitler.

TB RATE UP

At the beginning of 1943, for instance, 30 percent of Belgian children were losing weight and 40 percent of the others were below normal. As early as the end of 1941 French children were physically over a year behind children of normal development. Sixteen of every 20 babies examined in one French clinic had rickets. The number of cases of tuberculosis have increased at an alarming rate —and in Belgium almost 90 percent of the cases are children.

Lack of soap, which forces the people to live in filth, is another factor which encourages the spread of disease. Lack of fuel, which prevents heating more than one room, prevents isolation of sick members of a family. Clothing is inadequate. In France at the beginning of the 1942 school year about 8,000,000 children were without shoes.

When we read about what is happening to the people in Hitler occupied Europe and their children, we realize the tremendous responsibility that rests on us. Our country must be one of their main sources of supply. We must be ready to help them with food and clothing, soap and medicine.

RELIEF AGREEMENT

And our country has taken an important step in that direction. We have signed the United Nations Relief Agreement which establishes with the cooperation of all the United Nations an international agency to rush aid to the liberated peoples.

We must recognize that certainly at the beginning we will be in the best position to supply the urgent needs of these people. And we in America may face shortages from time to time in certain foods or other articles because of the help we are giving.

We shall not grudge these shortages if they occur, but we shall do everything in our power to support the President's program to avoid shortages by increasing food production.

That's one of the important things we're fighting for in demanding adoption by Congress of the full subsidy program. Subsidies are needed not only to keep food prices down, but also to encourage farmers to expand production of essential war crops. Write your Senators again today that you want them to vote for subsidies.

(Write to Food for Freedom, Inc. 1707 H Street, N. W., Washington 6, D. C. for a copy of "What the United Nations Relief Agreement Means to You," if you want to know more about it.)

Smear Job on FEPC Set for Jan. 11; RR Probe Board Named

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8—A witchhunt investigation of the President's Fair Employment Practice Committee was slated this week to begin Jan. 11. Meanwhile, a three-man committee to study the impasse created by a refusal of 14 southern railroads to obey an FEPC order barring discrimination against Negroes has been named by President Roosevelt and is expected to start to work immediately.

The witchhunt will be conducted by Rep. Howard Smith's (polltaxer, Va.) committee, already notorious for the smear job it attempted to do on OPA and other government agencies vital to the war.

The three-man railroad investigating board will be headed by Chief Justice Walter P. Stacy of the Supreme Court of North Carolina, and will include Judge William Holly of the U. S. District Court of Chicago and Mayor John Lausche of Cleveland. President Roosevelt, in stating that he would help to arrange a meeting of the committee with spokesmen for the unions and railroads involved, said:

"Obviously, in such a complicated structure as the transportation industry, we cannot immediately attain perfect justice in terms of equal employment opportunities for all people. I am sure, however, that you agree with me that all Americans at this time should be anxious to see to it that no discriminations prevent the fullest use of our manpower in providing the strength essential to the major military offensive now planned."

The President's secretary, Stephen Early, said the committee will not supercede the FEPC but merely was set up to explore the situation and report to the President.

Auxiliaries Aid Drive For Subsidies

Detroit, Jan. 8—Detroit auxiliaries of the United Automobile Workers are setting up booths next week in the main Detroit theatres as the latest step in their campaign for subsidies. They expect to roll up thousands of signatures to subsidy petitions during the week.

"Our auxiliaries throughout the nation are actively engaged in getting petitions filled and flooding our Senators and Congressmen with telegrams and cards," Mrs. Catherine Gelles, secretary-treasurer of the UAW auxiliaries, said.

"We also urged all the auxiliary members to visit their Representatives while they were at home. In Detroit we visited every Congressman and sent delegates to see Senators Vandenberg and Ferguson and our Governor.

"We are having much more widespread response to this program from our entire membership than we have had to any other recent activity."

U.S. Offers Free Food Pamphlets

By SUNNY PRESSMAN

Staff Writer, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

No one will deny that every housewife is anxious to do her share to make a success of the campaign to make Food Fight for Freedom. But being anxious to do a good job and knowing how to do it are two different things.

We've gone a long way toward learning the value of foods and the ways and means of using them to good advantage. Yet we must admit—there is still plenty of room for improvement.

To help today's busy housewife do her job better, the War Food Administration and the Department of Agriculture have put out a number of publications on how to make the most of your food. These pamphlets are brief, clear and easy to read. Many are illustrated and all of them are full of suggestions on how to serve more nutritious meals, lower your food cost and reduce food waste. They are all free for the asking.

Fight Food Waste in the Home, AWI-3—Suggestions on how to make meals from leftovers and how to keep food from spoiling.

Cheese in Your Meals, AWI-16—How to make main dishes from cheese, a valuable protein food that can be used instead of meat.

RECIPES

Dried Peas and Beans in Wartime Meals, AWI-47.

Green Vegetables in Wartime Meals, AWI-54.

Cooking with Soya Flour and Grits, AWI-73; Egg Dishes at Low Cost; Food for Children, F-1674; Homemade Bread, Cake and Pastry, F-1775; Meat for Thrifty Meals, F-1908; 99 Ways to Share the Meat, AWI-13; Potatoes in Low-Cost Meals; Poultry Cooking, FB-1888; Victory Gardens, MP-483.

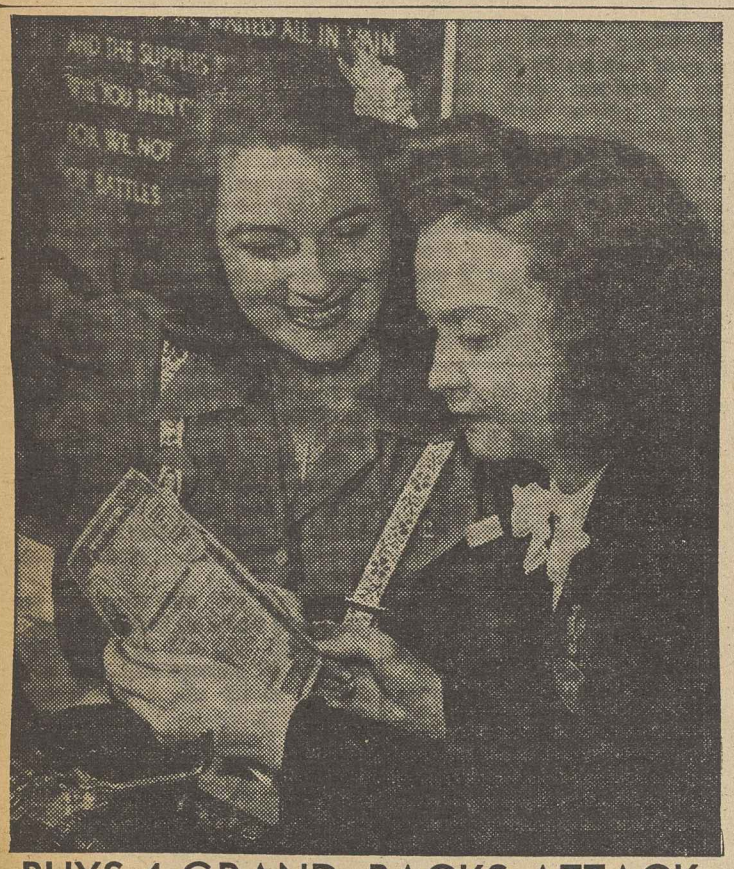
The British delegation that returned with them are: John Geo. Clark of the Transport Workers Union, which Ernest Bevins, Minister of Production, heads; James Henry Ward of the Society of Engineers which Jack Tanner, who visited this country more than a year ago, heads; John Henry Jones of the Steel Workers Union; and a distant relative of CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey, Pat J. Carey, of the Aviation Workers.

These four British delegates will visit the different areas and plants in our country and talk with workers who are engaged in industries similar to theirs. They called at the CIO National Office here in Washington and the writer and other members of the staff met with them. The exchange of these rank and file delegates should result in better understanding and strengthen the ties between the laboring forces of the two nations.

On for victory in 1944!



BUYS 4 GRAND, BACKS ATTACK:

Y., plant, comes from selling $4,000 worth of war bonds to Patricia Sheridan (right) in the war loan drive of Brewster Local 365, United Auto Workers (CIO). Irene won the title of Best Bondadier. (Federated Pictures.)

DINED by the CIO this week were the four visiting British trade uninoists now touring this country's war plants in a return visit of the four American workers who went to England recently. Left to right, with their CIO hosts of the evening, are: Van A. Bittner, assistant to the president, USA-CIO; John Henry Jones, steelworker of Manchester, England; Allan S. Haywood, vice-president, CIO; Pat J. Carey, aircraft worker, London; John Brophy, CIO director of Industrial Union Councils; James Henry Ward, member of the Amalgamated Engineering Union, and John George Clark, of the Transport and General Workers.

CIO Fetes British War Workers

Washington, Jan. 8 — International labor unity—and may it come soon—was the keynote of CIO hospitality to the four visiting English trade unionists, now touring war plants in the U. S. as a return for a similar visit of four American union men to Britain last month.

The four men, brought here by the OWI and the British Information Ministry, all stressed the need for quick action to bring workers of the United Nations together, citing the June conference in London as the opportunity to build world labor unity for victory and a people's peace.

Welcoming the British visitors at a CIO dinner, Allan S. Haywood, CIO vice-president, acting as MC, told them of Pres. Murray's regrets that union business kept him in Pittsburgh, and said that CIO looked forward to meeting in London whether or not the AFL top leaders chose to go along.

Van A. Bittner, assistant to the president of USA-CIO, also welcomed the delegates, giving them a quick fill-in on some highlights of American trade union struggles as he recalled them from his years in the movement.

The four delegates, who were John H. Jones, a steelworker of Manchester; Pat. J. Carey, London aircraft worker; James Henry Ward, of the Amalgamated Engineering Union, and John G. Clark, of the Transport and General Workers, left after the dinner to tour the war plants of the U. S. with the four Americans they had entertained in Britain.

General note of the talk on labor unity was that workers and the plain people should get together regardless of forms of government or different ways of living. As one of the American workers put it: "The question is the feeling between peoples—not between governments or systems of running a country."

Says Job Lack In Puerto Rico Not All Due to War

A news item appearing in the Dec. 6 issue of The CIO News reporting on an interview with M. A. Domenech, representative of the General Confederation of Workers of Puerto Rico, quoted him as saying that war conditions have disrupted Puerto Rico's main industry and thrown some 300,000 out of work.

Mr. Domenech this week said that at present some 300,000 persons are unemployed in Puerto Rico, but this is not all due to dislocation of trade and industry by the war.

"We have had unemployment for many years in Puerto Rico," he stated. "In fact this is a chronic condition in the island."

British Call World Labor Meet for June 5

LONDON, Jan. 8 (ALN)—The British Trades Union Congress has sent invitations to union organizations in 37 countries to attend the World Labor Conference opening in London on June 5, 1944, Herbert Tracey, publicity director of the TUC, announced this week.

Four U. S. labor organizations—the AFL, CIO, Railroad Brotherhoods and United Mine Workers—have been invited, he said, and four Canadian organizations—the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, Canadian Congress of Labor, Canadian Federation of Labor and Confederation of Catholic Trade Unions of Canada.

Declaring that the TUC general council "has realized that the fact of inviting some organizations may be a stumbling block in respect to other bodies, and perhaps may furnish some of them with objections to sending delegates to the conference," Tracey stated:

"Nevertheless, the council holds the view very strongly that if world labor is to be rebuilt it must be undertaken on the broadest possible basis. That basis can only be achieved if all bona fide union movements are invited to come together to see how it may be possible to rise above their domestic and national difficulties in the task of rebuilding the international movement.

"In the invitation it has issued, the general council makes it clear that it feels this is a supreme testing time in the history of the trade union movement, and that the faith of trade unionists will be revealed by the extent to which all concerned are ready to rise superior to internecine difficulties and national obstacles.

"Despite the obstacles, the general council has frankly accepted the risks involved in inviting all representative organizations which can contribute to the building of a greater international trade union movement, however much they may differ in structure and ideologies."

The difficulties involved, Tracey says, are illustrated by the fact that invitations have gone to four organizations in the U. S. and four in Canada. "There are four organizations in South Africa and two in Australia," he adds. "Similar conditions prevail in India, Mexico and other Latin-American republics. In Spain there are three groups, and in Switzerland four."

'Best Way To Win Democracy Is Practice It'

New York, Jan. 8—"The best way to have interracial democracy is to practice it." This was one of the general conclusions of a 12-months' study made by a YWCA commission appointed to study Negro-white relations within the organization's local bodies throughout the country.

Net results of the findings, which will be issued shortly in pamphlet form, are based partly on questionnaires and partly on visits made by an inter-racial team of 22 white and Negro women to nine cities—Hartford, Conn.; Minneapolis and St. Paul, Minn.; Denver, Colo.; Alton, Ill.; Houston, Tex.; St. Louis, Mo.; Atlanta, Ga., and Charlotte, N. C.

The least desirable way to deal with inter-racial relationships is the theoretical and abstract method of handling them, as though they were "race problems," the commission's study stated.

Anti-Labor 'Trib' Prints Army Edition

CHICAGO, Jan. 8 — The defeatist, anti-labor Chicago Tribune is publishing a special edition for servicemen and is shipping it overseas with the cooperation of the U. S. Navy.

The Tribune revealed this week that its first venture in the service field is being published in Honolulu, with Naval priorities permitting printing plates to be flown to the islands.

The Tribune said that arrangements are being made to publish the overseas edition once a week in England, North Africa, Sicily and Italy.

UAW Education Parley Feb. 25-27

Chicago, Jan. 8—CIO's biggest union—the million and more strong UAW-CIO—is holding an educational conference here Feb. 25, 26 and 27 that will be like UAW, the biggest yet in the American labor movement.

Headed by Pres. R. J. Thomas, the conference, under the direction of UAW's Educational Director, Wm. H. Levitt, is expected to bring well over 400 educational secretaries from UAW locals all over the country. Featured speakers, besides Pres. Thomas, include Sec.-Treas. George F. Addes and Vice-Presidents Richard T. Frankensteen and Walter P. Reuther.

The sessions will last three days and will take up such subjects as women in industry, shop steward education, pamphlets and other literature, visual education, etc. As a postscript on the final session, the conference will have an open forum on postwar planning.

Jury Says 30 Aided Nazis

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8—Twenty-eight men and two women who are charged with preaching Nazi propaganda in the United States in an attempt to set up a Fascist dictatorship like that in Germany were this week indicted by a special grand jury in the District of Columbia.

The 30—22 of whom were already under indictment on similar charges—were accused of spreading throughout the nation a plot inspired by the Nazis to impair the morale and loyalty of the armed forces and to set up a National Socialist form of government here.

The government charged and the jury declared that the defendants circulated books and other forms of propaganda which sought to prove that democracy is finished and that Nazism should replace it; that the government is "controlled by Communists, international Jews and plutocrats"; that the U. S. provoked war with the Axis, and that the President invited the attack on Pearl Harbor as a means of getting the nation in the war.

Many of those accused—all of whom face fines of as much as $10,000 and imprisonment for as long as ten years—were named in the best selling book, "Undercover," which exposed fascist groups in America.

Those not previously indicted on the charges include:

Lawrence Dennis of New York City, publisher of Our Common Cause, and contributor to other publications, described in "Under Cover" as the brains behind the Fascist government in America.

E. J. Parker Sage of Detroit, officer of the National Workers League.

Gerhard W. Kunze of New York City, head of the German-American Bund after 1939. He was sentenced to 15 years imprisonment for espionage and to five years for counseling draft evasion.

Ernest F. Elmhurst of New York City, author of "The World Hoax."

Those reindicted are: George E. Deatherage of St. Albans, W. Va.; William Dudley Pelley of Noblesville, Ind.; James True of this city; Edward J. Smythe of New York; H. Victor Broenstrupp of Washington and New York; Robert E. Edmondson of Grass Valley, Calif.; William R. Lyman, jr., of Detroit; Gerald B. "YOU VOTED AGAINST THE ANTI-POLL TAX BILL, DIDN'T YOU?"

Just a Little Note on Gifts To Gladden Your Hearts

By FRED d'AVILA

To All You Other Unfortunate Guys Who Live the Other Side of Jersey

DEAR BROTHERS:

This little note is just in case the dear wife and kiddies didn't turn out to be such good Santa Claus' substitutes as you had been led to expect. It's also with the belief that you'll be having a birthday shortly and that they'll be interested in providing your manly frame with the necessary accouterments to make you acceptable at the Union League Club, or Casey's Bar, or wherever you should choose to roam.

What you should do is write to Albert Leonard George, Inc., 620 5th Ave., New York City. If you feel like spending a little more of the $500 a week a lot of Congressmen apparently think you are making, you can telephone—the number is Circle 7-1427.

Albert Leonard George, Inc. (one of the better shops, brothers) will be only too happy to provide you with a pleasing little illustrated booklet with order form attached, which you can casually slip in the dear wife's genuine alligator handbag (price $115.00) for her consideration prior to your birthday.

Albert Leonard George, Inc., says that it is "first to present the better things," and since I am sure that all you brothers are interested in providing yourselves with nothing but the best, bend an ear to what you can get, like:

"A rare gift that will never be forgotten. The coat illustrated is made from the finest Vicuna Cloth obtainable in a Rich, Warm Colour called LONDON PIGSKIN." Only $550.00, brothers, and "available in Ladies' Coats at the Same Price"—but cross that off before the wife sees it!

Or how would you like to choose from "the largest Selections today of Rare English and Scotch Shirtings"? "Broadcloths, Batistes, Sea-Islands, Silks, Voiles, Flannels; these are just a few types from our collection. Prices start at $11.50 and Minimum Orders Start at the Half Dozen."

Or maybe you'd like a half dozen or so of the New Hand Painted Ties—at $10.50 each, of course!

Or could we induce you to put your week's wages in a $45.00 Golden Grain Alligator bill fold? Exclusive! Unusual! Your friends will be amazed!

Or how about a nice handkerchief (there's a shortage of Kleenex, you know) at $3.50 for the regular size or, if you prefer, $5.50 for the "Men's Oversize or Cold Kerchief"?

Well, there you are, brothers. That's just a sample of what you can get. I've whetted your appetites, and the rest is up to you!

U. S. Officials Urge Votes For Soldiers

Washington, Jan. 8—A powerful argument for a uniform, federal system of service voting came from the Secretaries of War and of the Navy this week, with the release of a joint statement pointing out the insuperable difficulties in administering 48 separate systems of distributing and collecting the ballots at the front, at sea and in Army camps and bases.

In pleading for a uniform system, such as would be provided under the original Green-Lucas bill that the Senate turned down and is now before the House in the Scanlon bill (HR 3895), Secretaries Stimson and Knox pointed out:

"In time of war, the services are unable effectively to administer diverse procedures of 48 States as to eleven million servicemen all over the world in primary, special and general elections."

The inevitable lack of uniformity resulting from separate State systems would not only result in seriously cutting down the number of service votes, but would also interfere with the conduct of the war, the statement points out.

"The policy of the Army and the Navy is to assist and encourage service men to vote, so far as practicable and compatible with military operations. Nothing must interfere with the services' primary obligation to wage victorious war."

Following this, the joint statement lists a long series of obligations that State laws would impose and which the services could not carry out. In addition, the statement says that at least 45 days will be required to take the ballots to the voters on the fronts.

Meantime, with Congress reconvening January 10, supporters of a "compromise" were busy in both House and Senate. In the House, Rep. Worley (D., Tex.), chairman of the Committee on Elections of President and Vice-President, was expected to report out a bill this week that would turn the entire matter over to the States.

In the Senate, Sen. Lucas (D., Ill.) was polishing another "compromise" bill that also turns the counting over to the States. This is designed to meet the outcries of the States righters', who killed the original bill on the ground that it invaded the States' domain.

Actually, their real objection was concealed from the public. As repeated questionnaire polls have shown, the men and women in the service will vote for progressive, win-the-war candidates if they get the chance. What's more, those from polltax States wouldn't have to pay for the right of voting.

These two things, not the fancied invasion of States' rights, are what drove the polltaxers and the reactionary Republicans to combine against the Green-Lucas bill in the Senate last month.

Says Aluminum Cutbacks Harm United States

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 8—A charge that the War Production Board's policy in cutting aluminum production is harmful to the nation was made this week by Pres. Nicholas A. Zonarich of the CIO Aluminum Workers of America. "Drastic steps backward are wholly unjustified at this time because there is no real surplus of aluminum," Zonarich declared.

Pointing out that the Aluminum Co. of America would stand to profit by aluminum shortages after the war because of its monopoly position, Zonarich urged that a committee composed of representatives of labor, government and management be set up to decide which plants, if any, should be shut down.

INVESTIGATION URGED

"The WPB," Zonarich explained, "claims that plants must be shut down because present production exceeds current consumption. But they ignore the fact that consumption is most severely limited today to the most urgent military uses and that the civilian economy has had practically no aluminum for almost three years."

Zonarich urged that an investigation be made of the possibilities of using part of the present output that is not needed for war consumption to alleviate shortages of civilian goods.

WAR FAR FROM WON

"The President and other high officials tell us that the European war is far from won," Zonarich said. "We cannot tell when there may be a sudden change in its requirements and therefore an adequate reserve must be built up. Aluminum plants cannot be push-buttoned into full production at a moment's notice. It may take many weeks to restaff a plant once it is shut down, especially since workers will fear that sudden layoffs will hit them again."

World Labor Unity Victory Key—Thomas

Detroit, Jan. 8 — World labor unity now is the key to a true victory over fascism and to a just people's peace, R. J. Thomas, president of the largest union in the world, says in the current issue of "Ammunition," monthly publication of the UAW-CIO's Education Department.

"We cannot win victory by wishing for it," Thomas writes. "We cannot win victory by fighting alone. We must have with us the workers and the plain people of all the United Nations—and of the Nazi occupied countries and territories—not only to win the war but to make the peace a real people's peace."

Citing the failure of the workers to have any say in the peace after 1918 as a source of the wars and the fascism that have plagued the world since then, Thomas points to President Murray's leadership in promoting international labor collaboration as the means of preventing a similar tragedy after this war.

"The 6th convention of the CIO, under President Murray's leadership, has shown us the way That way lies through full, frank and wholehearted cooperation with our union brothers in British, the Soviet Union, Latin America and all the United Nations," Thomas writes.

UAW Fights Anti-Semitism In L. A. Aircraft Plant

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 8—A quiet little Jewish ex-tailor, with two sons in the Air Force, an aggressive Irishman, and the mass action of a local of the largest union in the nation this week dealt a body blow to Hitler's doctrines of hate.

The ex-tailor was Nathan Greenspan, who became a worker at the Santa Monica plant of the Douglas Aircraft Co., and the union is the CIO United Auto Workers of America, representing the plant's employes. The story, as reported over the Los Angeles CIO Council's five-day-a-week radio program, went like this:

Greenspan walked over to a group of workers on the job who were laughing over mimeographed leaflets that someone had circulated.

"I wanted to laugh with the boys over whatever it was that amused them," he related. "When I saw what it was, I couldn't laugh. You see, I am a Jew. I told them so: 'I can't laugh with you, boys.'"

One of the workers wasn't laughing. He was William O'Farrell. Thoroughly disgusted, he grabbed the leaflets from the group and said that he wasn't going to give them up. He was keeping them as evidence. He saw to it that they were turned over to UAW officials.

PACKED WITH LIES

The leaflets were copies of a miserable and illiterate parody of Kipling's famed poem, "Mandalay," and were packed with lies and enough smut to be used as fish bait.

A prompt UAW investigation disclosed where the mimeograph stencil had been cut and run off. To combat this divisive attack—the kind advocated by Hitler in his campaign to disrupt national unity—the UAW local immediately drew up and began circulating petitions bearing the following pledge, with thousands of workers signing it. The pledge said:

"Realizing that unity is indivisible—that the man who speaks against one American on the basis of race, religion or color, speaks against all—I pledge these things:

"That I will not give ear to words of racial or religious hate.

"That I will not be misled by rumors or reports and will not spread either about my fellow Americans.

"That I will give my voice for whatever value it may have to challenge openly and publicly and on the spot any man who speaks in seriousness or jest, along the lines of racial or religious hate.

"I sign this pledge in a fight against racial intollerance, bigotry, oppression and all such hatreds that are devices of Fassism which at once weaken our unity in the world war in which we are engaged and undermine our democracy."

Perkin's Report

Labor's All-Out Production Record 99.92 Percent Good

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15—Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins this week reported to Congress that for the last fiscal year "the no-strike pledge of labor leaders and no-lockout pledge of management for the duration was kept at a rate of better than 99 per cent." Pointing out that there was a substantial increase in the number of workers employed by unionized industry, Miss Perkins declared:

"The ratio of many man-days lost through strikes to time worked was eight-one-hundredths of 1 per cent. That is a good record in any field of human relations.

"Most of the few strikes and lockouts were of short duration because responsible leadership promptly ordered those on wildcat stoppages back to work and because government provided the machinery by which industrial disputes could be adjusted in all fairness."

Praising the war record of labor, Miss Perkins said:

"The nation's wage earners not only worked continuously on factory assembly lines, in shipyards, arsenals, mines and on the farms to help the United Nations win the war. They bought 300 billion dollars worth of War Bonds per month out of union treasuries and by individual subscritptions. They gave 2,000,000 of their members of military age to the armed forces."

Thomas Fights Texas Gag Law

Washington, Jan. 15—Pres. R. J. Thomas of the United Automobile Workers has filed a petition with the U. S. Supreme Court challenging the constitutionality of a Texas law requiring union organizers to register with the Secretary of State before being permitted to solicit funds.

Several months ago President Thomas, to provide a test case, disregarded the law by asking workers to join the union at a meeting, and was sentenced to three days in jail and fined $100 after being convicted of contempt for violating a court order enjoining him from soliciting members without registering as an organizer. Criminal charges against Thomas of violating the Texas statute were dismissed.

In his petition to the Supreme Court, Thomas declared that the Texas statute and injunction violated his constitutional right of free speech and restrict and limit the labor unions in this country in their effort to organize workers."

Army, Navy in 2nd Front Rehearsal

By FRED d'AVILA

SOLOMONS ISLAND, Md., Jan. 13—The United States Army and Navy opened a "second front" today on the southwestern tip of Maryland. The operation, which was a demonstration of the tactics to be used in the invasion of Europe, was carried out in a biting 20-degree wind, that froze spray from Chesapeake Bay on landing boat bows and whipped viciously through the clothes of attacking soldiers, some of whom were drenched in the dash from assault boats to the chill beach.

The training prelude to the attack that will mean the end of Hitler was carried out under observation from workers and managements that have built the landing craft the Army and Navy will use — 20,000 of them already launched, with 45,000 more to come.

Rough Water

CIO representatives at the dress rehearsal included: Joseph Curran, CIO vice-president and head of the Natl. Maritime Union; Irving Richter, Washington legislative representative of the UAW; and the following members of the Marine & Shipbuilding Workers — John E. Manerchia, Carment Ciancia, Alex Turoczy and Pete Marshall from Wilmington, Del., and John E. Garman, of Philadelphia. Representatives of the AFL and of several shipbuilding and steel firms also were present.

The delegates left Washington at 4:30 a.m., led by friendly, forthright Rear Admiral C. H. Woodward, USN, chief of the incentive division, and arrived at the Solomons Island Naval headquarters for a 6:30 a.m. breakfast which would put a longshoreman's appetite to shame.

A quick tour of classrooms, with Curran admiring a seamanship exhibit and with all the visitors amazed at a second lieutenant's ability to identify images of planes flashed on a screen for as brief a time as a hundredth of a second, brought the delegation to "zero" hour.

"The invasion," which had been scheduled for dawn, was delayed until 9 a.m. because of rough water and a threatened 35-mile-an-hour wind. At 9 o'clock, with a pale sun peeping over the horizon, the work was still difficult enough so that most of the observers were ready to admit that war is the business primarily of tough, active youth.

Garbed in sheepskin-lined coats, but still shivering, and outfitted with gas masks in expectation of an attack with all the trimmings, the civilians squinted against the sky to watch the hundreds of seagoing craft line up for the grand assault — lumbering troop transports and tank and troop-carrying landing craft that could dash right up to the beach to disgorge their men and weapons.

Planes Roar Over

Overhead — sometimes only 30 feet away—the planes of the attacking force roared inland at better than 300 miles an hour to help complete the softening-up process that presumably had already been partly accomplished by blasts from heavy Navy guns.

First from the sea were light assault boats, their crews of soldiers lumbering with heavy packs up the beach, throwing themselves across barbed wire, and making the initial contact with the "enemy" which was returning the "fire" by simulated explosions of mortar shells, land mines and other weapons.

The water was literally alive with boats, their propellors churning madly as their coxwains steered their flat, gray prows head on for the beach.

Back and forth from transports to beach and beach to transports churned the lighter boats, to be followed by the second wave of the assault—slightly larger craft carrying trucks and guns and ammunition to reinforce the initial landing.

Third Practice

This was the third practice the men had engaged in—and there were still plenty of mistakes that needed correction, considering the fact that an actual invasion is carried on under cover of darkness and probably in most cases is disrupted by casualties from enemy fire.

One Landing Craft Tanks (LCT) failed to make the beach, and when the first truck rolled off the ramp, it plunged into a good six feet of icy water, thoroughly drenching the driver.

The truck was finally "abandoned" (to be hauled out later by a bulldozer). The LCT backed off to try again, only to meet disaster with a second truck which became a bottleneck like the first, preventing the unloading of vital materials.

Soldier 'Ducked'

Soldiers scrambling over the truck, at a perilous angle on the LCT's ramp, got drenched to the waist, and one poor fellow was completely "ducked" and came dripping up the beach looking as though he hadn't a friend in the world and didn't want one either.

Only by backing away and making a third try at landing could the LCT disgorge its cargo

Labor Unites to Urge More Bond Buying

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 15—The CIO, AFL and railroad unions united this week to urge the nation—via a nationwide radio program sponsored by the Treasury Dept.—to buy even more war bonds than in the past to help speed the end of the war against Fascism. Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey represented CIO and Pres. William Green AFL.

Carey quoted CIO Pres. Philip Murray, who said that "it is up to us to supply the weapons the soldiers and sailors need, to make them and to pay for them," and "seconded" the statement.

"Organized labor knew, long before any other group of the population, that fascism was a deadly enemy of freedom, the deadly enemy of labor unions, of political and economic democracy, of religion, of security of the home itself," Carey declared.

Carey pledged that labor in the CIO will do its utmost to break existing bond purchase records, and cited the substantial one set last year by eight big CIO unions alone—the purchase of $900 million in bonds through payroll savings plans and at workers' places of employment, and not including the record of bonds bought elsewhere.

"A conservative estimate for the purchase of war bonds by our entire CIO membership would put it between 1¼ and 1½ billion dollars last year," Carey said. "However, we will do even better this year."

Political Action Meet Hears Wallace

New York, Jan. 15—Vice-President Henry A. Wallace, CIO Pres. Philip Murray and Mayor LaGuardia will be among the featured speakers at the two-day national conference being held by the Political Action Committee here this weekend.

The conference, which will bring about 500 delegates and speakers to this city, will deal with the problem of full employment, both now and after the war. In announcing the meeting, Sidney Hillman, CIO Political Action Committee chairman, said:

"Our service men are offering their lives to guarantee for the American people and their children a free, secure and prosperous nation. Our industrial and agricultural workers are living, working and sacrificing with firm faith in a future of security and prosperity.

"The CIO Political Action Committee believes that full employment—jobs for all—is the one and only basis for a secure and prosperous America. Our service men, our workers, our farmers, our small business men, our professional and white collar workers want the answer to the question of full employment."

"Full use of our productive capacity and manpower is not of concern to labor alone; on the contrary, the welfare of all Americans is at stake. The CIO Political Action Committee has and does stand ready to work with all groups in American life for this common objective."

N. Y. State Council Acts to Unite Labor Party

NEW YORK, Jan. 15—Following through on the established policy of unity and of returning the American Labor Party to the labor unions, the N. Y. State CIO Council this week formed a "Committee for a United Labor Party" within the ALP. The Council represents 1,750,000 workers.

This policy, first announced last summer by Sidney Hillman, chairman of the CIO Political Action Committee and president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, is to work with all CIO city councils in the state "to unify the ALP and arm it to wield its full strength and influence on the side of victory, peace and progress in this decisive year."

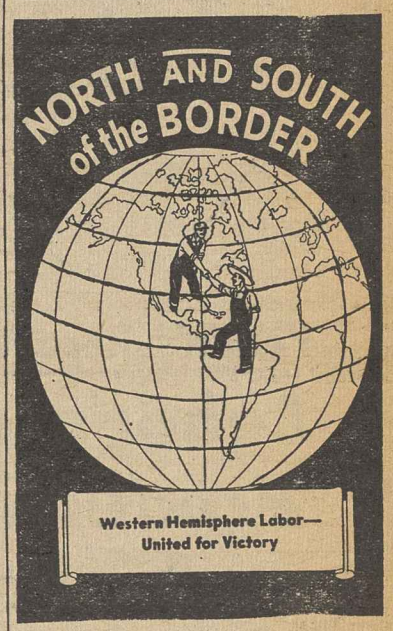
The committee represents CIO, AFL and Railroad unions. Its chairman is Harry Chapman, assistant chairman of the Railway Clerks, and its secretary is Abraham Miller, vice-president of the Amalgamated. Hugh Thompson, CIO regional director for western N. Y., will render assistance in this area, and Milo Lathrop, UERMW, in the eastern area.

Pointing to the 1944 elections, the committee said in its first statement: "We must leave nothing undone to elect a chief executive whose devotion to the cause of the common man is tried and true—one who can be trusted to continue the courageous, far-sighted and enlightened leadership which our President and Commander-in-Chief has given to the nation and to the world, in peace and war, over the past 12 years.

"We must leave nothing undone to send a Congress to Washington which is committed to full and unequivocal support of the progressive program and policies—domestic and foreign—of the national administration.

"Our first task is to cement the unity of our own ranks. . . . Only a party so constituted and so united can measure up to its opportunities and discharge its responsibilities in this decisive year of 1944.

"We are therefore confident that the United Slate of the Committee for a United Labor Party will command the active support of all members of the American Labor Party."



LATIN - AMERICAN AFFAIRS as they affect the labor movement are discussed in CIO's latest pamphlet, front page of which is reproduced above. The pamphlet tells the story of CIO relations with the labor movements of Latin-American countries. Order from CIO Publicity Dept., 718 Jackson Pl. N.W., Washington 6, D. CIO Plans for Postwar World

This is the second of a series of articles from "As We Win," a new CIO pamphlet based on the report of the CIO Post-War Planning Committee. Excerpts from the report follow:

Policies in regard to the termination of war contracts will greatly influence the speed of reconversion. Unplanned cancellation of orders causes unnecessary hardship on workers and communities. Under present arrangements, there is no assurance that the welfare of workers will be considered or provided for.

This situation is all the more dangerous because of the inadequacy of present unemployment insurance laws.

We wish to state that providing business concerns with working capital quickly is a completely desirable object. Business deserves support in this since it will assist speedy reconversion. But labor's needs must also be protected. Definitions of costs to be charged against the government on unfinished contracts are being prepared.

The Post-War Planning Committee has recommended that dismissal wages be included as an allowable cost under the plan described in the section below on social security.

Huge plants have been built for war purposes in all parts of the nation, on farm lands and harbors, in cities and deserts. The government owns $16 billion worth of such new plants; if other equipment and property are included, the total is $23 billion.

These plants have greatly increased the nation's ability to produce. They represent about one-fourth of total manufacturing capacity. Their future use will have a profound effect on the nation's development. They may contribute to a great increase in levels of living. Or they may be only partly used—or not at all.

Monopolies, if allowed to buy them, will employ their ancient trick of keeping prices up and output down. New plants may be operated in industrial areas where wages have not been raised to union levels while workers in older industrial centers are laid off.

Guard for the People The Public Domain!

These plants are a new form of public domain, as important as the western lands which the nation owned a century ago. Our forefathers sought to have that earlier domain used for the people rather than the few. We must strive to the same end today—and more sucessfully.

Present arrangements for future use of these plants are unsatisfactory. Private companies now operate most of them under contracts not accessible to the unions or the public. In most cases options have been granted for purchase when the war is over. So far as is known, these options contain no safeguards whatever as to future use.

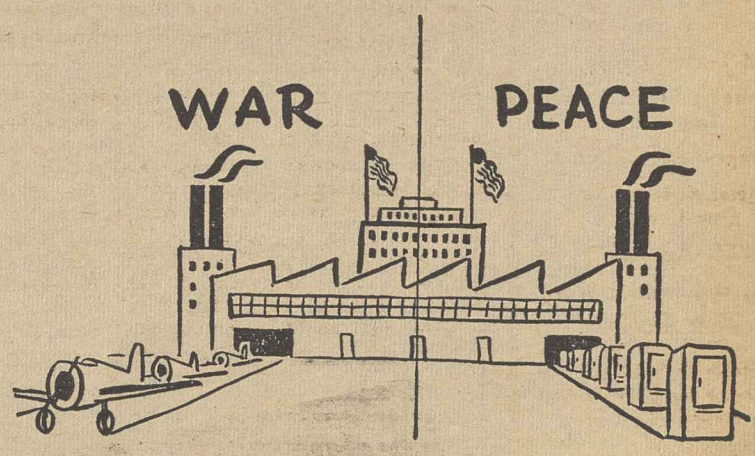
Moreover, they usually give an operating firm 90 days to buy at a price already determined, and another 90 days to meet other bids. If no one bids, the firm can wait longer, hoping for a bargain price.

As a result, plant and workers may be idle for many months before reconversion even begins. And the government may finally part with the property for a song.

The essential basis for planning the postwar use of these facilities is lacking because of inadequate information about them. Basic data, for example, on their employes—their number and kind—have not been collected. What information the government has is not available to unions or prospective purchasers.

Agreement should be reached immediately to assure that the new productive capacity is utilized wherever possible and reconverted quickly to civilian use. The employes of these new plants must be protected, but not at the expense of other workers. The aim should be to decrease rather than increase restrictive practices, monopoly, and concentration of economic power.

Careful consideration should be given to guarantees that must be requested of private operators to achieve these ends. They must be required to observe national wage standards and to comply with laws on collective bargaining. They might also be required to utilize all equipment at full capacity and to permit labor participation in setting production goals and prices. Continued government ownership, with private operation, may prove desirable.



Let Man Use What Man Has Made!

Some companies may wish to utilize a new government plant instead of an older one on which a whole community is dependent. Adequate safeguards must be developed to prevent abuses and to protect the people affected.

The government should be prepared to operate plants itself, where business will not do so under proper conditions.

The government owns vast stores of trucks, airplanes, food and a bewildering variety of other goods. Business men worry about these so-called "surpluses" and are alarmed about their effect on business. Some would prefer to see them destroyed altogether.

The fact is that most of these things can be used. They are needed abroad, if not at home. Deliberate destruction and planned scarcity are the natural brothers of poverty and unemployment. Consumption of these goods must accompany full employment and production.

Immediate release of certain goods as war ends will also help reduce the danger of inflation. It would in some instances be cheaper to help a company convert to another type of production than to protect its market from surplus war materials. On the other hand, excess supplies, if dumped without planning, would depress some industries.

We urge advance planning for orderly disposition of government-owned stocks with the aim of avoiding demoralization of industry and trade while meeting human needs without waste.

USA Charges

Steel Co's. Fat From $650,000,000 In War Profits

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 15—The war profits to date of the steel industry amount to 650 million dollars—150 million dollars more than a half billion dollars—the United Steelworkers of America charged this week.

Congress set a peacetime standard of profits. This is the average net profits for the four years 1936 through 1939.

During 1936-1939 the steel industry averaged 139 million dollars profits. Thus the profits that the industry has made over and above 139 million dollars each year since 1939 are war profits. These are listed below:

Year	War Profits	Peacetime Level of Profits	Total Profits
1940	$153,800,000	$139,000,000	$ 292,800,000
1941	228,400,000	139,000,000	367,400,000
1942	141,300,000	139,000,000	280,300,000
1943	126,800,000	139,000,000	265,800,000
Total	$650,300,000	$556,000,000	$1,206,300,000

From 1940 through 1943 the steel industry made a total of one billion 206 million dollars after paying all taxes. Of these enormous profits, 46 per cent, or 556 million dollars, are peacetime profits, and 54 per cent, or 650 million dollars, are war profits.

In addition to these enormous profits, the steel industry tucked away in the sock almost a billion dollars for the upkeep of machinery and replacement of coal and ore mined. The specific amounts tucked away into depreciation and depletion (machinery care) accounts during the four years beginning in 1940 follow:

Year	Tucked Away to Replace Machinery and Coal and Ore
1941	212,378,000
1942	239,981,000

Finally, the steel industry is in the strongest financial position of its history. By the end of 1943 the total assets of the steel industry were over six billion dollars, or six billion 308 million dollars. In 1939 the total assets of the industry were less than five billion dollars, or four billion 898 million dollars.

From 1939 through 1943, within four years of war production, the total assets of the steel industry increased over a billion dollars, or by one billion 410 million dollars.

Murray Hits 'Service' Act, Praises War Unity Program

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15—The CIO "subscribes completely to the President's challenging call for national unity" and hails the action at Teheran for speedy victory and lasting peace, while continuing to oppose a national service act as "quack medicine," President Murray said this week in response to FDR's five-point message.

The five-point message, which contained a demand for a "realistic tax law" to hit war profits, for re-negotiation of contracts to let the nation recapture some of the more fantastic profits, for a floor under farm prices, for subsidies to hold prices down and re-enactment of the 1942 price control law, also contained a Presidential demand for a federal system of servicemen's votes.

Murray hit sharply at the "glaring and miserable failure of Congress to combat inflation" and pointed out that FDR did not "have to appeal for any law" to control wages, which are already frozen while prices and profits run hog-wild.

Despite this and the absence of planning, "American labor has continued to establish new records of war production unsurpassed in history," Murray noted. "At Teheran a toast was made to the production of American workers. Every day production records are broken through the sweat and toil of American workers."

Elaborating on the "quack medicine" of a national service act, Murray said that the demand for it rose "whenever the legislative and executive agencies became frustrated out of their own failures to accomplish a total mobilization of our nation's resources."

"The CIO has consistently urged," he added, "that apart from all the evils inherent in the attempt to resort to compulsory labor, the approach embodied in National Service legislation is ineffectual and actually contains dangers of further complication rather than aiding our manpower solution.

"The CIO has been opposed to and will continue to oppose the enactment of any National Service Legislation."

93-2 Victory

New York, Jan. 15—A 93 to 2 victory in the first of three Labor Board elections scheduled in one week was won at Sherman & Associates by the CIO Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists & Technicians this week. Sherman engineers and draftsmen are engaged in engineering illustrative design in services to the aircraft industry.

Smith in New Blitz Aims to Kill Unions

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15—Taking quick advantage of the newspaper uproar about practically non-existent strikes, Rep. Howard Smith, the best known labor-hater in Congress, came up this week with two proposals for suppressing unions and persecuting labor leaders.

Item one is a new bill that would completely outlaw unions taking part in strikes, authorized or unauthorized. Item two is a demand that CIO President Murray be indicted for allegedly violating the Smith-Connally Act.

Smith's demand for an indictment is based on an alleged violation of the ban on political contributions by labor unions contained in the act. According to Smith, Murray not only has violated the act but openly boasted about it in a magazine article on CIO political action.

The plea for an indictment is, to put it mildly, not expected to stand up. The article mentioned the $700,000 that CIO has already raised for political action. It said nothing about how the money would be used. According to the Act, the only ban is against direct financial contributions to candidates in Federal elections. It does not apply to primaries, to state, county or municipal elections, or to any other kind of political activity.

The new bill is more serious. According to reports, it could bar all unions from benefits of the Wagner Act, the Anti-Injunction Act and from orders of the War Labor Board. Union officers of striking unions are prohibited from appearing before any government board on their case.

The strike ban includes slowdowns and stoppages of any kind "in any industry or enterprise at any time, for any reason or for any purpose." In effect, it is meant to put unions with the smallest case of stoppage trouble out of existence.

Smith, of course, is a headline hunter, but a dangerous one. After all, the Smith-Connally Act was passed, and FDR's veto was overridden.

More War Cutbacks Due, Says Truman

NEW YORK, Jan. 15—Some communities will discover they have a serious unemployment problem in the near future, due to cancellations of Army and Navy contracts, Chairman Truman of the Senate War Investigating Committee warned the Natl. Retail Dry Goods Assn. here this week. Truman said that eight billion dollars in Army and Navy contracts have been cancelled already.

"The manpower problem, although paramount today, is nearing its peak," he declared. "Without attempting to prophesy the time when the war will end, I can tell you that the production of war material in some items has been so great that about six billion dollars of Army contracts and about two billion dollars of Navy contracts have had to be cancelled.

"This," he continued, "is only the beginning of such cancellations, and almost daily during the coming year you will see newspaper notices of contract cancellations, of plant shutdowns, of elimination of graveyard shifts and of reduction in employes.

"Although the manpower problem will continue as a serious one for the nation as a whole, many communities will find that in their area they have a manpower surplus. In some communities, there will even be a serious unemployment problem.

"This makes it important that sound action be taken now to provide for increased production of civilian goods."

The President's Message to Congress

By PHILIP MURRAY

President, Congress of Industrial Organizations

The CIO subscribes completely to the President's challenging call for national unity. We have been urging since the outbreak of the war that there be a discontinuance of politics-as-usual and business-as-usual practices in order that the action of all the people and the policies of our government be determined by a single guidepost, namely, what is best to win the war.

The CIO pledges its complete support to the efforts of the President at the conferences at Cairo and Teheran to obtain the unity of action essential for a speedy victory over the Axis forces and to establish a durable and lasting peace for the people of the world.

We also welcome the President's clear-cut declaration in favor of assuring servicemen the right to vote through federal action, as advocated by the CIO.

The President's message exposes the glaring and miserable failure of Congress to combat inflation. The President appeals for a realistic tax law and a continuance of the law for the renegotiation of war contracts to take undue profits out of the war. The President appeals for a cost of food law to place a ceiling on the prices which a consumer will have to pay for the food he buys. These were the objectives of the original national economic stabilization policy. The vigorous control of prices was the commitment of the law of October 2, 1942.

But while wages have been frozen—and it should be noted that the President does not have to appeal for any law to accomplish this task, it has already been done—the President's appeal to Congress is a recognition that the solemn pledge that has been given to the American people regarding effective price control has not been fulfilled.

Soaring prices, black markets, and frozen wages create the just and burning grievances of the American workers. These are the facts which they face as against the outrageous and extortionate profits that are being extracted by corporations out of war production.

The CIO therefore subscribes completely to the imperative need, as expressed by the President, of obtaining laws which will tax undue profits out of the war and really control prices for the benefit of the American people.

For the past two years, whenever the legislative and executive agencies became frustrated out of their own failures to accomplish a total mobilization of our nation's resources, they proceeded to recommend the quack medicine of a National Service Law.

To this hue and cry that has arisen recurrently, the CIO has demonstrated that the answer must be the coordination of the services of the men and women of the country for war production with contract allocation, production programming, and other aspects of our war production activities.

This task can only be met through a true central coordination and planning on the part of the agencies of the government responsible for war mobilization.

American labor, during the war period—in the face of all the miserable absence of planning on the part of the executive agencies—has continued to establish new records of war production unsurpassed in history. At Teheran a toast was made to the production of American workers. Every day production records are broken through the sweat and toil of American workers.

The CIO has consistently urged that apart from the evils inherent in the attempt to resort to compulsory labor, the approach embodied in National Service legislation is ineffectual and actually contains dangers of further complicating rather than aiding our manpower situation.

The CIO therefore has been opposed to and will continue to oppose the enactment of any National Service legislation.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

RETURNING from a trip that took him close to the war's realities, President Roosevelt confessed to a sense of "let-down" at the "faulty perspectives" he found in Washington.

He spoke contemptuously of the "pests who swarm through the lobbies of the Congress and the cocktail bars of Washington." He denounced "bickerings, self-seeking partisanship, stoppages of work, inflation, business as usual, politics as usual, luxury as usual."

Here is the great American nation girding itself for the supreme test of the second front invasion of Europe, and with its young men already engaged all over the globe in a war in which the whole future of civilization is at stake.

Yet anyone reading the daily press or visiting Congress or Washington cocktail bars would find evidence of everything the President denounced.

If he looked no further afield, he might get the impression that the American people were more concerned about petty partisan politics and the selfish jostling of conflicting interests than about the lives of their kinfolk and the success of the world struggle against fascism in its most critical hours.

Fortunately this impression is false. It is true only of a tiny minority—of some of the scum that has risen to the surface in Washington, including callous profiteers and defeatist or narrow-minded tory politicians. It is least of all true of the backbone of the nation, the millions of organized American working people.

They are behaving as true soldiers of production, putting in the longest hours under the greatest strain; enduring the most difficult housing, living, transportation and working conditions; suffering the injustices of frozen wages and sky-high living costs; and yet astonishing the world with miracles of war production.

Every policy and program of the CIO has reflected this devotion to victory above all else. Every issue has been measured by the yardstick of whether it helps or hinders the war effort.

How then does the press manage to create any impression that labor is just another "selfish pressure group"?

One reason is that most of the press, if not the organ of outright defeatist elements, is the creature of big-business monopolists and profiteers who deliberately use it for anti-labor propaganda.

Another reason is that the accepted definition of "news" concentrates attention on conflict, on disagreement, on the exceptional, rather than on attitudes and activities that are the rule and not the exception.

For instance, a single, short-lived wildcat strike of a few hundred workers rates more press attention as "news" than does the fact that millions upon millions of other workers are faithfully observing their no-strike pledge.

Similarly, the press ignores or plays down positive CIO declarations of its victory-first attitude. It singles out as news only such ideas as suggest conflict with other groups or public personages but do not by themselves present the CIO position in true perspective.

CIO Pres. Murray has taken vigorous issue with President Roosevelt's call for national service legislation. But most of the press has reported only this fact, without explaining the stated reasons and without quoting Murray's positive support of most of the rest of the President's message.

Actually Murray's statement emphasizes CIO's wholehearted response to the President's call for national unity and relates every issue to the overriding considerations of our supreme offensive.

He welcomes the demand for an end to business and politics as usual. He pledges CIO support to the objectives of the Cairo and Teheran conferences. He praises the call to give servicemen the right to vote.

Murray also notes that the President's message exposes the glaring failure of Congress to combat inflation. He supports his appeals for a realistic tax law, for a check on profiteering and for real price control. And he demands fulfillment of the promise of stabilization, violated by letting living costs soar out of range of frozen wages.

With this background and perspective, Murray assails the "quack medicine" of a national service law as inconsistent with the administration's victory program.

He points out that such legislation would hamper and confuse rather than aid the war effort, and that it dodges the real solution for total war mobilization demanded by the CIO—namely, true central coordination and planning of all production activities by the government agencies responsible for war mobilization.

Million War Vets In '44; Plan Needed

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15—Close to 1,000,000 veterans of the war against fascism have already been discharged from the armed services—almost all of them for medical reasons, wounds and the like. Thousands are coming out each month; as the invasion of Europe and the offensive on Japan roll ahead, scores of thousands more will be coming back to civilian life.

For them, the fighting part of the war is over. Now comes the adjustment back to life at home, complicated, for the most of these men, by wounds and other disabilities.

The obligation of the country to these men—and women, too—who have given their part in saving our nation is clear. We have to help them with every means at our command; with money, with education, with jobs, with the fullest opportunity to enjoy the training and the security they need.

How clear is Congress on this duty? With this question in mind, The CIO NEWS has gone through scores of bills already in the hopper, and being offered daily, to give its readers the line-up as it exists today. In addition, CIO legislative representatives in Washington, and The CIO NEWS, have interviewed existing veterans organizations, especially the Veterans of Foreign Wars, to get their views.

Broadly speaking, veterans' legislation at present offered falls into three categories: Mustering out pay, disability allowances and educational assistance.

MUSTERING OUT: One bill has already passed the Senate on mustering-out pay; several others are pending in the House. The Senate bill is S. 1543, and provides a flat sum for varying lengths of service at home and overseas.

According to the Veterans of Foreign Wars, who have had years of experience in guiding legislation through Congress, there is one main objection to the kind of mustering-out pay in this bill.

This comes from the fact that a veteran with many months of service in the U. S. and a smaller number overseas may be penalized by the method of calculating the pay on a monthly basis. Thus, the VFW cites the case of a soldier severely wounded at Tunisia who served 21 months here before serving eight months overseas. This man, the VFW points out, is eligible for $300, the same amount payable to a veteran with 12 months of home service only.

The VFW suggests overcoming this by putting the compensation on a per diem basis; i. e., so much a day for every day served at home, a larger amount for every day served abroad.

In addition to the Senate bill, there are a number of bills offered in the House. The best of these is HR. 2853, offered by Rep. Dingell (D., Mich.) and supported by the CIO. It provides $1.66 a day for overseas service, $1.33 for home service. CIO is urging an amendment to include merchant seamen.

DISABILITY: Many cases of hardship to wounded and disabled veterans have been reported, due largely to the delay between their discharge and the clearing of their cases for present disability allowances.

To take care of this situation, Rep. Sasscer (D., Md.), this week put into the House hopper HR. 3922, which gives the disabled veteran an allowance to tide him over until the Veterans Bureau has had the time to put his case through the necessary administrative steps. The bill has been referred to the Committee on World War Veterans Legislation, Rep. John E. Rankin (polltaxer, Miss.), chairman.

In addition, there are numerous other bills for disability compensation, including measures by Rep. Rogers (R., Mass.), Dickstein (D., N. Y.), Kearney (R., N. Y.), and others.

EDUCATION: There are two principal bills on deck to aid veterans in carrying on their education after discharge, one (S. 1509) by Sen. Thomas (D., Utah), and the other (S. 1516) by Senator Clark (D., Mo.).

Thomas's bill provides $50 a month for 12 months to veterans, including veterans of the Merchant Marine, plus three years more "for persons of exceptional ability and skill," and pays tuition, laboratory fees, etc. In addition, Thomas' bill provides $25 a month for a dependent wife, $10 a month for each child.

Clark's bill provides for four years' training aid, with benefits at the rate of three-quarters of the compensation for total disability as provided in the 1924 Veterans Act, plus additional amounts for dependents. The Clark bill does not include members of the Merchant Marine.

In interviewing the Veterans of Foreign Wars, one point aside from the main legislative points was stressed by their legislative agent, Omar B. Ketchum. This concerned the Veterans Administration, which the VFW wants entrusted with all matters concerning veterans.

In addition, the VFW wants a greatly increased appropriation for the Veterans Administration. Up until recent weeks, for example, the administration was extremely shorthanded, due to lack of manpower priorities, and was falling behind seriously on handling cases. According to Ketchum, this has been corrected; and the VFW is going to ask for $500,000,000 more for the administration as a starter.

With the number of veterans now coming out of the service, and the number that will be out after the victory is won, the labor movement will have to keep on the alert to protect and advance the interests of the returned service men and women. The CIO alone has more than 1,150,000 members in the armed forces and the Merchant Marine.

Service Vote Bill Hot

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15—Frantic efforts to find a "compromise" on the service vote issue marked the second week of the 1944 Congress, as the nation-wide demands for a simple, uniform Federal system of voting continued to mount.

Principal compromise bill in the Senate is S 1612, sent to the Privileges and Elections Committee by Sen. James Lucas (D., Ill.), author of the original Federal bill that was sidetracked in the Senate last December on the cry of "states' rights."

The Lucas bill provides for Federal distribution and collecting of the ballots to the armed forces, but then simply turns them over to the states for counting. While technically the states are still bound by the 1942 service vote act that knocked out the polltax and the registration requirements that would have cut down the effective vote tremendously, actually there is no clause in S 1612 to compel a full count as there was in the final Lucas bill.

In the House, the Committee on Election of President, Vice-President and Representatives was expected as The CIO NEWS went to press to report favorably on a House version of the Senate-passed Eastland-McClelland "states' rights" bill. Meantime, the Scanlon bill (HR 3895) was carefully forgotten in the Committee.

This House move for the Eastland-McClelland bill is also intended to serve as a squeeze play on the Senate, by presenting it with complete Congressional passage of a bill that actually prevents servicemen from voting rather than helping them.

WHAT TO DO

ACTION: Wires and letters and delegations should pour in on both Representatives and Senators to push for a uniform, federal system of service voting, including merchant seamen, with penalties to prevent state officials from refusing to count the ballots after they're in.

Speed is vital, since the polltax-reactionary Republican gang is hoping to rush these "compromise measures" through as early as possible, before the public indignation gets any higher. There is also a strong danger that the House Rules Committee will put a gag rule on the Eastland-McClelland bill to prevent amendments. This should be protested as strongly as possible.

Meantime, the people's wrath continues to rise, as the servicemen themselves show an increasing eagerness to be permitted to vote. An editorial in "Stars and Stripes," overseas enlisted men's paper, came out strongly for a uniform federal system this week, and a memo from the War and Navy Departments earlier condemned the state system as impossibly cumbersome.

PEOPLE CONCERNED

More letters and wires have been received on this issue than any other in recent Congress history, Congressmen themselves are saying, and not from the labor movement alone. From CIO scores of delegates have been coming to see their Representatives and Senators, with petitions, letters, wires, etc., pouring in every day.

A number of unions have been getting petitions signed by the thousands simply by taking them out on the streets. In Washington, the United Federal Workers got 15,000 signatures in a few hours. From New York, the CIO City Council sent 100,000 signatures down to the House. A broad people's committee has been formed in Michigan, including men and women from all walks of life.

United for Franchise

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15—Despite an obvious attempt by a Chicago TRIBUNE agent to break up the meeting, more than 20 organizations and some 15 Congressmen went on record in the House Caucus room here this week for a Federal system of voting for men and women in the armed forces and the merchant marine.

The Tribune agent, Rep. Ralph E. Church (R., Ill.), tried his hardest by ranting and shouting at the labor, church, consumer and women delegates to disrupt the meeting until Rep. Mike Bradley (D., Pa.), who was co-chairman with Rep. George Bender (R., O.), cracked down on him and shut him up.

In a moving speech at the meeting, CIO Legislative Representative Nathan Cowan told of his five sons in the service, one of whom was killed in action, and their desire for a re-affirmation of the democracy they are fighting for, by a chance to vote in 1944. This chance, Cowan said, can only be made a reality if a uniform, Federal voting system is set up quickly, as planned in the Green-Lucas bill which the Senate polltaxers sidetracked in December.

"We will back and work for legislation which guarantees our fighting forces a simple, uniform federal ballot," the delegates resolved. "We insist on a federal ballot because it is obvious that this is the only method by which our servicemen and women are going to be able to cast effective votes in the crucial 1944 elections."

Headed by Cowan, the CIO had delegates from the UE, from USA-CIO, UAW-CIO, the Mine, Mill & Swelter Workers, the maritime unions and the CIO Women's Auxiliaries. The AFL was represented by its legislative agent, Lewis Hines, and by the Machinists, the Teamsters, and the Hotel and Restaurant Workers. The Natl. Catholic Welfare Council was there, as were the Lawyers Guild, the Railroad Brotherhoods and the Regular Veterans Assn., composed of veterans of the Regular U. S. Army.

Republicans on Spot

New York, Jan. 15—Harrison E. Spangler, chairman of the Republican National Committee, was asked this week by Sidney Hillman, chairman of the CIO Political Action Committee, to state the Republican Committee's position on the right of soldiers to vote through a simple federal ballot.

Hillman, in a telegram to Spangler, pointed out that the CIO had received a favorable reply from Frank Walker, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, but none from the Republican chairman, in reply to an original telegraphic request of last Dec. 26.

The latest telegram, sent by Hillman Jan. 10 to Spangler, read:

"We have not yet received your reply to our telegram of December 26 on the Soldiers Vote bill. Chairman Frank Walker of the Democratic National Committee has replied that he favors a federal ballot administered by a federal ballot commission.

"It is difficult to understand your reluctance or hesitancy to express the stand of the Republican National Committee on an issue that involves the right of our servicemen to vote wherever they are and for whomever they please.

"Since Congress convenes today and should give immediate consideration to the right of soldiers to vote through a simple federal ballot, administered by a Federal Ballot Commission, a clear unequivocal and straight-forward statement by you on behalf of the Republican National Committee should do much to guarantee immediate and favorable action on this legislation. Again, may we hear from you by return wire?"

Radio Notes

New York CIO unions are starting a series of seven Sunday broadcasts over Station WNYC at 4:30 P. M. The first in the series will be presented this Sunday, Jan. 16, by the Natl. Maritime Union. The United Office & Professional Workers are on for the Jan. 23 broadcast, and the State, County & Municipal Workers for Jan. 30.

A daily CIO radio program called "Our Daily Bread" has been running for some time on the West Coast sponsored by the Los Angeles CIO Council. News reviews and interpretations are given on the program, which is broadcast over Station KPAS Monday through Friday, 7:15-7:30 p. m.

Time Out!

(The CIO NEWS will welcome contributions of material for "Time Out" and will pay for it on acceptance. Pointed comment on news in the public mind, original and brief jingles with a labor slant, and socially conscious humor are most in demand.)

As Congress went back into session this week, the U. S. Government announced that the District of Columbia would be provided with 50 extra cars of coal a week to offset a threatened heat shortage. No one, of course, mentioned the possibility of piping hot air from polltax Congressmen.

A deafening silence in Congress greeted the President's plea for realistic taxes on war profits, renegotiation and real price control. You could almost hear the seven points of 1942 turning over in their graves.

* * *

Senator Carter Glass last week reached his 86th birthday and said he would be glad to forget it. Most of us, on reaching that age, would be glad to forget at least 65 previous birthdays also!

* * *

The Republicans have heard that Dewey "is available" for the Presidential nomination despite his statement that he intends to serve out his four-year term as Governor of New York. Oh for the days of Calvin Coolidge when Republicans meant what they said when they said they did not choose to run!

The Chase National Bank says it "resents" the government's charge that it traded with the enemy in helping an industrial diamond dealer to carry on his transactions with the Axis. Maybe the boys in the Army might also resent the Chase National Bank when they think about the Nazi and Japanese munitions made with those industrial diamonds

Low Average

WLB Wage Hikes Only 1c an Hour

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15—Wage increases approved by the War Labor Board during the first year of wage stabilization raised the average factory wage rate only about one cent an hour, according to a report just issued by the WLB on its second anniversary.

Explaining that it was given the job of stabilizing wage and salary rates by the terms of an Executive Order based on the Stabilization Act of Oct. 2, 1942, the board reported that during the first year of wage stabilization (Oct., 1942, to Oct., 1943) "the average hourly wage rate of factory workers was increased 1.09 cents because of wage increases approved by the WLB."

Wage cases involving nine and a half million workers were handled during the first 11 months of 1943, the board said. Of these 3,500,000 were involved in 3,700 dispute cases settled by the board by final decisions, and 6,000,000 were covered in 109,000 voluntary wage approval cases.

Gross average hourly earnings of factory workers increased 9.6 cents during the period from Oct., 1942, to Oct., 1943, the WLB stated. Of this figure, however, only 1.09 cents was due to increases approved by the WLB.

The rest included 1.9 cents due to overtime pay for longer hours of work; 1.6 cents to the shift of workers from low-wage, low-skill civilian jobs to higher skilled war industry jobs, and 5 cents to such factors as increased earnings under incentive plans, upgrading, individual promotions and merit increases.

Seamen's Pay Small

New York, Jan. 15—The myth that merchant seamen are rolling in dough was blasted out of the water this week, in a study made by the United Seamens Service, a semi-governmental agency.

In place of the myth—dearly beloved by Pegler and fostered by his shipowning patrons—the USS put out the cold truth that merchant seamen, today, in wartime, are earning less than the amount a lowly private gets in the army, taking into account government figures on what the private gets in food, etc., besides his $50 a month.

The facts, revealed by the Natl. Maritime Union at a War Labor Board hearing in Washington, show that seamen earn an average annual wage of $1,661.14, which is $32.25 a week. According to the government, a private gets pay and value to the amount of $1,700 a year.

The USS study also scuttles another myth to the effect that seamen are rolling stones, don't have family responsibilities, etc. According to the study, 45 per cent of the seamen have to support families, plus themselves, on their $32.25 a week.

The study was done on the seamen themselves, by personal interviews with the men in the Natl. Maritime Union hiring hall in New York. It was what the statisticians call "a random sample" of 100 active unlicensed personnel in the deck, engine and stewards' departments of merchant vessels.

In making the study public, during hearings on an NMU dispute with the American Merchant Marine Institute, the employers' association, NMU President Joseph Curran said:

"Contrary to popular opinion, merchant seamen are paid less than shoreside industry. Their pay parallels closely that of the men in the armed forces. We call upon those newspapers and radio commentators who consciously or unconsciously have spread the myth of high wages for seamen to tell the public the truth."

UE Ups Pay $4.42 A Week For 13,000

New York, Jan. 15—Following a joint petition by the Westinghouse Electrical and Manufacturing Co. and the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, the War Labor Board this week authorized wage increases for some 13,000 white-collar workers to cover overtime employment.

Each of the salaried employes received an average of $4.42 a week, under the WLB ruling, to cover time and one-half compensations for work over 40 hours a week. Thus the Company will pay almost $57,500 a week to its white-collar workers, above what had previously been paid.

Wage Hikes Asked by Farm Equipment

Chicago, Jan. 15—The CIO Farm Equipment & Metal Workers this week, in setting a new wage policy, asked for a general pay adjustment to make up for the actual rise in the cost of living from Jan. 1, 1941, to Jan 1, 1944. Other points of the wage policy included:

1. A cost of living bonus adjustment to provide automatic monthly raises to meet increased living costs.

2. The end of pay inequalities within and between plants and within the industry.

3. Compensation for unemployment during conversion from war to civilian production.

4. Guaranteed re-employment for discharged servicemen regardless of service-incurred disability.

CIO Women Rally On Vets' Program

By ELEANOR FOWLER
Sec.-Treas., CIO Women's Auxiliaries

From all over the country come reports of the tremendous popular support which is rolling up behind the demand for a simple, uniform federal ballot for all our servicemen and women and merchant marine. There isn't any doubt of the will of the people on this issue. They want the men and women who are risking their lives to preserve our democratic way of life to be assured the opportunity to vote in our all-important 1944 elections.

In Los Angeles, CIO auxiliaries are getting wide support in circulating a petition for the soldiers' vote. In Washington, D. C., auxiliary members who joined with union members in collecting signatures last Saturday night got 5,000 in two hours. Two girls who stood outside one of the service canteens reported that when word got around inside about the petitions, servicemen and women came out and stood in line to sign.

"BALLOTS FOR SOLDIERS"

In Michigan, CIO auxiliaries are participating with almost every civic organization in a state-wide "Ballots for Soldiers" group which is planning to call at every home displaying a service flag to enlist support for the campaign.

National organizations including the three big labor groups, veterans' organizations, the Farmers Union, the Lawyers Guild, the National Council of Negro Women, the Women's Trade Union League and the CIO auxiliaries met here in Washington at the call of Congressmen Bradley and Bender to discuss the situation. They adopted a resolution supporting a "simple, uniform, federal ballot" as "the only method by which our servicemen and women are going to be able to cast effective votes in the crucial 1944 elections."

There's a lot of talk about compromises around Washington now. Both Congressman Worley, chairman of the House Committee on Elections, and Senators Green and Lucas, sponsors of the bill which the Senate defeated before Christmas, have introduced compromise bills.

In view of the tremendous popular interest in effective federal action, the CIO doesn't think compromise is necessary. But we do need speed. There's talk of delaying any further Senate action until both the tax and subsidy fights are out of the way. That might mean no action for a month or more.

We must also extend our campaign for the protection of servicemen to other issues.

Some 850,000 servicemen have already been honorably discharged from the service and many of them are in desperate need of funds to tide them over till they readjust to civilian life.

The bill already passed by the Senate would only give $500 for 18 months or more of foreign service. A much less generous bill with a top of only $300 has just been adopted by the House Military Affairs Committee.

When we write to our Congressmen and Senators about the soldiers' vote bill, let's tell them also that we favor adequate severance pay for our servicemen.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

Congress this week was loud with much talk of the national service act that was part 5 of the President's message. Ignored in the talk, of course, were FDR's four other points, which called for higher taxes on profits, retention of the re-negotiation of war profits clause knocked out in the Senate tax bill, price floors for farmers and subsidies to keep prices down for consumers, and re-enactment of the basic price control act of 1942.

Whether or not Congress continues to ignore the other points of the program, and passes a national service act only, depends on what the voters back home do about it. The President's first win-the-war program—the seven-point message of 1942—was dumped by Congress (all except the wage stabilization point). It's up to us to see that this process isn't repeated.

Despite the message, the Senate is going ahead this week to pass the utterly inadequate and unfair tax bill reported out of the Finance Committee. There's still time to wire on re-negotiation, excess war profits, if you act quickly.

Subsidies and polltax repeal are still as they were before the recess, still need pressure for action. The soldiers' vote issue is moving rapidly; our insistence should still be on a uniform federal system, as in HR 3895 of Rep. Scanlon (D., Pa.).

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Service votes	S. 1612 is the Senate "compromise" that does not compel states to count the votes. House is rushing its version of Eastland-McClelland "state's rights" bill as passed December in Senate.	S. 1612 in Senate Privileges & Elections Committee, (Sen. Green, D., R. I., chmn.). House Committee on Election of Pres., V-P. & Reps. expected to report Eastland-McClelland version as NEWS goes to press.	Stop these squeeze plays by demanding a simple, uniform federal system with guarantees by law that votes will be counted, will include merchant seamen, will override poll-tax and registration requirements in the states.
Mustering-out pay, (HR 2853)	Provides $1.66 a day for overseas service, $1.33 home service, CIO urging amendment to include merchant seamen.	House Ways and Means Committee (Rep. Doughton, D., N. C., chmn.).	Urge your Representative to support as best of series of mustering-out bills.
Emergency disability pay (HR 3922)	Provides aid between medical discharge from service and clearing of case by Veterans Adm. Delay has caused much hardship.	House World War Veterans Committee, Rep. Rankin (polltaxer, Miss.), chmn.	Urge your Representative to support.
HJ Res. 208	Extends farm labor freeze, robs fruit and vegetable process workers of Wagner Act, forbids imported labor to join unions, puts migratory labor under Farm Bureau control.	Senate Deficiency Sub-Committee, Sen. McKellar (polltaxer, Tenn.), chmn.	Urge your Senators to fight this flank attack on the Wagner Act.

WARNING: The annual blitz on appropriations for vital war agencies is coming up soon. Start writing your Representative and Senators now to ensure full funds to help carry on the war, no crippling riders as last year—especially urge an end to the notorious Frey rider on the NLRB bill.

Here's How to Start Child Care Centers

By SUNNY PRESSMAN
Staff Writer, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

1944 may be the year of decision on the European battle-front. The heaviest fighting is yet to come. The casualties will be great. The drain on our manpower at home will be even greater. Fathers are being called to join their sons and brothers on the fighting lines. It will be up to our women to join their sisters on the production line.

Thousands of women are already on the job, manning machines on farm and in the factory, so that their men overseas can man the guns on the battlefront. Still, there is a crying need for more and more women to take over the jobs our men are leaving behind them.

Not enough is being done to make it possible for our women to take over these jobs. Mothers would gladly hold down two jobs, one at home and one at the factory, and work at both with energy if they knew their children were properly cared for while they were away from home.

Some war nursery centers and after-school programs have already been set up by the Government but they are far from enough to meet the emergency. Many more such programs and nurseries would be under way if there weren't so much red tape to wade through to get them started.

To cut through some of this red tape for the first time, all the information available on setting up children's centers has been collected and written down in a booklet called "Children's Centers."

It tells simply and clearly how to go about getting a Children's Center started in your neighborhood—the kind of a center that will not only be a wartime, but a peacetime necessity—a center that will offer expert care and guidance by people trained to handle children.

Such a center will offer all the facilities necessary for the healthy growth of your children, in mind as well as in body, through daily health inspection and nutritious meals. And in addition, parents will be welcome to discuss their problems in handling their children in order to do a better job and enjoy their children more.

"Children's Centers" is issued by the National Commission for Young Children. It is edited by Rose H. Alschuler and published by William Morrow & Company, 368 Fourth Avenue, New York City.

New Draft Ruling

President's Message

The President in his message to Congress this week, among other things, called for a measure that affects labor materially and seriously —National Service Legislation. He also called for the discontinuance of politics and business-as-usual and national unity. He declared in favor of the right of servicemen to vote in the coming national election, and called for a cost-of-food law placing a ceiling on prices the consumer will have to pay.

Provisions for stabilizing prices and wages were contained, as President Murray points out, in the commitment of the law of October 2, 1942, which resulted in the stabilizing and almost complete freezing of wages, with the rest of the pledges falling by the way side.

What assurance has labor got that they will be effectuated from now on?

Soon after Pearl Harbor, President Roosevelt called for a plane production of 50,000 annually. Some people thought this was an excessive demand. The workers of the Nation more than made good. For the month of December alone, according to the release issued on January 7, 1944, by the Office of War Information, the American workers produced 8802 planes, an average production of 339 planes per day. This is more than double the first demand. For the entire year 1943 plane production amounted to 85,946, as compared with a total output of 47,873 planes in 1942—an 80 per cent increase. The weight production of planes increased 127 per cent.

Admiral Emory S. Land, War Shipping administrator, stated on January 8, 1944, that the 1943 shipbuilding program exceeded by more than a million tons the constructional goal set for them by President Roosevelt. 208 vessels, totalling 2,044,239 deadweight tons, came off the ways for the month of December, alone. The total number of vessels built in 1943 was 1896, with a dead-weight tonnage of 19,238,626, whereas the tonnage set by President Roosevelt was less than 18 million tons.

The Steelworkers of the nation broke all production records in 1943 and are prepared to break them again in 1944, according to President Philip Murray. More than 90 million tons of steel were produced.

What is true in these industries is true in other industries, in the main. American labor's production has startled the world and shocked the Axis forces. At the present time in a number of these basic industries workers have been laid off; plants have been closed down and in some cases others are going on a short work week. This is not the fault of labor. It apparently comes from poor planning on the part of someone in authority.

The easiest way out is to make the army of production the goat, when records belie such inference. With free labor, America has and will continue to furnish all the sinews of war that our industries can put out for the armed forces of our Nation and the United Nations.

The enemies of labor will endeavor to pass this National Service Law at the same time they will favor conscription of labor but will resist conscription of capital, just as they oppose wage increases and favor exhorbitant war profits. Labor conscription will not produce one more plane, tank, gun or ship. It is unnecessary in view of the record already made and that will be made in 1944.

CTAL To Attend London Meet

Mexico City, Jan. 15 (ALN)—On behalf of the Confederation of Latin American Workers (CTAL), of which he is president, Vicente Lombardo Toledano this week accepted the invitation of the British Trades Union Congress to send delegates to the world labor conference opening in London June 5.

In a letter to TUC general secretary Sir Walter Citrine, expressing the "special thanks" of the CTAL, Toledano said:

"The action shows the sincerity and high purpose motivating British labor, and guarantees the attendance at the conference of 16 bodies. I congratulate you and the TUC general council for your decision to convoke the conference, long desired by world labor. We received the TUC call with genuine eagerness."

Thomas Joins Co-op

Detroit, Jan. 15—Pres. R. J. Thomas of the CIO United Automobile Workers joined in celebration of the Cooperative Centennial recently by becoming a member of the East Side Cooperative here, affiliate of the Cooperative League of the USA. The cooperative movement in 1944 entered its second century of progress, and is celebrating its centennial all over the world.

"We of the UAW-CIO recognize the consumer cooperative movement as a powerful force for the building of genuine economic democracy, not only in America but all around the world," Thomas said.

Yugoslav Unions Aid Fight Against Axis

(First in a series of Allied Labor News Articles on the Yugoslav Labor Movement.)

NEW YORK, Jan 15 (ALN)—One of the principal factors in the forging of the National Liberation Army of Yugoslavia, which today is engaging an estimated 30-40 Nazi and satellite divisions and has regained more than one-third of the country, was the Yugoslav trade union movement.

A majority of the Partisan general staff received their training in the trade unions. Marshal Tito (Josip Brozovich), commander-in-chief, was for many years an organizer for the metal workers union in Croatia. Lieut. Gen. Ivan Gorshnak was a leader of the building workers and is a carpenter by profession. Maj. Gen. Kostanaj helped organize longshore workers.

Since the founding of the Yugoslav State on Dec. 1, 1918, unions existed in the main as semi-legal or extra-legal organizations. At the end of 1928 all opposition parties were abolished under the Law for the Defense of the State and the Skupshtina (Parliament) dissolved. (Under the same law the Communist party had been banned in 1921 and by 1922 15,000 oppositionists were in jail).

The Alexandrian dictatorship maintained itself with the help of 15,000 special agents who tracked down "political criminals." In addition to their regular duty, 60,000 gendarmes were always on the lookout for active trade unionists.

In the years following the King's assassination, one repressive government followed another, with labor and democratic political parties retaining their semi-legal status.

WORKED UNDERGROUND

This was the story up to the Nazi invasion in April, 1941. Unions and democratic parties continued to function throughout the 1918-1941 period, however, and at times made gains, despite the vicious brutality of the dictatorship and the later fascist - orientated governments. The long years of the dictatorship and underground work laid the base for the tough, fearless and resolute fighters of today.

The Law for the Defense of the State, under which trade unions as well as political groups were prescribed, was proclaimed after the Communists elected 69 out of 419 members to the Constituent Assembly in the elections of Nov. 28, 1920.

They polled 190,000 votes out of 1,500,000 and carried Belgrade. They ran up a big vote in Zagreb, principal city in Croatia, and won many smaller industrial cities in Macedonia and Montenegro.

Although Yugoslavia is primarily an agricultural country, it has rich mineral reserves in coal, iron, copper, antimony, chromium, lead, silver and gold. In 1939 it led European nations in the mining of zinc, production increasing 20 per cent in the years 1936-37. The mineral deposits resulted in the building of a metal industry.

The forests of Yugoslavia—taking in more than one-third of the country—formed the basis for a lumber industry. Along the coastal regions fishing, shipbuilding, longshore and other maritime industries existed. In Serbia a government-owned munitions factory employed thousands of workers. Large numbers of peasants divided their time between farming their small plots of land and working in local industry.

FOREIGN CONTROL

Two other factors may be noted about the problems of Yugoslav labor. One is the control over the country exercised by foreign capital; the second is the influx, after the Russian Civil War, of large numbers of Baron Wrangel's White Guard army.

Yugoslav currency and the financial structure were dependent upon French capital. Some reports even suggest that in 1926 the Bank of France actually issued the country's currency. One French copper company received 235 per cent in profits during 1935-36. British capital, principally in mining, also occupied a dominant position. After the Nazis seized control of Germany, Nazi "tourists" and money began to appear.

Somewhere between 60,000 and 80,000 White Guards migrated to Yugoslavia. Many government posts and almost all customs houses were taken over by them. Some of them also became government secret agents. While their wages averaged between $25 and $37.50 a month (U. S.), they were allowed to keep everything found on an arrested person and in his home.

Their hatred was directed particularly against the democratic parties and the trade unions. The centuries-old friendship of Yugoslavs for Russia made things even worse.

The Yugoslav government had become emphatically anti-Soviet. But Yugoslav democrats still point with pride to the fact that, despite the intervention of most of the Allied powers, not a single Yugoslav soldier or regiment fought against the Russians during the Civil War.

'Pork Chops & Politics' New NMU Pamphlet

New York, Jan. 15—"Our course is clear—we can win if we get into politics." With this argument, Joseph Curran, president of the Natl. Maritime Union and vice-president of the CIO, tells the merchant seamen to get to work on the political line. The advice is contained in the NMU's latest pamphlet—"Pork Chops & Politics."

Any kid who's still in high school can tell you that Aryan refers to a group of languages—get that, LANGUAGES—spoken by some people who settled long, long ago in India and Iran. You and your pal Goebbels just made up that Aryan business, Adolf. It's part of your propaganda. And some folks have been suckers enough to fall for it. But not us Americans. We don't burn our books—we read 'em—and we know the truth!

Boy, this is as full of holes as you are of tin medals! Listen, fat stuff, there are three general groups of people—white, black and yellow. They are the races which help to make up this globe. And there's no such thing as a "super-race." That's some more of your propaganda—and it's as phoney as your loud-mouthed boasting about no plane ever bombing the Ruhr! Just for a clincher, Hermann, get a load of this—in our country, the only Superman we know is in the funny papers!

NO, MISTER, there's no place in America for YOU!

You're the guy who swallowed the nazi line—hook, line and sinker. Maybe you don't know you're helping spread Racial hatred! Say, do you think we can forget that all races shared in building up America? Maybe you don't know you're helping spread Religious hatred! Do you think we can forget that this country was founded as a haven from religious persecution . . . that today Protestants, Catholics and Jews—the Smiths, the O'Reillys, the Levins—are fighting and dying side by side for our country? Listen you. Stop being a dupe for Hitler...cut out spreading disunity...use your brain and speak up for a united and democratic America.

Chase National Bank Named as Nazi Aid

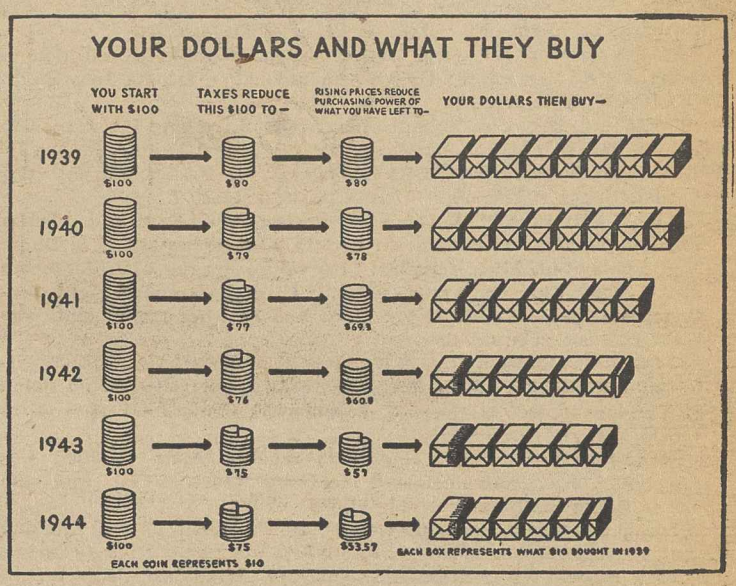
WASHINGTON, Jan. 15—The austere Chase National Bank, one of the most eminent of U. S. temples of finance, has been accused of some extremely dirty work, in an indictment by Mr. Biddle's Justice Dept.

The dirty work is so dirty that the indictment flatly accuses the bank—and an obscure diamond merchant, by name Smit—of trading with the enemy; to wit: "conspiring and engaging in the illegal sale and export of industrial diamonds in violation of the Trading with the Enemy Act."

Industrial diamonds are far more precious in wartime than the ornamental kind that bankers' wives wear. They're used in almost every process of machine making in the munitions industry. Any warring power that was completely without them would find it impossible to continue at war. Hence the fact that our government prohibits their export without a license.

But, the indictment indicates, licenses apparently don't mean much to the Chase National Bank, when there's money to be made, and now its indicted along with Smit and a number of dummy concerns charged with engaging in illegal trade.

According to the Justice Department, Smit's European representative became "Commissioner of Industrial Diamonds for the occupied territories of the German Reich" after Europe was overrun by the Nazis.



With pressure groups working to destroy price control, anything can happen to the buying power of the dollar in 1944. The estimates in this chart are based on present tax rates and on continuance of price control and subsidies, with quality deterioration and other factors affecting purchasing power taken into consideration. Spare-Rich Tax Bill Pushed in Senate

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15—Apparently acting to cut off even discussion of President Roosevelt's demand for "realistic taxes," the Senate this week began hurrying the spare-the-rich tax bill through to final passage.

As the CIO NEWS went to press, the Senate had passed all the revenue features of the bill, but had not come to consider the re-negotiation question. As the Senate Finance Committee approved it, the re-negotiation clause, which would permit the government to recapture some of the more exorbitant war profits, was left out.

As the bill stands now, it raises less than one-quarter of the amount the Treasury asked for war financing. Only some $600,000,000 of new money is raised from income taxes, and this comes from the lower brackets by knocking out earned income credits and credits for Federal excise taxes already paid.

The victory tax, which takes a straight five per cent pay cut from envelopes down as low as $12 a week, was retained by the Senate. No change was made in income tax rates or in surtax rates, which would take money from the higher brackets.

The Treasury wanted about six billions from higher income taxes. The CIO has repeatedly called for an end to tax loopholes that permit the wealthy to evade taxes, as well as for higher profits taxes, an end to super-profits, and higher rates on incomes from $5,000 a year up.

The new bill, however, paves the way for a sales tax by stubbornly refusing to raise needed funds from the corporations and individuals who have a surplus.

Sign No-Raid Contract

Washington, Jan. 15 — In an unusual pact, if not the first of its kind entered into, the CIO United Auto Workers and the AFL Intl. Assn. of Machinists have agreed that where one union has a signed contract or has been certified by the NLRB the other will not solicit membership nor "in any way interfere with this relationship."

St. Louis UE Plugs for Votes For Soldiers

St. Louis, Jan. 15—The CIO Council Committee on Political Action yesterday recommended that all CIO locals join in a dimes-names-and-wires campaign to bring pressure on Congress to pass a soldiers' vote bill that will ensure counted votes for servicemen in the 1944 elections.

The campaign originated with the Public Affairs Committee of United Electrical, Radio and Machine Local 825 under the slogan, "Give a dime to send a line." It is being carried out through the union paper and shop stewards at the huge St. Louis Ordnance Plant where 18,000 workers are employed.

Every worker is asked to give a dime and inform his shop steward of the name and relationship of the service man or woman whose vote he wants Congress to guarantee. Wires signed with the names of groups of workers are then sent to Congressman Eugene Worley, Chairman of the House Committee on Elections, to Representative John McCormack, House majority leader, and to Representative Joseph W. Martin, House minority leader.

Law Guild Helps Fight Anti-Semitism

New York, Jan. 15—Members of the Natl. Lawyers Guild, in cooperation with the Natl. Committee to Combat Anti-Semitism, have agreed to represent any person affected by any act of anti-Semitism anywhere in the United States.

This was announced this week in a joint statement issued by Leonard E. Golditch, acting secretary of the Committee to Combat Anti-Semitism, and Exec. Sec. Martin Popper, of the Lawyers Guild.

"The recent outbreaks of anti-Semitism in New York City, Boston and other cities have made it all too evident that, unless immediate effective legal action is instituted whenever such acts occur, they will continue to increase," the statement declared.

"It is therefore necessary for patriotic lawyers throughout the country to be vigilant in regard to this menace and voluntarily contribute their services. With this in mind the Natl. Lawyers Guild, in cooperation with the Natl. Committee to Combat Anti-Semitism, is calling upon its membership to stand ready to give their services in any case involving anti-Semitic attacks."

All other Bar Associations have been invited to volunteer the services of their membership, Golditch said.

—an incident that might be multiplied many times in a major landing operation unless the men now in training master to the last movement the basic techniques of the dangerous and strenuous job.

The climax of the "invasion" was the full ahead ramming of the beach by a huge Landing Ship Tanks (LST) that berthed her 327-foot hull as easily as some of the smaller craft had done, and promptly swung open her prow, out of which poured jeeps and trucks and guns and men, armed to the eyes and spoiling for a fight.

Labor observers praised the maneuver as a grand dress rehearsal and predicted that with more practice the men would make a success of the real thing in Europe.

Lay Plans For More Plant Feeding

Washington, Jan. 15 — Plans for expanding feeding facilities inside war plants were taken up this week at a conference of organized labor groups and Government officials. Wartime changes in food distribution and in working and living conditions have made war workers increasingly dependent upon in-plant feeding, according to the War Food Administration, which announced the conference.

CIO representatives who attended the first meeting of the Labor Advisory Committee included Russ Nixon, Electrical Radio & Machine Workers; Donald Montgomery, Auto Workers; and Leo Goodman, Retail, Wholesale & Dept. Store Employes. Also represented were the AFL, Railway Brotherhoods and Mine Workers.

To facilitate the in-plant feeding program, the OPA is said to be working out details of a plan for handling food allotments for war plant cafeterias and lunchrooms apart from other commercial eating establishments.

Must Push Security Bill, Says Cowan

Washington, Jan. 15—A warning that a campaign against the pending Murray-Wagner-Dingell Social Security Bill is being whipped up was sounded this week by Nathan Cowan, CIO legislative director.

"It is important that CIO affiliates increase their pressure on members of Congress and particularly on Senator George, chairman, Senate Finance Committee, and Congressman Doughton, chairman House Ways & Means Committee, for immediate hearing on the bill," Cowan wrote in a letter to CIO unions.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22—High praise for the remarkable achievements made by labor in producing material for the war was expressed by two top ranking government officials in messages sent last week to CIO Pres. Philip Murray.

Lt. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, head of the Army's Services of Supply, wrote:

"The War Department is most grateful for the almost unbelievable production record achieved in 1943, and recognizes this record to have been a major contribution to the success of the armed forces of the United Nations.

Chairman Donald Nelson of the War Production Board, in his letter to Murray, said:

"Your cooperation in the past has been significant, and without it the war effort would be bound to suffer seriously."

Both letters were in reply to a telegram Pres. Murray sent to Nelson and to Gen. George Marshall, chief of staff, after the wide publicity given to the general's recent "anonymous" criticism of labor.

Union Bond Buying Record Tops, Says Treasury Official

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22—"There is no single group of citizens in this country more whole-heartedly in favor of the Treasury's War Bond program than the officers and individual members of organized labor," James L. Houghteling, director of labor relations for the Treasury's War Finance Division, declared this week.

Basing his statement on "our experience of two and a half years," Houghteling said:

"The War Bond selling of the Treasury is done by volunteers and I do not know where you will find a greater reservoir of ready volunteers than among the officers and members of labor unions.

"There is no group of citizens in this country more loyal than they. There are today several million members of labor unions in the armed forces of the United States. There is hardly a union official or member in this country who does not have a son, a brother or a close relative on the fighting lines."

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22—Some startling figures on war casualties were issued this week by the OWI and next to nothing was said about them by the daily press and radio. These figures showed:

1. That 37,600 persons were killed in industry—from Pearl Harbor to Jan. 1, 1944—7,500 more than the military fatalities.

2. That 210,000 were permanently disabled—60 times more than the military wounded and missing.

3. That injuries account for four times as many lost man-hours as strikes and that 50,000 workers in manufacturing are absent every day because of accidents.

4. That deaths and injuries on the job are occurring now at the rate of 270,000,000 lost man-days a year, the equivalent of the withdrawal of 900,000 workers for a full year from the production lines.

Sources consulted, the OWI said, included the Department of Labor, Natl. Committee for the Conservation of Manpower in War Industries, Natl. Safety Council, War and Navy Depts., Maritime Commission, War Production Board, CIO, AFL and the managements of individual war production plants.

"ONE FRONT" WAR

In reckoning the cost of these production line casualties to the War Effort, the OWI report declared that "the death or disability of a skilled war worker here can mean the death of several fighting men overseas. Men close to the picture of tight delivery schedules and of assembly-line coordination say this statement can be accepted in its most literal sense."

A leaderman placed his hand on material being fed into a machine. Two fingers were caught in moving steel and amputated—"it couldn't have been done better by a Japanese booby trap," the company stated.

Two favorable aspects about these facts were found by safety authorities:

1. Deaths are only two-thirds as frequent per 100,000 workers in this war as in the last, despite the greater tasks and strains.

2. Safety practices backed by labor, management, government and other agencies, and adopted more quickly and extensively than ever before in industrial history, kept the loss of life and limb from being much worse.

Murray to Mayors:

CIO Urges New Hold-Line Price Control Setup

CHICAGO, Jan. 22—The CIO is for a new hold-the-line program of price control, President Philip Murray told the mayors of cities throughout the country in a speech made here this week before a Mayors' Conference and giving labor's viewpoint on economic stabilization and cost of living.

"We in the CIO hold that we can demonstrate that the whole statistical basis upon which the government has been figuring the rise in the cost of living since January, 1941, is false," he said.

"We hold that there has been just about twice as much rise in the cost of living as has been displayed by the official index. And we say that in addition to that measurable rise, there has been a deterioration in quality and a disappearance of low-priced lines which has further picked our pockets."

Murray mentioned the extensive investigation of the whole cost of living problem undertaken by the CIO, and described the study being conducted by the CIO United Steelworkers among the families of 1,500 of the union's members.

FOR NATION'S WELFARE

"We expect that these studies will show, as indicated by our preliminary findings," Murray stated, "that the average worker is no better off and indeed is falling behind his situation in January, 1941, in terms of real wages, and this in spite of overtime pay."

Asserting that the CIO's chief interest lies in the welfare of the country and its people, Murray called upon the mayors to aid in eliminating "the misunderstanding and confusion which besets our country."

He charged that the fundamental cause of most of the nation's unrest "is to be found in the temper of the housewife who today is paying at least twice as much to fill her food basket as she did in January of 1941." No system of mathematical skullduggery can deceive the American housewife, he added.

KNOWS OF PRICE RISES

"She knows that prices have risen far beyond the estimates of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, and it is this very fundamental thing which creates so much of our national unrest—the fact as the housewife sees it that our governmental agencies do not give the people the truth," Murray declared.

Murray called for a re-examination of the foundation on which our whole stabilization program is based to find out what it actually costs the average family to live. He said that the wage increases demanded by labor "are not only justified by demonstrable rises in the cost of living, but need not increase the prices of the goods we produce."

Labor's increased productivity justifies most of the wage increases demanded, and tremendous war profits more than cover the rest, Murray asserted.

FULL STABILIZATION PROGRAM

"The tax program, the re-negotiation of war contracts, the returnable character of excess profits, the subsidies embodied in what the President calls 'the cost of food' law, all should be included in any new stabilization program," he declared.

Asking for the cooperation of the country's mayors in the creation of a new stabilization program which will hold the line against inflation through effective price control, Murray said the CIO "calls once more for an adequate plan for reconversion which will maintain full war production while providing for the employment of the remaining men, material and machines in civilian operations."

'$64 Questions' For Connecticut Congressmen

The Congressmen faced militant CIO constitutents here and at Norwich, New Britain and Meriden, on issues such as taxes based on ability to pay, subsidies to decrease food prices and boost production, and passage of a federal soldiers' vote bill.

Among those "put on the pan" by requests that they state their positions were: Senator Francis Maloney, and Representatives Joseph E. Talbot, B. J. Monkiewicz and John D. McWilliams.

New Polish Group Hails Teheran Pact, FDR

CLEVELAND, Jan. 16—Leaders of more than 600,000 Polish-American trade unionists, meeting here this week to organize a nation-wide American-Polish labor council, hailed the Allied decisions of Teheran and praised the leadership of President Roosevelt.

The 75 leaders of CIO, AFL, and railroad unions came from New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan and Wisconsin industrial centers.

Krzycki, in a keynote speech, emphasized that this is not a nationalistic organization and that it seeks to enlist the support of all laboring people of Polish descent.

"As Americans of Polish descent and representatives of labor, we solemnly declare that we owe our allegiance first and above all to the United States of America," a declaration of the conference stated. "We deplore the attempts of certain Polish-American groups, inspired by selfish interests and motives, to weaken our loyalty or to create distrust between ourselves and fighting allies."

BACK FDR

The delegates unanimously pledged "undivided support to our commander - in - chief, President Franklin D. Roosevelt," sent him greetings hailing his leadership, and fully endorsed the crusade for all-out labor-political action in the coming general election.

Activities of some Polish-American groups were criticized in several documents adopted by the conference. Krzycki said certain of these groups have recently indulged in an orgy of criticism directed against the foreign policy of the United States.

"They have called upon the Polish-American community to repudiate it," he warned. "The historic Moscow pact has been described by these groups as a second Munich—only worse. It is charged that half of Poland was given away by Mr. Hull, and that Mr. Hull's stand is an approval of aggression, a challenge to democracy and to all Polish people everywhere. Much of this criticism is of a character bordering upon sedition."

BEHIND WAR EFFORT

Krzycki emphasized that the Polish - American community in general "is solidly behind the war effort . . . and welcomes fullest collaboration with our allies, Great Britain, the Soviet Union and China in winning the war as well as in planning the peace."

The sharpest criticism directed against such groups was contained in a message from Rev. Fr. S. Orlemanski.

The newly formed organization approved a proposal, by Professor Oscar Lange of the University of Chicago, to take leadership in calling a national conference of all Polish-Americans — estimated to number 3,000,000—to mobilize them behind a three-point program, to:

Organize full support to the Polish people in exercising their right to obtain a truly democratic Poland.

Organize economic help from America to the people of Poland, both in the form of immediate relief and general economic assistance.

CHARGE REACTIONARY PLOT

Professor Lange, predicting that 98 percent of the Polish people will greet the Red Army as an army of liberation, said: "They won't ask them whether they have received permission of the London government and say if they haven't then let us alone in our concentration camps."

The conference charged that "the Polish-Soviet question is being used by the darkest reactionary elements in American politics in an effort to lure the Polish - American community away from the path of progress and democracy."

Conference delegates received greetings from Louis Adamic, noted author and president of the United Committee of South Slavs. Adamic explained that problems of Polish-Americans and the Polish people on their own soil were similar to those faced during the war period by Yugoslavian people.

CIO Planning for the Postwar World

This is the third of a series of articles from "As We Win," a new CIO pamphlet based on the report of the CIO Postwar Planning Committee. Excerpts from the report follow:

Workers have willingly gone on short rations during the war because we must do so to win the war. But the only way to win the peace, when scarcities end, is to go on full rations for every man, woman and child in the United States.

During the war, wage rates have been artificially kept down by government control. Yet prices have continued to rise. For some workers, overtime earnings have helped meet the increased cost of living. But with the end of the emergency, hours of work will again fall either to the standard work-week, or below the part-time operation.

The price level will certainly not cease rising when the war ends, and may remain well above the 1940 level.

Raising Wage Rates

Wage rates will, therefore, have to be adjusted upwards merely to preserve former standards of living. If the nation's increased industrial capacity comes into full use, wage rates must be further raised so that the people may share fully in the increased national income.

All employes should be assured a regular income, such as guaranteed employment, as requested by the United Steelworkers.

Competition, Large Output

We must, as a nation, deliberately choose large output at low prices, with profit kept to reasonable levels and monopoly profits destroyed. Restrictive practices which have held new inventions off the market or limited their use must be ended.

In disposing of its plants, in terminating war contracts, and in allocating scarce materials during the transition period, the government must aid competitive business, not monopoly.

Although the anti-trust laws cannot solve this problem, they should be rigorously enforced against businesses which violate them. One field in which definite improvements must be sought are the patent laws, which at present hamper the full use of new inventions.

Disaster may come by accident, but prosperity in the modern world can come only by planning. Planning must start now. It must not pause until the last veteran is hired and the last wheel is turning. The task of converting after the war is too huge and the stakes too vital to be left to business alone. The nation must work unitedly for peace as for war, and in its efforts the cost of restoring all veterans and workers to peacetime occupations must be considered part of the true cost of war itself.

A federal agency should be set up at once to plan for a speedy and orderly transition to full peacetime consumption, employment and production. It should be headed by a Policy Board, with representatives from agriculture, labor and business. It should coordinate the programs of all agencies, secure necessary information, analyze problems, and develop policies.

Labor Participation

The transition problems of each key war industry should be handled by an industry council made up of representatives of labor, business and government.

Labor unions must share in making the plans because labor is deeply affected and because it has shown its

Govt. Responsibility

Post-war plans must be based on clear-cut recognition of the responsibility of the federal government for securing and maintaining full employment, production and consumption. We cannot afford to wait until business alone succeeds or fails.

Such planning must take in more than the immediate transition problems with which this report deals. It must aim to raise progressively the national level of living, to abolish poverty wherever it exists, and to maintain an economy that does not break down.

Bankhead Bill Death Threat to Subsidies

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22—The fight for food subsidies to increase output and hold living costs came back to Congress this week with a favorable Senate Banking Committee report of the Bankhead (polltaxer, Ala.) bill (S 1458), that would kill subsidies by June 30, 1944.

Bankhead's bill continues the Commodity Credit Corporation (Federal agency that buys and re-sells food and other commodities). The bill has a Section 3 similar to the earlier House bill. This section in the House bill completely outlawed subsidies on food; Bankhead's version is more genteel—it simply chokes them five months from now.

Immediate protest against the bill came from CIO President Philip Murray, who wrote to all Senators urging them again to eliminate the subsidy ban "in favor of an effective, adequately financed subsidy program for price control so that all groups—farmer, labor, white collar, business—may be maintained at maximum production and in maximum health."

Murray pointed out that the tight vote on S 1458—the report came out with a majority of one—shows that the people are making themselves heard on the issue. He said that "the opponents of subsidies are very frankly and admittedly exponents of higher prices."

POPULAR DEMAND

He also pointed out that the popular demand for subsidies shows that "the President's call, in his recent message for control of the cost of living while assuring fullest assistance to the farmers in aid of maximum production can be made effective."

Murray slapped down another "compromise" scheme on the subsidy issue which would substitute a revival of the old food stamp plan for a real subsidy program. Food stamp plans, "obviously desirable for their own purposes, are equally and clearly no substitute for price control," he said.

As a matter of fact, substituting the stamp plan for price control would be simply using the lowest income groups as a mask for an attack on all living standards, since all prices will rise if subsidies are ended. Not even the recipients of the stamps would benefit, since the stamp plan applies only to "surplus" commodities, which are scarce today and which never made up the whole of living necessities.

Price increases already in effect, while wages are controlled, "have made it necessary for workers today to seek an adjustment of wage policies in the interests of national health and morale," Murray pointed out.

'Fighting 60' Leads Battle For Subsidies

Washington, Jan. 22—The fight for food subsidies to control prices got a new boost in Congress this week when the "Fighting 60," more formally known as the Congressional Committee to Protect the Consumer, formed a "continuations committee" to support the issue on the Hill.

The Committee, headed by Rep. Scanlon, (D., Pa.) said that there is only one way to meet the "objective of the President to place a reasonable floor under the prices the farmer will be paid for his production and a ceiling on the prices the consumer will pay for food. This is through continuation of the subsidy program."

The statement, in scoring the Bankhead bill (S 1458)) that ends subsidies after June 30, 1944, added:

"As the hour of invasion of Europe nears, all Americans working for the objectives set forth at the Teheran conference, must give wholehearted support to the President's call for a real cost of food law and for re-enactment of an economic stabilization act."

CIO Hits 'Frantic Effort' To Becloud Army Vote Issue

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22—"Frantic efforts . . . to becloud the simple issue involved in the question of soldiers' vote legislation" must be countered by an insistence on passage of a simple, uniform Federal plan that guarantees the votes will be counted, CIO Pres. Murray said this week in a strong plea to Representatives and Senators.

Murray's appeal was backed up by a similar message from Sidney Hillman, chairman of the CIO Political Action Committee, who wired to Congress and to political leaders, including Harrison Spangler, head of the Republican National Committee. Hillman's wire renewed previous demands for a clear-cut stand and reiterated the plea for a Federal guarantee of an effective service ballot.

GAG RULE THREAT

Murray's demand came at the time when the polltax-Republican alliance on the House Elections Committee pushed the Rankin-Eastland "states' rights" bill (S 1285) through to a favorable report and possible early action on the floor.

(As the CIO News went to press, the polltax-Republican gang in control of the Rules Committee had won a rule barring a rollcall vote, which means that the Congressmen can vote for the phoney Rankin bill and not be caught doing it.)

Meanwhile, the Senate Elections Committee made a favorable report on the new "compromise" Lucas-Green bill (S 1612) which provides for Federal distribution, transport and collection of service ballots. It does not, however, guarantee that states will count them, as the original Green-Lucas bill that was sidetracked last December did.

Murray's letter, in asking for a real service vote bill, said: "Either they are given effective Federal machinery to place the ballots in their hands, collect the ballots and guarantee that their votes are counted, or our men and women in uniform will be denied the right to vote."

The House Committee action on the anti-servicemen's bill resulted in a minority report from Committee Chairman Worley (D., Tex.) urging adoption of his bill (HR 3892), which is similar to the new Green-Lucas measure in the Senate Committee.

As Pres. Murray pointed out in his letter, quick action can cut away the deliberate confusion the polltaxers have tried to create.

CIO Accepts World Labor Parley Bid

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22—CIO will be at the first world conference of trade unions set for June 5 in London, President Philip Murray this week assured Sir Walter Citrine, head of the British Trades Union Congress.

CIO will be there, Murray pointed out in his letter to Citrine, because it has long sought an international labor meeting "to weld the unity of labor, the governments and the peoples of the United Nations in the war against the Axis, and to assure the establishment of the Four Freedoms in the peace."

In London, the CIO will meet with representatives of British labor, with delegates from the trade unions of the Soviet Union, with representatives from China, with leaders of the Confederation of Latin-American Labor (CTAL), and with refugee representatives from the Nazi-occupied countries.

The conference itself climaxes a long campaign on the part of the CIO that began back in 1942. Then, under Pres. Murray's leadership, the CIO first promoted the plan for the meeting over the opposition of reactionary AFL top officials and over the early reluctance of the Trades Union Congress to by-pass this opposition.

This week, Sir Walter Citrine's invitation and Pres. Murray's wholehearted acceptance puts these AFL top shots—people such as Matthew Moll, William Hutcheson and the like—on a considerable spot. Murray's acceptance comes at the time when the AFL Executive Council, meeting in Miami, will have to take up the question and render some kind of an answer to world labor and to their own membership.

Whatever the AFL Executive Council's answer; whether or not it continues to regard the CIO as a "dual" organization whose five million members have no right to deal with their fellow workers in other countries and whether or not they continue to regard the Soviet trade unions as non-existent, the CIO will be represented.

WAR, POSTWAR PROBLEMS

As indicated in Murray's acceptance, and in the invitation sent by the TUC, the conference will deal with problems not only involving the winning of the war but also with the nature of the peace and the postwar world.

According to Citrine's letter to Murray, "The General Council suggest the following preliminary agenda: a) The furtherance of the Allied war effort; b) The attitude of the Trade Unions towards the anticipated peace settlement; c) Representation of the Trade Unions at the Peace Conference, and at the preparatory commissions or conferences for relief, rehabilitation and post-war reconstruction; and d) Problems of postwar reconstruction, including the reconstruction of the International Trade Union Movement."

As the invitation pointed out, these tasks call for the broadest possible representation, and for the burying of whatever prejudices or pre-conceptions may still exist in the minds of some leaders. Differences in structure and ideology must not be allowed to interfere with either the attendance at the conference or the agenda that will be worked out.

The TUC letter is very clear on this point, frankly saying: "The General Council realize that the fact of inviting some organizations may in itself cause a feeling of dissatisfaction in the minds of other bodies and perhaps furnish the latter with an excuse as to why they should not attend such a conference.

"Nevertheless, the General Council have the conviction that if the Trade Union movement is to be rebuilt, it must be attempted on the broadest possible basis..

"That basis can only be achieved if all bona-fide Trade Union movements are invited to come together to see how it may be possible to rise above their domestic and national difficulties in the task of rebuilding the International Movement."

In the matter of the agenda, the invitation asks for suggestions from the participants, and Pres. Murray's answer promises "at a subsequent date to convey to you any suggestions which we may have" and also to convey the names of the CIO delegates who will attend.

Decisions at the conference will not be binding upon the organizations there and will of course be subject to ratification through their regular procedure back home.

"We would point out," the invitation reads, "that this agenda is provisional only, and we invite participating organizations to submit subjects for discussion by the conference.

"We have in mind the probability that the conference will itself decide on the final agenda, through a Standing Orders Committee whose function would be to consider the suggestions which had been submitted by the respective organizations, and to prepare from those suggestions the final agenda which they would recommend the conference to adopt."

In addition to invitations issued to the CIO, the AFL, the Brotherhoods here, and the CTAL in Latin America, the conference will include delegates from exiled labor movements and from unions in the neutral countries. To make it possible for the neutral country groups to attend without complications with their governments, the TUC proposes to have them meet with the conference in separate sessions.

According to this arrangement, the first week of the meeting will be confined to United Nations' labor affairs—problems of winning the war, labor participation in the peace conference, and postwar settlements.

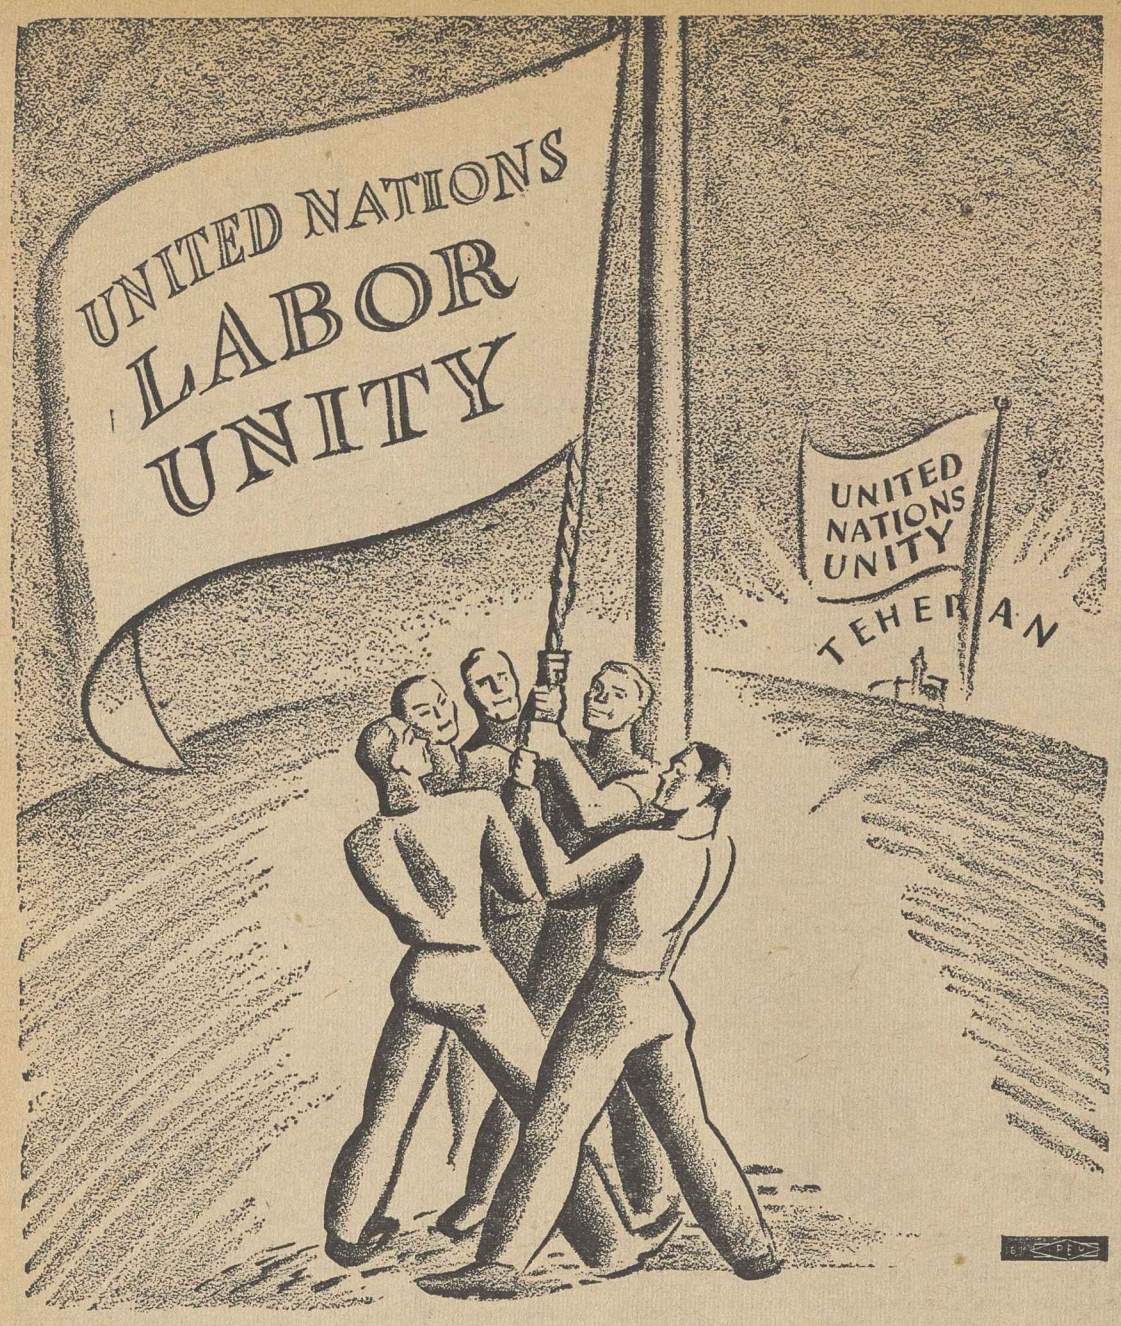
The second week will deal with problems of relief and rehabilitation after the victory, including the rebuilding of the European trade union movement. This arrangemen, the TUC feels, will make it possible for neutral representatives to take part in at least the second half of the meeting.

Representation at the conference will be in ratio to membership, starting at two delegates for 250,000 members, going up to five for one million, one for each additional 500,000 up to five million, and one for each million beyond the five million mark.

In concluding the invitation, accepted by Pres. Murray for the CIO and now before the AFL Executive Council, the TUC expressed the earnest hope that all union groups invited will attend, to work out world labor unity to meet the greatest tests ever placed before the workers.

"The General Council feel very strongly that this is a supreme testing time in the history of the Trade Union Movement," the letter says, "and that the depth of our faith in trade unionism will be revealed by the extent to which all concerned are ready to rise superior to internecine difficulties and national obstacles.

"Unless the Trade Unions, representing the working classes, find it possible to sit together in conference, to commune on our common international problems and to try to find a constructive policy to rebuild our great International Movement, the prospects for humanity are very dark indeed."



We'll Be There

The world labor conference in London next June opens the door to active collaboration between the labor movements of all the United Nations for winning the war and rebuilding a free, prosperous and peaceful post-war world.

It should be labor's counterpart to the Cairo and Teheran conferences between the leaders of the United Nations.

Such a get-together on the part of world labor has long been advocated by the CIO, and Pres. Murray has enthusiastically accepted the invitation issued by the British Trades Union Congress, stressing "the imperative need for closest collaboration of the workers of all the United Nations."

While the governments, the armies and the peoples of the United Nations have been drawn closer and closer together in the common fight, it is to be regretted that a parallel unity between their official labor movements has been so long in developing, due to petty considerations of jurisdictional prestige and petty political prejudices on the part of some labor leaders.

It is to be hoped that those AFL leaders who have been blocking world labor unity will reconsider their position or be overruled, so that all American labor may be represented in the all-inclusive London conference.

CIO and AFL members are working and fighting together in the war industries and on our far-flung battlefronts. Countless American workers owe their lives to fighting allies from the workshops and unions of Britain, the Soviet Union and the other United Nations.

It is hard to imagine how any American union leader can refuse to shake hands and sit down with the union representatives of our allies, to map common plans for furthering the common cause for which the workers of all the United Nations are working, fighting and giving their lives.

A Decade of Terror

Ten years ago, on January 20, 1934, Hitler erected a tombstone on the grave he had dug for the German organized labor movement, once seven million members strong.

This law wiped out every protection and benefit won for the workers by the German labor movement in generations of struggle.

No sooner had the Nazis taken power in 1933 than they seized the unions' offices, stole their funds, imprisoned their leaders and began the systematic destruction of the labor movement.

The law of Jan. 20, 1934, gave "legal status" to the abolition of unions, denial of the right to organize and prohibition of collective bargaining.

It also included a slave code under which the workers were "given back to the employers," as Dr. Ley put it, and rendered helpless to defend themselves against exploitation and all the oppressions of the Nazi rule of terror.

If we think for a moment about this anniversary, it suggests hundreds of lessons. Here are a few:

(1) Fascism cannot co-exist with a strong labor movement. Its first step is to destroy the unions and every form of independent labor activity. Once this backbone of democracy is broken, the Fascist dictators can proceed unhampered with the rest of their program.

(2) Every Axis country has similarly destroyed the unions and enacted slave codes for the suppression and exploitation of the workers. That's one of many reasons why we call this labor's war.

(3) Fascism is not confined to our Axis enemies. In Franco Spain the Nazi pattern of destroying the labor movement was followed. And now in the Argentine, suppression of unions, imprisonment of their leaders and labor codes on the Nazi model foreshadow the growing drive toward complete Fascism. The menace of Fascism is world-wide.

(4) In the United States, defeatists, isolationists and other camouflaged pro-Fascists alternately bait labor and "flirt" with it, to turn the workers away from all-out war effort behind the Commander-in-Chief. The Nazis engaged in similar "flirtations" on their road to power. They called theirs a "workers' party" and even encouraged strikes at times. But once in power, they had nothing for labor but the iron heel.

It's ten years since Hitler "buried" the German labor movement. If we let the lessons of those ten years sink home, they will put more steel into our determination to wipe Fascism forever from the face of the earth.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

"IS THE CIO going into politics or is it going to school?" asked a New York politician who chanced into the Conference on Full Employment called by the CIO Political Action Committee.

Certainly the ghosts of past Tammany chieftains would never recognize as "politics" a conference at which 40 papers packed with facts and figures were read by as many speakers.

But the CIO has never been afraid of new ideas, and one of its ideas is to base its policies on serious analysis of economic facts and trends.

So to this conference the CIO Committee summoned experts from within and without its own ranks to examine every aspect of a problem that is uppermost in the minds of most Americans.

"What's going to happen to my job after the war?" the war worker asks.

"What's ahead for me when I come out of the army?" says the soldier.

"What kind of a market is there going to be for my produce?" asks the farmer.

The leaders of the United Nations, at Cairo and Teheran, met this problem in overall terms.

They recognized that maximum united effort for winning the war required not only agreement on military strategy, but also the assurance that war unity would carry over into close collaboration for building a peaceful and prosperous post-war world.

In national terms, the morale of workers, soldiers, farmers and businessmen for maximum war effort demands far-sighted planning now to prevent post-war inflation, unemployment, depression and conflicts leading to another war.

(1) The war has demonstrated the enormous productive capacity of American industry, and the possibility of raising the living standards of the whole population, if our present productive effort is continued and expanded after the war for civilian purposes.

(2) Such full production requires both increased domestic purchasing power and an increased volume of foreign trade—which in turn depends upon assured world peace and international collaboration as planned at the Cairo and Teheran conference.

(3) To provide full employment for 10 million ex-servicemen as well as present war workers our national income will have to be expanded from the present 140 to approximately 200 billion dollars.

(4) This will require more of the national unity and planning that make possible our war production, with greater representation for labor, along with government and industry; and an immediate over-all program for reconversion such as CIO supported in the Tolan-Pepper-Kilgore bill for efficient conversion to war production.

(5) A greatly expanded program of social security and public works, with generous provisions for the security and civilian reinstatement of war veterans, will be necessary to cushion post-war dislocations.

(6) Farmers, businessmen, veterans and all other Americans have a common interest with labor in working for a post-war economy of full production and full employment.

(7) To achieve such an "economy of abundance" it is necessary to fight the "back to normalcy" ideas of such industrialists as Alfred Sloan of General Motors, who looks for a reduction of national income after the war to 100 billion dollars—which would mean unemployment for 10 to 15 million workers, and ruin for countless farmers and businessmen.

(8) It is also necessary to fight such programs as are advanced by NAM leaders who urge that the government surrender all responsibility for our country's economic functioning and return to Hooverism, and allow monopoly capital to restrict production, peg prices, cut wages and stagnate our economy.

From such economic surveys, the CIO draws political conclusions for its 1944 campaign which call for:

An aggressive fight against isolationist, defeatist and all other elements who would sabotage the Cairo and Teheran plans for defeating fascism and for post-war international unity.

Active support for all candidates who will work for planned reconversion, greater social security, and united and planned effort for expanding production, increasing purchasing power and assuring full employment.

Special Full Employment Supplement

Political Action For Victory in '44!

A Supplement Presenting Some Of The Main Findings Of The Conference On Full Employment Called By The CIO Political Action Committee In New York City, January 14-15, 1944.

Hillman Warns Year Will Be Decisive

By Sidney Hillman
Chairman, CIO Political Action Committee

All of us are conscious that 1944 will be a decisive year.

It has opened auspiciously as our armed forces and those of our allies strike blows against the enemy. The decisions reached at Cairo and Teheran foreshadow new and mightier offensives in the coming months.

General Eisenhower has told us that we have it within our power to make 1944 the year of final victory in Europe. We can also make it a year which will lay the basis for the swift and certain defeat of Japan.

It is our duty as Americans to dedicate ourselves to the realization of the promise that this historic New Year holds out to all mankind. That is the cardinal obligation which rests upon each of us. Every plan that we make, every action that we take must be measured by a single standard: Does it contribute to victory?

In calling this conference, we of the CIO Political Action Committee were deeply conscious of this obligation. It is a conference which will be devoted to the problem of full employment in the post-war period. Yet we conceive of it as a war conference—a conference which can make a very real and substantial contribution to victory.

Our men at the front and workers, farmers and businessmen here at home are already doing some hard and troubled thinking about jobs and security in the post-war world. If we here can begin to provide them with satisfying answers to their questions they will fight better, work harder and produce more to speed the day of victory. Plans made and action taken now to build the kind of world we are fighting for will strengthen our effort to destroy the enemy we are fighting against.

Moreover, we are today confronted with immediate issues which not only vitally affect the conduct of the war, but will in a large measure determine

What's Ahead?

"What's ahead for us?" is a question that is agitating the minds of millions of Americans.

Soldiers, workers, farmers, businessmen are wondering whether victory will be followed by unemployment, depression and war-breeding conflict, or whether the war effort will be transformed into an equally vigorous peace effort for a happier post-war world.

The leaders of the United Nations who met at Cairo and Teheran gave their answer in world terms, when they pledged not only war unity but also closest international collaboration for peace and prosperity after the war.

In launching its 1944 political campaign, the CIO has made it one of its first tasks to seek a satisfactory answer to the same question in terms of the United States.

For this purpose, the CIO Political Action Committee called its Conference on Full Employment in New York on Jan. 14-15.

Leading experts were invited to make their reports and predictions on current economic trends. CIO leaders were asked to make their recommendations on the basis of carefully prepared studies. Spokesmen for government, farmers, veterans, and other groups joined in the common planning for jobs, security and higher living standards for all Americans.

This Special Supplement of The CIO NEWS presents a partial report on the findings of this most significant conference.

Work Now Will Shape Postwar World—Murray

By Philip Murray
President of CIO

This is the crucial year of the war. It is also the crucial year of our democracy when we in this country will decide the shape of our post-war world for many years to come. And by this decision we shall decide many things for people throughout the world.

There are forces working within each of the great major parties to carry us toward large-scale unemployment and an economy of scarcity. And there are other forces working to carry us toward full employment and an economy of abundance. Organized labor has long since chosen sides in this fight. The war has demonstrated beyond a doubt that labor is right, that America can produce abundance.

But the war has not demonstrated that we will do so. Today decisions as to the return to an economy of scarcity are being taken daily in the war production agencies. This spring in the primary elections and next fall in the general elections the American people will have a chance to register their choice at the polls. This is bound, therefore, to be the most momentous election in many years.

We can go further and say that the CIO would not have organized the Political Action Committee if it had felt that labor's part in the coming elections is of the utmost importance.

We need a great upsurge of unified support from all groups in the community to create a national striking force to finish off the Axis. Our enemies are on the run. I do not

Victory No. 1 Problem, Says Thomas

By R. J. Thomas
President, UAW-CIO

The number two problem is to win the peace by providing full employment at home after the war is over.

The great expansion that has taken place in industry since the war started leaves us two alternatives. One of those alternatives is a higher standard of living, higher than we have ever known before. The other is the worst depression, the longest bread line we have ever seen in this country.

The CIO and the Political Action Committee of the CIO reject the second alternative.

I have found, particularly in the industry in which I am involved, that there has been enough technological improvement since 1939 so that unless some post-war plan is worked out, it will only require the number of people who were used during the depths of the depression to put out that amount of production, which means somewhere in the neighborhood of fifteen million people unemployed in this country.

If we were to accept such a theory, it seems to us that it would betray the soldier, whether he be here at home or whether he be on the other side. It would also betray the millions of workers on the home front.

For instance, today in the automotive and aircraft industry, there are employed more than four hundred thousand women. There has been great employment since the war started of Negroes. Those are grave problems and unless given a great amount of thought will lead to a great amount of unemployment after the war is over.

I am not one of those who agree that women could return to the kitchen. I am not one of those who agree that we should slip backward as far as the Negro is concerned to the position of discrimination that we were in before this war started.

This Conference has been mainly called to discuss the right of everyone who has the ability and wants to work to have a job. I don't think there could be any higher aim for any group of people in America today.

Plan To Kill Poverty

By John Brophy
Director, CIO Councils

The nation's present plant and equipment can give us perhaps 200 billion dollars' worth of goods and services every year. This is at least double our pre-war income. If we plan our production and distribution properly, no one need live in poverty or want in this country in the years to come.

Our proposals envisage a total strategy for this purpose which will include (1) a great program of public works; (2) a broad policy of rehousing the American people; (3) the extension of public enterprise, particularly in electric power; (4) a comprehensive social security system; (5) a progressive tax policy; (6) a defensive program of monopoly control, calling for the strategic use of our new government-owned war plants and for a general revision of the patent system, and (7) national economic planning throughout the basic industries.

We can anticipate a period of partial reconversion, beginning now, and lasting through the balance of the war in Europe, and perhaps without much change through the war in the Pacific. Then there will be a period of change-over and temporary unemployment. This time the solution has to be complete and permanent. The American people will not stand for anything less than that.

We will move into the planning process gradually. It will be forced on us in the period of partial reconversion. We will get more experience with it during the period of full reconversion. Production schedules and estimates of consumer demand should be worked out during this transition time and during the temporary post-war prosperity which will follow.

The reorganization of our economic system along such lines will leave private ownership untouched, but will call upon it to exercise its privileges in accordance with the general welfare.

It will complement our political democracy by industrial democracy, by bringing government, the labor unions, the farm organizations, and the consumer organizations into the process of economic planning. The achievement of such a reorganization will mean a declaration of independence of the American people in respect to their economic affairs.

Must Build Unions Now

Vice-President, CIO
Director of Organization

Workers face difficult days, days of decision. Our ability to meet these trying days will depend on the strength of our unions. Let's keep them strong!

If we can escape the tragedy of depression and bread lines, the outlook for these post-war days is better. But we shall still face a problem of great difficulty.

Many of our members have moved to areas less accustomed to unions and much more hostile. Millions have moved from north to south, from east to west. Whole industries have moved to the south. Organization, today and tomorrow, faces a south with a disenfranchised working class and a feudal governing class; a south with a delicate and dangerous balance between the races; and a south conditioned by a fundamentalist religious emphasis.

No part of our nation can be kept economically depressed without affecting the whole. The workers of the south are being organized now, and with each victory on the union front, strength is garnered for victories on the political front.

We have accomplished much in seven years. There is much yet to do. Beginning now, we must see to it that:

(1) Every card-carrying member of the CIO must be trained to an understanding of unionism so deep and broad that wherever he goes he will speak and live the message of the CIO.

(2) In the days of reconversion, we must study and understand the problems we face and prepare to meet those problems.

(3) Finally, we must look at our problems as national in scope, our interests as broad as the nation's interest. All our work must be done with that realization, as we build the CIO from its five and one-half million to twice and three times its present size.

Proper provision for our demobilized servicemen, an expanded social security program, the fight against inflation, adequate and equitable taxation, the recapture of excess war profits, methods of contract termination and questions of reconversion are all problems that press for attention.

We recognize, as all thinking men must, that we cannot build a prosperous and happy nation in the midst of a world torn by national rivalries, national insecurity and imperialist conflict that must inevitably lead to war.

We are confident, however, that the Moscow, Cairo and Teheran declarations herald a new era in international relations—an era of national security based upon the close and continuing friendship and collaboration of the United Nations within the framework of a world organization dedicated to the maintenance of a just and enduring peace.

The great goals outlined at Moscow, Cairo and Teheran—the objective of a world at peace for many generations, envisaged by Roosevelt, Churchill and Stalin—will not be realized without struggle.

There are still groups in our own land and elsewhere within the United Nations who plan to pursue the old imperialist struggle for power who will attempt to foment distrust, division and conflict among the United Nations. We must fight and rout these forces in our midst just as relentlessly as we are fighting and routing the external enemy.

Full employment states our objective in terms of jobs for workers. But its realization is essential to the well-being of every other group and section of our population. Only full employment can assure farmers a market for their produce, and business—big and small—customers for their products.

Anything less than full employment will spell a stagnating economy of idle men and idle machines, farm surpluses and hunger, insecurity and desperation. This is the very breeding ground of fascism which our sons and brothers are today shedding their blood to exterminate.

Full employment is not something automatic. It will not come by itself. Hard thinking, bold planning and the unselfish cooperation of all groups is essential to its achievement. Let us not minimize the formidable obstacles which lie in the way.

Recently the National Association of Manufacturers met and offered us its best thinking on this subject. It offers us a slogan: "Free Enterprise." Now, "Free Enterprise" is a fine slogan. Everybody is for it. Nobody is against it. Free enterprise is simply not an issue in America.

But the program that lurks behind the NAM's fine slogan most decidedly is an issue. Under the guise of free enterprise, the NAM proposes that the American government surrender all responsibility for the functioning of our economy. In effect, it demands a return to the kind of national government we had in the twenties.

Under that philosophy of government, free enterprise meant freedom for monopoly capital to restrict production, peg prices, cut wages and stagnate our economy at the expense of workers, farmers and small businessmen—and finally at the expense of big business itself.

Mr. Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., speaking at the same conference, has revealed more details of the NAM's design for living in post-war America. Mr. Sloan looks forward to a peacetime income of one hundred billion dollars—although he does not tell us on what basis he arrives at that figure. At that level, he thinks that the General Motors Corporation can make a tidy profit.

Under his estimate, our economy would operate at two-thirds of capacity or less. A drop in national income to 100 billion dollars would add up to unemployment for 10 to 15 million American workers. It would ruin our farmers, throw thousands of businessmen to the wall and catapult us down a spiral of deflation that would make the crash of 1929 feel soft as a featherbed.

Fortunately, not all American industrialists share the philosophy of the NAM and Mr. Sloan. Many of them believe with us that post-war plans must be predicated on the full utilization of our men, our machines and our soil—not on an economy of scarcity. We invite them to join with us in developing a program to make free enterprise work and to yield real freedom and security for all Americans.

Our goal of full employment in peacetime with a secure and abundant life for all is no less challenging and no less difficult than that of arming our nation for victory over Hitler and Tojo. We cannot hope to succeed unless the measure of national unity which we have achieved in wartime is maintained and extended after victory. We cannot succed unless the government which represents us all assumes the obligations which it bears to us all.

Cairo, Teheran Mean Jobs With Peace

That was the interpretation made of these two famous agreements by Vice.-Pres. Wallace at the CIO Political Action Conference. He said that "of all the actions taken in 1943 looking toward full employment, the Cairo and Teheran conferences were probably the most important."

By Henry A. Wallace

WE HAVE completed a year of great accomplishment and have begun a year which will be of greater significance. The President by his daring and his wisdom has set our feet on the road toward complete victory. Cairo and Teheran mean not only the closest cooperation for war but also effective cooperation in the peace to come.

Without a large volume of foreign trade unemployment is certain in the United States and England. Therefore, I say that of all the actions taken in 1943 looking toward full post-war employment, the Cairo and Teheran conferences were probably the most important.

I want to express my appreciation of the magnificent job the President has done on the home front. To transform 135 million people from an easy-going peace to an overwhelming war effort involves complexities beyond the mind of man to comprehend.

There are two groups of big businessmen in the United States. In one group are found those who believe in Allied war unity, those who have always hated and distrusted Hitler. In the other group are found those who believe in "isolation first." Some of these finance anti-Semitic movements. Some organize hatred of the President and discord in the Democratic Party. Others promote isolationism in the Republican Party.

One probable reason why some of these wealthy isolationists so strongly oppose the President and the kind of peace he stands for may trace to the fact that they have had profitable relationships in the past and hope to renew them with the big German trusts.

But, fortunately, there are many big businessmen who believe wholeheartedly in Allied unity in just the same way as the President. They believe in unity both for the war and for the peace.

All groups of businessmen, large and small, good and bad, are enormously interested in the government's policy with regard to reconversion and contract termination.

Already 40 thousand contracts amounting to more than 12 billion dollars have been terminated, and while many contracts have been reinstated there has been enough net change to cause serious unemployment in some localities.

When the European war ends there will probably be a 40 billion dollar curtailment in war production. This could conceivably cost the jobs of more than 10 million men unless plans are made.

Businessmen and laborers will face a sharper crisis when contracts are terminated than the nation faced when war was declared. They have a right to demand that there be some agency in government which has the power and the courage to speak clearly and decisively on all reconversion problems.

The wise men in labor, business and government will have to give to the individual small businessman the same assurance of a big market as our government at war has furnished during the past two years. Labor can't do it by itself. Business can't do it by itself. Nor government. All three must recognize their joint responsibility.

Of course, we must have a vast stockpile of blueprints for public roads, schools, sewers, reforestation, irrigation dams and flood control projects for every state in the Union so that if employment falters for any length of time in any area government employment may be promptly thrown into the breach.

Both labor and business might well consider recommending to Congress the delegation of power to some governmental organization to make continuously those slight shifts which are necessary if the national income is to stay on the road of full production, full consumption and full employment without inflation or deflation.

'44 Vital For Future, Murray Says

have any doubt that the Axis will be defeated—and at an early date. But I do fear the effect for years ahead of our failure to undertake our great impending effort with all the unity at our command.

The CIO Political Action Committee extends its hands to all other groups in the community determined to halt reaction in its tracks, here and abroad. To farmers, businessmen, small and large, and to other workers organized and unorganized, this committee extends the hand of fellowship in a campaign to unify the country behind a program of full employment and full democracy in America.

The time for us and for all those who agree with us to begin to establish our program is now, not after the war. In the week of January 3, 64 openhearths and electric furnaces were idle in the steel industry, a score of plants making armor plate for tanks have been abandoned, and unemployment is a growing phenomenon, not yet numerically serious perhaps but symptomatic of a downward trend.

We are over a hump. The trade journals of big business have for months been talking about a return to civilian production. You can smell "business-as-usual" cooking in Washington today. To the nostrils of us who want to win the war quickly, to get our boys home, it is not a savory smell. But if something isn't done about it the tide running towards an abandonment of war production could become almost irresistible.

The problem which labor, farmers and those business groups who place winning the war above selfish interests must face is: how to maintain full employment until the last gun is fired against the Germans AND the Japanese, and how to enlarge civilian production so as to secure full use of our productive capacities in men, machines and materials.

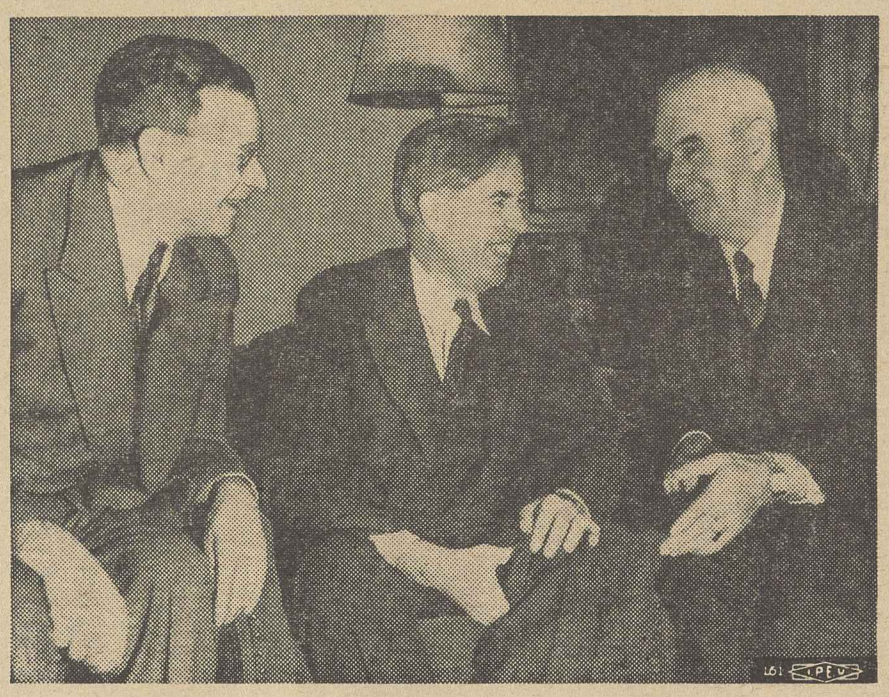
man wants an answer is: How can we maintain after the war the level of the $200 billion dollar annual income we have achieved during the war? How can be attain this $200 billion annual income of which we have shown we are capable? I do not believe we will long be satisfied with less. Indeed, we know that this cannot represent our maximum effort since 10 million of our most effective workers were in the armed forces when we made this record.

Moreover, those war achievements demonstrate that we could have had something approaching this productive output throughout the decade of the thirties while instead one-third of the nation was ill-fed, ill-clothed, and ill-housed and millions were continuously unemployed.

Only by demanding stabilized and mounting production can organized labor hope to enjoy the benefits of America's new-found productive capacity. It is up to industry to meet this challenge and to the national administration to take the action necessary to implement this maintenance and expansion of high productivity. And labor must make known its views at the ballot box if the national administration is to recognize our demands.



Sidney Hillman V.-P. Wallace Philip Murray

The administration in turn must face the fact that the people of this country, and especially the returning servicemen do not believe that this production machine can only be geared to making goods to be blown up and thrown away.

It is not sufficiently realized, perhaps, that these decisions do not wait upon the end of the war. Today and every day many of the elements of these decisions are being arrived at during this period of transition, of reconversion from war to peace.

One of the great inevitable issues of the 1944 election is going to be, "What will be the shape of this country after the war?"

The vote of the CIO, I feel sure, will be cast in favor of a world in which full employment will be permanently built into the American system as part of our way of life. We have demonstrated our productive capacity during the war and we cannot be satisfied with less.

Many of our business leaders have suppressed this issue by vague talk about "free enterprise" and "the American way of life." Are they talking about maintaining democratic institutions, or are they talking about world cartelization?

Labor Patriotic

Our people are loyal and patriotic, as our record in production, in bond buying, in blood banks and the service records of our members will show. But our people are family men and women, home-loving, God-fearing, self-respecting people who do not take their obligations to their families lightly. They want jobs now and after the war. They want a peaceful, stable world for their children to grow up in and their sons, brothers and husbands to return to.

To date labor has done the producing and the largest share of the fighting. It is our boys who make up the largest single group in Uncle Sam's forces. But whatever the canned propaganda spread by some of the press may tell you, it is not labor nor the average farmer, nor the small businessman who is getting rich on this war.

It is certain of the biggest businesses which have waxed rich and powerful, ever richer and more powerful. And this has been at the expense of labor, the average farmer, and the average businessman.

In furtherance of our unions' desires to acquire maximum production, the CIO has not only attained the goal set for it by both the Army and Navy, but it has exceeded the expectation of the leaders of our armed forces and the President in these endeavors. The all-over record of American labor made public repeatedly by responsible governmental agencies proves that American workers have attained a goal of 99.4% of perfection.

In the light of these well-established facts, is it wise for government to pursue a policy which seeks the universal regimentation of all labor? Our voluntary system has achieved for America goals of production the equal of which has never been closely approached by any other country in the world's history. Then why this persecution of labor? Why this campaign of misrepresentation? Why this campaign of deceit?

Is it designed to destroy the confidence of the American public in the organized labor movement when the record which speaks for itself proves an almost perfect performance?

Are certain interests in the United States hell-bent upon the establishment of a Fascist system of government in our country?

The experience of the German people and the peoples of all the occupied countries in Europe have proven that before German overran Europe, these same methods were adopted by the Nazi party and its leaders. They show also that certain German business interests did cooperate with Hitler to destroy the democratic way of life throughout the world by first seeking the destruction of the trade union movement.

Control over the war program is today in the hands of those who are returning us to an economy of scarcity. The 100 largest war producers are today and have since the defense program began been consistently in control of over 70% by dollar volume of all war contracts.

Only action at the polls can bring home to Congress and the Administration in office that the average American knows what he wants, and means what he says. Only action at the polls can stop the drift to reaction which is being subsidized by those who want to convert this country into a happy hunting ground for monopoly.

This election will see the most gigantic out-pouring of money by reactionaries in the history of our country, and it will be subsidized out of war profits. Already huge sums are being spent by these elements to mislead many people who are not prepared to understand the forces at work.

Cooperation Urged

The forces behind this deliberate creation of confusion are not active for the first time. They are the same ones who have consistently fought the right of labor to organize and bargain collectively and have only paid lip service to the labor laws of the land while employing high-priced legal and publicity talent to advise them as to how they can nullify the law, or erase it from the statute books.

The CIO proposes to work with government and industry and all other groups in the community for the winning of the war. It never has and never can so interpret that pledge as to mean that it will not resist every effort to destroy our institutions from within while we are fighting to maintain or establish democracy abroad.

This is a crucial election. But it is not going to be won or lost on election day alone. Workers who do understand the time required to register and vote, and, where necessary, the money needed to pay a poll tax, to be as important to their well-being as participation in the life of the union are true unionists.

But first everybody must register, and we should begin a great registration drive immediately. We should see to it that all our boys and girls in the armed forces are enabled to vote. Then we are ready to carry on a campaign to get out the vote in the primaries and general election.

U. S. Must Guarantee Jobs for Veterans

Full employment for all returning servicemen was one of the main points seressed at the CIO Political Action Conference. Discussing it were: CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey, Pres. Albert J. Fitzgerald of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, CIO Legislative Director Nathan Cowan, and Millard W. Rice, national service director, Disabled American Veterans.

By Nathan Cowan

A few weeks ago the Senate was a party to one of its most disgraceful acts in recent history.

A coalition of reactionary Democrats and reactionary Republicans voted in effect to deprive millions of our servicemen and women of the right to vote.

We must end it and end it now. We must have no repetition of the shabby chapter of ingratitude written in the government's treatment of the Veterans of World War I. We must have no jobless, pitiful heroes selling apples or poppies on the streets; no homeless Veterans huddling under viaducts; no ragged, trusting Bonus Army marching hopefully on Washington to be driven out with fire and bullets, as if they were enemies of the land they had saved.

The Veterans of this war must be given the help and consideration the Nation owes them. They must be given mustering-out-pay, sufficient to maintain them while they find security in jobs. They must be given the medical treatment they need and the hospitalization they need and those who are so badly disabled as to need prolonged treatment and rehabilitation, must be kept in the service until the treatment is completed.

By James B. Carey

We know that a malicious attempt is going on to try to separate servicemen from labor. That move is instigated and led by the very people who are responsible for the mass unemployment of 1932—that unemployment which led to war heroes selling apples on the streets of our large cities.

We know that those interests have abandoned the attempt—if they ever made it—to achieve full employment in the postwar period and they are satisfied with 5 million or 7 or 10 million unemployed. They think of a future world, just as they thought of the world in the 1920's, in terms of low wages, high prices, sales taxes, the open shop, and a reserve of unemployed.

Now it might seem to some that the easiest path for labor is to give in to those who attack us and to retreat from one position to another, yielding each time some of the gains we have made on wages, working conditions, social rights and political rights.

It is true that if we retreated, some of those who now attack us in the press and on the radio might call us "patriots." But what would the veterans say if, after the shooting and dying is over, they returned to an America of unemployment, insecurity and poverty and such a low national income that even their own veterns' benefits were endangered?

Labor, joined together with farmers, small businessmen, Negroes and whites, students and clerks, must begin the job now of fulfilling our responsibility to our veterans. The time is pressing.

By Millard W. Rice

I must frankly confess, as an individual, that even though we might be successful in securing just as effective preferences as possible for the employment of employable veterans, both as to public and private employment, I still feel that there would probably not be sufficient opportunity for gainful employment for all veterans, without the concurrent adoption of such policies, by labor unions, by employers, by capitalists, and by our nation, as would be aimed to bring about full, useful employment for all American citizens.

Unemployed persons are not unemployed solely because of their own inadequacies. Most unemployed persons become unemployed because of circumstances beyond their control as individuals.

Increased social security benefits for all unemployed employables and for all unemployables is as important as is full, useful employment for all employables.

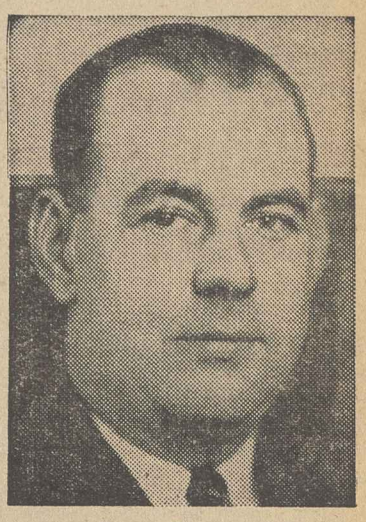
There are still many inadequacies and inequalities as to such benefits which can be corrected only by additional laws. All compensation and pension payments to disabled veterans should provide a constant purchasing power, by a 10 per cent jump for each 10 per cent increase in the cost of living. Adequate dependency allowances, such as are in effect in Canada, ought to be added to the pensions of disabled veterans.

By Albert J. Fitzgerald

Towards the goal of full and useful employment for all veterans, the following points will be considered in a well-prepared program:

One—Every veteran has the right to education and training along lines which may have been started while in the Service, if he wishes it.

Two—Every veteran has the right to free hospitalization and medical treatment in a Veterans Administration Hospital, as long and as often as he needs it for service-connected disabilities, and for non-service disabilities if facilities are available.



Albert Fitzgerald

Three—Every veteran shall be guaranteed return of his former job, if he wants it. Preferential consideration should be given to veterans for work in Federal Government. Assistance must be given to veterans to help them find new employment. Government funds should be made available to all veterans who cannot find employment in private industry.

Four—A system must be arranged so that veterans who own or buy farms may obtain loans necessary to reestablish themselves at constructive rural occupations.

Five—Liberal mustering-out pay for all veterans must be made available, and without undue delay upon ending their period of service in the Armed Forces.

Problems of Peace In CIO Industries

What peace will mean to steel, auto, aircraft, shipyard and textile industries was discussed by speakers at the CIO Political Action Conference. On this page are excerpts from speeches by: Clinton S. Golden, assistant to the president, United Steelworkers; Presidents John Green and Emil Rieve, respectively of the CIO Shipyard and Textile Workers; and Sec.-Treas. George Addes and Vice.-Pres. Walter Reuther of the United Auto Workers. Father Benjamin L. Masse, associate editor of "America," talked of the problems of small business.

By George F. Addes

First, it must be recognized that the aircraft problems can be solved only within the framework of a sound national economy.

What proposals I have to suggest for the aircraft industry are, therefore, fully contingent upon realization of the CIO's general program for full employment, for social security, and for sound and peaceful international relationships.

It is in full recognition of these facts that I present the following program for the post-war development of the aviation industry.

(1) Establishing a tripartite agency of government with full representation of labor and industry to guide the transition from war to peacetime production.

(2) Establishing throughout the industry the 30-hour week and a decent annual wage.

(3) Disposing of government-owned plants and equipment under conditions which will guarantee use of such property to the advantage of the nation and its workers.

(4) Developing full research activity to determine the most valuable productive use of plant and equipment not needed either for maximum civilian or military use in the future.

(5) Immediate joint research under government sponsorship to overcome technical obstacles now hampering full development of light plane production and sales.

(6) For development of national and international air freight and passenger routes.

(7) The provision of full educational opportunity to train for other industrial or professional employment aircraft workers for whom the post-war aircraft industry cannot offer steady work.

(8) Provision of full separation pay to all workers leaving the industry.

By Walter Reuther

I think the Government should create an over-all agency to regulate and to begin to work out plans for meeting the post-war problems.

This top agency that should be created now should be made up of labor, management, the consumer, agriculture and the Government.

In the automotive industry, the aircraft industry and similar industries,—the job there is one of conversion, which means tooling. What we should do is to dovetail in with our present tooling capacity both for the war program and the conversion program.

In this respect it is suggested that the Government create by industry and by area tooling pools, both as to skilled manpower, tooling facilities and materials.

The real challenge to American industry in the months ahead is going to be meeting the constant change necessary in equipment, dictated by military considerations.

In the auto industry we ought to fit into this general tooling program the facilities of the tool machine industry which has passed its peak of production; there is going to be a tremendous lay-off in the tool machine industry in the near future.

If we replace one to two per cent of our total machine capacity in the auto industry during the war, at the low levels of tooling machine activity, we will save from five to six months in getting our industry back into automotive production when the war is over.

As to the aircraft industry, there is an industry which is tremendously over-expanded. We don't need one in five plants to meet post-war commercial needs. The aircraft industry, the geographical location of the plants, the physical structure of the plants, will lend themselves effectively to the production of prefabricated homes, kitchen units, bathroom units, heating and air conditioning units.

By John Green

The size and nature of our industry in the post-war world will depend on the answers to major political questions.

It is unquestionable that the shipbuilding industry will undergo a contraction after the war, far beyond that of any other industry in America, a contraction which parallels its war-time expansion.

In the years 1936 to 1939 our industry employed about one hundred thousand workmen. Today it is one million, seven hundred thousand, and it may easily be two million before the end of this year.

Because of the uncertainties referred to above, any post-war employment figure must be tentative. Navy construction will be sustained more than merchant vessel programs, but I suggest 250,000 as a maximum figure, with perhaps 200,000 more probable. This includes employment in repair yards, and roughly 70,000 who will be employed in the Navy Yards.

The shock of this tremendous contraction of employment from two millions to a quarter of a million or less is diminished somewhat by the following considerations:

(1) Of the present employment, 15 per cent are women. It can be anticipated that most of these will leave the shipbuilding industry, whether or not they leave the labor market altogether.

(2) A large number, difficult to ascertain, of the two million consist of agricultural workers who can be expected to leave the industry as employment drops.

(3) The war-time flow of workers from the construction industry to the shipbuilding industry will be reversed.

As a result of this direct interest of Government in our industry, there has been developed a top tri-partite committee, consisting of representatives of Government, management and labor to regulate conditions of work and employment.

At the end of the war the function of the committee should be to try to insure, not only demobilization of this tremendous industrial machinery, but also the employment of labor.

By Emil Rieve

In my opinion, it is not only possible to achieve full employment after the war, but it is possible also, if we are willing to undertake a bold and daring program, to maintain full employment for many years to come.

Full employment, it seems to me, can be achieved and maintained only if the income of the American worker and his family is sharply raised. In the textile industry, full employment will be possible if every American textile worker and his family can be guaranteed an annual wage of $2,500 a year.

The task that will face us after the last gun is fired will be to substitute high labor income for the government blank check of the war years in order to provide sufficient purchasing power and to guarantee adequate consuming power that will be needed in an economy of full employment.

The income of the American worker's family must be sharply increased. Workers in the textile and other clothing industries, and most of the men and women returning from the war will have jobs only if there is a determined effort to raise the incomes of American workers to a $2,500-a-year level.

How can we do this? It seems to me that this objective can be reached if the government will set a floor under wages by establishing a national minimum income level, on an annual basis.

There should also be commissions set up for every industry—commissions embracing representatives of the government, of labor, of management, and of the public at large. These commissions, as I see it, would study each industry, analyze its economy, and on the basis of their findings, determine the full-employment and annual minimum wage possibilities of each consumer goods industry.

By Father Benjamin L. Masse, S.J.

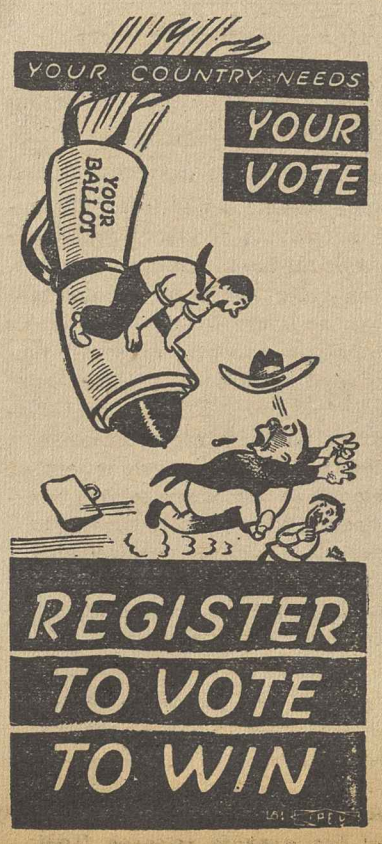
In addition to necessary changes in the tax laws, it has been suggested that the Federal Goverment sponsor some scheme, probably in cooperation with the banking system, to furnish easy credit to small businessmen. This would take care of one of the worst worries the average little fellow has.

But credit facilities are not enough. The Government should also use its power to improve the competitive position of small business. This it can do by restraining monopolies and by furnishing, as it does now for farmers, technical and scientific information.

In recent years, little business and organized labor have drifted too far apart. Labor has been impatient with what seemed the exaggerated self-interest and excessive independence of small enterprisers. It has resented small business opposition to the Wages and Hours Law and to other necessary social measures.

The obvious way, and the traditional American way, to prevent a dangerous concentration of economic power in the hands of a few is a working alliance among small business, agriculture and organized labor. Toward that objective. intelligent leadership in all three groups should strive.



By Clinton S. Golden

The first problems of reconversion have come up in the steel industry. We now have a monthly surplus of approximately 300,000 tons of alloy and carbon steel over essential war needs. And a few open hearth furnaces have already been shut down.

The figures show that in 1929 the steel industry was operating at 88% of capacity. In 1933 it had gone down to 33%. It rose again in 1937 to 72% of capacity and only in this wartime period has it reached over 98% or practically full production. The industry provided 31 hours of work per week in 1933, 37 in 1937; and 43 hours in 1943. The total number of employes has fluctuated from a low of 290,000 in 1933 to over 600,000 today.

What measures can we adopt to maintain full production now and tomorrow in the steel industry?

I think the best contribution I can make to your discussions of this issue is to describe as simply as I can, the machinery used by the government to reach and maintain full production in steel. This machinery is centered about two main parts, the requirements system and Steel Industry Division.

The requirements machinery is a central scheme under which the claims of war needs upon our productive resources are collected and broken down into the materials, facilities, and manpower required to produce them. Under this scheme, the users of war supplies, as they are called, the claimant agencies, come in and state their needs for steel.

In the meantime, the WPB, through its Steel Division, obtains a plant-by-plant picture of the available steel production by tons of plates, sheets, rods, bars and other shapes. The total claims on steel making and the available capacity are then matched.

Once the basic distribution of steel has been made among the various war programs, the next part of the war planning machinery goes into operation. This is done by the Steel Division of the WPB, which is responsible for seeing to it that production orders and delivery schedules of the steel plants are kept in order and within the limits of the overall program.

This machinery is tied into the contracts placed by the procurement agencies through the priorities system. With each contract, the contractor receives a priority rating, that is, a ticket entitling him to get the steel he needs for the performance of the contract. He may assign this ticket to his subcontractors under proper safeguards.

Sitting in review of this entire machinery are special production committees of the claimant agencies, and a central committee in the WPB who watch for bottlenecks and breakdowns.

The immediate problems of reconversion can be dealt with by the priority machinery. As a surplus of steel over military requirements occurs, we can resume the production of civilian items that have been curtailed or altogether cut off.

U. S. Housing Program Seen as 'Must'

The real test of a postwar public works program will be whether it includes a real housing plan which will guarantee decent homes for the great mass of American people. Following are excerpts from speeches on the subject made by Sec.-Treas. Philip H. Van Gelder of the CIO Marine & Shipbuilding Workers and by Herbert Emmerich, commissioner, Federal Public Housing Authority, at the CIO Political Action Conference

By Philip Van Gelder

No doubt large scale public works, such as power projects, dream highways, reforestation, big bridges and public buildings are a necessary part of any post-war plan for full employment, but I believe the real test will come on housing and the real showdown on our success or failure in meeting the post-war emergency will be pretty exactly measured by the rapidity with which the nation supplies decent homes for the common people of America.

The problem of better housing is so deeply entangled with the problem of continued and stabilized employment that it does not make sense to talk about one without talking about the other. In some of the communities where our big shipyards are now located, we can expect maybe 20,000 or 30,000 people to be laid off in the longer or shorter period following the end of the war, or even preceding it.

A thoroughgoing housing program offers such tremendous possibilities for post-war employment and the general well-being of the nation that we should be able to enlist a great wave of public opinion behind the campaign, and if this public opinion is organized politically, there is every reason to hope that a real beginning can be made in solving the Number One social problem of the American worker.

The greater the pressure for a large scale national housing program, the more we may expect private business to go along and cooperate.

Personally, however, I am extremely skeptical that a satisfactory program on a big scale can be started fast enough without a lot more Federal financing, direction and control, than is generally anticipated.

By Herbert Emmerich

The quest for good homes for all Americans—homes that will fully express the potentialities of the American standard of living and of American production genius—has been one of the broad rallying points for progressive thought and action in this country for the past two generetions.

A long-term program of home construction in the post-war period presents a real hope of a way to provide good jobs at good wages on a massive scale and of sustaining an American economy of abundance. We were a long way from meeting either goal before the war.

More and more, the people, industry, and the government have been learning to look at housing as one broad, total problem—not as an unrelated series of small and sometimes conflicting problems. The acute war housing need itself has greatly heightened national recognition and local recognition of the broad scope of the housing problem.

For thousands of workers, even our temporary war dwelling units have opened new vistas. But the great core of the nation's need for better housing will be with us at the war's end.

Problems of Peace

What the end of the war will bring to white collar, maritime, metal mining, retail and oil industry workers was the subject of discussion at the CIO Political Action Conference, with Presidents Joseph Curran of NMU, Reid Robinson of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, Lewis Merrill of UOPWA, Samuel Wolchok of Retail & Wholesale, and O. A. Knight of the Oil Workers participating.

By Reid Robinson

In 1939, there were 102,000 metal miners employed in the nation. They produced nearly 64½ million short tons in terms of recoverable metal. In 1942, the number of metal miners employed increased by only 7,100 to 109,100 men. These miners produced nearly 122 million short tons in terms of recoverable metal. Similar production increases were recorded in the milling, smelting, refining and fabricating sections of our industry.

If we are to have full employment in our industry after the war, these are some of the factors to which we will have to direct our thinking:

1. What about the future of higher-cost underground mines? With a fictitious over-supply of metals, is it not a foregone conclusion that mining interests could not resist the temptation to close down these higher-cost operations in favor of lower-cost properties here and elsewhere?

The only apparent answer is that government must step in. A program of subsidy will have to be put into effect to make it worthwhile, profitably speaking, to keep the nation's underground metal mines open.

2. Is full employment the only consideration in keeping the underground metal mines operating? Certainly not. The CIO, it seems to me, must assume the role of guardian of the public domain. We must direct our efforts toward preserving the natural resources of our nation.

Those who know anything at all about underground metal mining are aware that once the companies are permitted to close down their properties there is little likelihood that many will ever be opened again. Floods, rotting timber and other destructive factors make it almost a certainty that the natural resources thus buried will be lost to our nation forever since it will be unprofitable to reopen these mines.

Because the fields of white collar employment have grown remarkably in the past the conclusion has been drawn that they can absorb a substantial number of workers in the post-war period. This conclusion is quite erroneous.

In 1939, according to the Biggar Census of Employment, there were well over a million and a half unemployed and partially employed clerical workers. During the war the absence of a sound salary policy (due both to customary business practices and to decisions of the National War Labor Board) has led to a capricious turnover of white collar manpower which has tended to disguise the real situation.

The "quit" rate in the field of white collar employment is unprecedented and phenomenal. In New York City, for example, at the Corn Exchange Bank and Trust Company, employing some 1500 workers, they reported that during 1943, 1200 of their employes had quit voluntarily and that new employes had been hired to replace them. Other institutions report a turnover in personnel as high as 300%.

Undoubtedly to understand the bearing of employment factors in these fields on the postwar situation, we require a closer definition of the role that administrative labor of all types must play. The cost also must and undoubtedly will be re-examined in the light of the new demands before the nation.

Conversion within the petroleum industry should not present many serious problems, as the industry has not been compelled to expand to meet war conditions. Our wartime requirements for oil and for gasoline have been obtained by the simple process of curtailing domestic gasoline and oil consumption.

Consequently the petroleum workers are not faced with the direct problem of conversion within their industry. In fact, the petroleum industry should be able to absorb some of the workers released from other war industry, as well as some of the demobilized soldiers.

The oil refining industry is rapidly changing from a simple processing industry to a complicated, spectacular and valuable chemical industry whose products are being bedded far deeper into our industrial fabric than the mere fueling and powering of machines. As such, the industry has a promising future insofar as employment is concerned.

In the production branch of the petroleum industry, again we predict the employment of additional workers rather than the curtailment of employment. To offset the noticeable decrease in underground reserves in petroleum, it will be necessary to increase the drilling program to a considerable extent.

By Samuel Wolchok

There is no use in preparing blueprints of our future. What we can do is to indicate tendencies and suggest general direction.

For example, one major plank in our platform must be support of an annual wage program. Again, President Murray has shown the way, in demanding an annual wage guarantee in the renewal of the steel industry contracts now under negotiation.

All labor must support this demand and must fight for its general acceptance. We must immediately start a campaign for this principle, a guaranteed annual wage for every man and woman in industry.

We in our industry of distribution are probably the worst sufferers from wage inequality and sub-standards of labor. We have almost 7,000,000 workers engaged in the business of distributing goods, and yet they are the "forgotten men" of our economic society.

An annual wage guarantee would be the means of raising their standards, assuring them security of life and giving meaning to the oft-repeated phrases relating to freedom and democracy.

What sort of democracy can be enjoyed by millions of workers whose hours of labor range up to 75 per week and whose wages are as low as $16 and $18 per week?

By Joseph Curran

Full employment in the maritime industry is not possible without large-scale, integrated planning. It makes no difference whether the merchant marine is government-owned, privately operated, or a combination of the two—there must be over-all planning to achieve full employment.

Our merchant fleet which was 10 million tons before the war, is today 35 million tons. By the end of the war it is expected to reach 55 million tons. Great Britain, which had 22 million tons before the war, will probably have about 20 million tons after the war.

The people of the county are in a position to get the kind of merchant marine they want. Their government has always been the real owner of the merchant fleet in spite of years of effort to subsidize "free enterprise."

The government, therefore, has and can continue to exercise regulatory powers over the merchant marine. But government control, to be truly effective, must have one ingredient, hitherto lacking. There must be participation by labor in the formulation of policy from start to finish.

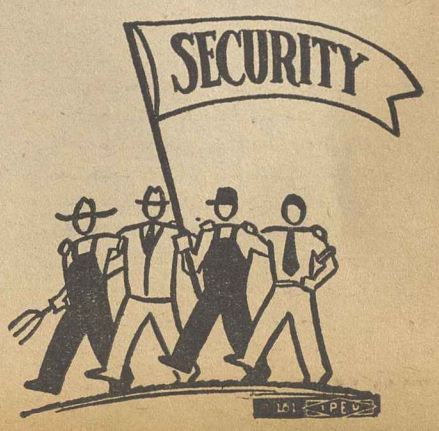
The number of men in the merchant marine after the war will be twice or three times what it was before the war. What happens to them?

Large manning scales would mean greater employment. More men are needed aboard ships. They are needed to give our vessels better upkeep. They are needed to provide regular annual vacations for seamen.

And they are needed so the hours of work aboard ship can be reduced. Seamen today work 8 hours a day, 7 days a week. That's 56 hours a week. There is no reason why these hours should not be reduced to 40.

By itself, this program would not make for full employment. More is needed. The expansion of our foreign trade is the key to the best solution of the problem.

Our foreign trade has never been more than 7% of our production. That figure can and must be raised. It will be—if the promise of the Teheran conference is fulfilled.



Postwar Job Rights Of Negro Workers

Negro workers who have contributed mightily to the cause of victory for the United Nations want to be assured that the jobs they filled during the war will not be ruthlessly snatched away from them with peace. At the CIO Political Action Conference, the issue was discussed by Sidney Hillman, chairman of the Political Action Committee and president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, and by Pres. Willard Townsend of the CIO Transport Service Workers, and Ferdinand C. Smith, secretary of the NMU.

By Willard Townsend

"Basically, the racial problem is a worker's problem. For as long as the Negro workers' rights are insecure, all workers' rights are in jeopardy.

This summer more than a million Negroes were in war plants. The vast majority entered war work during the latter half of 1942, and the first quarter of 1943. Unemployment among Negroes has reached a new low, and occupational progress has moved steadily forward.

Full employment for the Negro in war time, in certain selected war industries, means that the total number employed is 5% for Agricultural Machinery; 5% in Aircraft; 12% in Steel; 25% in Iron and Steel Foundries; 4% in Communications; 2% in Electrical equipment; 10% in Smelting and Refining of Nonferrous metals; 10% in shipbuilding.

The Negro worker is definitely worried. He is worried about today, he is worried about tomorrow. He is restless. He remembers only too well the broken promises.

The big question—what of the Negro worker after the war—is causing as much concern among Negro workers as any other segment of our population. Will peace destroy the gains toward full employment for the Negro? What will be his status at the end of hostilities? A depressed economy has always meant but one thing for the Negro worker—widespread unemployment.

If we have an economy of full employment, it will establish a framework favorable to the continuing occupational advancement of the black worker; and to the removal of the white worker's fear of him as an economic rival.

By Ferdinand C. Smith

The CIO has proved itself the leading force in America that stands four-square behind the just aspirations of the Negro people and actively implements its no-discrimination policy on a national scale.

It must continue that leadership on the vital economic front. Even in wartime, despite the manpower shortage, we know that jobs have not been made fully available to Negro workers. The prospect, therefore, of full employment for Negroes in the post-war period becomes a serious problem which must be considered in the planning stage.

If every trade union opened its doors to Negroes and removed the stigma of second class membership and its attendant inequalities, you can be sure the time would not be far off when the second class citizenship of Negroes in our democracy would be wiped out, the polltax Congressmen notwithstanding.

We in the National Maritime Union have deep pride in the knowledge that full and equal opportunities of employment are offered to our Negro brothers through our rotary hiring halls in every section of the country. The men who Keep 'Em Sailing and Deliver the Goods know that torpedoes and bombs don't discriminate.

They know that the color of a man's skin doesn't affect his ability to fight fascism nor make him a less patriotic American. That's a Hitler concept which has no place in American democracy.

This policy of equality on the job which the members of my union have upheld since its inception has been a vital factor in the effective manning of the bridge of ships to every battlefront. You can picture for yourself the tragic situation the nation and its Allies would be facing if the delivery of war supplies were held up because of race conflicts aboard our ships.

By Sidney Hillman

The CIO Political Action Committee has as a primary objective the organizing of labor's vote. The Negro working man and woman are important and necessary parts of this group. No drive of this nature, therefore, could be undertaken without an awareness of this fact and a determination to make it count.

If re-emphasis be necessary, we state now that a genuine effort will be made to win the support of the Negro trade unionist and the trade unionists of all minority groups, for it is with labor that minorities have their biggest stake. To this end we shall place our arguments with the Negro people in the South as well as in the North, and with equal vigor.

The Committee knows that in readily identifiable sections of our country, unfortunately, there are still certain hazards and obstacles between the desire to vote and the ability to vote. We know, for example, that the polltax prevents 10 million Negroes and whites from voting. We know that registration is not always freely permitted to many of those who pay their tax.

Today we are engaged in a total war. Nothing less than total organization for victory can assure us of a successful conclusion. Labor sees its task and intends to meet it. Negro people are sharing the burden and must share the victory. To this the CIO Political Action Committee is squarely committed.

Women Want Jobs After the War

Women too want to be assured that those of their sex who want to work in industry will have the right to do so in the postwar world. Militantly presenting the case for employment to the CIO Political Action Conference were: Dorothy J. Bellanca, vice-president, Amalgamated Clothing Workers; Ruth Young, executive secretary, Dist. 4, United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers; and Jeannette Welch Brown, executive secretary, Natl. Council of Negro Women

By Dorothy J. Bellanca

Any proper program for full employment in the post-war period must provide jobs for the great majority of the women who have entered industry since Pearl Harbor. It is unwise to assume that women form only a labor reserve to be called upon temporarily during great emergencies. The great majority of these women will remain on the labor market and jobs must be provided for them.

Any realistic program for full employment must offer employment to all men and women who wish to work, irrespective of need. Planning on any other basis will not only fail to provide jobs for all those seeking jobs, but will waste a valuable human resource, the high skills which millions of women have attained in industry in the past years.

Planning now for the full employment of all women desiring jobs in the postwar period is not only essential for an abundant postwar world, but is also immediately necessary if we are to attract the vitally needed woman-power into industry during the war itself. Many women, because of the propaganda that is so prevalent that women will be thrown out of industry after the war is over, are reluctant to take jobs in war industries now.

There is every reason to believe that the great majority of these women will remain in the labor force. They will continue to compete with men for jobs and, unless labor's program for full employment recognizes their right to a job and their need for full employment, a third of the labor force will have suffered discrimination at the hands of organized labor.

It is generally believed that the great majority of these women will return to the home or go back to being unemployed or underemployed. Too many trade unionists have had this attitude. Unions have neglected the organization of women members; they have failed to integrate women into union life.

Many trade unionists do not understand how essential it is to integrate women into trade union life and activity. The failure to tackle this problem with real seriousness may lead to the creation of a women's army of skilled scabs in the post war period.

By Jeannette Welch Brown

The mere fact that labor has called this meeting indicates that it has recognized the need for planning now an economy of full employment after the war. The war has definitely sharpened the issue of full employment for Negro women, and especially in fields outside of domestic work. To some extent Negro women have come out of their cooks' aprons and out of their maids' dresses into industry and into government.

However, their services in the latter fields have not been fully and effectively utilized. There is still the tendency to keep Negro women in the so-called Negro jobs.

The government and labor must begin to plan now for securing and maintaining full employment for all people. Negro women in this instance must make plans with, and not be planned for, because there are still many people who think in terms of Negro women workers as cooks, as laundresses and janitresses and so forth.

I need not tell you that an economy which seldom has enough jobs to absorb the labor supply is a threat also to organized labor, as well as an economy which allows certain groups of people to be placed in one category regardless of their skill.

This, among other things, constitutes the threat of scab jobs. Negro people have no wish or desire to be used as strike-breakers, or to assume scab jobs, but unless some outlet of healthy employment is opened to them, often these situations will occur.

By Ruth Young

With the growth of the number of women in industry to over 17,000,000 we find them employed in varying skills and industries. Women are working on drill presses, milling machines, lathes, electrical work, shipfitters and loftsmen, welders and riveters, as well as at packing, labeling, inspecting, etc.

The war brought into industry thousands of young girls who left their schooling to take jobs. We should encourage them to go back to their interrupted education, provided we give them financial aid, where it is needed. We must not and cannot think in terms of mass expulsion from industry.

Therefore, I would like to propose, for inclusion in the CIO political action program as it relates to full employment and women, as follows:

2—Equal pay for equal work. The opportunity to advance on the job and to maintain positions that were open for the first time during the war period.

3—Government responsibility for establishing adequate child care facilities, after school care, canteens, maternity leave and benefits, and proper health safeguards and standards in the plant.

4—Adequate pensions for war widows who want to remain at home to take care of their children.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

Service votes, food subsidies, mustering-out pay and national service were the active issues in Congress this week.

The service vote issue took a setback when the House Elections Committee (Rep. Worley, D., Tex., chmn.) majority reported out the Rankin-Eastland "state's rights" bill (S 1285), which is a replica of the Eastland-McClelland bill, that was passed in place of the original Green-Lucas bill in the Senate last December. Chmn. Worley has made a minority report on his bill (HR 3892) which provides for Federal distribution and collection but still leaves counting entirely to the states.

At the same time, the Senate Elections Committee also reported out the new Lucas bill (S 1612), which is the same as the Worley bill, leaving counting to the states. CIO is still demanding a simple, uniform, Federal system of distributing, collecting and guaranteeing the counting of service votes, including those of merchant seamen.

On food prices, the inflation bloc got a boost from the Senate Banking and Currency Committee when it reported out the Bankhead bill (S 1458), which continues the CCC but orders it to start tapering off on even the present subsidy program and to end it by June 30, 1944.

Mustering-out pay was rushed through the House (387 to 0) with passage of S 1453 (it has a Senate number because it is House version of an earlier Senate bill). The bill gives flat benefits from $100 up to $300. CIO was supporting the Dingell bill (HR 2853) that pays on a per diem basis, considered much fairer by veterans' organizations, and now shelved. The issue now goes to conference with the Senate, whose version of S 1453 was more generous—with a maximum of $500.

Support for a national service act (asked in FDR's five-point message, as part of the whole) came this week from War Secretary Henry L. Stimson in testimony before the Senate Military Affairs Committee. The attitude in Congress is confused; several reactionary and defeatist Senators and Representatives are opposed to national service but not for progressive reasons. They want to exploit the whole situation for new stabs at labor and the administration.

President Murray, in his statement last week on the FDR message, said that the problems of manpower can only be met through "a true coordination and planning on the part of the agencies of the government responsible for war mobilization," and not by a national service act, which, he said, would be "ineffectual and actually contains dangers of further complicating rather than aiding our manpower situation."

Service votes (S 1285, S 1612)	S 1285 is House version of phoney "states' rights" bill giving no guarantee that votes will be counted, and excluding merchant marine. S 1612 is Lucas-Worley compromise with Federal distribution and collection but not counting.	S 1285 out of House Elections Committee on Pres., V.-P., etc., S 1612 out of Senate Elections, both headed for floor.	Press for simple, uniform, Federal system including counting. Oppose "compromise" on this point.
Subsidies (S 1458)	Continues CCC but tapers off food subsidies, kills them June 30, 1944.	Reported out by Senate Banking Committee, headed for early floor action.	Wire Senators to demand removal of subsidy death sentence, continuance of subsidies on $1.6 billion basis as minimum.
Mustering-out pay (S 1453)	House passed version of earlier Senate bill gives flat payments of $100 to $300; Senate version up to $500.	Headed for House-Senate conferences to adjust differences.	Dingell bill per diem system shelved, but issue should be kept alive for future action.
Social Security (S 1161, HR 2861)	Greatly extend scope and size of benefits; of special importance for returned veterans, and now more urgent with rise in cutbacks, layoffs.	Still stalled in Senate Finance Committee (Sen. George, polltaxer, Ga., chmn).	Demand immediate hearings.
Polltax repeal (HR 7)	Brings 10 million American citizens into democracy.	Stalled in Senate.	Demand early vote, no filibuster, no amendments.

WARNING: The un-American Dies Committee is going to ask for funds within a week or so. Wire Rep. Cochran (D., Mo., Chmn.) and your Representative to deny funds. Dies has already had $500,000, has produced nothing but disruption.

Taxes to Grab War Profits Saved In Committee

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22—The taxpayers—both present and future generations—won an important victory this week when the Senate Finance Committee voted to restore a clause of the tax bill giving the government some chance to recapture swollen war profits by re-negotiation of contracts.

While the committee was giving the people a break, however, the Senate took another one away, by voting to uphold the House position requiring unions, cooperatives and other non-profit organizations to file income returns. This was done, Senators frankly explained, as a fishing maneuver to prepare the way for more probes into unions and their affairs. It was also done to loud editorial applause in the daily newspapers, which have been trying for years to drum up public panic about the "millions" in union treasuries.

The re-negotiation clause victory came after CIO and public pressure generally had been aroused over the revelations of huge war profits and after the administration warned of a "national scandal" if the clause was dropped. It also came as a partial victory for the President, who made re-negotiation one of the five points in ihs message of two weeks ago.

The new vote followed a vigorous minority committee report which listed huge profits of some 30-odd firms working on war contracts, and which called for retention of the clause.

According to the CIO Economic Outlook, corporations will have 42 billion dollars in profits reserves after the war. They can stand a little re-negotiation.

Tax Rebel Blasted For Anti-War Stand

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22—A woman industrialist who put profits ahead of country by refusing to pay taxes this week received an indirect but definitely barbed rebuke from Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, who said that "to advise citizens to refuse to pay taxes—particularly in time of war— smacks of disloyalty."

The industrialist was Miss Vivien Kellems, of Westport, Conn. She advised a civic group in Kansas City that she had not paid her Dec. 15 income tax installment and urged that other business people follow her bad example.

She was quoted as saying that she wanted to use the money, that otherwise would go to support the war, to build a nest egg so that she could be certain of staying in business in peacetime—she said she "wanted to be sure she could continue to provide jobs for her workers."

Morgenthau, in his comment, did not refer to Miss Kellems by name. He said that his statement was "in response to inquiries from the press."

"Most Americans," Morgenthau declared, "are proud to pay thier taxes to help win the war. The Treasury, which deals with millions and millions of taxpayers, has constant evidence of this patriotic spirit.

"As it should be in a democracy, taxes are levied by the Congress elected by the people. We in the Treasury are charged by law with collecting these taxes, and we must fulfill that duty.

Time Out!

(The CIO NEWS will welcome contributions of material for "Time Out" and will pay for it on acceptance. Pointed comment on news in the public mind, original and brief jingles with a labor slant, and socially conscious humor are most in demand).

Rep. Howard Smith, who's been hollering for an investigation of the CIO Political Action Committee's right to existence, was nicely put in his place last week by CIO Pres. Philip Murray.

"Mr. Smith reminds me of the story about the Scotsman and the Irishman who were engaged in a heated discussion about some matter. The Irishman said:

"'The only way to settle this is to take off our coats and exert what physical powers we may possess to find out who's the better man.'

"'I can't agree,' said the Scotsman. 'I can't fight. I can't wrestle. I can't run. But to tell the truth, I can shoot marbles better than anyone in this part of the country.'

"I may say in passing," Murray declared, "that Mr. Smith is the best marble shooter ever found in this or any other part of the country."

U.S. Hitler Lovers Warned by Nelson

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22—America's "psychopathic Hitler worshippers and the foolish men who give them aid are asking for trouble, and if they persist, will assuredly get it." That was the stern warning sounded this week by Chairman Donald Nelson of the War Production Board, in a speech given at a banquet tendered in his honor in commemoration of the second anniversary of the WPB.

Nelson declared that the Hitler psychology is not confined to foreign nations. He said that the invariable sign of it is "the way it distorts and ignores facts, and shrilly insists on having its own way at any cost to the people."

"I am thinking of some men who call themselves Americans, but who in their intolerant hearts hate freedom and democracy and everything America stands for," Nelson said. "Like all Fascists, they want to ride roughshod over their opponents. They know that democracy depends on a working balance among many forces, and so they want to destroy that balance, as a first step toward seizing power for themselves and their satellites.

"Then there are other men, too many of them, who while not Fascists themselves, yet play into the hands of the would-be Hitlers, by helping to destroy the country's unity and the democratic balance. These are the men who make up our pressure groups, who seek to make big profits out of the war, or who produce our wartime strikes—men in any class who would recklessly gamble with the nation's future, in order to gain some petty, temporary advantage for themselves."

CIO Pledges Aid To Salvage Paper

Washington, Jan. 22—Wholehearted cooperation of the CIO in the drive to salvage paper to offset a critical shortage of paperpulp and containers was pledged this week to the War Production Board.

Smith 'Blitz' Full Speed In Reverse

Washington, Jan. 22.—CIO reaction to Rep. Howard Smith's (polltaxer, Va.) demand that Mr. Biddle indict Pres. Murray for political activity continued calm on all fronts this week.

The Smith "demand," made in a letter to Biddle on the eve of the CIO Political Action Committee's first big conference in New York, lived for a day in the headlines and then faded out in favor of slightly more important news, both foreign and domestic.

Opinions at the political action conference and in Washington varied; one school of thought holding that the Smith menace was trifling, and the other that Smith's threat scarcely mattered at all. There was unanimity on one thing, however, and that was that CIO workers would probably not be swerved from their fixed idea that political activity was a good thing and we ought to have lots more of it.

Political reporters here, looking for a good quote from CIO headquarters on the indictment demand, got several loud snorts from high officials and un-named official spokesmen, but owing to wartime difficulties of transmission were unable to put them on the wires.

Unusually reliable sources also predicted that in all probability the CIO and its Political Action Committee might not be averse to facing the terrors of a court test on the issue.

Descendants Of Gompers, Brophy to Wed

Washington, Jan. 22—CIO Director of Industrial Union Councils John Brophy had to endure some witty and many not-so-witty quips this week, when it was learned at National CIO headquarters that his son, Lt. Philip N. Brophy, was engaged to marry Miss Beryl May Gompers. She is the great granddaughter of Samuel Gompers, former president and revered idol of the American Federation of Labor.

Miss Gompers, who is a graduate of the University of Maryland, is employed at the Travelers' Aid in Washington.

To Start White Collar Pay Hearings

Washington, Jan. 22—America's estimated 15 million white collar workers will take the national spotlight from Jan. 25 to 27 when the Senate Education and Labor Committee is scheduled to hold hearings to investigate their economic plight and to make legislative recommendations concerning it.

Meanwhile, the question is being taken up as a community issue from coast to coast, according to reports coming into the New York office of the United Office & Professional Workers Union, which was active in stimulating the Senate hearing.

W. COAST ACTION

On the West Coast, Mayor Fletcher Bowron of Los Angeles has proclaimed January 21 "White-Collar Worker Day," while the newly elected San Francisco Board of Supervisors at its first meeting commended the Senate Committee hearings and urged that they "bring to light the true economic plight of the white-collar worker and to make recommendation for legislation to adjust it."

White-collar mass meetings were held on January 21 in Los Angeles and in Chicago, and city-wide white-collar conferences are now scheduled in Boston, San Francisco, and Wilmington, Delaware.

These meetings and conferences are being sponsored by special co-ordinating committees of white-collar organizations, including both labor and non-labor, AFL and CIO unions. Their general aim is to provide an open forum for the salaried employees, both public and private, of each community before the hearings take place in Washington.

GROUPS INVOLVED

Some of the national groups involved in pre-hearing discussions and conferences in the various cities are the YWCA Business and Professional Clubs, CIO American Newspaper Guild, AFL Screen Office Employes Guild, AFL Commercial Telegraphers Union, AFL Retail Clerks Union, CIO United Federal Workers, CIO State, County and Municipal Workers, CIO Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians, and the CIO Office and Professional Workers.

The United Office and Professional Workers has also distributed several million leaflets in all major cities urging salaried employes to "spill their troubles to Uncle Sam" by writing in their experiences to the Senate Committee. Over 500,000 leaflets were distributed in New York City.

CIO Warns Of Cutback Problem

Washington, Jan. 22—Reconversion of industry is already under way, due to cutbacks, and will become an increasing problem as the war progresses, the Economic Outlook, monthly publication of the CIO, says in the current issue released today.

Despite a scheduled increase of total war output by four per cent in 1944, "cutbacks are already being made," the Outlook says. "Many major reductions are indicated, war facilities construction amounting to almost 30, small arms to 40 per cent.

"The need for efficient shifting of men and materials is salient now. When released by a decline in one line, they should be transferred as quickly as possible to the production of other needed weapons, or of essential civilian goods," it adds.

"Behind the figures as now published is the question of what the future holds in the form of military events, and how and to what degree production goals may be subjected to summary change.

"Cutbacks will be the relentless consequence of military victories. As Mr. Wilson of the WPB says, production schedules are under constant review, and 'I believe that in general subsequent revisions will not be upward.'"

Auxiliaries in Drive For Political Action

NEW YORK, Jan. 22—A campaign to enlist the active help of women in the work of the CIO Political Action Committee through special leaflets stressing the need to protect the interests of our servicemen was undertaken by the CIO Congress of Women's Auxiliaries at a two-day meeting of its national executive board this week.

A nine-point servicemen's welfare program was adopted, with point number one being a demand for a vote for every serviceman and women by federal ballot.

Other points were: Adequate mustering pay and unemployment compensation; jobs for servicemen on their return and government assistance until jobs are found; allowances for educational and vocational training; adequate disability allowances and allowances for dependents of disabled men; adequate allowances for families of men who give their lives in the service; a health program for children of servicemen and veterans; medical and hospital care for all veterans; loans to veterans who buy or own farms, and inclusion of merchant seamen in all of this legislation.

MEET WITH HILLMAN

The auxiliary executive board met with Sidney Hillman, chairman of the CIO Political Action Committee, to discuss close coordination of the auxiliary work with the union political campaign, and methods for interesting women in the committee's work.

A resolution on the importance of carrying out the Teheran agreements and supporting CIO Pres. Philip Murray's statement backing President Roosevelt's call for national unity was the first action taken by the board.

Immediate issuance of an action letter calling for intensifying auxiliary action in support of the President's subsidy program was voted. Auxiliary members will be urged to send their Senators their own weekly budgets in order to blast the myth that war workers are earning exhorbitant incomes.

Other decisions reached included issuance of an appeal by President Faye Stephenson of Cleveland on behalf of the Fourth War Loan drive; a campaign for more effective functioning of OPA price panels, and re-emphasis on the importance of the paper salvage drive.

Big CIO Unions Urge United N. Y. Labor Party

NEW YORK, Jan. 22—Charges of "communist control" in the unified American Labor Party proposed by Sidney Hillman and other CIO leaders are made in bad faith, 150 political action committeemen said at a meeting of the Amalagamated Clothing Workers here this week.

The meeting, which represented some 80,000 Amalgamated members, supported the platform and ticket of the Committee for a United American Labor Party in Committee had previously endorsed Hillman's proposal for trade union leadership in the ALP and for an end to all factional splits.

The offer was rejected by certain "Old Guard" individuals who have been fighting the Hillman plan and have been freely alleging with the newspapers' help that Hillman's plan, accepted by international CIO unions in the state, was a "communist plot."

According to the announcement from the meeting at Amalgamated headquarters, Hillman pointed to acceptance by such CIO unions as the UAW, USA, Textile Workers, Wholesale and Retail, etc., as clear proof that the charge was false.

Following this action, and following a new rejection by the "Old Guard" of the Hillman proposals for unity, three top CIO leaders with large membership in New York joined in endorsing the unity plan. These were R. J. Thomas, head of the UAW-CIO; Emil Rieve, president of the Textile Workers Union; and Samuel Wolchok, head of the United Retail, Wholesale & Department Store Employes.

By ELEANOR FOWLER
Sec.-Treas., CIO Women's Auxiliaries

Dorothy Bellanca, vice-president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, got the biggest hand given a panel speaker at the recent CIO Political Action Conference in New York. And she deserved it. She discussed women's role in wartime and post-war America in a very direct and forthright speech.

It is of the utmost importance that all of us take to heart points she made—and do everything tactfully possible to bring them home to our union brothers. The outcome of the 1944 elections in many communities and the future stability of our unions depends upon real understanding of and act on these points.

1. Mrs. Bellanca spoke first of "the seriousness of the challenge which faces the unions in the millions of women who have entered the industry." She said: "The idea of women going back to their homes some day is outworn... No one has the right to question the right of women to work. Women belong everywhere, wherever they want to belong."

The job of the union is to organize these women—to get them equal pay for equal work. And unless the unions get busy on that job, Mrs. Bellanca warned, "they'll be faced with an army of "trained scabs."

Unions must give women the same protection they give to men. Their seniority must be protected by the union, and unless women get that protection they'll take open-shop jobs and the unions will have great difficulty in reviving their interest in organization.

2. Mrs. Bellanca stressed the deciding role which women will play in the elections. She called the primary dates "a call to arms." She reported that one of the delegates at the CIO Convention in Philadelphia had blamed defeat of labor's candidate in a location on the "damned dames."

She did not agree with him in that case, but she saw a real danger of anti-labor votes from women because they have not been integrated into the trade unions. She was encouraged, however, by the increasing interest of the unions in this problem and urged them to speed their efforts.

3. Mrs. Bellanca pointed out how much depends on the coming elections. The President's recent message to Congress enunciated an economic bill of rights for the people in which we believe with all our hearts. But those rights won't materialize without the cooperation of the great mass of the American people.

We see the possibility of a future with better jobs, more homes, more schools, full health protection, full social security. A future in which there will be work for all men and women who want to work.

'Military Meals At Home'--Handy Book

By SUNNY PRESSMAN
Staff Writer, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

"Military Meals at Home" is the name of a new handy little cook book that you ought to know about. In it you'll find the most popular recipes used by our Army and Navy, conveniently cut down to family size. All the recipes are based on the very latest advice of experts on nutrition. Our men and women in all the Military Services have to be on the alert and in good fighting trim at all imes. They need the kind of food that builds not only strong bodies but alert minds and steady nerves. The recipes in this booklet are planned to do that job.

Besides being clear and easy to follow, many of the recipes are illustrated. There are pictures of the different steps in preparing a meal as well as pictures of what the prepared food will look like when ready to serve.

The booklet sells for 13c at the five and dime store in my neighborhood. If you can't locate one write to:

SUNDAY NIGHT TREAT

Recipe for Crullers

1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 eggs, well beaten
3½ to 4 cups sifted flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
¾ cup water

Cream shortening and sugar together until fluffy. Add vanilla and eggs and beat well. Sift dry ingredients together and add alternately with water to creamed mixture. Mix thoroughly. Place dough on well floured board and pat lightly until just thick enough to cut into thin strips one-half inch wide. Bring edges together to form a circle, leave a hole in center and press edges together.

Fry in hot deep fat (360 degrees F.) until browned. Drain on absorbent paper. A brown paper bag will do. Dust with confectioner's sugar. Makes 2 dozen crullers.

BOOK ON HOUSEHOLD HINTS

I've had many requests for the name of a book I talked about some time ago. The book is full of helpful suggestions for taking care of everything about the house—your furniture, curtains, pots and pans, cleaning clothes and many good hints on cooking and baking. The name of the book is "2002 Household Helps," by Janet Meyers. You may find it at your corner drugstore, or write to the World Publishing Company, New York.

Urge Re-Election Of FDR, Wallace

Milwaukee, Jan. 22—The Wisconsin CIO Executive Board this week endorsed President Roosevelt and Vice-Pres. Wallace for re-election. "The State CIO takes these actions," the Board said, "in the firm belief that the win-the-war forces of the entire nation can best be united around the proven leadership of our Commander-in-Chief, President Roosevelt, and Vice-Pres. Wallace."

Yugoslav Workers Flocked To Unions to Help Battle Against Brutal Exploitation

NEW YORK, Jan. 22 (ALN)—Wages and working conditions in Yugoslavia, following formation of that state in 1918, were among the worst in all Europe. This fact, coupled with the heroic efforts of union organizers in the fact of brutal opposition by successive dictatorships, led the majority of Yugo-slavia's 1,000,000 workers to join one or the other of the nationwide trade union federations—the General Labor Union and the United Federation of Labor Unions (URSS).

Official laws prescribed an eight-hour day. But in most cases the working day was never less than 10 hours and more often between 12 and 16. Only the typograhphical workers, who were among the best organized, usually worked the official eight-hour day. Cement workers averaged 10 hours a day, farm workers 12 and carpenters 16.

Low Wages

The best artisans never received more than a maximum of $1.25 (U. S.) a day and a minimum of 80 cents. Farm workers received less than 50 cents a day, tenant farmers between 10 and 15 cents and cement workers 7½ cents an hour for a 10-hour day. The average Bosnian miner, who generally worked foreign-controlled mines, earned less than 50 cents a day. In 1932 the average wage amounted to 26 cents a day.

In general it may be said that average wages throughout the country ranged from about 25 cents to 50 cents daily. Working conditions were worst in industries dominated by foreign capital—particularly British, French, American and Italian and in the German-controlled bauxite monopoly.

One newspaper reported in Nov., 1940, that in Belgrade 80,000 factory workers, 10,000 office employes and 10,000 railwaymen received earnings below the standard of minimum subsistence. This meant that, together with their families, 320,000 out of Belgrade's 400,000 people received less than they needed to keep going.

The only step taken by the government to protect labor was the creation of the Yugoslav General Insurance Organization or Suzor, which provided social insurance for between 800,000 and 900,000 workers. With the establishment of the Alexandrian dictatorship on Jan. 6, 1929, however, Suzor became a corrupt and almost unworkable organzation.

CIO Asks Vote On 'Big Inch'

Fort Worth, Tex., Jan. 22—The first CIO petition for an NLRB election among a group of workers employed on the "Big Inch" crude oil pipe line, from Texas to the East Coast, was filed this week by the Oil Workers Organizing Campaign.

The union said in its petition that it represents the majority of 150 employes in the sixth division, located in Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

About 1,000 workers are employed on the "Big Inch," which is operated by 11 major oil companies.

British Blast Woll's Anti-Unity Stand

LONDON, Jan. 22 (ALN)—The charge made recently by AFL Vice-Pres. Matthew Woll that the British Trades Union Congress, in calling a world labor conference in London this June, is attempting "to smuggle communists into an international meeting through the cellar door," has been sharply criticized by TUC leaders and influential sections of the British press.

"The decision of the AFL not to attend the London conference, if confirmed, will cause deep disappointment here," the London Daily Herald, official TUC organ, says. "As our general secretary, Sir Walter Citrine, said recently: "Unless the international trade union movement can show itself capable of rising above its internecine difficulties, how can agreements be expected from governments?"

'Touch of Ludicrous'

The Manchester Guardian—"There is a touch of the ludicrous in the AFL's projected refusal to accept the TUC invitation. The AFL won't attend, it seems, because the Russians have been invited. The AFL is all in favor of recognizing the Russians by fighting on the same side and by permitting Roosevelt and Hull to meet with them. But it's not in favor of allowing Green and Woll and other AFL leaders to sit in the same room with them.

"On this question," the guardian concludes, "the AFL does not speak for American workers. The CIO, its rival body, is in favor of the London conference. The Confederation of Latin American Workers (CTAL) also has no fear of soiling its hands or corrupting its mind."

Commenting on the AFL's view that it cannot associate with the Russian unions because they are not "free unions," Reynolds News, official organ of the eight-million-strong cooperative movement, says:

"This argument is false. Trade union freedom, like all other freedoms, is not abstract and unalterable. It is relative. In a socialist economy, where the main task of the unions is no longer to defend wages from the clutches of profit, it is bound to differ from western standards.

"What is unalterable is the common interest of working people the world over, whether their skins are white, black or yellow. Their voices can be heard only through world-wide unity of their great trade union, cooperative and political movements."

Toledano Urges Italy To Revolt

Mexico City, Jan. 22 (ALN)—In a special broadcast beamed to occupied Italy by the BBC today, Vicente Lombardo Toledano, president of the Confederation of Latin American Workers (CTAL), urged the Italian people "to arise now against fascism—domestic and international—and reconquer Italy's freedom forever."

Addressing the "workers of Italy" in the name of labor bodies in 16 Latin American nations, the CTAL president said:

"This period is decisive for Italy and for Italian patriots. The CTAL knows the true sentiments of the Italians and does not forget their contributions to civilization. Garibaldi's sons are not dead. Italy is moving toward a new Renaissance within the post-war world Renaissance."

Ebby Edwards, chairman of the Trades Union Congress, told Allied Labor News: "We want the AFL to attend the conference, just as we want the CIO, Railroad Brotherhoods, United Mine Workers and all other organizations to be present. The AFL has the same opportunity to place questions on the agenda as the Russians.

Charge Ridiculous

"As the conference will be purely consultative, with the findings not binding on any organization, there is every reason why the AFL should be present. I consider Sir Walter Citrine's efforts to bring all United Nations labor groups together to be statesmanship of the first order. As for the charge that the TUC is 'smuggling in Communists,' that is too ridiculous for words."

Bryn Roberts, secretary of the National Union of Public Employes, said: "Matthew Woll is either misinformed about the circumstances leading the TUC to call the world conference, or else he wishes to sabotage the project.

"The mover of the motion at the TUC September convention embodying the proposal was Sir Walter Citrine, whom not even the imaginative Woll would charge with having Communist leanings," Roberts continued. "I seconded the motion. I hasten to add that during my entire 25 years as a trade union officer, I have never had any association whatsoever with Communists.

Unanimous Invitation

"The proposal—as Woll must know—was adopted by the unanimous vote of delegates representing nearly seven million unionists. In the face of this, for him to indict the entire British trade union movement, with whom the AFL has been on such friendly terms, is indeed regrettable."

Will Lawther, president of the 700,000-strong Miners Federation of Great Britain, commented: "Those who know the reactionary nature of the AFL leaders wil not be astonished."

W. Boyle, president of the Association of Engineering and Shipbuilding Draughtsmen, said: "Woll's statement, which amounts to an insult to our great ally, is at strange variance with the United Nations unity declared at Teheran. I am confident that Woll's views are not shared by the rank and file of the AFL."

Here's What Hitler Said About YOU!

. . . about Protestants
"They are so meek I could crush them."

. . . about Catholics
"Theirs is the most corrupt church on the face of the earth."

. . . about Jews
"The Jews' final goal is the victory of Democracy . . . because it eliminates personality and puts in its place stupidity and cowardice."

"Hate the Protestants! Hate the Catholics! Hate the Jews!"

But this is America! And America is made up practically 100% of Protestants, Catholics and Jews. In the three quotations above, Hitler takes in just about all of us.

Nobody left out! Because, you see, it's really a suicide pact to which we're all invited. It was meant to be so. A suicide pact for all America.

Remember that next time you hear anyone insult any group here in America.

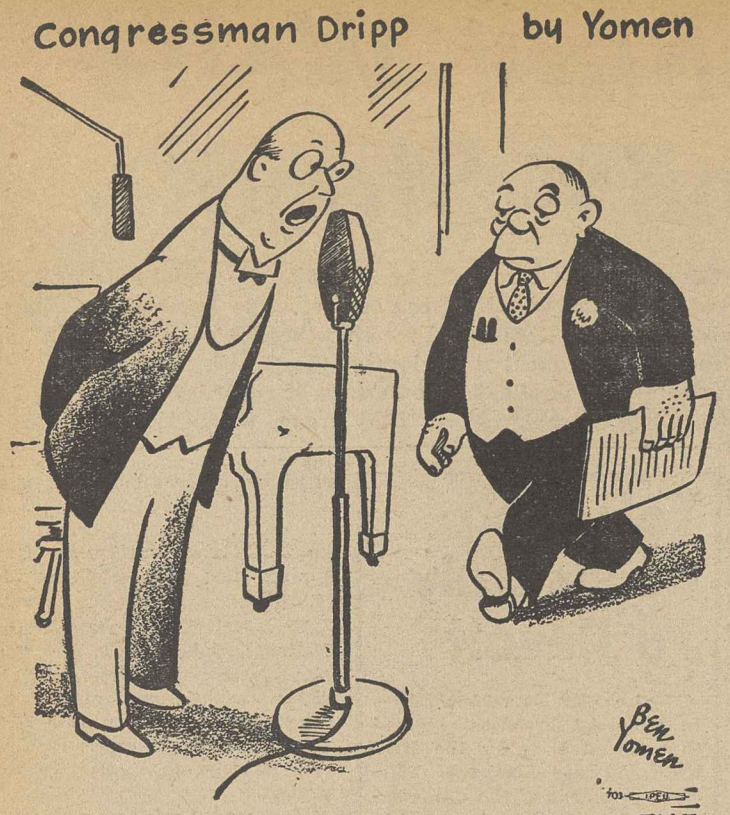
Remember, always that it's someone just like him who is whispering the same kind of thing about the group to which you belong.

Look upon all such whispers as invitations to join that national suicide pact.

Refuse to accept such invitations. And don't hesitate to accuse those who offer them to you of working for America's destruction.

DO THIS FOR AMERICA!



Blasts Profiteers' Attack on Tax Law

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22—American servicemen don't want to come back to a nation dominated by war millionaires, Representative E. V. Izac of California warned the House of Representatives this week in a speech which blistered with denunciation of industrial profiteers who would wreck the law providing for the renegotiation of war contracts.

Pointing out that "many of us came back from the first World War to find that 29,000 millionaires had been made while we were over there fighting," Izac said that he was glad to see that the nation so far has learned and profited by past mistakes by recovering during this war $6 billion in excess war profits, under the renegotiation law.

Izac warned that the law is still under vicious attack from those industrialists who seek to grab all they can at the expense of the nation. One of the major attackers of the renegotiation law has been John B. Hawley, who controls the Northern Pump Co. and its subsidiary, Northern Ordnance Inc., Ozac said.

He pointed out that from 1936 to June, 1940, the company's annual sales ran from $1 million to approximately $2 million.

500% OF NET WORTH!

"Its sales in 1941, virtually all of which were to the Navy, were $18,446,000," Izac said. "Of these 1941 sales, it realized a net profit before Federal taxes of $5,226,000, a profit amounting to more than 500 per cent of the company's net worth, and 28.3 per cent of its sales.

"After payment of Federal taxes for 1941, the company still had a profit of $1,841,000, about 200 per cent of its net worth.

"Northern Pump Co.'s sales for 1942 increased to $67,930,000. Of this the company had a net profit before Federal taxes of $21,186,000, or 737 per cent of net worth and 31.2 per cent of its sales. The company's net profit after the payment of federal taxes, and before renegotiation, was $5,206,000, or 181 per cent of net worth."

Izac pointed out that, had there been no renegotiation, the company would have increased its net worth to $8,494,105 from its entire investment of $956,000 as of June, 1940—this without any substantial additional private investment.

Other firms cited by Izac as active in seeking repeal of the renegotiation law were the Lincoln Electric Co. and the Edward G. Budd Mfg. Co.

The Lincoln Electric boosted its profits before taxes from $5,616,128 in 1941 to $9,007,513 in 1942. The Budd firm made an annual profit of $403,382 after taxes from 1937 to 1940. In 1942 it made a $5,216,000 profit, after taxes—24.2 per cent of its net worth. The Navy Dept. recommended that the company refund $9,000,000 in excess profits, leaving it a profit of $2,716,000 after taxes—or 12.6 per cent of its net worth.

World Co-op Parley Plans For Postwar

Washington, Jan. 22—Leaders of the cooperative movement in America, Europe and China were here this week attending a conference of international cooperative reconstruction sponsored by the Cooperative League of the United States.

In addition to reports on the extent, progress and problems of the cooperative movement in the various countries, the conference heard speeches and discussions on the part cooperatives can play in international relief and rehabilitation, including world food plans.

At a luncheon meeting on Wednesday, Dr. Shih-Chi Hu, general secretary of the Cooperative League of China described the Chinese cooperative movement which he said was organized in 1919 and now has some 60 million members and 173,000 societies.

The government has been asked to set aside a million dollars for cooperative housing projects, Dr. Hu stated. The movement already has a National Cooperative Bank financed largely by the government.

Sir Arthur Salter, British economist, and Murray D. Lincoln, president of the Cooperative League, were among the speakers at the general session of the conference.

Name Woman To Council Post

Seattle, Jan. 22—The West Coast this week elected a second woman to an important position in a CIO Industrial Union Council. She is Miss Hilda Hanson, a member of the CIO Office & Professional Workers Union, who has been named as executive secretary of the local CIO Council.

Previously, in Alameda, Calif., Mrs. Ruby Heide was elected secretary-treasurer of that Council.

$5 Million Pay Hike Won by UE Plan

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22—A novel modification of incentive payment plans, which calls for the payment of bonuses to 20,000 non-production employes of the Westinghous Electric & Mfg. Co., this week gained for them retroactive pay approximating $239 each and wage increases estimated at $5 million a year. The plan was recommended by the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, and was approved by the Natl. War Labor Board, with three industry members dissenting.

Approximately 60,000 other Westinghouse employes, in 30 plants throughout the nation, have already been receiving incentive bonuses on a production basis. UE officials estimate that the bonuses have totalled $75 million a year in extra pay for increased effort in behalf of the war.

In approving the incentive plan for non-production workers, the WLB upheld the contention of the UE that if production workers already receiving bonuses expend greater effort, the greater will have to be the effort exerted by day workers who serve the production workers.

The plan provides that day workers will receive a bonus directly related to the average plant efficiency of the incentive workers, according to UE Intl. Reps. Neil Brant and Edward J. Matthews, who presented the case to the WLB.

The non-production workers will receive no bonus until tthe incentive workers' efficiency reaches 115 percent. The non-production workers' bonus will be paid in a ratio slightly under 1 percent for each 2 percent of efficiency above 115 reached by the incentive workers.

The order was made retroactive to April 8, 1943, an action that was greatly stimulated by UE political action, according to Legislative Rep. Russ Nixon. He said that UE wires which flooded the WLB helped to extend a December 31 retroactivity deadline for two weeks, giving the Board ample time to settle the question and thus gaining for the workers an extra $239 apiece that they would not have received if the UE had not been fully aware of its political strength.

An Object Lesson in Politics

Philadelphia, Jan. 22—Here's an object lesson in why progressive candidates sometimes lose elections. It comes from a Congressional by-election here in which the pro-administration, labor - backed candidate, W. A. Barrett, lost to Republican J. M. Pratt.

Barrett got 19,329 votes to Pratt's 24,910 in a district that had been held by progressive J. P. McGranery for four terms. Here's the key to how Barrett lost—back in 1936, McGranery got 65,758 votes to his Republican opponent's 41,108. In 1940, McGranery got 62,844 to 39,849. But in 1943, Barrett got only 19,329 votes, while Republican Pratt got 24,910.

In other words, Barrett lost because the people didn't vote. Pratt won for the same reason. He got only a little less than half what his previous Republicans who ran against McGranery used to get.

The moral is plain—labor loses elections when labor doesn't vote, not because labor votes against labor-backed candidates.

Murray Hails Russian War Relief Drive

Washington, Jan. 22—CIO Pres. Philip Murray this week urged complete support for the drive of Russian War Relief, Inc., to aid destitute Soviet families by gifts of household utility kits.

"Your project of supplying as many of these families as possible with the common domestic comforts that mean so much in their absence will, I am sure, have the support not only of the CIO and of the working people of this country through their trade unions, but also of the generous American people as a whole," Murray wrote the organization.

"The American people are aware of the sacrifices and the heroism not only of the valiant armies of our Russian ally, but also of the sacrifice and courage of the Russian citizen and his family behind the fighting men."

Senate Still Sniping At Wagner Act

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22—A not too subtle flank attack on the Wagner Act and the unions, particularly in the food industries, is being plotted out in a Senate Deficiency sub-Committee here, which is dealing with a renewal of the farm labor freeze contained in HJ Res 208.

According to Elizabeth Sasuly, CIO Cannery and Agricultural Workers representative who testified on the resolution, 208 excludes food processing (canning, etc.) workers from the Wagner Act.

Straight agricultural workers, of course, are already excluded by the act itself, but processing workers are not. The purpose of HJ Res. 208 is to move processing workers to plants where they may be needed.

Under the new exclusion, new workers could be brought into a plant where the workers are covered, thus creating a situation where some processing workers are under the Wagner Act, others are not.

The purpose of this clause is clear, to create friction and disruption in organized plants, as well as still further to limit the Wagner Act. If this maneuver is successful against processing workers, the way is open to repeat it on workers in other industries and other occupations.

Letters of protest against this—and against other clauses of the resolution that turn over labor to the Farm Bureau, that freeze farm labor on present jobs without union protection, etc.—should be sent to Sen. McKellar (polltaxer, Tenn.), who is chairman of the Deficiency Subcommittee of the Senate Appropriations Committee.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22—Full support of the 1944 Red Cross war fund drive was urged this week by CIO Pres. Philip Murray. Murray pointed out that the thousands of CIO members serving in the armed forces will, in large part, begin from the $200 million that the Red Cross will seek to raise in this year's drive, scheduled to start in March.

"To these men and their families who look to the Red Cross for assistance in emergency, and as a link with home, the CIO must pledge full and unqualified support of the campaign which will make possible continuation of the vital services of this great people's organization," Murray wrote in a letter to all CIO affiliates.

"We must aid in assuring the presence of blood plasma on all battlefields; the maintenance of Red Cross clubs in all theaters of war; the recruiting of sufficient trained nurses for the Army and Navy; the services of Red Cross workers assigned to troops and hospitals; the assistance by chapters to servicemen's families; the supply of bandages and other medical needs requested from the Red Cross by the armed forces, and the war relief supplies so tragically needed in the many countries affected by this conflict," Murray concluded.

Back 4th War Loan Drive, Is Murray's Plea

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29—Pointing to CIO members' 1943 War Bond purchase record of $900 million, Pres. Philip Murray this week urged them to support to the full extent of their ability the U. S. Treasury's Fourth Loan drive. In a letter to affiliates, he said:

"For this Fourth War Loan Drive, I am urging our membership to do two things: Buy bonds to the best of their ability, and elect a CIO War Bond chairman in each plant, shop and yard where we have members. The CIO War Bond chairman should be the spark plug of the bond campaign for the union in each plant.

"I urge all officials and members of the CIO, in this year of 1944, to pledge themselves to redouble their bond efforts so that, in effect, we the people who are producing the increasing flow of the implements of war, will also be buying an increasing number of bonds to pay for that equipment—to the end that our boys in service may have the best and most plentiful equipment of any fighting force in the world.

"They need it—the right weapon at the right place saves many a life—and it is up to us to supply those good weapons, to make them and to pay for them."

Amalgamated Buys Million In War Bonds

New York, Jan. 29—More than one million dollars as a starter was subscribed to the Fourth War Loan by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America and its affiliates at ceremonies held here last week end at Amalgamated headquarters.

Pres. Sidney Hillman, Sec'y-Treas. Jacob S. Potofsky, and members of the Amalgamated General Executive Board attended. W. Randolph Burgess, New York State chairman of the War Finance Committee, presented the union with a citation from Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau for distinguished services rendered in the Second and Third War Loan drives to which the union subscribed $12,000,000 in addition to $3,250,000 in payroll deductions.

Taft Hot About CIO News Blast

Washington, Jan. 29—A sample of the effectiveness of CIO publicity and CIO political action are the irritation they cause among the opposition. That irritation reached a new high this week when Senator Robert Taft (R., O.) mentioned the CIO, the CIO NEWS and/or the CIO Political Action Committee exactly 20 times in a 10-minute speech.

Taft read part of a CIO NEWS editorial, in discussing the issue of a federal soldiers' vote bill which he opposes, and cited one of the latest CIO publications, "Keeping Score to Win the War—the Record of Congress and What to Do About It."

A contender for the Republication nomination for the presidency, Taft indicated that CIO NEWS' exposure of his voting record, and that of his fellow reactionary Republicans and the polltax Democrats, was not to the liking of any of them.

And as to protests about Taft's stand against the soldier vote bill, take Taft's own word for it, as follows:

"Well, they have protested all right. We have all received letters, telegrams and delegations. Although I have talked to two CIO delegations, I have declined to see three more simply because I have not had the time to go over the same arguments with them."

Congratulations, Ohio readers!

CIO Vows Revenge For Bataan Cruelty

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29—Here's CIO's angry reaction to the revelation of atrocities against the men of Bataan and Corregidor, in which Japanese fascism, like its Nazi counterpart, tortured and murdered helpless prisoners. It was expressed by President Murray during the Board meeting here this week:

"The barbaric torture, wanton murder and deliberate starvation of American and Filipino soldiers captured on Bataan and Corregidor are deeds that cry aloud for vengeance.

"CIO members in war plants throughout the nation stand shoulder to shoulder with our fighting men in their determination to bring the perpetrators of these fiendish crimes to justice."

CIO Urges Pay Hikes for White Collar Workers

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29—The payroll plight of the nation's white collar and professional workers—comprising 25 per cent of all those gainfully employed—got an airing on Capitol Hill this week with the CIO demanding action to boost white collar wages so that these workers can make the maximum possible contribution to the war against Fascism.

Leading off in testimony before the Senate Subcommittee on War-time Health and Education was CIO Pres. Philip Murray, followed by officials of CIO white collar unions and by rank and file CIO members who packed a punch as powerful as their officers' as they told in humanly poignant terms their personal difficulties with the rising cost of living.

PRICE CONTROL FAILURE

Murray gave a detailed report on the nation's failure to control prices, as he pointed out that they have gone up 43.5 per cent since January, 1941—nearly twice the estimate of the Bureau of Labor Statistics (23.4 per cent).

"Congress," Murray told the committee, "hasn't given the OPA enough money to control prices or subsidize commodities to make price control effective."

Murray declared that quality deterioration, disappearance of cheaper goods, failure adequately to control rents, price ceiling violations and the operation of black markets have combined to drive prices much higher than the BLS's limited statistics show.

Murray said that "the people in war jobs and offices will find no nourishment in BLS statistics." He said that a man making $1,400 a year in 1941 was better off than a man making $2,600 a year in 1943.

$8 BILLION PROFITS

Citing war profits for 1943 of over eight billion dollars—highest in history—Murray called for real economic stabilization.

"The wage policy must be adjusted to allow for the increase in the cost of living in accordance with the law of October 2, 1942," Murray said. "This is for the benefit of industrial workers, white collar workers, government employes and all of the people of the country because it assures continued, uninterrupted and maximum production."

A colorful part of the hearing was testimony of John Alessi, 43-year-old member of the CIO State, County & Municipal Workers, who drives a truck for the New York Department of Sanitation.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCE

Slight and excitable, he told in personal details of the difficult time he has providing a living for himself, his wife, their twin daughters, 13 years old, and their boy, 11.

Alessi said that after working since 1928, his income has finally reached the total of $2,320 a year on the job that has the highest injury and sickness rate of any provided by New York City.

"I began as an extra man, and an extra man in the department means an extra man," he told the Senators. "You have to be at roll call in the morning every morning and if somebody else ain't showed up you do his job. You can't have any other outside job because you have to report every morning.

$600 IN DEBT

"I worked as an extra man 21 months and at the end of that time I was $600 in debt," he related. "When I got taken on as a regular I got married and I'm still $600 in debt."

His wife worked in the early years of his marriage, he said, but then "she came in a family way" and the bills started piling up again.

High blood pressure before birth of the twins piled up hospital bills for his wife—three weeks' worth at $3 a day. "And then," Alessi said, "they told me it was twins!"

TOUGH SLEDDING is what white collar workers and government employes on stabilized salaries are facing as the cost of living zooms—that was what the Senate Education and Labor Sub-Committee investigating the rise in prices heard this week from John Alessi, a member of the CIO State, County & Municipal Workers. Alessi lives at 754 40th St., Brooklyn, N. Y., and is a street cleaner in the Dept. of Sanitation.

Inviting the Senators to visit his home and see for themselves, Alessi said that "I haven't been able to replace one piece of furniture. I had to turn my bed over to the twins because the legs were too weak to hold up me and my wife."

$31.51 A WEEK

He testified that his net take-home pay is only $31.51 a week, after numerous deductions for War Bonds, etc. He had to sell three War Bonds so that he could buy clothes for his kids for Christmas.

"That kind of a meal leaves a driver so weak he can hardly keep on working and he gets sick easy," he declared.

The Alessi family rent is $38 month, but his wife cuts this $8 by taking care of the apartment furnace. High on the list of the balance of his expenses are: Insurance for himself, wife and children, a total of $3,000; three quarts of milk a day; and rising bills for staple foods—"even substitute cheese costs 75 cents a pound," he added.

CIO white collar union officials who testified at the hearing were Presidents Lewis Merrill of UOPWA, Abram Flaxer of State, County & Municipal, and Lewis Alan Berne of the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists & Technicians.

They proposed that the Little Steel formula be relaxed so that the wages of white collar workers in private and government jobs could be adjusted to meet the rise in living costs. Merrill said this adjustment should be at least 35 per cent instead of the 15 per cent maximum now allowed by the War Labor Board.

HEALTH THREATENED

Merrill pointed out that white collar salaries are insufficient for maintenance of maximum health and efficiency, that the inferior economic position of such workers threatens economic stability, and that unsatisfied salary demands represent a threat to production.

Flaxer stressed the fact that many local government employes are working for as little as $1,500 a year—$173 less than the budget set by WPA studies as of mere subsistence level for a family of four.

In addition to needed wage increases, he urged payment of time and a half for overtime in local government jobs and the establishment of government boards of arbitration and review to help adjust workers' problems.

Berne declared that technical employes are as badly paid as most other white collar workers, and said that many of them find it difficult and in some cases impossible to continue advancing in their professions because they cannot afford to purchase technical publications they need.

He urged the establishment of a nation-wide stabilization program for technical employes, with guaranteed annual salaries, compulsory compensation for overtime at not less than time and a half pay, dismissal pay and patent protection.

Phoney Strike Brings Suit For $25,000

Boston, Jan. 29—A strike called by anti-CIO elements in defiance of the Smith-Connally act this week was the subject of a $25,000 damage suit. Plaintiffs in the case were 297 members of the CIO Fur & Leather Workers Union, who cited a clause in the Act which provides for payment of damages where injury is suffered because of its violation.

The workers, employed by 11 leather plants at Peabody, Mass., pointed out that the sum they ask represents wages lost during a three-week period when anti-CIO elements forced a strike over the wishes of the employes.

Named as defendants are: James F. Dunn, a former CIO organizer who went to work for the AFL; the AFL Leather Workers Union; and some of Dunn's assistants.

The position of the CIO union as bargaining agent for the workers had been upheld by the War Labor Board, the Natl. Labor Relations Board and the Mass. Superior Court.

CIO leaders charged that Dunn and his group attempted to split the workers away from the CIO.

CIO Planning for the Postwar World

This is the fourth of a series of articles from "As We Win," a new CIO pamphlet based on the report of the CIO Postwar Planning Committee. Excerpts from the report follow:

The last war taught us a dramatic lesson. We learned that war is followed by price rises and a boom ends in collapse.

There is danger that this will be repeated. Civilian goods will continue scarce for some time, and people will have huge savings to spend. Business men eager to reconvert may compete for an inadequate supply of equipment and raw materials. Speculation and hoarding would intensify difficulties.

Without effective controls over scarce goods and prices, an inflationary spiral might result. Failure to regulate prices effectively during the war will make later control difficult since the pace of price rises tends to accelerate.

The United States needs better houses, roads, airfields, playgrounds, hospitals and schools, and it needs them in great number. Transportation systems and markets clamor to be modernized. Rural lands and river basins cry to be developed for greater production.

The government should plan now a vast program to create things of long-time benefit to all Americans. Housing in itself offers great opportunity for both public and private activity, as shown by the reports of the CIO Committee on Housing.

Billions of dollars should be made available in advance so that plans will be ready when war ends. Our inevitable reconversion unemployment offers us an unparalleled opportunity to use otherwise idle men to build what we need.

Jobs on public projects must be full time at regular union wages. Workers want permanent constructive employment, not "made work."

We have in mind far more than simply physical construction. Temporary surpluses of professional and white collar labor available during the transition period should be utilized to improve the people's well-being. The nation's health can be greatly advanced by programs of illness prevention.

The scope of the Census and similar agencies can be expanded to provide material essential to effective social and economic action. Special surveys can be undertaken to provide necessary information on people's needs and levels of living. Constructive planning is now hampered by lack of knowledge. A great opportunity will be wasted if these gaps are not filled in the post-war period when trained people will be available.

Good jobs admittedly are the first need. Every effort must be made to provide them. But since many workers will undoubtedly be unemployed for some time after the war, they must be fully protected.

Under present unemployment compensation laws, millions of workers are not covered at all, while benefit levels and duration are far too low. Older workers, who have contributed their strength to the war effort, will be insufficiently rewarded under the present old age and survivors insurance program.

The efforts of the CIO Committee on Social Security to obtain passage of the Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill are of crucial importance. This bill would greatly broaden coverage under existing programs, improve benefit and duration provisions, add a constructive program of disability benefits and insurance for medical care, and provide an effective nation-wide employment service.

In the absence of an adequate social security program, dismissal wages, for war workers who lose their jobs when war orders are cut back, should be allowed as a chargeable cost against the government.

Millions of our young men are risking death for us all. At the very least, only jobs and opportunity will satisfy them on their return.

Proper demobilization plans must be carefully prepared to meet whatever situation may accompany peace. Men should be released from the services as soon as military requirements permit.

Special measures to protect servicemen have already received CIO backing. The CIO sponsored the Sadowski Bill to increase dependents' allowances to $55 a month for a wife, $35 for the first child, and $30 for every other child. The goal thus set resulted in more liberal terms than would otherwise have been adopted by Congress. The CIO is also supporting legislation to extend social security protection to servicemen on their return.

Most CIO unions have written into their agreements provisions protecting the seniority and positions of workers in military service. Although unions will help veterans to get their jobs back, many old jobs will not be identifiable. Only full production will make possible fulfillment of pledges of re-employment.

Nothing better could be arranged for the nation than for servicemen who wish to continue their education. A well-planned program should be ready so that they will not waste time after their discharge.

An unlimited number of scholarships should be made available by the government so that veterans can attend the schools they want, whether general, vocational or professional. Such scholarships should cover living as well as educational costs.

CIO's Main Job Now to See That Voters Register

CHICAGO, Jan. 25—The functional structure of the CIO's political action program was whipped into form here this week in a fast-moving two-day conference attended by eight recently appointed CIO political action directors representing 27 states.

Registration of voters and expanded mobilization of citizen support behind the soldier vote issue were made the immediate tasks of the directors by the conference, which placed the emphasis of its work on preparation for the 1944 election campaign.

The conference declared that Taft's "angry and intemperate attack" on Secretary of War Stimson and Secretary of the Navy Knox, for supporting a federal soldier vote bill was "a sharp demonstration that the opposition to the bill stems from the depths of reaction rather than from any partisan feeling between Republicans and Democrats." Stimson and Knox are Republicans.

The conference was presided over by Sidney Hillman, chairman of the national CIO Political Action Committee. It was the first meeting of regional directors. Hillman has named eight. Six are still to be appointed.

DOUBLE-BARRELED ACTION

The conference adopted unanimously a committee report on registration, which said in part, "Full employment, international peace and security depend upon the election in 1944. Unless the workers, the farmers—the plain people of America—vote in November, the kind of America for which millions are fighting may be lost."

The report recommends a "double barreled" approach to the registration problem.

"Labor's drive," the report said, "will proceed through two parallel channels. One channel is provided in the traditional and tested structure of our international and local unions. The other channel is found in the newer concept of labor's political activity—the formation of county, ward and precinct political organizations."

A nine-point registration program was recommended calling for creation of a registration committee in each CIO plant and a systematic check and follow-up campaign to determine how many members are registered to vote.

PRECINCT BREAKDOWN

The program also calls for creation of a central community as well as precinct breakdown of CIO members in order that the registration campaign can be carried on in the neighborhoods where it will reach all segments of the public —not just CIO members.

Merit awards to plant registration committees establishing the best record were also recommended.

The report pointed out that in 1942 only 43 per cent of America's potential voters went to the polls. This is in contrast to the 71 per cent who voted in 1940. The potential number of voters in the nation was set at 65 million. The vote in 1940 was just short of 50 million.

C. B. Baldwin, former Farm Security Administration administrator and assistant to Hillman, outlined the procedures under which the regional directors will operate.

Regional directors attending the conference were:—

Raymond S. McKeough, Illinois, Wisconsin and Indiana; Gus Scholle, Michigan; Joseph Salerno, New England; Irving Abramson, New Jersey, Maryland and Delaware; John J. Jacobson, Nebraska, Minnesota, Iowa, North and South Dakota; Roy Atkinson, Oregon, Montana and Idaho; Jack Kroll, Ohio, Kentucky and West Virginia, and George B. Roberts, California and Nevada.

Others attending the conference included Pres. R. J. Thomas, UAW-CIO; Pres. Albert Fitzgerald, UERMWA; Pres. Milton Murray, American Newspaper Guild; and Russ Nixon, legislative representative, UERMWA.

CIO Blasts 'Service Act', Re-Affirms No-Strike Pledge

(See Resolutions—Page 7)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29—CIO's position on national service remains the same as it was at the 1943 convention, the CIO Executive Board declared at its special meeting here this week, in which policy on wages, service votes, reaffirmation of the no-strike pledge, the London world labor meeting, and other issues was worked out.

On national service, the Board unanimously reaffirmed the section of the 1943 resolution whch said: "The CIO has been opposed to and will continue to oppose enactment of any national service legislation.

"In addition to the evils inherent in the attempt to resort to compulsory labor, the approach embodied in national service legislation is ineffectual and actually contains dangers of further complicating rather than aiding the manpower situation."

Following this action, the Board passed a unanimous resolution of support to the European invasion and reaffirming the no-strike pledge.

"At this solemn moment, when our sons and brothers are about to engage our nation's foes in the decisive struggle, when the life of our nation is at stake, labor will not falter," the resolution said.

"To this end, the CIO Executive Board calls on all of its affiliated unions to religiously and meticulously respect their sacred obligations to their nation and the members of our armed forces by avoiding any stoppages of work or interruptions of production."

WAGE POLICY

Based on the gigantic differences between the official cost of living and the facts, the Board's resolution on wages called for new efforts to break through the Little Steel formula and for a campaign to win the widest possible support for the workers' need of wage raises to keep them going on the war production job.

"This readjustment in wages must allow the wage earners an increase to make up for the difference between the Little Steel formula of 15 percent and the actual rise in the cost of living since January 1, 1941," the Board said.

As part of CIO economic stabilization policy, the resolution called for new drives "to induce Congress to enact an equitable and just tax measure," re-negotiation of war contracts, adequate subsidies to hold living costs, and more effective rationing.

Speaking on this resolution, President Murray reviewed in detail the 1944 living costs of an average steel worker earning around $2,500 a year. Such a worker, he pointed out, was actually worse off today than he was in 1941 with $1,400 a year, due to the enormous rise in food and other living prices.

Action on the London world labor conference, set for June 5, endorsed President Murray's acceptance of the Citrine invitation. Following this, Murray designated 12 delegates; himself, Secretary-Treasurer James B. Carey, the nine CIO vice-presidents, and General Counsel Lee Pressman.

ASK AGENDA

In addition to naming the 12 delegates who will represent the CIO at the first world labor conference in London next June, President Murray set a meeting date of February 16 for the CIO executive officers to map out plans for the conference agenda. This was in response to the British invitation to submit agenda material well ahead of the meeting.

The Board passed a strong condemnation of Rep. Howard Smith (polltaxer, Va.) and his special smear committee that has been trying to sabotage the work of such vital war agencies as OPA, the War Labor Board, the NLRB, etc.

The Board urged its immediate abolition, "because of its highly prejudicial and biased investigation which does not seek to ascertain any facts or to suggest recommendations in the interest of the war, but rather to destroy any group and every executive agency that actually seeks to further the war effort."

The Board meeting, looking at present health and welfare problems and ahead to the postwar situation, set up a new national standing unit—the "CIO Health and Welfare Committee" with George F. Addes of the UAW-CIO as chairman.

Function of this group will be to "develop and promote an overall health and welfare program through which it can serve its own ranks and give much needed leadership to other sections of the people who look to labor, including returning veterans."

SERVICE VOTE

In its action on the service vote, the Board praised President Roosevelt for his blast at the "states' rights" attempt to deny citizenship to men and women in the armed forces and the merchant marine, and renewed CIO demands for action on a simple, uniform Federal method of service voting.

In its final action, the Board pledged CIO backing to the United Office and Professional Workers in their current drives to organize workers in banks, who are among the worst paid and most exploited of all white collar workers.

Race-Hate Mail Ban OK'd By House Group

Washington, Jan. 29—Use of the mails for race-hate and anti-Semitic propaganda will be made a criminal offense if Congress approves the Lynch Bill (HR. 2328) which this week received the unanimous OK of a House Post Office Subcommittee.

The subcommittee reduced penalties for original circulators of race hate from a maximum of five years in jail and $5,000 fine to one year and $1,000, and provided maximum punishment of six months in jail and $500 fines for accessories.

Unite to Back Vote Bill

Springfield, Mass., Jan. 29—The CIO and AFL united here this week to demand that Rep. Charles R. Clason (Rep., Mass.) stop opposing the labor-backed demand for a federal soldiers' vote bill.

Kansas, Missouri Groups Unite for Political Action

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Jan. 29—One hundred and fifty delegates, representing all sections of labor, and some farm and civic groups in Missouri and Kansas, meeting this week at Community Church here, laid the groundwork for joint or parallel political action in the 1944 compaign.

They met under the auspices of the CIO Political Action Committee, headed by Sidney Hill-man, but American Federation of Labor, Railroad Brotherhood, and Farmer Union representatives also participated.

The speakers, besides Hillman, included Perrin McElroy, secretary and business manager of the Kansas City Building Trades, AFL; E. T. Rafferty, legislative representative of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen in Kansas; and E. K. Dean, president of the Kansas Farmers' Union. Irwin L. De Shetler, CIO Regional Director, presided.

Hillman, making the principal address, warned that a 100 billion dollar postwar national income as proposed by Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., chairman of the board of General Motors, would result in 15,000,000 unemployed.

The CIO political chairman insisted that a minimum of 150 billion dollar annual income was required to avert disaster. It would guarantee, he said, not only full employment but would also take care of our national indebtedness.

FOR VICTORY

Hillman said that labor and progressive forces were bent on winning the war. This is the first responsibility upon the nation, he said, but added that there must be postwar planning now to meet the problem of employment for 10 million who will return from the armed services, and the 25 million men and women now employed in war industries.

He warned that widespread unemployment after the war would play into the hands of demagogues and native fascists, and said that labor was determined to prevent this at all costs.

He revealed that labor is embarked upon a national registration campaign, because the larger the vote the surer the guarantee against the election of a reactionary Chief Executive and Congress.

INTL. COOPERATION

In the field of international relations, Hillman called for continued cooperation among the United Nations. He warned that a minority of reactionary Senators could block a "decent peace" and prepare the ground for World War III.

ABC of Stability

CIO's policy on wages and inflation reaffirmed by the CIO executive board is as simple as ABC.

A GROSS injustice has been visited on the workers by the failure of Congress to control living costs through subsidies and adequately to tax war profits and high incomes. Wages have been stabilized at 15% above the level of Jan. 1, 1941, while living costs have risen at least 43.5% since then.

BASIC to economic stability and the prevention of inflation is a stable relationship between wages and prices, as called for in the Price Control Act of Oct. 2, 1942. This requires an upward adjustment of wages in line with the rise in prices.

CONGRESS at the same time must prevent further inflation by voting adequate subsidies to control living costs, supporting extended rationing, and enacting fair taxation, including renegotiation of war contracts, to end war profiteering and take the surplus from the upper incomes.

The Smith Committee

Wherever anyone is really trying to do a job to serve the common people and win the war, look for Congressman Howard Smith. He'll be right there with his smears and his sneers, his mud and his monkey wrench.

Smith declared war on labor long before war on the Axis was declared. He is still sticking to his first hate.

Through the strike-provoking Smith-Connally act, Smith sought to crush the unions and deprive working people of their democratic political rights.

His pique at failing fully to achieve both purposes is shown by his recent ridiculous attack on the CIO Political Action Committee and his attempts to make the War Labor Board an open-shop agency.

Yet Congress has turned over to this individual the chairmanship of a Congressional investigating committee.

This Smith committee has consistently sought to smear, obstruct and undermine every government agency working to strengthen the war effort.

First it jumped on the OPA, attacking every effort of that agency to keep down the cost of living.

Now it is after the Fair Employment Practices Committee, threatening its work to eliminate discriminations that hamper the war effort.

The committee's latest victim is the Natl. War Labor Board, which it attacks for compelling employers to arbitrate labor disputes.

It even has the gall to claim the Board has no authority to issue maintenance of membership directives, though Smith's efforts to outlaw union security were defeated in Congress.

In this and all its other efforts the Smith committee is promoting division, dissension, disruption and discrimination that harm the war.

This committee is the creature of the House of Representatives, which can discontinue its disgraceful activities at any time. The CIO Executive Board says that time should be right now.

Soldiers' Vote

It left the politicians who oppose federal voting provisions shivering and shimmying around as they tried to re-cover their nakedness with the threadbare "states' rights" excuses he had blown away.

If the matter is left to the states, as in the Eastland-McClellan bill passed by the Senate, only a handful of servicemen will be able to vote. Only through federal action, as in the Lucas-Green-Worley bill, will there be any real soldiers' vote.

Congratulations, too, to the CIO unions and members who have led the fight for the soldiers' vote. Senators Taft and Holman and other opponents of the soldiers' vote have given the CIO full credit on the floor of Congress, telling how they have been swamped with demands from CIO sources.

Let's keep up the good work of smoking out the politicians who block the American people's demand to let our soldiers vote.

Call for a record vote in the House on the Worley bill, so everyone may know how his Congressman stands on the soldiers' vote.

And call on your Senators to enact the Lucas-Green federal balloting bill or stand exposed as deniers of democratic rights to our fighting men.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

MOST people regard statisticians as slightly cracked, but harmless—until they're hit over the head by the business end of a phoney percentage, or until they run into some statistics that really make sense.

After you've given your wife twice as much money for groceries, and seen her come back with half as much food of half as good quality, you can pick up the papers any day and have a morbid chuckle over some statistics about living costs going up only some small percentage.

You wonder what would happen to the Dept. of Labor statistician who believed his own index and gave his wife but 24.3% more than before the war to feed and clothe his family and meet all other living expenses—though living costs have actually gone up twice that much.

The mathematics of living costs are quite simple to the housewife and most other practical folks. You remember how much you used to pay a week or a month for food, clothing, rent, etc., and you know darned well how much you're paying now.

So you just compare the two totals to get the increase in your living costs, and you say "nuts" to anyone who tells you different.

But somewhere in the rarefied and air-conditioned recesses of the Bureau of Labor Statistics there toil statisticians, spinning fine theories, juggling logarithms and square roots, and coming out periodically with statements about the cost of living that defy all human experience.

It all sounded simple enough when Congress said wages and living costs should be stabilized at the level of Sept. 15, 1942.

Even the Little Steel formula didn't seem so complicated. The BLS Index reports living costs up 15% since Jan. 1, 1941, it said, and it wouldn't be nice for them to go up any more after Sept. 15, 1942, in defiance of all our good intentions. Therefore wage rates may be increased 15% above that Jan. 1 level, but not one cent more.

But, nice or not, living costs didn't pay any attention to the Little Steel formula, nor to Congress (except to say thanks, boys, for the big boost you're giving us). They just kept going up after Sept. 15, as if that were only another day on the calendar.

Even the BLS statisticians couldn't do much about it. They juggled their figures this way and that, but still their darned Index kept pushing up, till they let it go up to 24.3% as of today.

Of course, even 24.3% makes a monkey of the Little Steel formula. Looked at from any angle, it's still 9.3% more than 15%—which means quite a cut in the real wages of the worker frozen at the Sept. 15 level.

Meanwhile the folks who really know their living costs, from what they have to pay to live, were getting more and more impatient with theories and formulas and indices that don't correspond to known facts.

"Let's find out how much the cost of living has really gone up," their union representatives told the President, and he appointed a committee for this purpose.

So CIO statisticians went to work to bring statistics down to earth, and to find out how much more working people are actually paying for their groceries, their restaurant meals, their clothing, their housing, etc.

The report submitted by the labor members of the President's committee is the most practical, realistic, comprehensive and scholarly study ever made of living costs, and it shows they have risen by at least 43.5% from January, 1941, to December, 1943.

Its conclusions won't surprise working people, who know very definitely how much more it costs them to live today. But they do prove that honest and competent statistics can correspond with the known facts of life.

Brother, Can You Spare $1.74 For $1's Worth Of Groceries?

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30—The dollar's worth of groceries you and your wife used to buy three years ago cost you $1.74 today; the dollar's worth of clothing costs $1.72; the dollar you used to spend for household goods has to be $1.62 today; the dollar you used to lay out for all your living costs in January 1941 has to be $1.43 in 1944.

These are the cold, hard facts about the increase in the cost of living since the Little Steel wage formula date was fixed as of three years ago. They are revealed in the report made jointly by the CIO and the AFL to the President's Committee on the Cost of Living, made public today by R. J. Thomas for the CIO and George Meany for the AFL.

'Steel' Formula Out

They knock the Little Steel formula, and the Labor Dept's Bureau of Statistics figures on which it was based, for a complete loop. As the CIO-AFL report mildly says:

"In view of the fact that the cost of living has actually risen by at least 43.5 percent since January 1941, whereas the BLS Index shows a rise of only 23.4 percent, we conclude that the BLS Cost of Living Index is unreliable as a basis for wage adjustments during the war period.

"Sole reliance upon it will result in continued serious injustice to wage earners and lower-salaried workers."

This is how the BLS Index, used as the base for the Little Steel formula, errs on the side of understatement.

BLS Figures Wrong

Take food. According to the BLS Index, food costs have gone up since the Little Steel base date (January, 1941) by 40.2 percent. Actually, as the CIO-AFL report shows, the increase has been 74.2 percent.

How come this difference between the BLS and the study made by the labor movement? The answer lies, as the report shows, in the deficiencies of the BLS method, in the failure to sample enough cities and enough foods, and the connected fact that price control has worked only on the inadequate number of foods used in the Index.

The BLS Index is limited to certain foods—many that enter into the cost of living are left out. The OPA and the subsidy program now in effect control prices of these Index-covered foods only; the others are allowed to run away pretty much on prices as they please.

The result, as the report points out, is that the costs of "foods not priced by the BLS have risen twice as fast as the prices of the priced foods," yet they are not taken into account in the Index.

Changes In Quality

And another deficiency: Every housewife knows that quality on foods (and everything else) has gone down, while the price stays up. You pay Grade A prices for Grade B eggs, get bad vegetables, are cheated in a thousand and one ways on quality. Every housewife knows this, but the BLS doesn't, for, as the report points out, the BLS Index takes no account of downward quality changes in merchandise.

This is true not only of food; it is particularly true of clothing and house furnishings. According to the BLS, the price of workers' clothing has gone up 33.7 percent. According to the facts in the labor report, the actual rise is 72.2 percent.

This is more than double the amount shown by the BLS Index, and again the deficiency is due to failures of the Index to cover enough cities and stores and to take into account quality deterioration, disappearance of cheaper brands and items, and (as in food and other commodities) evasion of ceiling prices.

As an example of how inadequate the Index is, the report shows that its clothing findings are based on samples from only four stores in each of the 34 cities surveyed (with one exception—five in New York).

In place of this slipshod method, the CIO-AFL study is based on an examination of Sears-Roebuck and Montgomery Ward catalog prices during the three year period 1941-1944, on U. S. Dept. of Commerce figures of value and quantity of clothing sold, and on consultation with workers and housewives as well as on detailed studies of quality deterioration and a careful trailing of the vanishing "low-end" or cheaper items.

Here's one example on clothing quality. It is based on a Consumers Union study of shirts, which showed declines of 10 percent in thread count, 10 percent in tensile strength and 10 percent in construction and inspection. At the same time, these lower quality shirts are selling at a 20 percent higher cash price, plus the 25 percent hidden increase in the deteriorated quality.

And, according to the OPA, shoes have deteriorated in quality from a minimum of 10 to a maximum of 40 percent; one brand, sold at a certain price in 1941, cost the equivalent of 42 percent more in 1943, due to lower quality.

Even rents, which have been widely advertised as the most stable of all cost of living items, have risen far more in fact than the BLS Index shows—by 15 percent instead of the Index figure of three percent.

Fact vs. Fiction

This discrepancy between fact and the BLS Index is again due to BLS failure to survey other than the largest cities, to failure to survey more than the centers of those cities studied, to ignoring the smaller and medium cities and even the outskirts of the big towns, and to a failure to reflect declines in repairs that landlords used to supply.

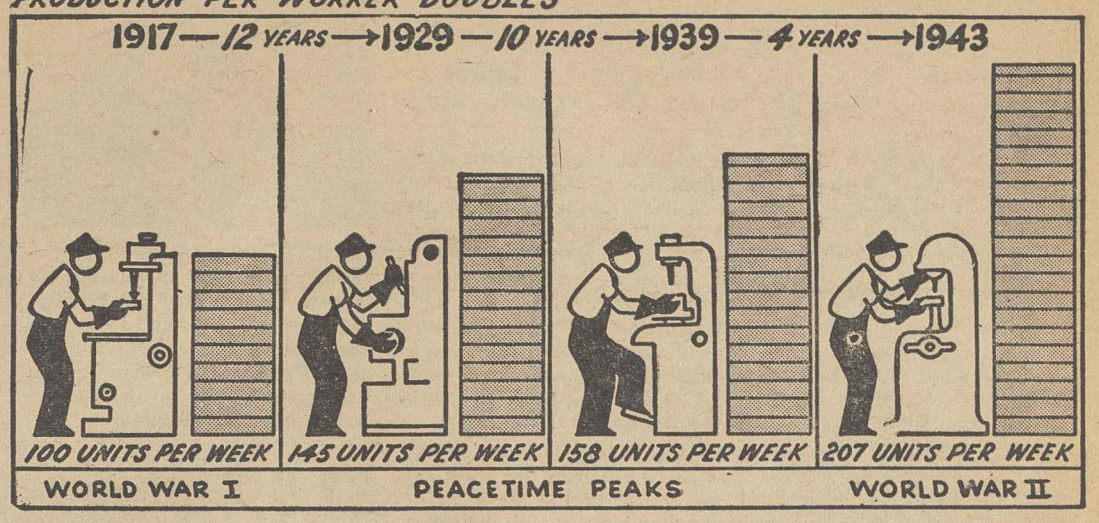
On top of this, the BLS Index resolutely refuses to survey rent costs in boarding houses, trailers, rooming houses, etc.—despite the fact that hundreds of thousands of workers are living in such places today.

House furnishings show the same picture of inadequate Index methods failing to reveal the actual increase in costs. According to the Index, the rise has been 27.8 percent. According to the joint CIO-AFL report, the actual rise is 62 percent.

Once again, inadequate sampling, failure to note quality declines, ceiling violations, etc., are the cause of the discrepancy between the Index and the actual state of affairs.

In concluding the report, first overall study to show the real bite that profiteering has put on the workers' income, the authors list briefly such factors as black markets, wartime changes in family outlays (restaurant meals, for example), expenses of moving to war jobs, maintaining dual residences, increased taxes and the like, as factors untouched in the BLS Index.

And in the final clincher on Little Steel, the report says: "Your committee finds that since January 1941, living costs have risen 43.5 percent, and that there is a discrepancy of 28.5 percent between the rise in living costs and the wage adjustments allowed under the Little Steel formula."



The American factory worker is producing twice as much in the same length of time as he produced in World War I. Largest production-per-worker increase in all history was made in the last four years. This could not have been accomplished without the full cooperation of organized labor.

Next week, The CIO NEWS will carry a special supplement on the cost of living study made public by R. J. Thomas and George Meany this week. The supplement will carry full details on the way your food and living budget has jumped far beyond the official figures.

CIO is also publishing the full text of the report on your cost of living. Watch for it and place your order now with the Publicity Department, CIO, 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C. Get your order in early—there's a paper shortage.

Time Out!

Nazi threats about a startling "secret weapon" to be used soon on the Allies remind us of a passage from "King Lear":

"I will have such revenges on you both
"That all the world shall—I will do such things—
"What they are, yet I know not, but they shall be
"The terrors of the earth."

King Lear, when he made this speech, had become completely insane.

The AFL has refused to participate in the world conference of trade unions, to be held in London in June, thus following an isolationist policy that smacks of the "Gompersism" of the 1920's. The action inspired the following:

And on this point I'll bet,

Shades Of Mrs. Dilling

Chicago, Jan. 29 (FP)—Sale of pamphlets of the British Library of War Information has been banned as "subversive" by the Chicago Library Board.

For protesting the ban, Board Member Leo Lerner, liberal publicist whose protest was backed by the Chicago Public Library Employes Union (CIO), was removed.

Reviewing "Hitlerite tendencies" in the board, the Chicago Industrial Union Council is demanding at least two labor representatives on the board.

Another UAW Victory

Cleveland, Jan. 29—The CIO United Auto Workers Union this week won by a 3½ to 1 margin an election held at the Klaas Machine Co.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

The drive for a real, effective service vote got a big push when President Roosevelt this week denounced the "states' rights" phoney in the Eastland-McClelland-Rankin bill in a message to Congress, and urged a simple, uniform, Federal measure.

In the House, the accent is on speed on the Eastland-Rankin bill (S 1285) to get it over before the forces around the Worley bill (similar to S 1612 in the Senate, which is the Green-Lucas bill) can act effectively. In the Senate, reactionary accent is on delay, because S 1612 is on the cards there, to replace the Eastland-McClelland phoney of last December.

A venerable fake is being revived for the Nth time in the Senate, with the placing of the so-called "Equal Rights" amendment on the calendar. This piece of double-talk, ostensibly aimed at "equalizing" the rights of women with those of men, would actually outlaw all protective legislation built up over generations to protect women workers; would be the wedge to do a similar job on all social-labor laws.

ORCHIDS: Sen. Taft (R., O.) honored The CIO NEWS and this department of it with a special blast this week, in which he commented bitterly on our calls for action on the service vote by saying: "Well, they have protested all right."

Service vote. (S 1285, S 1612)	S 1285 is House version of "states rights" bill that gives no guarantee votes will be counted, excludes merchant marine, S 1612 is Green-Lucas-Worley compromise with U. S. distribution and collection but not counting.	S 1285 being rushed to House floor action, strong attempt to ban record vote to allow anonymous voting. S 1612 coming up in Senate.	Step up demands for simple, uniform Federal service vote plan, including the merchant marine.
Subsidies (S 1458)	Continues CCC but tapers off food subsidies, kills them June 30, 1944.	Ready for Senate floor.	Wire Senators to ask removal of subsidy death sentence, continuance of subsidies on $1.6 billion as minimum.
Anti-racial hate. (HR 2328)	Bars mails to anti-Semitic, anti-Negro, etc., material aimed at native fascists.	Out of House Post Office Committee, headed for floor.	Write your Representative to support.
"Equal Rights" amendment.	Kills all laws protecting women workers under "equal rights" mask.	Voted last year by Senate Judiciary Committee, now on Senate calendar for early appearance.	Wire your two Senators against.

FDR Message Sparks Federal Army Vote Bill

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29—The drive for a uniform, Federal system of service voting got a big impetus with a message from President Roosevelt blasting the "states' rights" argument and with strong support from the special CIO Executive Board meeting this week.

Anti-service vote reaction in the Senate was loud and prolonged, with defeatists such as Taft (R., O.) and reactionaries like Holman (R., Ore.) squealing at both the CIO and the President and trying to make political capital out of what should be a simple issue.

In the parliamentary tangle, the new Green-Lucas bill (S. 1612) was moving ahead in the Senate, while in the House the Rankin-Eastland "states' rights" measure that would dump the votes in the wastebasket was being pressured for a quick rush to the floor and a vote.

In his message, President Roosevelt called the Eastland-McClelland bill (S. 1285) a "fraud" on the soldiers and sailors and marines now in training and fighting for us and our sacred rights," and also on the American people.

He was sharp on the House attempt to sneak this bill past without a record vote, thereby allowing the polltaxers and the reactionary Republicans to hide under a voice vote. Our citizens, he said, would be resentful "if they are unable to find out how their individual Representatives had expressed themselves on this legislation—which goes to the root of citizenship."

In addition, the President called for inclusion of the merchant marine in the uniform Federal system desired by all who want a real service vote—something almost none of the Congressmen have thought of.

In blasting the "states' rights" phoney and urging action on a genuine bill plus a record vote, the CIO Board said in a unanimous resolution:

"If any change is made in the Lucas-Green-Worley bill (S. 1612) it should be in the direction of strengthening that bill to guarantee that the votes of the servicemen and women will be counted in accordance with the law of the land.

"We call on the Senate to rise to its responsibility as the highest legislative chamber of a democratic nation and to speed enactment of the Lucas-Green bill.

"We call on the House to decide this issue by a record vote in favor of the Worley bill in which each member of Congress may stand before the nation for judgment.

"We congratulate the President on his forthright and vigorous demand for a law which will guarantee to every qualified American in uniform the right to vote in the elections of 1944."

$1.5 Billion SubsidyNeed, Bowles Says

Washington, Jan. 29—CIO's demand for minimum subsidies to stop further price increases got support from the OPA this week in testimony by Chester Bowles, OPA head, to the effect that a minimum of $1,500,000,000 is needed for an effective use of food subsidies.

In his testimony, given at the Pepper Subcommittee on Wartime Living, before which Pres. Murray and other CIO leaders and rank-and-filers testified earlier in the week, Bowles said that he couldn't possibly do "a right job" on anything less than $1,500,000,000.

Meantime, the Senate was still waiting to take action on the Bankhead bill (S 1458) reported out two weeks ago that would choke subsidies off completely by June 30 this year. Floor action has been held up while the defeatists and plain reactionaries try to rob the servicemen of the vote, but can be expected soon after that issue is out of the way.

CIO's position remains the same; subsidies are essential to stop further increases. The Senate must reject Section 3 of the Bankhead bill which kills subsidies, allow enough funds with $1,500,000,000 as a minimum basis for the subsidy program.

Kids' Clothes Prices Soar—WPB Sits

By ELEANOR FOWLER

Sec.-Treas., CIO Women's Auxiliaries

Maybe you saw in the papers that the War Production Board had finally decided to use its power of allocation to bring low cost children's clothing back on the market. If you did, I'm sure you had visions of those fine piles of 10 and 15-cent panties that used to be on hand in the five-and-ten.

You were day-dreaming. On children's panties the WPB order says that the manufacturer who applies to use the material set aside for children's clothes must make panties sizes 2 to 12 which do not cost more than 50 cents each at retail. Of course he can make cheaper ones—but if you think he will, you don't understand business.

Here's the way it works. The higher the price of the garment you make, the higher margin of profit you make. And since there aren't any children's panties and they're going to be able to sell all the 50-cent panties they can make, why should they make any for 10 and 15?

The same applies to all the other items of so-called low cost children's clothes for which WPB has set aside cloth. The prices listed in that order have been checked against Sears Roebuck and Montgomery Ward prices and they're just about twice as high. In other words, this order isn't an order to bring low cost children's clothes back on the market. It's an order to bring children's clothes back on the market at twice or three times the price most of us have been paying.

50 PER CENT MORE

That's a good illustration of the point President Murray made at the Senate Education and Labor Committee hearings on white collar workers when he said that housewives are paying 50 per cent more now for the things they need and that one of the reasons was the disappearance of cheaper goods.

Of course the fixed income families are hardest hit, but President Murray showed how skilled steel workers making over $1 an hour are running into debt, and having to cut their standard of living.

Inexpensive clothing is needed for the war effort, to maintain the health and morale of our people, but the manufacturers won't produce it. They're on strike. They're saying to OPA, raise the prices and we'll produce it, we'll lose money on it if you don't lift the ceiling. Those same manufacturers are making two or three times the profits they made before the war—and more.

Maybe we shouldn't blame the businessmen. That's the way they operate. They manufaceure the things that bring them the highest profits. But we can certainly blame the War Production Board. It has the power to say to industry, you've got to make the same proportion of inexpensive clothes you made before the war or you can't have any materials to make any clothes. And instead of doing that, the WPB has been pressuring the OPA to increase the prices.

It's high time CIO women made themselves heard on this issue. Write to Donald Nelson, chairman, War Production Board, Washington 25, D. C. Tell him it's time WPB took a firm position with manufacturers and forced them to produce inexpensive clothing.

Tell the same thing to Fred M. Vinson, Director of Economic Stabilization, The White House, Washington, D. C. They have it in their power to put an end to industry's strike. Let's make them use it.

Phoney Equal Rights Amendment Raises Ugly Head Again

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29—An ancient trap for the unwary was brought out of the Congressional junkpile this week with revival of the so-called "Equal Rights" amendment that has been kicked around for some 25 years now.

This amendment, parading as a means of wiping out all discriminations against women, actually would kill all social protective laws that have been won over the generations to ward off the worst kinds of exploitation of women workers.

The amendment was shelved (for about the nth time) in the House last year, but did manage to pass the Senate Judiciary Committee. Now it is on the Senate calendar, and can be brought up for action at any time.

Through the years, all labor and progressive women's organizations have been fighting this seemingly innocent but actually vicious move as a direct drive against women workers and as an opening wedge to wipe out similar laws protecting both men and women workers.

The fact that Vice-President Wallace has been lured into endorsing it should not mislead labor people; the National Women's Party (an organization of well-to-do women with no interest in labor) has persuaded other good people to endorse it before.

Labor people, however, should be on their toes to prevent its passage; write your Senators, tell them labor and working women (and Auxiliaries, too) want none of this phony "equal rights."

Back Steel Pay Boost Demands

New York, Jan. 29—Pledging full support to Pres. Philip Murray and the United Steelworkers of America in their present demands, the Natl. Exec. Board of the State, County & Municipal Workers stated at its quarterly meeting held here that "the fight of the steelworkers is the fight of every working man and woman in America."

The board also endorsed Pres. Roosevelt's message to Congress, pointing out that it separated the President's National Service Act from the anti-labor Austin-Wadsworth bill.

Joliet Local Wins

Joliet, Ill., Jan. 29 (FP)—Local 3082, United Steelworkers (CIO) has won exclusive bargaining rights for Carnegie-Illinois coke plant workers in Joliet.

D. C. Guild Starts Newspaper Class

Washington, Jan. 29—An unusual upgrading school has been started by the Washington Newspaper Guild. Under the tutelage of Edward Vanderveen, makeup editor of the Washington Post, about a dozen copy boys and girls are learning the rudiments of news and headline writing.

The class, which meets once a week, is expected to grow, with all young editorial employes of the four local dailies and wire services eligible.

Dewey Won't Get Labor Vote—Thomas

Detroit, Jan. 29—"There is no chance of labor, either CIO, AFL or the Railroad Brotherhoods, throwing their votes away on Thomas E. Dewey." That was the statement made this week by Pres. R. J. Thomas of the United Auto Workers Union, in an article which described the New York Governor as " a synthetized, expertly press-agented, well-heeled hope of reaction."

"Dewey," Thomas declared, "has no real feeling for solving basic social problems. He started to learn about these things only when it became apparent that racket-killing was enough for a District Attorney but not enough for a man ambitious for more in a political way.

"His 'social outlook,' but recently acquired, is just some costumes borrowed for political purposes. He may soon spout some liberal views, but they will be so much eyewash distributed for purely political purposes."

CIO Man Named To Welfare Post

San Francisco, Jan. 29 (FP)—Pres. George Wilson of the San Francisco CIO Council has been appointed by Mayor Roger Lapham to the San Francisco Public Welfare Commission, succeeding Lawrence Palacios, AFL official. Wilson is also the new third vice president of the San Francisco-Oakland Newspaper Guild.

CIO Asks End Of Smith Smear Group

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29—In a vigorous demand for an end to Congressional sabotage of U. S. war agencies, the CIO Executive Board this week demanded immediate abolition of the committee headed by Rep. Howard Smith (polltaxer, Va.) set up to do a smear job on vital war agencies.

Citing the record of the committee in attacking OPA and price control, the Fair Employment Practices Committee, and the War Labor Board, the Board said in a unanimous resolution:

"The record of the Smith Special Investigating Committee is a blot on the entire Congress. It subjects Congress to the anger and disgust of the American people. The work of this committee can only serve the enemies of our nation and accomplish the same ends sought by the paid agents of Hitler.

"The CIO Executive Board calls on Congress to immediately terminate this committee because of its highly prejudicial and biased investigation which does not seek to ascertain any facts . . . but rather to destroy any group and executive agency that seeks to further the war effort."

Red Cross Jobs Swell, CIO Girls Say

Washington, Jan. 29—A Red Cross clubmobile job in Italy would be just about heaven to a lot of girls in the nation's capital, hit by a manpower shortage that makes dates as difficult to get as pre-war steaks. At least that was the picture drawn this week in a report from two CIO members now in service about their activities a few months ago in the North African theater.

The girls, who are helping to build the morale of servicemen by providing them with hot coffee, cigarettes and other comforts of civilization, are Rosanne Walker, former organizer for the CIO Retail, Wholesale & Dept. Store Employes in Philadelphia, and Rose Bush, who worked there as financial secretary of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

"Everywhere we went we were given rousing welcomes," the girls reported through Red Cross headquarters this week. "We got a thousand-dollar cruise suntan bouncing around in jeeps, weapon carriers and trucks, through clouds of dust.

"We became very fond of the familiar whistles, the 'wolf' calls, the shrieks that greeted and followed us wherever we went. We had to keep reminding ourselves that as individuals we didn't merit all this attention; but since we represented home, we were more popular than any movie star."

Primary elections leading up to the 1944 Presidential contest will be held shortly in several states. Is your local's Political Action Committee on the jab?

Last week the members of Local 1-2, Brotherhood of Edison Employes, held a large meeting with several thousands attending, and instructed their officers to accept an invitation of President Murray to meet with the CIO for the purpose of working out an amalgamation, having in mind the building of a powerful utility workers union throughout the nation. The officers and members of this group of organized workers recognize the necessity of organizing the utility workers throughout the nation into a powerful industrial union. The CIO welcomes this opportunity and will be happy to work with them in attaining this goal. They like us believe in industrial organization as the best fitted to serve the men and women employed in this, one of the nation's most vital industries.

Murray Asks Annual Wage In College Talk

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 29—A guaranteed annual wage for workers is nothing more to ask than industry already is getting in guarantees for protection of its profits, CIO Pres. Philip Murray said this week at St. Mary of the Spring College, where he was the third speaker of the season on the institution's Erskine Lecture series.

Murray declared that the excess profits tax law guarantees industrialists their normal dividends for two years after the war and the right to borrow within 60 per cent of excess profits taxes they have paid to the Treasury in order to help sustain those dividends.

He warned that postwar America, as envisioned by some interests in the big business world, will bring "the old apple man back on the street corners."

Murray said that some industrialists are predicting that a $100 billion national income will be sufficient for the nation after the war, which would mean, he said, that about 13 million people would be out of work.

Warning that nothing makes the United States more apprehensive than the threat of mass unemployment, Murray said:

"Can't we do better than the old-fashioned system of spreading the work, spreading starvation, spreading discontent, spreading death?"

He pointed out that such a system is extravagant not only in the terms of human misery but also in terms of taxation needed to maintain the nation during a period of the "sickness of unemployment."

Says Hoffman Swiped Idea From Mussolini

Washington, Jan. 29—Rep. Clare Hoffman (Rep., Mich.), was accused this week of stealing an idea from Italy's ex-dictator, Mussolini. The accusation was made in a column written by UAW-CIO Legislative Director Irving Richter for the UAW's monthly publication, Ammunition.

Citing newspaper reports which said that Hoffman urged a "march on Washington" and the "use of armed forces if necessary," in a speech at Niles, Mich., Richter wrote:

"Hoffman undoubtedly overlooked telling his audience at Niles that the march was not an original idea. The first sponsor of such a march was Benito Mussolini, who originated the fascist system with the March on Rome (planned and paid for by the Italian NAM).

"It is the ultimate goal which all the smart American fascists talk about—privately. Clare Hoffman could hardly keep that American flag draped around him if he admitted his ideas originated in Mussolini's brain, and brought on the system which is causing the deaths of Niles' and other American boys."

CIO Decision To Attend London Meet Draws Praise

LONDON, Jan. 27 (ALN)—Acceptance this week by the CIO of the British Trades Union Congress' invitation to the June world labor conference, and the AFL's rejection of the invitation, were widely commented on by the British press. "The importance of the CIO in American politics continues to grow," the New Statesman and Nation, popular weekly journal, said in an editorial. "Three events of the past week confirm this. First, the CIO—unlike the AFL—announced its intention of attending the world labor conference in London. CIO president Philip Murray had already accepted the TUC invitation, but his latest statement, with its strong emphasis on the value to labor of such discussions, was made no doubt with a sidelong glance at the AFL.

"Next, the two-day conference in New York of the CIO Political Action Committee showed that, despite the refusal of the AFL to cooperate, American labor will enter the November elections with the first nation-wide political organization in its history.

"This development should not be construed in any way as a third party—demanded by John L. Lewis and others. It is clear that Sidney Hillman's campaign is directed equally against anti-labor, anti-Roosevelt Republicans and Democrats."

Declaring that AFL rejection of the TUC's invitation "is a disastrous approach to the problem of international cooperation," the weekly Spectator, supporter of the Conservative party, said:

"It is disturbing to find U. S. labor leaders so persistent in a pre-war attitude of hostility toward Soviet trade unionism. Nobody sending representatives to the London conference is committed to anything.

"There is every reason for hope that the cause of friction may be removed, but such hope cannot be realized if labor movements in other countries insist on cold-shouldering the representatives of Russia and actually shutting the door on consultation."

War Lost, Germans Told; Urged to Fight Hitler

London, Jan. 27 (ALN)—An appeal to German workers and "other anti-Nazi forces inside Germany to join in the struggle for freedom" was made this week by Ebby Edwards, chairman of the British Trades Union Congress and secretary of the Miners Federation of Great Britain. Addressing a joint mass meeting of the Council of Allies Inside Germany and the Free Germany Movement of Great Britain, Edwards said:

"This rally is taking place at a decisive moment in world history. Allied propaganda to Germany, if conducted along the right lines, can shorten the war, save lives and lay the basis of true international-ism."

The meeting addressed the following appeal to the German people: "Invasion of western Europe by the armies of liberation will start soon. The war is lost for you. Workers in factories: sabotage Hitler's war machine. German soldiers in the east: join the ranks of free Germans and organize the struggle against Hitler within the German army. German soldiers in the west; seek contacts with fighters in the national liberation movements. From groups with reliable comrades, organize desertion and surrender strong points. The fate of Germany lies in your hands."

Karl Becker, former miners' leader in Silesia and now a member of the Intl. Miners Federation executive committee, said: "At this fateful hour, all Germans must find courage and strength to rise and overthrow the accursed Hitler regime. We call on our fellow countrymen, whoever you are, to stand together against the enemy."

CIO Executive Board Resolutions

The following are two of the leading resolutions passed this week by the special CIO executive Board Meeting:

Wage Policy

The CIO national convention, in Philadelphia in November 1943, unanimously adopted a resolution calling for a readjustment of the national wage policy.

It was then pointed out that due to the failures on the part of Congress and certain executive agencies to stabilize the cost of living through effective price control and the use of subsidies, and the taxation of corporate profits and high incomes which have created the basis for inflation, the workers as a group have been singled out to bear the full brunt of the ravages of inflation.

Since the CIO convention, the justness and fairness of our demand have become increasingly clear.

The labor representatives on the President's Cost of Living Committee have submitted their report. This report shows conclusively that since January 1, 1941, the cost of living has soared far beyond the 15 per cent allowed under the Little Steel formula and far beyond the alleged 23 per cent rise conceded by the Index of the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Wages Frozen

Wages, on the other hand, have been completely stabilized. Congress continues to thwart the President's demands for an equitable tax program that will siphon off the swollen war profits of the corporations and the high incomes. Congress continues to obstruct the President's program for government subsidies to stabilize living costs.

This situation, if permitted to continue, lays a basis for disruption and disunity on the domestic front; now, therefore, be it

RESOLVED, (1) We reaffirm our determination to obtain a readjustment in the national wage policy. This readjustment in wages must allow the wage earners an increase to make up for the difference between the Little Steel formula of 15 per cent and the actual rise in the cost of living since January 1, 1941. This readjustment would simply fulfill the commitment given to the people by the Price Control law of October 2, 1942.

(2) We pledge to intensify the effort of the entire membership of the CIO to induce Congress to enact an equitable and just tax measure, including the continuance of the authority of the government to renegotiate war contracts, and to appropriate adequate funds for subsidies to control the cost of living and to obtain effective price control and extended rationing of consumer goods.

No Stoppages

(3) We recognize our obligation to bring the message to all Americans that stabilization of our domestic economy to avoid the perils of inflation is the essential cornerstone for national unity at home.

The membership of the CIO, through their local unions, city and State Industrial Union Councils, must initiate a nationwide campaign to rally behind the CIO program the support of all the people in the local communities, embracing all liberal and progressive groups, local and State officials, and the church groups.

Communications from all meetings thus assembled, calling for real stabilization of our national economy, which must include the necessary readjustment of our national wage policy, should be forwarded to the Representatives in Congress, the National War Labor Board, Mr. Justice Byrnes, Director of War Mobilization, and to President Roosevelt.

Back The Attack

The single vow of every American worker is to do all within his power to assist in shortening the coming ordeal and thereby lessen the cost of blood and suffering. This was the very objective of the President in his message in calling for a firm national unity at home to hasten the day of victory and to fulfill the people's goal of freedom, security and aoundance through a durable and permanent peace.

President Roosevelt, in his recent message to Congress, spoke for the people of the country when he said that:

"There is one line of unity which extends from the hearts of the people at home to the men in our attacking forces in our farthest outposts."

Labor fully recognizes its grave responsibility to the nation. Today, at this grave moment, we must be prepared to meet any call in the interest of our nation.

To date we have broken all records in the production of war materials. We have supported the efforts of our Commander-in-Chief to stabilize our domestic economy and achieve a basis for national unity.

At this solemn moment when our sons and brothers are about to engage our nation's foes in the decisive struggle, when the life of our nation is at stake, labor will not falter.

Obligation to America

We have pledged the fullest mobilization to increase the production of war materials for our armed forces. We must address all our efforts toward keeping the wheels of our factories and mills turning and to keep the goods sailing to the fighting fronts.

To this end the CIO Executive Board calls upon all of its affiliated unions to religiously and meticulously respect their sacred obligations to their nation and the members of our armed forces by avoiding any stoppages of work or interruptions of production.

American labor will do everything within its power to meet the call of our Commander-in-Chief to back the attack.

Monty-Ward Gets Slapped By WLB

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29 — Montgomery-Ward, big mail order house which hates and despises unions and is proud of it, has been on the warpath for some time against the CIO United Wholesale Retail and Department Store Employes.

Some of the extremes to which it has gone in its union-hating are revealed in an answer to the company's complaint against the Natl. War Labor Board filed with the Smith Investigating Committee of the House of Representatives.

Lloyd K. Garrison, alternate public member of the WLB, submitted the Board's answer to Montgomery-Ward's complaint on the proceedings before the Board involving the Company's Chicago stores and warehouses. He said the company made it clear "that as a matter of principle it would never agree to anything which the union or the War Labor Board might propose."

In his brief filed with the Smith Committee, Garrison declared that "the company insisted upon a complete and absolute rejection not only of the union's demands but of every type of compromise provision, however common in American industry it might be."

On the issue of arbitration, when the company attorney was asked if it was correct that he could not "conceive of any complaints which one of your workers might bring up which you would be willing to submit to arbitration if other means of settlement fail," he answered, "That's right."

In opposing any type of seniority clause, the attorney agreed with the statement that "the discretion of the company in laying men off and taking them back and in promoting them, shall be absolutely unfettered by any sort of provision which would to the slightest degree interfere with the full exercise of their discretion."

In its complaint to the Smith Committee, the company stated that it objected to the Board's procedure in failing to apply the ordinary court rules of evidence such as administering oaths, calling witnesses and subjecting them to examination.

The Board replied that it is so well established that administrative agencies are not required to do this and that "no citation of authority" is needed.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29—Group care for children of working mothers is a definite aid to the war effort, and those cities which lack it find that the efficiency of working mothers is cut by worry over the welfare of their children, the U. S. Department of Labor's Children's Bureau declared this week.

Reporting on a survey of child care facilities offered by 13 communities scattered over the nation, the Bureau said that lack of proper facilities cause women to quit war jobs with consequent suffering of production quotas.

The 13 communities included: Rochester and Monroe Counties, N. Y.; Newark, N. J.; Lynchburg, Va.; Cleveland, O.; Chicago; Des Moines, Iowa; Minneapolis; Memphis; Kansas City; Little Rock, Ark.; Davis County, Utah; Portland and Multnomah, Oreg.; and San Francisco.

"An advisory and counseling service has a vital part to play in the community day care program," the report stated. "It is used to assist mothers who are planning to enter employment or who are already employed, in thinking through the many problems relating to the well-being of their children and the maintenance of their family life, and is used by the community in keeping constantly abreast of the need.

"Such services have proved to be one of the best ways of determining the location of group care centers, the number and location of the foster family day care homes, and the need for homemaker services in any community."

CIO Starts Drive On Pa. R. R.

Altoona Pa., Jan. 29—Announcement that the CIO has started to organize non-operating employes of the Pennsylvania Railroad and that A. B. Martin, district director of the United Steelworkers of America, is in charge of the drive, was made this week by Allan S. Haywood, CIO vice president and director of organization.

Haywood said the CIO's new organization will be named the United Railroad Workers of America, and will have jurisdiction over the following types of employes:

Machinists, blacksmiths, boiler makers, sheet metal workers, car builders, car repairmen, car inspectors, coach cleaners, power house employes, shop laborers and the helpers and apprentices working with these employes.

Haywood said that the drive will not in any way conflict with jurisdiction of either the Railroad Brotherhoods or the CIO Transport Service Employes.

The main goal of the drive is a system-wide election, to be conducted under the Natl. Railway Labor Act.

Haywood reported substantial progress in organizing at vital points, and said that an organizing committee has been elected, consisting of representatives from Altoona, New York, New Jersey, Pittsburgh and Chicago.

CIO Sews Up Canada Farm Tool Firms

Windsor, Ont., Jan. 29—Victory in two collective bargaining elections for the CIO United Auto Workers Unnion this week virtually completed CIO organization of the agricultural implement industry in Canada, according to UAW Director George Burt.

At Brantford Massey-Harris, the UAW rolled up 1039 votes for 383 for Industrial Council, and at Western Massey-Harris the score was: UAW 884, IC 526.

Previous victories were won at Toronto Massey-Harris and Brantford Cockshutt Plough. The only other large plant not under UAW contract is Hamilton Intl. Harvester, which has an agreement with the CIO United Steelworkers.

Certify Steel, Aluminum Pay Cases to WLB

Washington, Jan. 29—Cases involving wage demands of the CIO United Steelworkers and the Aluminum Workers were certified to the Natl. War Labor Board this week by Sec. of Labor Frances Perkins.

The Steel cases, involving a 17-cents-an-hour wage increase, affect workers at U. S. Steel, Jones & Laughlin, Youngstown Sheet & Tube, Republic Steel, Wheeling (W. Va.) Steel, Carnegie-Illinois, American Steel & Wire, Natl. Tube, Columbia Steel and the Tennessee Coal, Iron & R. R. Co's.

Net Profits Hit New High—$8.2 Billion a Year

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29—Net corporate profits after payment of taxes hit a new record high during 1943, the U. S. Dept. of Commerce said this week in its Survey of Current Business. The profits were estimated at 8.2 billion dollars—twice those of 1939 and moderately above the previous peak reached in 1929.

The new record was set with the aid of a third quarter flow of profits that exceeded that in any previous three months' period of the nation's history. The total profits before taxes were $5.7 billion—16 percent above the same quarter in 1942.

The Commerce Dept. said that for 17 out of 21 industry groups analyzed, earnings before taxes in the third quarter of 1943 were the highest on record.

Dies Committee Gets Another $75,000 For Disruption

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29—The House of Representatives this week gave the disruptive Dies Committee another $75,000, bringing to $652,500 the amount of taxpayers' money spent on investigations which have been directed chiefly against progressive organizations and which have conspicuously avoided probing native fascist groups.

The action took only five minutes, with but one Congressman rising to protest. He was Rep. Vito Marcantonio (Progressive, N. Y.), who declared that "there never was a time when unity in the national and international field was so important, and on the basis of the past and present record of this committee, it will contribute nothing but disunity and confusion."

One of the main announced objectives of the Dies Committee will be an investigation of CIO's Political Action Committee. Both CIO Pres. Philip Murray and Political Action Chairman Sidney Hillman have said that the CIO Committee has no secrets and that the records and information which it possesses are open at any time to the Dept. of Justice.

In his usual fashion, Dies seeks to prove his impartiality by promising to investigate the Japanese (a probe that supposedly was started months ago), and by making a few passes at "Peace Now" (a whacky fringe organization with about 1,500 members who urge a negotiated peace with the Axis).

Dies "balances" this with an investigation of the CIO (more than five million members) and with a promise of a probe of the Civil Service Commission, continuing his witch hunt among the millions of patriotic government employes.

Back FDR's Stabilization Policy

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Jan. 22—Full support for President Roosevelt's program of economic stabilization and reiteration of the union's no-strike pledge were expressed at a western wage conference of the CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, held here last weekend. Representatives of more than 100 locals in 11 western states united on a wage policy which includes demands for:

1. An equitable tax program based on ability to pay.

2. Cost of living provisions in contracts to provide for increases in prices.

3. Use of subsidies to boost production and keep prices down.

4. Elimination of intra-plant and inter-plant wage inequalities.

Polltax-Republican Gang Kills Soldier Ballot Bill

Openly jeering and laughing at efforts to give servicemen and women the right to vote, Republican Congressmen and their polltax Democrat friends this week voted 224 to 168 against any form of Federal ballot for the armed forces.

The anti-servicemen vote came on the CIO and FDR-backed Worley bill, which would have set up a simple, uniform Federal system of distributing and collecting ballots.

It was followed immediately by passage of the so-called "States' rights" bill, sponsored by the rabidly reactionary polltaxer, Rep. Rankin (D., Miss.), and by the Republican party leadership.

Study this voting record. Mark down the names of the opponents of the soldiers' vote. Remember them in 1944.

And meantime—REGISTER SO YOU CAN VOTE IN '44.

Rollcall Vote on Service Bill

(See Earlier Vote Against Rollcall—Page 9)

This is the House voting record on the Worley bill to provide a simple, uniform ballot for service people. A "YES" vote is a vote for the servicemen's right to the ballot. A "NO" vote is a vote against the servicemen and women.

Don't be deceived by your Representative telling you he voted for the Rankin bill which passed. The Rankin bill will not let the servicemen and women vote.

Wages Too Low

Senate Group Urges White Collar Raises

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5—Action to boost the pay of white collar workers, literally in many cases forced to go in debt to meet the rising cost of living, was urged this week by Senators Elbert D. Thomas and Claude Pepper, following hearings of the Senate Sub-Committee on Wartime Health and Education.

Pepper is chairman of the sub-committee, and Thomas heads the full Committee on Education and Labor.

In a joint statement, the Senators recommended:

1. Action to "unfix" fixed incomes, "to bring them up into line with new price levels, and to provide such relief from taxes and other financial burdens as can be furnished consistently with prosecution of the war."

2. Rigid control of prices to prevent further hardship among the 20 million people who are living on relatively fixed incomes—salaries, pensions, annuities and allowances for servicemen's dependents.

3. Relaxation of War Labor Board restrictions. "We believe," the Senators said, "that the War Labor Board should make all possible efforts to influence the granting of salary increases to workers who are close to the level of bare subsistence."

4. Simplification of WLB procedure so that the average worker can understand how to secure pay increases.

In discussing the plight of white collar workers, the Senators said:

"The difficulties of many of these people, as brought out in the hearings, have become so acute that they are now living partially 'in the red'—that is, borrowing wherever possible to make up the difference between income and outgo."

Late last week, the CIO United Federal Workers had told the committee of the plight of 3 million wage earners employed by the government.

Arthur Stein, assistant to UFW Sec.-Treas. Eleanor Nelson, testified that 18 per cent of federal workers get $1,500 or less a year, counting base pay plus overtime; that 41 per cent get $1,750 or less; that 55 per cent get $2,000 or less; and that 64 per cent get $2,200 or less.

Stein said that many people have the false impression that the War Overtime Pay Acts of 1942 and 1943 have granted government employes sufficient pay increases, but pointed out that "actually no real change has taken place in the situation since the passage of the Classification Act of 1923 and its amendment in 1928."

Stein introduced to the sub-committee two girl UFW members who told of hardship on low government salaries (see adjoining story).

CIO Backs Manpower Plan

Washington, Feb. 5—The CIO is "fully prepared and anxious in the interest of securing maximum utilization of manpower for the war effort to meet with representatives of industry and the government in order that a program may be formulated," President Murray said this week in releasing a letter to all CIO affiliates.

COLLARS ARE WHITE, PAY LOW:

Arthur Stein, assistant to the secretary-treasurer of the CIO United Federal Workers, this week told a Senate committee investigating white collar pay that 18 per cent of the three million Federal wage-earners make $1,500 a year or less.

The letter went on to note that "we shall thereby defeat any attempt to enact the type of legislation designed to smash labor unions, which could only result in undermining a united people's forthright and uncompromising support of our nation's war effort."

Following the form of a report to CIO affiliates on the CIO Executive Board meeting of January 27-28, President Murray discussed the soldiers' vote issue, taxation and re-negotiation of war contracts, economic stabilization and the wage question and laid down a detailed manpower utilization program to avert "the evils inherent in the attempt to resort to compulsory labor," as in the Austin-Wadsworth bill and similar measures.

PRAISES FDR MESSAGE

He praised President Roosevelt's mesage of Jan. 11 on the need for national unity "in the conduct of the war and in laying the basis for a secure and lasting peace." CIO, he said, "subscribes completely" to this and to the decisions of the United Nations at Moscow, Cairo and Teheran.

President Murray's letter cited the action of the CIO Executive Board in reaffirming CIO opposition, expressed at the 1943 convention, to national service legislation as "ineffectual" and containing "dangers of further complicating rather than aiding our manpower situation."

The CIO manpower program, in addition to providing for full use of all manpower, including Negroes and all racial and national groups as well as women, was expressed in seven main points.

MAIN POINTS

1. All critical plants or areas "with restrictions on the right of workers to leave work" must be certified for health and safety conditions, wages, hours and working conditions as determined by bona fide collective bargaining, adequate training facilities and standards for full utilization of manpower.

2. A minimum weekly wage equal to average hourly earnings for 40 hours in all such plants or areas with extra hours covered by collective bargaining, statutes and Executive Order 9240 should be guaranteed.

3. Transfers of employes should be made from within the locality before others are brought in from outside it.

4. Expenses of transferred employes, plus allowances for moving and added family expenditures, must be met.

5. Workers should not be transferred unless the receiving plant or area is certified for adequate health, housing and child care facilities.

6. Transferred workers must receive the prevailing pay rate at the new job, with a guarantee that the new pay will not be less than they received on their old job.

7. Return to the former job and full seniority rights secured by collective bargaining must be guaranteed to transferred workers.

UFW Girls Go Into Debt On Low Government Pay

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5—Exactly what low government salary standards mean to federal workers was explained this week in terms no one could misunderstand by two girl members of the CIO United Federal Workers Union. Excerpts from their testimony before the Senate Sub-Committee on Wartime Health and Education follow:

"My name is Hazel V. Dawson. I work at the Foreign Economic Administration as a secretary, grade CAF 4. I am single and live at the West Potomac Park dormitories.

"During the last three months of 1943, my earnings, before payroll deductions and including overtime, were $544.00. My expenses during the same period were $570.50. I have here an itemized account of my income and expenses in the last quarter of 1943:

CIO Planning for the Postwar World

This is the last of a series of articles from "As We Win," a new CIO pamphlet based on the report of the CIO Postwar Planning Committee. Excerpts from the report follow:

* * *

Disabled veterans and workers injured producing war materials should receive regular allowances for themselves and their dependents, training opportunities, and special consideration in employment. Dependents of men killed in the war should receive full protection, including an equal chance for education.

Although veterans will primarily want a job and opportunity, not a bonus, they will be entitled to substantial dismissal payments to give them a new start.

If full employment is achieved, the nation will be able to afford a liberal scale of payments. If jobs are scarce and production low, veterans' needs will be increased and the nation will be less able to meet them.

Neither business bureaucracy nor governmental rigidities must stifle the gumption of the American citizen bent on using his initiative, nor the grass roots common sense of local communities in towns or country.

We stand for genuine economic freedom, not for monopoly agreements masking as "free enterprise," nor for do-nothing-for-the-people policies hiding behind "states' rights." Over-all national action and controls are essential to full employment and social security.

* * *

The enslaved peoples of Europe are looking forward to their liberation from Nazi military might and fascist thinking. Organized labor, here and abroad, is determined to destroy this enemy of the rights of the common man.

The world is not big enough for the negative ideas of fascism and the positive ideals of democracy to live side by side.

The rebuilding of democratic unions in territories liberated from the Axis should be encouraged by our occupying forces. Unions were the greatest bulwark of democracy before the coming of fascism and were among the first victims of the dictators. In liberated countries, unions will often be the first to express the people's viewpoints and to develop new democratic leaders and experience.

The danger of working with former fascists, whether government officials or business men, has been demonstrated.

Organized labor will be the chief sufferer if America follows the path of isolation or American imperialism. Taxes will go up to build a defense second to none. Money which should go into homes, clothing, and food will go into planes and tanks and guns.

As living standards decline and tensions increase, reaction will set in.

The United States cannot hope to maintain full employment with the rest of the world in economic confusion. The depression of 1932 affected all countries as would future depressions. Poverty encourages the rise of dictators and thus menaces peace.

Much of our manufacturing is for export, and prosperous customers across the seas help maintain employment at home. But we must, in turn, buy from other nations if we want to sell to them. World levels of living will rise more rapidly when goods are produced in the most efficient producing areas and exchanged in international trade.

Just as monopolies have limited output and maintained prices at home, so have huge corporations joined hands across national lines to divide up world trade, limit output, and keep prices high. Such restrictive practices are a menace to world prosperity.

Instead there should be world cooperation to raise levels of living, to develop natural resources, to promote international trade and to achieve full and stable employment throughout the world.

Polltax-Republican Gang Kills Soldier Ballot Bill

Keep Your Eye On Congress

In a laughing, jeering session late this week, the Republicans and their polltax allies voted to deny the ballot to service men and women.

The vote—224 to 168—came on the Administration-backed Worley bill, and was followed by passage of the Rankin (polltaxer, Miss.) so-called "states' rights" bill that effectively bars service people from voting.

As The CIO NEWS went to press, the Senate was preparing to act on a watered-down version of the Green-Lucas bill (S 1612).

The tax bill is still in conference, where differences between the House and Senate versions are being ironed out. As a whole, the bill is still extremely bad, due to failure to tax big incomes, excess war profits, plug loopholes, etc. A partial victory was won in the Senate on re-negotiation, by which the U. S. can recapture some of the more flagrant profits. This tussle is not over yet, however. Powerful interests are still trying to push re-negotiation down the drain, make the stratosphere the limit for profits instead of merely the sky.

Very little is moving on the National Service Act question. The Senate Military Affairs Committe is holding sporadic hearings; latest to testify for the Act was an American Legion witness. President Murray this week laid down a rational program for full use of manpower (see story, page 2) involving seven points, designed to avert dangers of a labor draft law.

Service vote (S 1285, S 1612)	S 1285 is Rankin bill preventing service people from voting; S 1612 is much amended version of Green-Lucas Federal ballot measure.	Rankin bill has passed House, S 1612 now being acted on in Senate.	Urge FDR veto of Rankin bill if it passes both House and Senate.
Subsidies (S 1458)	Tapers off present subsidies, kills them by June.	Ready for Senate floor as soon as service vote finally finished.	Wire Senators to vote against subsidy ban, for subsidies on $1.6 billion yearly basis.
Federal pay raise. (HJR 198)	Sets up agency to adjust U. S. employes' pay, overtime.	In House Civil Service Committee, (Rep. Ramspeck, D., Ga., chmn.)	Write your Representative to support.
"Equal Rights" amendment.	Kills laws protecting women workers under mask of "equal rights," wedge for attack on all labor laws.	On Senate calendar for early action.	Wire your two Senators against.
HR 2967	Grants naturalization to foreign seamen serving in U. S. merchant marine.	In House Immigration Committee, (Rep. Dickstein, D., N. Y., chmn.)	Write your Representative to urge favorable report.

House Denies Army Federal Vote, Passes Phoney State Law

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5—Following strict party orders, the Republicans this week joined with polltax Democrats in a 224 to 168 vote to deny the ballot to men and women in the armed forces.

Laughing and jeering as they voted, the Republicans and the polltaxers reversed their stand of two days before against a roll-call vote, and finally their names were put on the record.

The vote came on the Administration-backed Worley bill, which originally provided for a uniform Federal system of collecting and distributing the ballots to the men and women in the services.

Following House rejection of the Worley bill, the Republicans and their polltax allies voted for the Rankin-Eastland so-called "states' rights" bill, which President Roosevelt has denounced as "a fraud on the American people."

Under the Rankin bill (Rep. Rankin is the leading pro-fascist in the House, from polltax Mississippi) soldiers and servicemen must go through all the red tape involved in writing home for an absentee ballot, getting it, filling it out, and returning it in time for the election. Only 28,000 were able to vote under this system in 1942.

The Rankin bill also applies all the state restrictions on the free use of the ballot, including the poll-tax, absentee registration, residence requirements and the like. Many states, as Rankin and the Republicans know, prohibit absentee registion, which would automatically deprive the soldiers and sailors of the right to vote.

APPEASEMENT IN SENATE

Meantime, Administration backers of the Federal service ballot were trying the appeasement tack in the Senate. In an effort to head off a Republican-polltax coalition against any form of federal ballot, they accepted the amendment of Senator Danaher (R., Conn.), which limits the federal ballot to men and women overseas or from states where no provision for service voting is made.

Leader of the Republican anti-servicemen's gang in the Senate is Taft, the tory isolationist from Ohio, who has openly boasted that his aim is to prevent service people from voting for a fourth term for President Roosevelt.

Taft, who has been squealing loudly about CIO pressure for a federal ballot, insulted a group of CIO Women's Auxiliary delegates who visited him during the week, telling them in effect to get back to the kitchen sink where they "belonged" and leave politics to their "betters."

A similar appeasement tack in the House completely failed to save the Worley bill, even though its backers proposed amendments that took the heart out of the measure.

Among these last minute appeasement gestures were amendments to put the polltax requirements back into the bill and to restore the states' right to deny the vote through applying their absentee registration requirements.

What to Do To Help Win Army Vote

As The CIO NEWS went to press, the Senate was taking action on its version of Green-Lucas Federal service ballot bill.

Action in the House to bar the vote to servicemen is not final. After the Senate passes its bill, the measure has to go to a House and Senate conference to iron out differences between the two versions.

Wire your two Senators at once to demand a return to the simple, uniform Federal service voting system in the original Green-Lucas bill.

Remember, in 1942 only 28,000 service people could vote under a "state's rights" act.

Written that letter yet to your friend in the services? Don't forget that the boys in the foxholes are anxious to hear what's going on at home. Write today!

Regional WLB Ups Pay, Natl. WLB Cuts It

Washington, Feb. 5—Acting upon the petition of the Sheffield Steel Corp., Houston, Tex., the War Labor Board this week ordered a rate of 63c an hour for common labor, which had been set by the regional WLB in Dallas, reduced to 60.5c an hour.

The National Board held that the 63c rate set by the Dallas Board exceeded the minimum of the range of rates for common labor in the Houston area and therefore could not be approved under the WLB's wage stabilization policy.

They Couldn't Hide Their Guilt

The action of the House in denying servicemen the right to vote—for leaving their voting to the states amounts to that—is one of the most shocking crimes against democracy of which this Congress has been guilty.

The tortuous excuses, the acrobatic antics, the picayune politics and the parliamentary finagling that accompanied this crime reveal the uneasy consciences of its perpetrators, and their fears of retribution by the enraged American people.

First the polltax Democrats and tory Republicans, who rule the House roost, attempted to conceal the names of opponents of the soldiers' vote from the public.

They voted against a rollcall vote on the Worley federal ballot bill. Then they rejected this bill by a teller vote, in which no names are recorded.

But in the meantime, public indignation had become so acute at this refusal to "stand up and be counted" that newspapermen, who knew the Congressmen by sight, were prepared to watch for, write down and publish the name of every Congressman voting against the Worley bill.

Realizing they could not commit their crime in complete secrecy, and that they had already gone too far in defying public opinion, the opponents of the soldiers' vote finally let the Worley bill be brought up again and permitted a rollcall vote on it.

This vote, in which the opponents of a federal soldiers' ballot finally were forced to stand up and be counted, is printed in this issue. You can now find out exactly where your representative stands. If he voted right, let him know you are proud of his stand; and if he opposed the soldiers' right to vote, let him know you know it.

Such Stubborn Things

Many daily papers have editorialized about the CIO-AFL survey showing that living costs have gone up 43.5% since Jan. 1, 1941, instead of the 24.3% claimed by the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Most of the papers seem startled out of their slumbers. It takes them some thousands of words to close their eyes again and soothe the nerves of their owners.

Many make the false claim that labor accepted the BLS index as substantially correct when the Little Steel formula was cooked up.

Labor has never accepted the correctness of the BLS living cost figures, but has found fault with them for years. Furthermore, as the CIO-AFL survey notes, the BLS calculations have become far worse distorted through failure to take into account many special war conditions.

But in general the querulous lullabies follow this kind of line:

"Now was it nice of labor to make public its findings all on its lonesome? Why couldn't it wait for the BLS and industry to disprove its findings better than we can?

"Maybe living costs have gone up, and some of the labor figures are a bit hard to explain away.

"But, take courage, there just must be something wrong somewhere. After all, labor is for labor, while the BLS is impartial and authoritative and sincerely devoted to supporting the Little Steel formula to keep wages down.

"Anyhow, labor is most ill-advised to try to adjust wages to higher living costs. It is always the first to suffer when prices rise, so why can't it just suffer now and keep its mouth shut?"

But pity the poor editorial writers. On their one side, there's the boss, who doesn't like wage increases or unions on general principles. On the other, they can't take too many liberties with readers who know from their own housekeeping that living costs have gone up about as much as labor says.

So they wriggle and squirm for paragraphs on end, trying to soften up the facts or make them disappear. But still the facts keep staring them in the face—they are such stubborn things!

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

STRANGE echoes in the halls of Congress! Echoes of debates that raged centuries ago in the British House of Lords and in the courts of the French kings, when the newfangled notion of democracy was first examined.

Their lordships of those days viewed with alarm the idea of giving the common people the right to vote.

They frankly feared for their privileges and minority rule. They tried to calculate which party the "lower classes" would vote for, if given the chance. And usually they concluded it was safer, and better politics, not to let them vote.

Today, in the United States Congress, their American "lordships," the Southern polltaxers and Northern tories, echo the same ideas.

They frankly admit their fears that if 10 million American servicemen are given the vote, they may cast most of their ballots for Roosevelt, for New Deal policies, for Democrats or for whatever else is most distasteful to the particular "lord" who has the floor.

So in the Senate this lordly oligarchy rejects the Lucas-Green federal ballot bill to let the soldiers vote. It decides to leave everything to the states, under whose endless restrictions only 28,000 servicemen could vote in 1942.

Then, as the popular clamor rises, their Senate lordships get chilly feet. They consider new measures, but interpose endless delays, quibbles and "compromises" to cloak their opposition to allowing all servicemen to vote.

In the House, the dogs of their lordships get even colder. They become so fearful of the rising wrath of the people that they fear even to let their votes be known.

By a vote of 233 to 160 they refuse to stand up and be counted, hoping to hide in denying the servicemen the right to vote.

By unrecorded vote they deny servicemen a federal ballot. Then, fearful of the results of their refusal to stand up and be counted, at the last minute they allow a recorded vote—thus finally exposing the names of those who will not let the soldiers vote.

The frenzied opposition of so many politicians to letting the soldiers vote, their apoplectic debates and curious arguments are as amazing as they are shocking to most Americans.

One would have thought the politicians and parties would be vying for the honor of sponsoring the most generous possible provisions for all servicemen to vote—and would consider anything like opposition as political suicide.

The only explanation of the present strange conduct is that an oligarchy—rule of the few—has entrenched itself in Congress, and is desperately and even recklessly fighting to maintain its power and privileges against the rising forces of democracy.

This oligarchy includes members of Congress from polltax states, who have been elected and re-elected again and again by a tiny minority of the citizens of their districts.

It includes reactionaries from other states, who owed their election in 1942 to the fact that millions of progressive young Americans were in the armed services and unable to vote, while millions of progressive workers could not vote because of having moved to new war jobs.

It includes also tories, isolationists and defeatists of earlier vintage, who fear for their re-election if a full vote of soldiers and war workers is recorded this year.

In a word, the oligarchy that has so bitterly fought against the soldiers' vote bases its power on the disfranchisement of 10 million American citizens in the polltax states, 10 million more Americans who are in the armed services, and millions more war workers disfranchised by the red tape of state voting restrictions.

That is why their arguments and antics suggest so many parallels with those of the noble lords and landed gentry of generations ago, who also sought to maintain their oligarchic power by denying the common people the right to vote.

They know that if the disfranchised millions are allowed to vote, their weight will be thrown overwhelmingly on the side of democratic and social progress—including all-out united effort behind the Commander-in-Chief for winning this people's war and a people's peace.

The oligarchs' fear is labor's hope. That's why CIO leads in demanding federal provisions for all servicemen to vote and an end to the polltax, and in campaigning to get every worker registered to vote.

The CIO and The 5-Point Program

CIO Pres. Murray's letter to all affiliates on President Roosevelt's five-point message to Congress reflects the serious effort of the CIO to cooperate in the solving of all war problems with which the President dealt.

On behalf of the CIO, Murray subscribes completely to the President's call for national unity and reiterates CIO's unconditional no-strike pledge.

He hails the goals set at the Moscow, Cairo and Teheran conferences for speedy victory and lasting peace.

Murray stresses the importance of the first four points of the President, calling for a realistic tax law, renegotiation of contracts to check profiteering, cost of food law and economic stabilization.

On the fifth point, calling for national service legislation, Murray notes that the President said he would not recommend such a law unless the other laws were also passed, but re-emphasizes CIO's opposition to any national service legislation.

The CIO leader points out that polltax Democrats and reactionary Republicans are promoting such legislation with the idea of including union-smashing and other disruptive provisions.

But the CIO attitude is never negative on any issue affecting mobilization for victory. On the contrary, Murray advances a constructive manpower program which would really cope with the problems which bills like the Austin-Wadsworth bill could only worsen.

He declares that "the CIO is fully prepared and anxious, in the interest of maximum utilization of manpower for the war effort, to meet with representatives of industry and the government in order that a program may be formulated on the basis proposed.

"In this manner we can accomplish the end sought by all who have as their primary interest the successful prosecution of the war through the fullest utilization of the effort of every American and of all available resources and facilities."

The patriotic and constructive position of the CIO is in refreshing contrast to the petty election-year politics which too many people are seeking to play with the serious war issues raised by President Roosevelt.

Rent And Clothing Prices Zoom

SUPPOSE you went into a store to buy something for $1 and the clerk said I'm sorry, but that'll cost you $1.23,½ and then he said, excuse me, it really cost you $1.43½.

You might protest and say, but it's marked on the tag $1, and the clerk would say, yes, ma'am (or yes, sir), but things have gone up and it's too hard for us to write down how much, so you'll have to pay $1.43½ today—take it or leave it.

You'd be pretty mad, wouldn't you? At least you'd be likely to think that store's pricing policy was pretty crazy and take your trade to a place where they knew what they wanted to charge you before you walked in the door, and stuck to the price.

Now that, roughly, is what's happened to your living cost budget between January, 1941, and January, 1944.

Today, you're paying $1.43½ for what cost you $1 in 1941. That's the average. On some pretty vital items, like food and clothing and house furnishings, you're paying more.

On food, you're paying $1.74 for what used to cost you $1; on clothing, $1.72; on household goods, $1.62.

These are the figures made public by the combined CIO-AFL study on the cost of living done by CIO's R. J. Thomas and AFL's George Meany. They are from labor's joint report to President Roosevelt, who appointed a "Presidential Committee on the Cost of Living" about three months ago. Also on the Presidential Committee are representatives of industry and the government, who haven't reported at this time of writing.

The labor survey flatly contradicts the figures of the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics (hereinafter referred to as BLS) which say that the cost of living has gone up an average of only 23.4 per cent since January, 1941.

These BLS figures are important to you as a war worker and as a house-

The American workers' cost of living has risen 43.5 percent from January, 1941, to December, 1943 — nearly twice the 23.4 percent estimated by the U. S. Dept. of Labor's Bureau of Statistics.

The 43.5 percent—said to be a "highly conservative" estimate — was determined by a detailed survey conducted by the CIO and AFL.

A report on the survey, submitted to the Presidential Committee on the Cost of Living by labor members R. J. Thomas and George Meaney, said:

> "In view of the fact that the cost of living has actually risen by at least 43.5 per cent since January, 1941, whereas the BLS Index shows a rise of only 23.4 per cent, we conclude that the BLS Cost of Living Index is unreliable as a basis for wage adjustments during the war period. Sole reliance upon it will result in continued serious injustice to wage earners and lower salaried workers."

Main factors causing the average price rise are discussed in this special CIO NEWS Cost of Living Supplement. Briefly, the lineup of price rises for basic items of the average worker's family are:

1. The cost of food has risen 74.2 per cent. The BLS estimate is 40.2 per cent.

2. The cost of clothing has risen 72.2 per cent. The BLS estimate is 33.7 per cent.

3. The cost of rent has risen 15 per cent. The BLS estimate is 3 per cent.

4. The cost of house furnishings has risen 62 per cent. The BLS estimate is 27.8 per cent.

Facts supporting these statistics will be found on this and the following three pages.

Food Prices Hiked 74% Since 1941

THREE YEARS AGO, you could get $1's worth of groceries for $1—today they cost you $1.74.

That's the heart of the rise in food prices since January, 1941. Not 40.2 percent, as the Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS) says, but 74.2 percent.

It's a real difference, especially when you remember that the Little Steel formula allows you only a 15 percent wage increase to cover all living cost increases since January, 1941.

It's real, and it's based on CIO and AFL studies of actual food budgets, carried out with the aid of thousands of working class housewives, so that Philip Murray was moved to say at last month's CIO Executive Board meeting:

"There is no academic reasoning here, no theorizing with life; you are not living in Washington, writing up a lot of artificialities. You are visiting a woman who understands these problems, who has the responsibility of running a house—and the best economist ever developed in the history of mankind has been the housewife."

Why is the "best economist," the housewife, paying $1.74 for what used to cost $1, and why does the BLS keep coming up with this figure of a 40 percent rather than a 74 percent increase?

According to the joint CIO-AFL cost of living report, based on actual field interviews and studies of thousands of food items, the difference lies in the way the BLS goes about the job of getting its figures on which its Index—and the Little Steel formula—are based.

To begin with, the BLS takes only a limited number of foods into its calculations. This limited number of foods in turn are the foods most firmly price-controlled by the OPA. The OPA doesn't operate nearly so efficiently on foods not in the BLS Index, and naturally they go up much faster.

So here you have a business done

Household Goods Prices Boosted 62 Percent

Household goods have soared a good 62 per cent in price, the CIO-AFL cost of living survey has revealed. This is in contrast to the 27.8 per cent average increase reported by the Bureau of Labor Statistics. The facts speak for themselves.

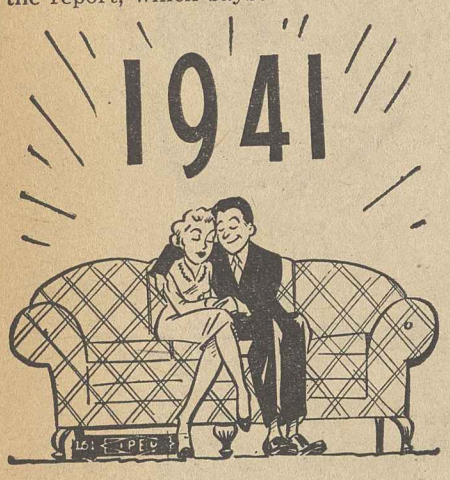
HISTORIANS of the household goods industry—if there are any—had better buy a dozen typewriters and a ton of paper, and hire a dozen stenographers and a statistician to record the various skullduggeries practiced by the trade in extracting a few million extra "honest" dollars from the pockets of the American people during the war.

The practices of the industry—ranging all the way from the elimination of low priced goods to using box wood in "fine" furniture—have increased the cost of such products 62 percent from Jan., 1941, to Dec., 1943, it was reported last week by the CIO and AFL.

BLS Survey Haywire

In a special survey for the Presidential Committee on the Cost of Living, the organizations showed in detailed fashion that the Bureau of Labor Statistics is completely haywire in its estimate of a 27.8 percent average price increase for such goods.

Just what has happened is told by the report, which says:



"In item after item of house furnishings, from sheets and blankets to furniture and kitchen utensils, the two largest mail order houses display in their successive catalogues a characteristic disappearance of the low-cost items, usually after a substantial price rise, accompanied by a shift to a higher price line at inferior quality.

"Thus, in the fall of 1940, Sears Roebuck & Co. sold a cheap 2¾ pound blanket for $4.79. By spring of 1942, this cheap blanket, after rising 20 cents in price, disappeared from the catalogue.

"Meantime, the next higher priced, all-wool blanket, weighing 4 pounds, rose in price from $7.48 in the fall of 1940 to $9.79 in the spring of 1942, and was then slightly reduced in price to $9.40 in the fall of 1943.

"Thus, the purchaser of the $4.79 blanket in 1940 and 1941, if he needs a blanket, now has to buy one for $9.40, an increase of almost 100 percent. And at the same time, the weight of this higher-price blanket was reduced from 4 pounds to 3 and one-quarter pounds, a deterioration in quality and warmth amounting to 25 percent.

Cheap Items Disappear

"The same held true for Montgomery Ward. The cheaper blanket in the $5 class rose to $6 between 1940 and the spring of 1942, and then disappeared from the catalogue so that the consumer was forced to buy the next higher price lines, selling respectively for $10 and $15.

"The same phenomenon has occurred in furniture, accompanied by severe declines in quality. Twin studio couches first rose in price and then disappeared from the catalogues in 1942 and 1943, to be replaced by one-piece double beds at even higher prices.

The report adds:

"So prevalent are upgrading, disappearance of low-end items and deterioration of quality that the Sept., 1943, report of the BLS is forced to admit their existence, although failing to measure their effect on prices.

"The BLS admitted that lower priced merchandise was 'continuing to disappear' and that in furniture there was 'lowering of qualities.' But these admissions—long known in the trade—did not result in any attempt to modify the Index so that it would adequately reflect the major affects of these hidden price advances."

The report says that the BLS uses too few stores to sample price movements—only 202 for household equipment and electrical appliances, despite the fact that there are 25,000 retail outlets in this field.

It prices furniture in 187 retail stores out of a total of 20,000. And it obtains its prices from twice as many mail order and department stores as it does from individual furniture specialty stores, despite the fact that the latter type of outlets handle three times the volume of the other stores.

"The whole effect of this inadequate sampling is to understate actual price advances and to ignore hidden price increases," the joint labor report declares.

Quality deterioration is extreme. Some items have had their usability reduced by as much as 90 or 95 percent.

"Can openers are a case in point. Technicians interviewed for this report stated that can openers now on the market last only one or two weeks, whereas before the war they could be expected to last a year or more.

"Kitchen utensils of all kinds are high in price and are among the most striking examples of quality deterioration. The concensus of opinion of technicians, manufacturers and trade journal experts interviewed for this report is that the range of quality deterioration in household items (excluding furniture) ranges from 25 to 60 percent, with general agreement that an overall figure of 20 percent for the field is conservative.

Furniture Poor

"In furniture, quality deterioration has been almost as extreme. The new beds made with wooden springs are high in price and low in quality. WPB orders permitting the use of metal in springs has not brought back prewar quality standards. Mattresses are made with cotton, or cotton and felt, instead of hair, with consequent marked reduction in quality.

"The quality of the wood used in furniture has deteriorated seriously: Unseasoned, green woods and even packing box materials turn up in high priced furniture sets. Here again the worst quality depreciation has taken place in the lower price brackets, where a good deal of the furniture sold will probably be useless after the war."

wife, because they've been used as the basis for the wage increases permitted under the Little Steel formula of the War Labor Board.

At that, the Little Steel formula doesn't even stack up to the 50 per cent wrong figure of the BLS, since under Little Steel you're only supposed to get a 15 per cent increase in wages to take care of increased living costs.

Why is the BLS figure of 23.4 per cent so far from reality? The joint CIO-AFL report, prepared after prolonged study of the facts—a study that began before the Presidential Committee was set up—gives the reasons.

On food, for example, the BLS figures show only a 40.2 per cent increase, while the reality is 74.2 per cent. How come? Figures, we're told, don't lie—and this is not a case of liars figuring. It's simply a matter of the way you go about getting the evidence on which you base your figures.

The BLS way is inadequate. To begin with, it's limited only to certain foods; many that count heavily in the cost of living aren't included. On the other hand, a kind of double play goes on between the foods the BLS does cover and those that are covered by price control.

Example: the BLS uses sugar to cover all sweet products. Sugar is firmly price-controlled. Jams, jellies, etc., which the BLS doesn't include in its index, aren't firmly controlled, and they're away up in cost as a result.

Quality deterioration is another factor the BLS leaves out of consideration. Yet every housewife knows how shoddy stuff (not only food, but clothing and other things as well) is now sold at quality prices. Grade B eggs with a Grade A price tag are a prime example of this.

The vanishing low-price article of food, clothing and everything else is also well known to every consumer. Month after month, few and fewer low-cost goods can be found; you have to move up into the next bracket to find what you need.

The consumer knows this; but the BLS doesn't, and that again helps to make the 23.4 per cent figure a shadow of the real increase.

BLS reports are limited to a few of the largest cities (34 on everything but food, for which the BLS surveys 56). This means that the index ignores the smaller "boom towns," the suburbs, the outlying areas that have mushroomed up with war industry.

Then there is a large group of miscellaneous factors that the BLS Index ignores almost completely in its findings, though they add up to a considerable slice of the total increases in living costs.

Black markets are completely ignored, the BLS basing its action on a report of the American Statistical Association which blandly says that they "should not be represented in an official index of living costs."

Figures on black markets, of course, are extremely difficult to secure; nevertheless, as the CIO-AFL report points out, they "do increase the actual living costs of workers."

Similarly ignored are wartime changes in the way workers' families have to lay out their money; items such as much larger purchases of bakery products, jams and jellies, etc; due to inability to get sugar for making them at home and lack of time on the part of housewives.

The same is true of eating out.

Food Prices

with mirrors; the OPA selects those foods in the Index for special attention, ignoring the others. The BLS Index doesn't cover them, so they don't figure in the basis for the Little Steel formula.

(The answer to this, of course, is not less price control, but more, as the joint labor report points out, as well as more items in the Index.)

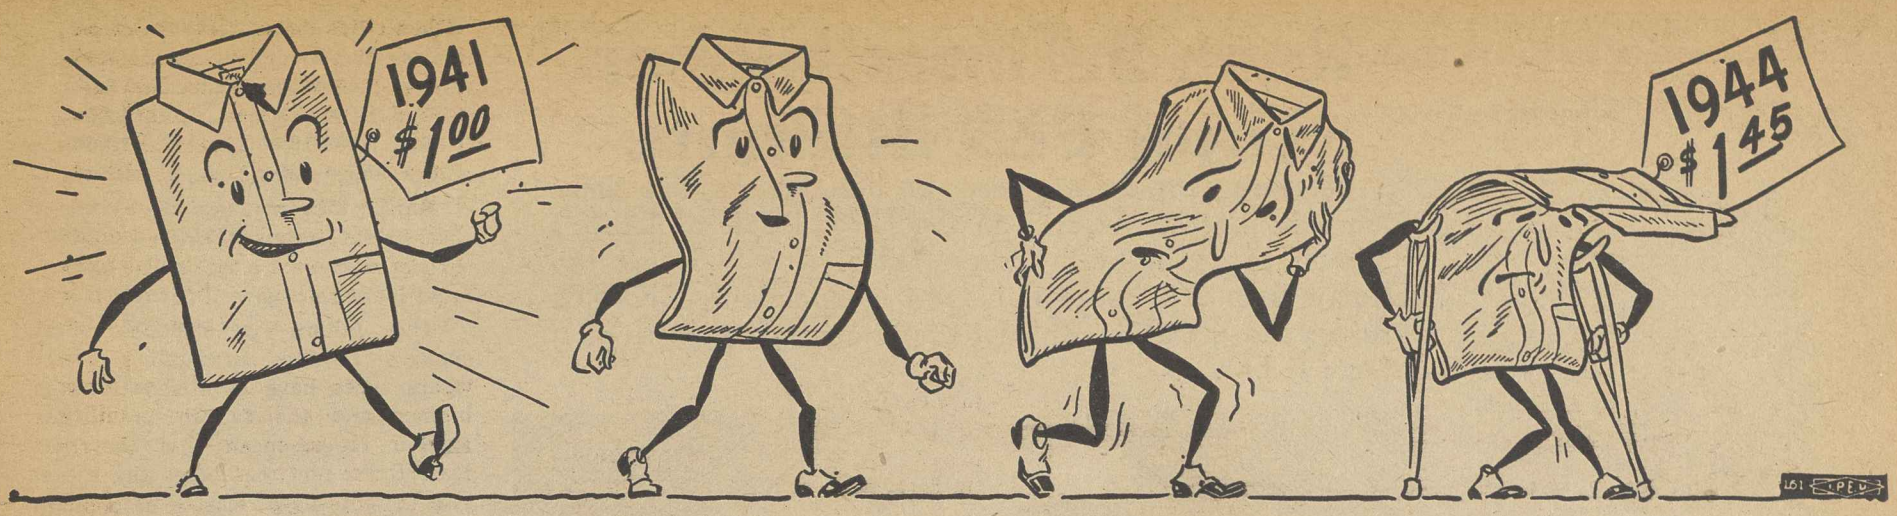
Then there's the matter of quality deterioration—which means that you get less for more money. This item, familiar to every housewife, is almost totally forgotten by the BLS. According to the joint CIO-AFL study, this alone accounts for a nine percent price rise that doesn't figure in the Index.

Don't let a phrase like "quality deterioration" or "up-grading" throw you. Every shopper knows that you get more fat than lean when you buy meat these days, that you pay Grade A prices for Grade B eggs. That is what quality deterioration and up-grading mean—and together they add up to another sizable chunk out of your food budget.

Another and even simpler mechanical failure in the BLS Index accounts for a sizable rise not recorded in the official figures. This is the disappearance of weekend food sales at the big shopping centers. According to the labor report, this item alone adds an un-recorded four percent to your costs.

Then there's the matter of restaurant meals. Due to wartime, millions more people are eating millions more meals outside of their homes; because they have to, not because they like to.

Actually, there's been about a 50 percent increase in meals eaten in restaurants (U. S. Dept. of Agriculture figures). On top of that no attempt whatever was made to control restaurant prices until the spring of 1943, and that control has been sketchy, to put it mildly.



Cost of Clothing Hiked 72.2% from 1941 to '43

The joint CIO-AFL report on the cost of living shows that the cost of clothing—a substantial item in workers' budgets—has risen 72.2 per cent from Jan., 1941 to Dec., 1943. This is in sharp contrast to the 33.7 per cent increase reported by the Bureau of Labor Statistics. Read the facts!

THE COST of workers' clothing went up 72.2 percent from January, 1941, to December, 1943, the two labor members of Pres. Roosevelt's Cost of Living Committee declare in their recommended report to the Committee. This finding, like others, differs drastically from the figures reported by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, the official U. S. agency authorized to compile cost of living figures.

The BLS reports that cost of clothing has increased only 33.7 percent. The government agency's figure was reached on the basis of a study of prices in 137 stores in 34 cities—four stores in each city except New York, where five stores were taken.

Sharply challenging the method by which the BLS reached its figure on increase in clothing costs as inadequate and ignoring important factors particularly in working class buying, the labor members' report takes not one, but three separate approaches. Its final figure of 72.2 percent increase is reached by balancing the results of the three months, all of which reach substantially similar results:

1. The first and most general approach giving the overall change in cost of clothing from 1941 to 1943 shows that while prices went up, the actual amount of goods sold went down.

Commerce Dept. Facts

Basing its findings on Dept. of Commerce figures showing sales in retail apparel stores, and on figures computed by the Federal Reserve Board giving data on production of textile and leather products, the report, by combining these two changes, finds an increase in unit price of 76 percent.

2. In its second approach to the problem of finding out a more realistice figure of actual increase in clothing costs, the report cites results of a mail order survey. This was based on a study of price changes in 153 items as shown by the mail order catalogues of Sears Roebuck and Montgomery Ward.

In the case of each item the cheapest line was selected in the 1940 catalogues and followed through successive catalogues, prices being recorded for each catalogue. If the line was discontinued, the next higher line was taken. In 17 instances, items disappeared completely.

The mail order survey showed that the prices charged for the 136 items still available for pricing in 1943 rose by 71.7 percent. The survey was based on a study of 71 items covered in the Sears catalogues, which increased 71.9 percent in price, and 65 items in the Ward catalogues, which went up 71.4 percent.

"We are confident," states the report, "that this percentage increase of 71.7 is a reliable and conservative measure of the rise in the cost of cheaper grade garments. The figure is reliable because of the size of these concerns."

Deterioration Ignored

3. In its third and most extensive method of studying increase in clothing costs, the report takes up a number of factors arising out of wartime living, ignored by the BLS survey. These include deterioration in quality; trading-up, whereby customers are induced to take higher priced goods by the device of discontinuing the cheaper lines; selling at over-ceiling prices and decrease in mark-down prices and special sales.

Most important of these, declares the report, is deterioration in quality, which it finds is responsible for at least a 20 percent decrease in value.

The report finds that "the quality of low priced clothing items—those commonly purchased by wage-earners and lower salaried workers—has deteriorated by at least 20 percent during the war years. That is, today's expenditure of one dollar for clothing will, on account of quality decline alone, buy only 80 cents worth of wearability. . . .

"A special inquiry conducted for this report among clothing technicians, trade paper writers and manufacturers, found that measured in terms of poorer workmanship and sleazy fabrics, deterioration in the quality of children's and infants' wear has been at least 25 percent.

"In the case of men's clothing, quality deterioration was found to have ranged from 15 to 35 percent, with the greatest drop in wearability taking place in the lower price ranges. In these latter lines, workmanship was worsened and inspection standards lowered. In men's shirts, seconds are being sold as first quality, and cheaper materials are being used for the inside of collars with the result that they cannot be turned."

A special inquiry made for the labor members' report in women's clothing, found quality deterioration even greater, ranging from 30 to 40 percent, with an average of at least 25 percent. Marked deterioration in the fabrics used, especially in cotton and rayon, and poorer workmanship were also found.

"The situation is worse in the lower price lines," states the report. "Linings and interlinings use the poorest wools and cotton mixtures, and the sizes are way below former standards. Wartime changes in supply have brought other forms of quality depreciation.

Taking all these and other factors into account, the report concludes that overall depreciation in the low-price shoes amounts to at least 20 percent.

Related closely to quality deterioration, states the report, is trading-up, which "results essentially from the fact that manufacturers find it more profitable to produce high price lines than low price lines, and dealers to sell them."

The report finds that trading-up, exclusive of quality deterioration, has brought about at least a 12 percent increase in clothing prices during the war years.

Some instances based on the mail order study made for the report are cited:

Girls' all-wool suits, size 14, went up in price from $4.47 in the Sears 1941 spring catalogue to $8.98 in the 1942 spring catalogue and thereafter were not available.

Men's all purpose cotton socks which could be bought from both Sears and Montgomery Ward for seven cents a pair in the spring of 1941, were omitted from the 1942 and 1943 catalogues. The cheapest substitute was a line selling for three pairs for 69 cents.

The cheapest line of men's work shirts, selling for 35 cents in 1941, was not available after that. The next higher line at Sears cost 79 cents in 1942 and 89 cents in 1943.

That the falling off of the cheaper lines constitutes a serious problem is pointed out in the report by a quotation from Economic Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson, who declared recently:

"There exists a patriotic responsibility on the part of all manufacturers of consumers' goods to produce utilitarian, durable products at a cost which the average consumer is able to pay."

Sales of clothing at over-ceiling prices, another factor which the report finds has contributed to the marked rise in clothing costs, "cannot be measured with any accuracy, but we are convinced that it is significant," it states.

Drop in Clothes Quality Hits Poor Hardest

It's the people with the least money who are hit hardest by the wartime rise in the cost of clothing. Quality of low priced clothing items such as wage earners and lower paid salaried workers buy has deteriorated at least 20 per cent.

A worker with $10 to spend on clothes, gets only $8 worth for his money, due to decline in quality.

"In the higher priced, branded items, deterioration may not exceed ten per cent, but in the case of the cheaper, unbranded goods which make up the bulk of production, it ranges from 25 to 40 per cent."

What Quality Deterioration Means to You

Infants' and children's wear, 25 percent.

Men's clothing, 15 to 35 percent.

Women's clothing, 15 to 35 percent.

Women's hosiery, 33 percent.

Shoes, 20 percent.

Rent, Clothing Prices Boosted

Due to wartime crowding, lengthening of hours, and employment of women, many millions of workers are eating in restaurants where they formerly ate at home. The BLS gives this factor a weight of 9 per cent; actually, according to the joint report, it should be figured much higher.

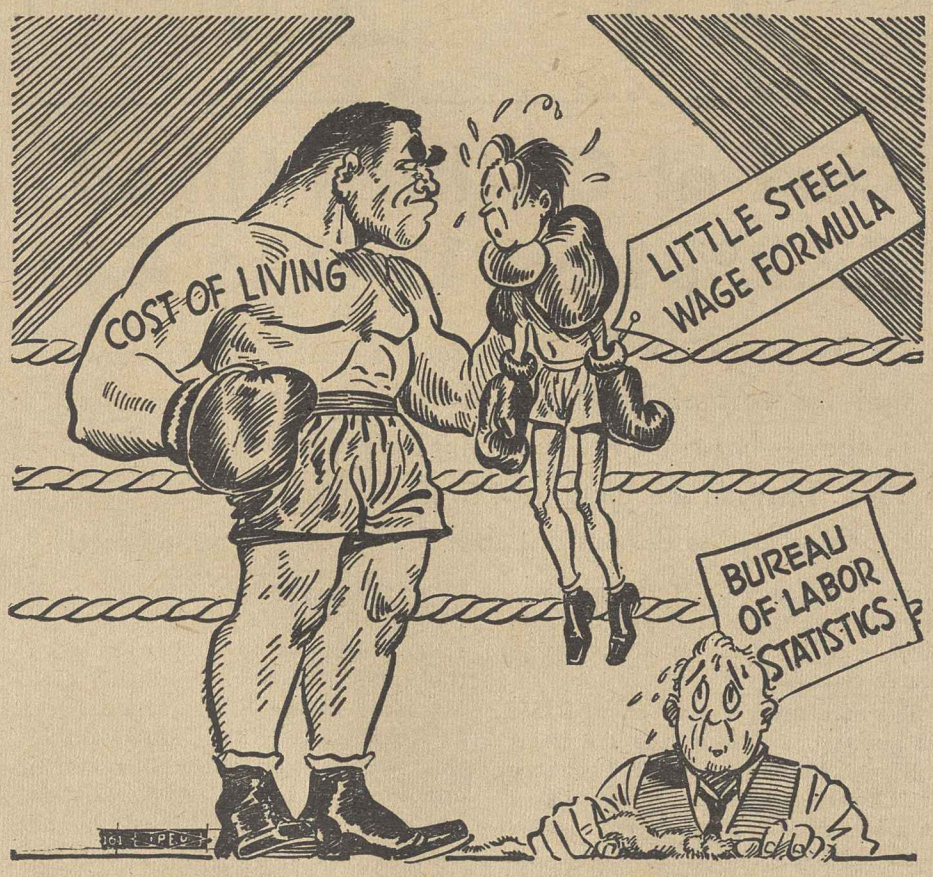
Wartime shifts to new job centers take a heavy toll of expense for moving. According to the BLS itself, some five million people have moved to new jobs; yet the Index does not take this obviously heavy expense into account. And just as it fails to include moving expenses, it also passes over the added expense many workers have through the need to keep up two living places —one for the family and another for themselves in a new location.

These are the main reasons why the official BLS cost of living figures are so wide of the mark. You'll find the details in the stories covering each section of the joint CIO-AFL report in this supplement to The CIO NEWS.

Read them and you'll find out why —if you didn't know before—the Little Steel wage formula has to be junked for something nearer to wartime reality.

Rent 5 Times Higher Than BLS Estimate

Working people are paying, on the average, five times more in rent increases than the U. S. Dept. of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics estimates. The BLS says the figure is only 3 percent, but an independent, CIO-AFL survey shows that it is at least 15 per cent. The challenging facts follow.



THE rap of the landlord's knuckles on the front door is costing the average American worker more than five times the increase estimated by the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics! This startling fact — affecting more than one-sixth of the average worker's total budget—was revealed by the joint CIO-AFL report for the Presidential Committee on the Cost of Living.

The joint CIO-AFL survey shows that the true rise in rents is at least 15 per cent—more than five times as much as the BLS reports.

1. Most of its samples are from large cities—34 to be exact. Most of these haven't been jammed with war workers. Only seven have hung out the standing-room-only sign which labels them "congested production areas."

2. BLS samples of rent increases are taken within city borders. Most increases have occurred in city outskirts and suburban towns. These areas are not sampled by the Index. Nevertheless it takes them into consideration while figuring percentages in connection with population.

Changed Statistics

3. The BLS used to collect rent statistics from real estate interests. Now it collects them from tenants, "in order to get more accurate figures." The former method was used in 1941 and 1942 when rent increases were as thick as flak over Berlin. The statistics were gathered during this period from firms dealing with the more stable rental properties whose prices were not boosted so much as dwellings rented by smaller landlords. Hence, the BLS Index does not adequately reflect the real rent rise for this period.

4. The BLS system fails to take adequately into account the influence of new dwellings on the rental market. This technique of gathering statistics leads the Index in some instances to report "no increase" when actually there has been a rise of 50 per cent!

5. The BLS Index samples family dwelling units only. It makes no effort to include rooming or boarding houses, trailer camps or light housekeeping apartments. Some of the highest increases reported have come from these unsampled dwellings. Rent ceilings are openly violated as war workers flood into boom towns, hard up for lodging and willing to pay almost any price to get it. OPA enforcement in this field is far weaker than in any other.

6. The Index has failed to record wartime changes in housing conditions. Landlords are evading OPA regulations by charging more for badly furnished rooms, by failure to record rentals, and by sub-divisions of apartments. They have "jacked up" sale prices and have forced tenants to buy.

In dealing further with the failure of BLS to report rent rises in smaller cities, the labor report on the cost of living says:

"Between September, 1940, and January, 1942, surveys made by the BLS, OPA and WPA show that the average rise in rentals varies inversely with the size of the cities.

"At one end of the scale are the 34 BLS cities, which show an average increase of a little over 4 per cent in this period.

"At the other end of the scale are cities or towns below 5,000 population, which show an average increase of over 22 per cent in the same period."

Size of City	Pct. Rise in Average Rent, Sept., '40-Jan., '42
34 BLS cities (over 100,000 population..	4.0%
Other cities above 100,000..	5.5%
Cities, 50,000-100,000.....	7.5%
Cities, 25,000-50,000.....	9.0%
Cities, 10,000-25,000.....	17.0%
Cities, 5,000-10,000.....	19.0%
Cities under 5,000.....	22.0%

During this same period—September, 1940, to January, 1942—the BLS statistics showed a national average rent increase of only 3 per cent!

"The failure to include rental changes in the surrounding areas, where rents have been shown to be higher, and the failure to include smaller cities, mean that the BLS Rent Index underestimates the actual rise in rents by at least 8 per cent in the three-year period," the joint labor report states.

Hits BLS Error

The labor report is particularly strong in condemnation of BLS error because of failure to report room rent increases. Quoting Business Week, the report says: "The one place where OPA considers that it has not done a good enforcement job has been on hotels and rooming houses."

Rooming house keepers, the labor report declares, rarely keep records; many homes have been converted to rooming and boarding houses in wartime, and it is almost impossible to obtain an accurate designation of an identical room or service for purposes of rent control.

"This means that, particularly in the war centers and boom towns, there is practically no rent ceiling for workers who have poured into these towns. Norfolk, Va., is an excellent example — neither rooming houses nor the cheaper hotels, which are the temporary and often duration homes of thousands of war workers, are under effective rent control.

Story of An Average Worker

By CIO PRES. PHILIP MURRAY

THIS IS THE STORY of a steelworker, and he might be an automobile worker, an electrical worker, or any other kind of worker.

He has a wife and two children and he makes a round trip every day to his work, down to the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co. in Indiana Harbor, 15 miles, and it costs him 30 cents a day for transportation.

Charlie pays $18.21, or something like that, every week for living costs, and included in that $18.21 is 50 cents that he pays each day for his lunch at the steel mill. The over-all cost of each member of the family for food alone is 66 cents a day, 22 cents per meal per person, and that includes the 50 cents that Charlie pays for his lunch at the steel mill every day.

Does any one on this Board think that Charlie is extravagant in paying 22 cents per meal? Is he getting a lot of meat out of that? Is he buying a lot of vitamins? You will pay 22 cents in the corner drug store down here for a vitamin pill, but Charlie expends his 22 cents per meal per person. He must be very frugal; he must be thrifty.

His wife purchased three dresses in a period of three months. They were utility dresses. She wore the dress to go to church and she wore it to go marketing, and it was used as a house dress as well. She bought three of them at $2.85. Is that extravagant? Does that aggravate the inflationary spiral?

Yes, Charlie got three haircuts during that period of three months. He got a haircut a month. If I remember the figures correctly, he averaged $1.65 for the three haircuts. He always shaved himself; he didn't indulge in any tonsorial luxuries. It cost him $5.15 for books, papers and magazines. A fairly intelligent fellow, he likes to read, and he didn't buy too much reading matter for the three months' period when he only paid $5.15.

It cost him about $3.00 for tobacco, a dollar a month. Was that extravagant?

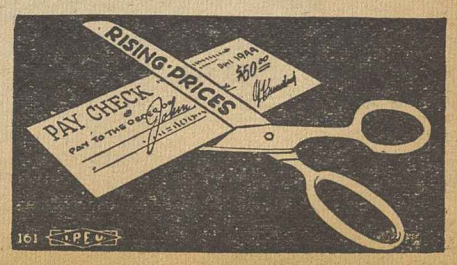
He had no dental care during that three months' period for either himself, his wife or the children. He could not afford it.

His wife became ill and it cost Charlie $26.00 to bring a neighbor woman in to give some attention to his wife. These were extraordinary expenses, and Charlie did not lose a day; he worked 48 hours every week; he wasn't sick. He got all these large, extra take-home pay envelopes, every little bit of it, because he worked every single, solitary hour during that three months' period that could be made available for him.

We could enumerate a lot of other details of expenditures. He had no automobile. He didn't buy any gas, but in the three months' period he did earn $718.00.

I overlooked one thing, and that is he bought an $18.75 bond each month, but at the end of the three months' period, after enumerating all of these very, very frugal expenses, Charlie was $69.00 in the hole.

True, he paid his taxes, some Federal taxes, and he paid a state tax. You are required to do that in the state of Illinois. He did pay $2 to his church during those three months, and, remarkable as it may seem, he made a contribution of $2 for war relief. He paid $3 for dues over the three months' period, but at the end of the three months he was $69.00 in the hole.



Here's the Score On Soldiers' Vote Record

This is the record of those Representatives who were willing to stand up and be counted on the service vote issue, and of those who weren't. The vote, taken Feb. 2, was on the technical but extremely important question of whether or not to have a rollcall vote on the Lucas-Worley bill (S 1612) which would provide for a simple, uniform Federal system of distributing and collecting ballots to servicemen and women.

This revealing vote to ban a rollcall drew so much criticism that the polltax-Republican gang feared public reaction, and later changed their stand to record their votes on the soldier ballot bill, as recorded on page one.

In this case, those who voted "YEA" voted to bar a rollcall, and therefore in effect against giving the servicemen and women the vote in the 1944 election.

Those who voted "NAY" were willing to go on record. It means they were not afraid to stand up and be counted, as President Roosevelt last week challenged the House to do.

WHAT WOULD a wounded soldier think of you if he could hear you say: "I can't afford to buy an extra War Bond?"

He might remind you that he couldn't "afford" to go to war! But he went, and now he's making more sacrifices . . . for you. No wonder he expects you to do something that will help him!

Especially when all you're asked to do is to buy an extra $100 War Bond this month. So check over your budget . . . see if you can't swing at least an extra $100 . . . or $200 . . . or $300 . . . or even $500 for extra War Bonds. You'll find that you can . . . and it's no sacrifice, either, for War Bonds are the best investment in the world today!

CIO Auxiliaries Urge U.S. Army Vote

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5—Twenty Auxiliary women from six states, all of them with close relatives in the armed services, came to Washington this week at the call of the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO to impress on their Senators and Congressmen the need for a uniform federal ballot for our servicemen.

They delivered a signed statement of their position to the Republican leaders of the House and Senate which concluded:

"We ask you, as a national leader of the Republican Party, for a clear and unequivocal statement in favor of the Lucas-Worley bill. Otherwise, the Republican party will be known as the party which tried to deny the vote to our servicemen and women."

They saw their Senators and Representatives and with the exception of Senator Taft of Ohio, were courteously received. Then the Ohio delegation asked Taft to support a federal ballot his face grew red, the veins stood out on his neck, he pounded the table with his fist, and said "absolutely not."

Taft called the drive for a federal ballot an "attempt to steal the election" and said "the reason the CIO is for it is because they want a fourth term for Roosevelt." With that he walked off.

At the end of their first day's work, the women met in the Caucus Room of the Old House Office Building to compare notes. They found that the opponents of the federal ballot all said that they wanted the servicemen to vote for all offices on state ballots. But when the delegations brought out the practical impossibility of distributing individual state ballots to men and women scattered all over the world, their opposition boiled down to mean that the vote for our armed forces would mean a fourth term for Roosevelt.

At the end of their second day's work, the delegation met again in the Board Room of the CIO building where CIO Acting Legislative Director Bob Lamb impressed upon them the important role the auxiliaries can play in the CIO political action campaign, especially in reaching out to the other organizations in our communities and getting their assistance.

As a result of their experience, the delegates decided that each one must report not only to her own auxiliary, but wherever possible to unions and councils, too, on what she had learned in Washington.

The delegates resolved to urge the immediate launching of a registration campaign in their communities to ensure a tremendous labor vote in the primaries and in the elections. And they decided to urge the establishment of machinery in all auxiliaries so that more delegations could respond to emergency calls from Washington and see first hand the urgent need for electing in 1944 a Congress responsive to the will of the people.

Faye Stephenson of Cleveland, president of the auxiliary congress, whose two daughters have husbands in the armed forces, led the delegation.

BATTLE FOR BALLOTS: Servicemen should be allowed to vote, CIO Auxiliary women told Congress this week. Among a delegation of 20 which came to the Capital to press for a federal soldiers' ballot were: Mrs. Faye Stephenson, president of the CIO Congress of Women's Auxiliaries, signing the petition for soldiers' votes; and, left to right, Mrs. Louella Wilson, Baltimore; Mrs. Catherine Lynn, North Tonawanda, N. Y., and Mrs. Eleanor Oestereicher, Gary, Ind.

Food Subsidy Issue Hot Again This Week

Washington, Feb. 5—The issue of subsidies to keep food prices down and food production up will come to a head some time this week, according to reports from the Senate.

At issue is the Bankhead bill (S1458), which would choke off all subsidies by June 30, 1944, while tapering them off from even their present levels before then.

Labor and President Roosevelt are opposed to the Bankhead bill, want subsidies to continue. A minimum of $1.6 billion is needed even to hold food prices at present levels. Any measure that cuts off subsidies will mean a quick food price rise of another 10 percent, on top of the 74 percent increase since 1941.

Action: wire both your Senators at once. Tell them work and vote against the Bankhead Bill, for removal of its section 3 that bans use of subsidies for food, for a sound subsidy program of at least $1.6 billion for the year.

WLB Takes Jurisdiction In Steel Case

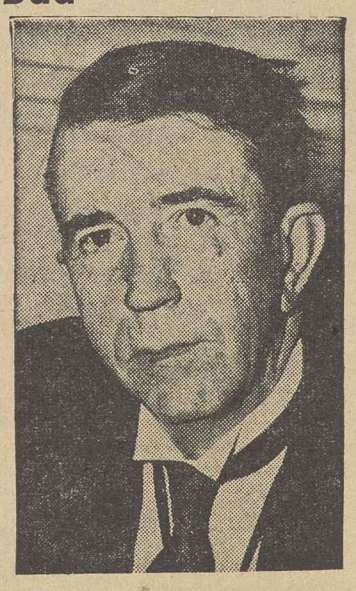
Washington, Feb. 5—The Natl. War Labor Board this week accepted jurisdiction over the dispute between the United Steelworkers of America, representing 700,000 workers, and about 500 steel companies.

Main point at issue is the USA demand for a 17 cents an hour wage increase to meet the cost of rise in the cost of living, which has gone far beyond the 15 per cent wage rise allowed under the Little Steel Formula.

Among other demands for the WLB to consider are: establishment of a guaranteed minimum wage based on 40 hours' earnings a week, elimination of the North-South pay differential, severance pay, vacations and shift differentials.

The Good and the Bad

POLL TAX FOE: The Senate is still stalling on HR 7, the anti-poll tax bill introduced by Rep. Vito Marcantonio (ALP, N. Y.), above, and already passed by the House. Get busy and let your Senator know you want him to vote for HR 7. (Federated Pictures.)



STILL HATES LABOR: Rep. Howard Smith (D., Va.), above, co-author of the vicious anti-labor Smith-Connally bill, is still harassing labor. The house committee to investigate executive agencies, headed by Smith, has asked Congress to strip the WLB of its authority to order mantenance of membership.

Runoff Due At Douglas Plane Plants

Los Angeles, Feb. 5—Run-off elections will be held in the near future by the National Labor Relations Board at the two giant Douglas aircraft plants at Long Beach and Santa Monica to determine if the CIO United Automobile Workers can complete their near victory in the first elections held last week.

The CIO union carried a plurality of the votes cast at the big Long Beach plant, polling 46.6 per cent to 19.9 per cent for the AFL machinists union and 33.6 per cent for no union. At the Santa Monica plant the vote was 34.3 per cent for the UAW-CIO, 26 per cent for the AFL, and 39.7 per cent for no union.

Child Care Crisis Calls For Action

By ELEANOR FOWLER
Sec.-Treas., CIO Women's Auxiliaries

There is a child care crisis. The Federal Works Agency has no funds for new projects. New applications are being passed upon and approved as they come in but the applicants are being notified that funds will not be available until Congress approves a new appropriation.

So far Federal Works has been able to meet the needs of all the projects that are now in operation but even those will be in danger of closing for lack of funds unless there is fairly speedy action.

In the very near future the House Appropriations Committee will be considering a request for a new appropriation. We don't know yet just how much will be requested. But we should certainly waste no time in getting letters them to support a new appropriation for War Public Works and War Public Services.

If we're going to keep the working mothers we have on the job, and meet the government needs for at least a million new women to replace men called to the services and expand production for the offensive in Europe, we must have expanded child care services.

The November annual Conference of the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries adopted a fine child care program. We called upon the Federal Works Agency to make a number of changes in administrative procedures in order to put that program into effect. We've discussed that program with Mrs. Florence Kerr, assistant to the Administrator at Federal Works, and we believe that all of the changes we urged have been made.

MINIMUM FEES

In the first place funds will be allocated for group programs for infant care. In fact we know of one such project in a trailer camp in up-state New York which is already functioning with four infants to a trailer. But so far very few applications for such projects have come in.

In the second place fees have been reduced to a maximum of 50 cents a day—and may be reduced to the cost of the food if that is necessary to ensure maximum use of the facilities by the working mothers who need them.

And finally we know from reports that the extended school programs for children of working mothers now in operation are not being successful for children over the age of 10. Why? Well, children that age have friends. If their friends are not children of working mothers, they are not eligible for the extended school program and the result is that none of the children use it.

This means we have a double responsibility. It's our job to see that our Boards of Education, Boards of Public Welfare and other community agencies submit applications to meet our child care needs. We must spread the word on what facilities can be provided with Federal assistance and press for action to get projects in.

But unless new Federal funds are appropriated, we won't get the funds for those projects, and we must spread the word on that too. Our Congressmen should hear not only from CIO members, but from all their constituents who understand the war need for services to children of working mothers, urging speedy approval of a new appropriation.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5—Two more CIO women this week broke through the chauvinism that retards their sex to make good at their chosen jobs—one as a "whistle punk" in a West Coast logging camp!

The first was Shirley Mislove, a member of the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers Union, who has been chosen as business manager of UE Local 1111 at the Allen-Bradley Co., Milwaukee, Wis. She's the first full-time woman representing UE in the state, according to the Wisconsin CIO NEWS.

SHIRLEY MISLOVE

The other story involves Mrs. Maude Mrak, and is entitled "Out of the Tavern Business into the Brush," by the Intl. Woodworker, official organ of the CIO Woodworkers of America.

Mrs. Mrak, a "whistle punk" on a logging operation near Aberdeen, Wash., is one of the few "lady loggers" in existence, the paper reported. She's a member of the union, of course.

"Sister Maude decided after Pearl Harbor that she must get into some essential war work and having been a devotee of the out-of-doors she chose logging," the Woodworker stated.

WASN'T SO EASY

"But it wasn't as easy as it sounds. She had quite a bit of trouble convincing the grizzled old men of the brush that she belonged out there. But by her work—which ranks with the best of them—she has won the admiration of all and is now accepted into that select fraternity.

"Sister Mrak's abilities aren't confined just to whistle punking. She can handle many jobs and has set chokers, helped on the landing, and rig up and has actually climbed the spar tree.

"This work can't be recommended for all girls. Sister Maude had one bad fall when she was new and her corks fouled which put her in the hospital for some time.

"Another time she was standing between two stumps when a line broke and if she hadn't ducked she might have been sent to Pauline Bunyan's heaven.

"However, Sister Mrak likes her work and does a good job. She has a 12-year-old boy and finds time to run a home on the side."

A letter a week to some union man on the fighting fronts is the least that any CIO member should write. Let the boys who are giving their lives for the cause of democracy hear what the unions on the home front are doing to help them preserve it!

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

Canadian UAW Dir. George Burt announces: Brantford Massey-Harris: CIO 1039, Industrial Council 383; Weston Massey-Harris: CIO 884, Industrial Council 326. Previous votes were won at Toronto Massey-Harris and Brantford Cockshutt Plough. The only other large plant not under UAW-CIO contract is Hamilton Int. Harvester, which has an agreement with USA. The winning of these last two elections virtually completes organization of the agricultural implement industry in Ontario.

Gas, Coke Victories

Robert Edwards, Sub-Reg. Dir., Huntington, W. Va., reports: Domestic Coke, Fairmont, W. Va.; UGCCWA-CIO 46, District 50 35. B. T. Wolford conducted this drive. Walter Harris, Dir., UGCCWA drive, announces: Atlas Powder, Ravenna, Ohio: CIO 142, AFL 31. Reg. Dir. Harry Dowl was in charge.

Ben Henry, Reg. Dir., Iowa, reports: Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers won an election in four brick plants in Mason City. Several previous attempts have been made to organize these plants and in spite of the company using political influence to connive with the WLB to get a Form 10 approved just before election, the workers voted for the union.

Frank Carmichael, Reg. Dir., Boston, announces: Metropolitan Life Insurance agents: UOPWA-CIO 547, Federation of Metropolitan Agents 294, no union 74.

G. Geo. DeNucci, Sub-Reg. Dir., Columbus, reports: Office Workers, Marion Steam Shovel Co., Marion, Ohio: USA-CIO 107, against 34. USA Dist. Dir. Howard N. Porter was in charge.

Geo. Craig, Reg. Dir., Philadelphia, reports: Union Boiler & Mfg. Co., Lebanon, Pa.: USA-CIO 42, against 7. Birdsboro Steel Foundry & Machine Co., Birdsboro, Pa.: USA-CIO 1140, company union 271.

Congratulations to Thomas

On January 28, friends of R. J. Thomas paid a fine tribute to his five years of splendid leadership and devoted service as president of the UAW. The banquet was held at the Book-Cadillac Hotel, Detroit, and the hall was filled to capacity. A number of beautiful presents were presented to both Pres. Thomas and Mrs. Thomas. Many distinguished people were there to pay respect to his splendid leadership in this great, powerful union. Sec-Treas. Carey and the writer represented Pres. Murray who, on account of the CIO Executive Board session, could not be present.

In five years' time Pres. Thomas and associate officers have built this union from a tax-paying membership of less than 100,000, with the union torn asunder with factionalism, to a membership approaching a million and a half, with more unity prevailing in its organization than at any time in its history.

I have had the pleasure of serving with Pres. Thomas prior to his becoming president and all the time he has been president. He truly typifies the auto worker. His rugged honesty and frankness appeals to them. Congratulations to a great leader of a great union.

Says U. S. Must Provide Jobs If Industry Fails

Cleveland, Feb. 5—Jobs for all ablebodied men and women at established wage levels must be provided after the war by the government "if to any extent industry fails to provide full employment," declared Sec.-Treas. George F. Addes of the CIO United Auto Workers in an address to Cleveland civic organizations.

Addes blasted the postwar plans of big business spokesmen like Chairman Alfred P. Sloan of General Motors Corp. and of the Committee for Economic Development, which contemplate a big reserve of unemployed.

What this country needs for full employment is an annual national income of 250 billion dollars, Addes maintained. The Sloan liniment for postwar income is thinned down to 100 billion, Addes pointed out.

"I am sure that Mr. Sloan's proposals are not the kind of morale medicine which one would prescribe for the men and women on the assembly lines of American war industry," Addes said. "Mr. Sloan's message to the aircraft workers was that 19 out of every 20 now employed would be looking for new jobs, that one out of two employed in the automotive field would be unemployed after the war."

Expect 5-Day Week

Fascists Cause South American Crisis; Labor Meet Called

By OWEN ROCHE

Special Wire to Allied Labor News

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 27 (ALN)—The Confederation of Latin American Workers (CTAL) today issued invitations to U. S. and Canadian labor to attend an emergency CTAL executive council meeting in Montevideo February 15 "to decide on necessary action concerning the serious crisis in South America." In a special message to the CIO, AFL and Canadian trade unions, the CTAL warned that "the fascist-reactionary combination" based in Argentina "threatens to provoke chaos and inter-American war at a time when all forces are needed to defeat Nazi Germany and Japan."

The message was signed by CTAL Pres. Vicente Lombardo Toledano and Vice-President Bernardo Ibanez and Fidel Velazquez, the latter two being also general secretaries respectively of the Confederation of Chilean Workers (CTCH) and the Confederation of Mexican Workers.

In a similar message sent to affiliates in 16 Latin American countries, including Bolivia, the CTAL leaders warned of "the grave South American situation and the likelihood of new coups coinciding with a possible Argentine attack against Brazil."

Referring to Argentina's severance of relations with the Axis, Toledano said in an interview:

"The rupture of relations does not lessen the danger emanating from Argentine fascism and the democracies should not maintain relations with Argentina until civil rights are restored. A rupture with Franco might mean something. Yesterday's step, however, results from democratic pressure and is undoubtedly a victory in the fight against the Axis."

ARGENTINE CONSPIRACY

He warned of the existence of an Argentine-based military conspiracy, operating through America Alerta, which plans to make Latin America a fascist empire opposing the United States and "subject to a clerico-fascist dictatorship like Spain."

At the same time Toledano made public the acceptance by Maj. Gualberto Villarroel, head of Bolivia's military junta, of a cabled request that the CTAL be allowed to send a delegate to investigate conditions in his country. It is expected that either Toledano or Ibanez will go to Bolivia for the CTAL.

Ibanez, who arrived here this week from the U. S., said that on his return trip to Chile he will attempt to enter Bolivia in order to deliver a $2500 gift from the CIO to the victims of the Catavi massacre of Dec. 21, 1942.

Ibanez told Allied Labor News that the CTCh will be officially represented at the London world labor conference. He said that he "lamented" the AFL's decision this week not to attend the London meeting. He stressed his own complete personal support of Toledano.

Replying to a question on the possibility of a fascist coup d'etat in Chile, Ibanez said: "Unity of the democratic forces there makes a coup most unlikely." He strongly denied reports of a split within the CTCh.

China Reactionaries Block Aid to Fighting Guerrillas

CHUNGKING, Dec. 15 (by airmail) (ALN)—Madame Sun Yat-Sen, widow of the founder of the Chinese Republic, today called on U. S. workers "to make known their desire that the men who fight fascism behind the Japanese lines—the Chinese guerrillas, armed miners and railway workers—should get their fair share of weapons and supplies sent by our allies." Charging that "reactionary forces" in China are blockading the guerrilla areas, Madame Sun said in a message to U. S. trade unionists:

"American labor can best express its interest in China's resistance by insisting that the products of its efforts and the gifts that it makes be equally distributed to every force in China, wherever situated, that is actively engaged in operations against Japan—and to no force that is otherwise engaged."

Pointing out that U. S. workers have a direct interest in China's resistance because "the more effectively she fights, the shorter the war against Japan will be and the less cost in American lives," Madame Sun continued:

"Chinese resistance has been greatest at times when and in places where democracy has been strongest, where the people's initiative has been encouraged, and where the people's war—the only weapon with which an economically backward and relatively unarmed country can beat back a better equipped invader—has been given the freest rein.

CHARGES OPEN TREASON

"China's resistance has faltered when reactionary forces have committed open treason by going over to the enemy, or made the enemy's task easier by suppressing the people and their initiative. That is why American labor has a stake in China's democracy.

"The Chinese people are strong in defense of their own soil, as proved by their resistance through seven years. But reaction and fascism in China are strong also. This is proved by the betrayal of Wang Ching-Wei and of many army generals, by the diversion of part of our national army to the task of blockading and 'guarding' the guerrilla areas, by the fact that some still hold private profit above the national interest, by the oppression of the peasantry and by the absence of a true labor movement in most of our territory.

"American labor can express its interest in China's democracy by going on record against the threat of civil war, which some Chinese reactionaries are preparing in order to destroy a democratic sector of our struggle. That sector is the guerrilla bases in North Shensi and behind the enemy lines where the labor movement is encouraged and where many detachments of armed workers cooperate with the guerrillas.

"Let the first step toward democracy be the lifting of the inhuman blockade which prevents wounded fighters in the guerrilla armies, that have inflicted such a large part of all Japanese casualties, from receiving vital medical supplies."

OPA Group Hits Labor Depart's Statistics

San Francisco, Feb. 5—(FP)—Revision of U. S. Labor Dept. statistics to make them reflect accurately the rising cost of living was demanded by the conference of northern California labor organized by the labor advisory committee, Office of Price Administration.

Delegates heard an eloquent plea for a boycotting of black markets from Pres. John Shelley of the San Francisco Central Labor Council. Patronage of black markets, he said, is the same as scabbing in a strike.

Dies Probe Phoney, D. C. 'Post' Says

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5—"That man" from Texas—Congressman Martin Dies—got a taste of his own medicine this week when the conservative Washington POST put him on the pan for his threatened attack against the CIO Political Action Committee.

Discussing the proposed investigation and a $75,000 appropriation by the House of Representatives to aid Dies' dirty work, the POST said editorially:

"We wonder on what basis the House permits him to do this. Is political action un-American? Or is there anything subversive in the voluntary association of like-minded men and women for furtherance of their political objectives?

"If the CIO organization in any way violates the law governing election practices, we have a Dept. of Justice to bring it to account. Mr. Dies' intervention is impertinent and unwarranted.

"The Dies Committee has now spent well over half a million dollars of public funds in the investigation of groups and individuals who are 'un-American' within the chairman's curious definition of that term.

SORRY COMMENTARY

"It is a sorry commentary on the character of our Congressmen that only one of them, Mr. Marcantonio of New York, spoke in opposition to this appropriation. 'I submit,' he said, 'that on the basis of the past and present record of this committee, it will contribute only to disunity and confusion.'

"There is certainly no reason to expect better of it. Worse may be anticipated from the proposed interference with a basic right of citizenship. One can conclude only that the House, in approving this interference, was engaging in political activity itself."

Canada CIO Membership 250,000

Ottawa, Ont.—Membership of the Canadian Congress of Labor (CIO) has now passed the 250,000 mark making it the largest labor organization in Canada, Sec.-Treas. Pat Conroy of the CCL announced this week.

Membership of the Trades & Labor Congress (AFL) was reported at the convention last Fall as 190,000.

Seniority Plan Aids War Output

Evansville, Ind., Feb. 5—A plan aiding the drive for full use of manpower for war production, and for enabling workers to remain on jobs where their skills are best being used in the war effort, has been adopted by United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers Local 813 in cooperation with the Sunbeam Electric Mfg. Co.

It is the first time such a plan has been put into effect in the Evansville area, although similar plans have been used elsewhere.

An agreement signed by the UE and the Sunbeam management provides that employes who are laid off at Sunbeam, due to the recent cut-back in the production of small arms in which this company was engaged, and who have secured jobs in other essential industry, may remain on those jobs so long as they are using their best skills, without losing their Sunbeam seniority.

The agreement states that both parties "desire to contribute to the successful prosecution of the war, and to cooperate with the War Manpower Commission in applying the principle of using manpower to the best advantage." It applies to all those former employes who may be recalled by Sunbeam before the expiration of their normal seniority period.

Such employes who are working in essential industry other than Sunbeam and are employed at a skill equal to that on which they were previously employed by Sunbeam, will not be required to leave their new jobs unless Sunbeam would employ the worker at the same or higher skill. They, therefore, will not lose Sunbeam seniority as a result of not returning when called back.

Canada Labor Fights Plan To Check Growth

OTTAWA, Ont.—Kept secret until the Canadian Government decided what features of them it would adopt, the reports of the National War Labor Board on labor relations in the Dominion were made public this week amid growing evidence that labor's claims were again being rejected.

The majority report by Mr. Justice McTague recommended compulsory collective bargaining, a family bonus plan and incorporation of the cost of living bonus into basic wages. The Government has accepted these proposals in the main despite labor's united objection.

A labor code is in stages of formulation and rumors indicate that it is even further designed to hamper the growth of genuine labor organizations than any measure introduced heretofore. A family bonus plan will also be started.

Completely ignored was the independent report of J. L. Cohen, K. C., former member of the Labor Board. He proposed a labor code with teeth in it to eliminate company unions, emphatic opposition to a family bonus scheme, removal of restrictions on adjustment of wages up to 50 cents an hour, equal pay for equal work, payment of the full cost of living bonus of $4.60 weekly to all workers, exemption of overtime pay from taxation, and a conference on labor-management committees.

REPORT BANS LABOR MEN

The majority report proposed a labor relations board which did not include representatives of management or labor and with penalties for both groups under the Defence of Canada Regulations. The independent report would include representatives of both groups on a board with enforcement in its hands rather than under the DFC regulations.

The majority report admitted "the recognition of the right (of collective bargaining) has been far from universal. By far the majority of employers have resisted it over the period. Generally speaking, the great mass of employers, until comparatively recent years have employed all weapons in their power to resist and discourage the trade union movement.

"When union organization is in process in a plant, employers who have never before recognized the union principle adopt the expedient of inspiring the formation of an independent company union and even financing it or they promptly make agreements with shop committees selected by themselves."

The majority report also declared that the National and Regional Boards should have the power to reduce "unsound rates."

ASK MINIMUM WAGE

The proposal to inaugurate family allowances before a minimum wage was established was condemned by Sec.-Treas. Pat Conroy of the Canadian Congress of Labor.

Murphy Heads Group To Aid Jews

Washington, Feb. 5—The fight against fascist-like anti-Semitism was aided this week by formation of a nationally prominent 13-man committee to combat it. The committee is headed by Supreme Court Justice Frank Murphy.

Prominent among members of the group are: Wendell L. Willkie, vice-chairman; Asst. U. S. Atty. Gen. Norman H. Littell, secretary; and Vice-Pres. Henry A. Wallace, Governors Leverett Saltonstall (Mass.), Walter S. Goodland (Wis.), Herbert B. Maw (Utah), and Pres. Eric A. Johnson of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, Protestant Bishop Henry St. George Tucker, and Auxiliary Bishop Bernard J. Sheil of Chicago.

Justice Murphy, in announcing the committee, said that Nazi propaganda "is breeding the germs of hatred against the Jews" in this country. Purposes of the committee will be:

1. To rally public conscience in the U. S. against persecution of Jews abroad and "in support of sustained and vigorous action by our government and the United Nations to rescue those who may yet be saved."

2. To cooperate with like-minded people in other countries in rescue work and "in warning to Hitler and his agents in Axis and satellite countries that they will be punished for their crimes against mankind."

3. To combat hateful propaganda against American Jews.

4. To bring public opinion to bear against public officials who fail to oppose the persecution of Jews.

CIO Aluminum Workers Hit Cutback Chaos, Urge Plan for Full Production

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5—Demanding to know how we are going to produce 65% more planes in 1944 than in 1943 with less aluminum, Pres. Nicholas A. Zonarich of the CIO Aluminum Workers this week made a sharp attack on "hit and miss" cutbacks in the industry and called for adoption of a "real program" to end existing confusion.

Zonarich, citing a number of instances in which plants were shut down following conflicting statements by War Production Board and OWI officials, said, "The officials responsible for issuing these orders just didn't know what was going to happen, nor when.

"Cutbacks are wholly unjustified until such time as a real program is determined. That program is still a mere dream, but the cutbacks go on," he declared.

He revealed that while production is being cut here we are continuing to buy Canadian aluminum "under the original Jesse Jones contract." This contract, entered into by an RFC subsidiary, gave the Aluminum Co. of Canada more than $65 million to construct a dam and build an aluminum plant. The AAC, which is owned by the same interests controlling the Aluminum Co. of America, was to repay the loan by selling its metal to the U. S.

WAGES CUT

Zonarich said that Canadian metal is going into reserve government stockpiles, which have as yet to receive a single pound domestically produced. "Instead," he declared, "plants are closed and men downgraded with substantial cuts in wages."

Questioning whether a recent WPB policy calling for the accumulation of a three-month stockpile of aluminum was being carried out, Zonarich said such a policy would avoid cutbacks.

While the WPB aluminum division is "shouting" about a surplus on the one hand, it is refusing to release metal for the production of some civilian commodities such as kitchen utensils on the other hand, he said.

Behind the welter of conflicting statements over the precious war metal lies the almost perfect monopoly control of the Aluminum Co. of America over the industry and its unwillingness to permit expansion of the productive capacity of the industry for fear of driving down prices and endangering its monopoly hold, observers said.

Army Paper Blasts Drive Against Labor

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12—Despite phonied-up stories to the contrary, the men in the armed forces are not itching to return home so they can "square" things with workers who are union men, as most of the daily press would like its readers to believe.

"Soldiers are Workingmen, Too," is the title of the lead editorial in the Jan. 15 issue of the Midpacifican, "Army Newspaper in Hawaii," which we quote in full below:

"Note must be taken of the way certain periodicals reaching soldiers have begun a campaign against labor. This is not new. As in the present case, such drives are based on half-truths, omissions and a paternalistic 'this hurts me more than it does you' attitude.

"Soldiers, generally, are concerned about this unfair carping. Most of them are working men. It is estimated that nearly a million are trade union members.

BULWARK AGAINST FASCICM

"It is well to remember that the trade union movement is one of the first bulwarks against Fascism. This is proven by the fact that the unions were among the first to feel the iron heel of the Fascists in Germany, Italy and Japan.

"Organized labor, with a few minor exceptions and particularly that of John L. Lewis, has put itself unstintingly behind the war effort. This is proven by U. S. Department of Labor figures on the few manhours lost on account of strikes. Labor has won the Battle of Production in 1943. And as to what every soldier thinks of Lewis, that needs no comment.

"Any time a labor dispute is reported, the published version, with few exceptions, is colored in favor of the employer. Yet there are always two sides to any dispute. In these days the working people need a few dollars more to cover the ever rising costs of living.

"Judging from the financial reports in the Wall Street Journal, industry is well able to comply with such demands. The biggest profit in its history is being piled up, despite propaganda to the contrary. The reports include both steel and railroads, now figuring in current disputes.

"The soldier, who is a working man in khaki, asks that both sides be given an even break before going off half-cocked with misleading hate-producing articles."

New WLB Policy Extends Pacts

Washington, Feb. 12—The War Labor Board this week laid down a new policy which calls for employers and workers to continue collective bargaining contracts pending negotiations of new agreements or final settlement of any issues in dispute.

The Board's policy, according to members, is not rigid, and may not apply in rare cases.

3-1 Victory For Steel

Hamilton, Ont.—A long struggle for union organization over many years was crowned with success this week when workers in Steel Co. of Canada voted 2461 to 889 for the United Steelworkers of America.

This is the last of the basic steel plants to be organized. The result foreshadows other CIO victories in this area, as the company had spearheaded a campaign in support of company unions in many plants.

Huge Douglas Plane Plant Goes CIO

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 12—Thousands of workers at the giant Douglas Aircraft plant at Long Beach again flocked to the NLRB polling booths last week-end for a run-off election that this time swept the CIO United Automobile Workers to a conclusive victory. The vote in the run-off was 58.3 per cent for the UAW-CIO to 41.7 per cent for the AFL Machinists' Union.

In the first election held the previous week, the vote was 46.6 per cent for the UAW, 19.9 per cent for the AFL Intl. Assn. of Machinists, and 33.6 per cent for no union.

In line with National Labor Relations Board policy, the no union choice was removed from the ballot, and the run-off was held between the two union representatives.

UAW-CIO Regional Director Lew Michener hailed the winning of the Long Beach Douglas plant run-off as a tremendous victory for the CIO, in the class with the winning of the Ford election by the automotive division of the union several years ago.

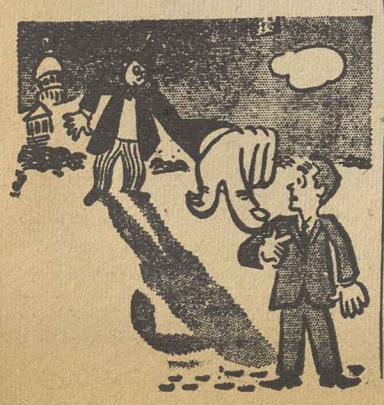
FDR Urged to Veto Tax Bill

Full Text of Murray's Tax Letter

The tax measure as passed by Congress "is a betrayal of every principle of sound wartime taxation," President Philip Murray of the Congress of Industrial Organizations said this week in urging President Roosevelt "in the best interests of our national economy and morale" to veto the bill. Full text of President Murray's letter follows:

Congress has just laid before you the tax bill which it has been considering for a number of months. The bill is a betrayal of every principle of sound wartime taxation. In an era of corporate profits which by any reasonable standard must be considered excessive and swollen, the bill refuses to tax those profits at proper levels. It insists instead upon postponing the burden of war cost to be placed on the shoulders of returning servicemen after the war.

The bill flouts your oft-repeated call for a fair and realistic tax program. Congress has left you no alternative but to veto this travesty on wartime programs. In the best interests of our national economy and morale I urge that you veto the bill.



As far back as April, 1942, before the Little Steel formula was adopted, you urged as one essential part of your seven-point economic program that "profits must be taxed to the utmost limit consistent with continued production."

You urged also that Congress enact a tax law "in which some clever people will not find loopholes."

You pointed out that "it is indefensible that those who enjoy large incomes from state and local securities should be immune from taxation while we are at war."

In September, 1942, you pointed out quite correctly that "with respect to point one—a fair tax program—that still waits upon the Congress to act."

Ability to Pay

"We can rightfully expect the fullest cooperation and self-restraint only if the tax burden is being fairly levied in accordance with ability to pay.

"This means that we must eliminate the tax exemption on interest on State and local securities, and other special privileges or loopholes in our tax law.

"It means that in the higher income brackets, the tax rate should be such as to give the practical equivalent of a top limit on an individual's net income after taxes, approximately $25,000. It means that we must recapture through taxation all wartime profits that are not necessary to maintain efficient all-out war production. Such provisions will give assurance that the sacrifices required by war are being equitably shared."

Congress then proceeded to adopt last year tax measures which rejected your every proposal. Your opposition in Congress even went so far as to add an extra windfall to those with high incomes by a cancellation of 75 percent of their 1942 tax liability. Swollen profits of corporations and the extortionate high incomes that are being extracted out of the war effort were left untouched.

Profiteering, which was causing inflation, was permitted to run amok. Indeed, on April 11, 1943, your opponents in Congress even had the effrontery to repeal that portion of the Executive Order of October 3 which had attempted to limit salaries in wartime to some $67,000 a year, before taxes.

In your message to Congress last month you were compelled to repeat your call to Congress for the enactment of a fair and realistic tax program. In the face of that call Congress has made virtually no significant changes in the outrageously inadequate bill which it was then considering. Indeed, what changes have been made have actually resulted in a net reduction of the total amount of revenues that can be expected.

The Treasury Department had proposed to raise over a billion dollars in new revenues by increasing the income tax rate on corporations earning above $25,000 a year by a total of 10 percent. This proposal Congress rejected.

Tax Loopholes

The Treasury Department had proposed to raise an additional $400,000,000 by reducing the estate tax exemption from $60,000 to $40,000 and by increasing estate and gift tax rates. This proposal Congress rejected.

The bill now before you continues the outrageous tax exemption of income from governmental securities, continues the special privilege of separate returns, which favors families with large incomes, and continues the scandalous provision which allows owners of oil and mining properties to make exorbitant deductions for so-called percentage depletion.

At the same time, the bill now before you continues the so-called victory tax with its oppressive burdens on the several millions of American families in the lowest income brackets. The tax actually achieves in a camouflaged form some of the major evils of the sales tax. The bill also continues present sub-standard levels of exemptions which have resulted in direct cuts in the food and clothing budgets of working families.

Congress has thus proceeded to reject one of the five points cited by you in your message of last month as essential aspects of a home-front program. Not only have they failed to raise the funds which the Treasury Department has indicated to be essential to the fighting of the war. Congress has gone further and has actually proceeded, after receiving your message, to reduce rather than increase the amount which could be expected from the tax bill then pending before them. The bill which has now been placed before you is worse than useless to the nation.

Only a stinging rebuke in the form of a veto can make clear the fact that we do not have a fair and realistic wartime tax program and that Congress still has the duty to the nation to proceed to enact such a program.

This is the vote in the Senate this week on the Federal ballot for servicemen and women. A "YES" vote is for the Federal system of balloting, as in the amended Green-Lucas bill. A "NO" vote is against the Federal system and for the so-called "state's rights" plan, under which only 28,000 service people were able to vote in 1942 and 1943.

Note that the Republicans and the polltaxers were split. This is proof that popular pressure on this issue has changed many Senators who would otherwise have voted against the servicemen's ballot.

The issue now goes to the House for conference; that is, the House and Senate will appoint "conferees" from their membership to try to reconcile the difference between this bill and the House bill, which was against the Federal ballot and for "states' rights."

Keep up the pressure. Wire to your Representative and your two Senators. Urge your Representative to work and vote for the Senate bill just passed without any more amendments. Urge him to talk with the House conferees on this. Urge your Senators to do the same; to stand fast on the Federal ballot.

Study this voting record carefully. If your Senators voted right, congratulate them. If they voted wrong, tell them so.

AND REGISTER TO VOTE IN 1944

Says Army 'Sore as Hell' At House

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 12—Take it from a soldier—the Army's "sore as hell" about the House of Representatives' vote to deny servicemen a federal ballot in the 1944 elections.

Authority for the statement is Pfc. George Meyers, former president of the Maryland and District of Columbia Industrial Union Council. In a letter this week to the Western Maryland Edition of the CIO NEWS, Meyers wrote from Westover Field, Mass.:

"Let me tell you, the soldiers, not all of them, but 99 44/100ths percent of them, are sore as hell about the whole thing—the obviously cynical, undemocratic, un-American attempt by the majority of our Representatives to prevent as many soldiers as possible from voting. . . .

"Sure the majority of soldiers are supporters of Roosevelt. Our lives are at stake. Roosevelt's record as a win-the-war President is clear; and so is that of the men who stand beside him. Phil Murray's name can lead that list.

"We in the armed forces are for anyone who is doing all he can to bring about early victory. We are against anyone who impedes it. We don't care which walk of life he is from, be it business, labor, newspaper editor, housewife, politician, doctor or Indian chief."

Murray Charges Steel Firms Never Bargained

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12—CIO Pres. Philip Murray, head of the United Steelworkers of America, this week told the Natl. War Labor Board that the major steel companies never bargained collectively on the union's 22-point demands prior to the WLB's entry in the case. In a statement carrying forward the USA's drive for a 17-cent-an-hour wage increase and other gains, Murray declared:

"The companies made it perfectly clear that their answer was 'no' from start to finish. There was no counter proposal offered on any of the basic issues that involved a single penny of cost to the companies.

Murray said that the union expected that a panel, which will be appointed to investigate the dispute, will do more than ascertain the facts involved. He said that the panel's task may "be an unrealistic one" if, with regard to some issues, it is not charged with the additional responsbility of making recommendations.

In his criticism of the position of the steel companies, Murray said:

"At the outset they were determined that they were going to bring all of these issues before the Natl. War Labor Board and dump the entire problem before this Board. No effort was made on the part of the companies to resolve any of these basic issues through collective bargaining.

"I make this point—and I believe that it is extremely important for the Board to understand its full impact—in order that the Board may fully understand that the Union is in no position to frame the issues that are now before the Board with any degree of nicety or exactness.

"We are not in a position of having bargained collectively with the companies on our 22-point program and through such negotiations having resolved some issues and having agreed upon a precise formulation regarding the unresolved issues.

That, unfortunately, has not been the situation in our collective bargaining conference. And through no fault of the union."

UE, UAW Pamphlets Tell Of Fight for Army Vote Bill

New York, Feb. 12—A stinging condemnation of Congressmen who "defeated legislation which would have led to setting up machinery giving the Servicemen their vote," has been issued by the CIO Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America, in a pamphlet also containing the text of President Roosevelt's recent "soldier-vote message" to Congress.

The pamphlet, entitled "Fighting for Political Freedom," states: "The parents, wives and friends of our soldiers, sailors and merchant marine will remember their treachery," referring to those the union identifies as "reactionary Republicans and southern poll-tax Democrats."

A complete list of Congressmen and their stand on the soldier-vote is presented in the pamphlet. The publication is designed, according to a note included in the pamphlet, for mailing to servicemen.

Washington, Feb. 11—Every Congressman in Washington is for the soldiers' vote—if you don't believe some of them, ask them—even while they vote in Congress to deny the servicemen the ballot by turning it over to "state's rights."

This point is proved in a new leaflet, "Let the Soldiers Vote," published by the UAW-CIO. Here are some excerpts from it, exposing the "state's rights" fakers and showing how to counteract them.

"No one in the country will stand up and say publicly that he does not want the soldiers to vote in 1944. But there are those who, while professing to want the soldiers to vote, are working tirelessly to prevent any adequate machinery from being established so that soldiers CAN vote.

"In 27 states the time available for applying for an absentee ballot is 30 days or less. Within this 30 day period—if sodier voting is left to the states—the soldier would have to request a ballot, wait for the ballot to be sent to him by a state official, and then mark his ballot and send it back to the state.

"Even in those states which allow the most generous length of time, it is clear that only a fraction of the toal number of men and women in the armed forces could vote and have their votes counted under the state laws. Col. Cutler, testifying for the Army on the bill, said:

"Even with the use of air mail and air priority, the State absentee balloting procedure as provided by existing State laws would not allow any substantial number of votes cast by servicemen overseas to be counted in State primaries and elections."

"If the franchise of those in the armed forces is not to be taken away, the Senate and the House of Representatives must pass a simple, uniform Federal ballot law for servicemen, such as that proposed by the original Green-Lucas bill.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11—Out of a welter of deliberate parliamentary confusion, the service vote issue this week went to conference between the House and Senate for conciliation of two opposing measures.

No. 1, the House bill, is the Rankin-Eastland so-called "states' rights" affair that will make it impossible for service people to vote. Under this type of bill, only 28,000 service votes were counted in 1942, and the Republicans and their polltaxes friends hope for even less in 1944.

No. 2, the Senate bill, is more confusing. Actually, the Senate has passed two measures, 1) the Eastland-McClellan "states' rights" bill—same as the Rankin House bill—and 2) a much amended version of the original Green-Lucas Federal system bill.

Just to make things even more difficult, the amended Green-Lucas bill was tacked onto the Eastland-McClellan bill as an amendment. Thus, the House is in reality faced with two measures of opposite meaning.

The conference process, in which committees from the House and the Senate sit down together and try to figure out a reconciliation of two versions of the same measure, will be carried out during this week.

SENATE CONFEREES

Of these, Green of course voted for his own bill, as did Austin and Hatch. Connally, better known as co-author of the strike-provoking Smith-Connally Act, and Butler voted against the Federal ballot for servicemen and women.

House conferees are: Reps. Worley (D., Tex.), author of the House version of the Federal ballot system; Bonner (D., N.C.), Rankin (polltaxer, Miss.), author of the so-called "states' rights" system that effectively steals the vote from the services; Le Compte (R., Ia.), and Ellsworth (R., Ore.).

Of these, only Worley and Bonner voted for the servicemen. Thus, the House conference committee is stacked against the Federal ballot.

There is still time to fight for a Federal system that will give servicemen and women the right to vote. Rush wires to your Representatives and Senators, and to the members of the conference committees.

Demand that they stick to the Federal system that gives service people a chance to exercise the right they're fighting for—the American right to vote.

And remember how your Representative and your Senators have behaved on this issue.

And above all—REGISTER SO YOU CAN VOTE IN '44.

Don't forget your friends in the service. The lads on the fighting fronts get plenty lonesome for mail. They like to hear from their union buddies. Tell them what we're doing to back them up on the home front. Build up their morale for the fight on the battle front!

Subsidies Vs. Higher Living Costs

The issue of food subsidies is not so complicated as some people would like to make it.

Either we must have substantial subsidies to keep down the cost of food; or, without subsidies, living costs will speedily rise far higher than they are already.

A ban on subsidies, for instance, would mean another cent on a quart of milk, 5 cents for a pound of meat, 3 cents more for a pound of cheese, and similar increases in the price of bread and various vegetables.

The House voted last year for higher living costs by passing a ban on subsidies. At this writing the Senate is voting for a similar bill to kill the subsidy program.

Now is the time to make your voice heard against higher living costs and inflation, by asking your Senators to vote against the subsidy ban in the Bankhead bill, and to support an amendment to continue and strengthen the subsidy program.

This is true even if the Senate has voted to kill food subsidies by the time you read this. The fight is not over. The President can veto the subsidy ban and a successful fight can be made to sustain his veto. So let your Senators hear from you without delay in any event.

On Taxing Lower Incomes

We wish someone would explain—if anyone knows—the meaning of phrases like "war-swollen lower incomes" which constantly crop up in tax discussions and editorials.

Those are the kind of incomes, say the tories, which really should be taxed more to provide war revenue and prevent inflation.

To ordinary folks, a lower income is a lower income any way you choose to look at it or any name you choose to give it.

If a war worker's family has a lower income barely sufficient, or less than sufficient, to provide the necessities of life, health and productive efficiency, it matters not how much it may have been "swollen" above some pre-war starvation level.

It still cannot be docked further for taxes without impairing the health and efficiency of that family, and thus harming war production. Nor is there any "inflationary surplus" in such an income.

If, on the other hand, any income has been so swollen as to provide a considerable surplus, it is no longer a lower income but one of the higher incomes that should be taxed to provide revenue and check inflation.

That is why the CIO tax program makes sense when it calls for increases in income taxes only on incomes over $3,000, and sharply progressive increases in income taxation on incomes from $5,000 upward—with a wartime limit of $25,000 on the net income of any individual, after taxes.

And that is why proposals like the sales tax and other taxation directed at the lower incomes threaten only suffering, mischief, and harm to the war effort.

This last week, Congress finally passed a tax bill that does everything a wartime tax measure should not do. Philip Murray has asked President Roosevelt to veto it, describing it as "this travesty on wartime tax programs."

No argument can be made in favor of the present bill. No argument can be made in excusing Congress for passing it. They've had more than a year to work on it, several Presidential messages telling them what was needed, countless communications from labor and all progressive groups.

The President should veto it. Following that, labor should give all possible support to the veto, so that it will be sustained in Congress. Then labor will have to get down again to the task of persuading Congress to write a decent, fair and win-the-war tax program for the nation.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

BELLY-ROBBING is becoming a fine art these days. It has more wrinkles than all the customers of all the country's beauty shoppes.

Once you could say, without fear of successful contradiction, "No matter how thin you slice it, it's still bologna." But not any more.

The slicing gets thinner and thinner, it's true. The name remains the same. But what it is that's sliced, has become a trade secret—and twice as expensive.

The hamburger is usually treated like an enemy alien in wartime. In the last war it furtively adopted aliases like "Liberty steak" and other fancier names.

But in this war it's just been blitzed like Hamburg, Germany, and there's little meat left to it. For double the pre-war price, you can now buy a concoction of meal, rice or what-have-you, flavored with memories of meatier days.

Or take codfish cakes (you might as well, instead of waiting to be told "we're all out" of the other dishes). They used to be 80% codfish, but now they're 50% potatoes and 50% codfish, according to an AFL restaurant survey in Washington.

Stew, like hash, has always been something of a mystery. But the same survey has detected five pieces of meat in the average Washington stew serving, where previously there was no limit.

In case you have difficulty in finding those five pieces, there's a reason for that too. Butchers are instructed to cut the meat cubes smaller. But one thing you'll find quite easily is the increase in price.

Or take a ham sandwich—if you can get it. A 15-cent ham sandwich can now be bought for 25 cents, with half as much ham in it.

And don't wonder too much what you're eating when you order chicken a la king. If you're lucky, it's probably tuna fish, which makes up a large proportion of wartime "chicken a la king."

Facts like the above, which any "eater-out" can verify for himself in between gulps, are taken from the wealth of evidence on increases in restaurant prices presented in the comprehensive CIO-AFL survey, which shows an increase of 43.5% in living costs since January, 1941.

An investigation of lunch rooms in Pittsburgh area steel towns showed that the basic "special" meal in January, 1941, sold for 30 cents and included appetizer and dessert, dinner plate, bread and butter and beverage.

Today the same "special" sells for 50 cents, with smaller portions and without appetizer or dessert, or both, while some restaurants also charge extra for bread and less butter.

We could multiply examples indefinitely from the report, showing 80%, 100% or even greater increases in restaurant prices for smaller meals of inferior quality.

But we have mentioned enough to indicate some of the facts leading to the conclusion of the CIO-AFL survey—borne out by the experience of every restaurant eater—that it costs about twice as much today to get an equivalent meal as it cost three years ago.

With statistical caution, and to err on the side of conservatism, however, the survey limits itself to including a 73.5% increase in restaurant prices in its computation of total living costs.

One of the reasons why the Bureau of Labor Statistics can keep living costs down so low "statistically" is that—believe it or not—it obtains no prices for restaurant meals but simply assumes they have risen no higher than the few retail food prices which it does index.

Yet, what with wives working, moves to new war jobs far from home and many other new war conditions, restaurant meals are a larger part of the American worker's budget than they have ever been before.

We reserve the tail-end of this column for our contemporary (though we sometimes wonder), Philip Pearl, publicity man for the AFL—so those who are uninterested in trivialities may skip it.

Pearl, in a recent AFL newssheet, referred to a number of CIO leaders as "verminous . . . without conscience, without scruple . . . lice . . ." etc.

We might reply in kind, if there were not a paper shortage. We might refer to the must and mold and cobwebs in some high quarters of the AFL—to padded membership figures—to hidebound tories, isolationists, or plain nitwits—to racketeers who managed to muscle in there but who couldn't get a toehold in the CIO. Or we could just be abusive, as he has done.

But the CIO happens to be sincerely intent on united labor action to win this war and win the peace—which is not furthered by undue attention to a puerile exhibition of Hearst-type journalism.

Furthermore, Pearl wrote his piece under the shadow of John L. Lewis, before the AFL council had stalled the latter off again. He was evidently trying to please an anticipated new boss with a frustrated passion to split and destroy the movement he once headed.

No Retroactive Votes Allowed

Make me a voter again just for tonight."

Something like that is likely to be the theme song of those few servicemen who ever receive ballots, if soldier voting is left to the states—judging from past experience.

Rep. Forand (R. I.) reports having in his possession a 1918 election ballot which reached him some time in 1919. He has not yet succeeded in making it retroactive. But it's a nice souvenir.

Rep. Weiss (Pa.) says that in the recent Allegheny County, Pa., elections, only 1,295 out of 118,000 eligible soldier votes were cast. Hundreds of ballots were returned—some with as many as 22 postmarks—but never able to catch up with the soldier.

Uncle Sam has been able to streamline the shipment of supplies and munitions to millions of our fighting men all over the world. Why not let him streamline the shipment to them of one small sample of the democracy for which they're fighting?

A few basic facts emerge from the pumped-up parliamentary tangle in House and Senate on the service vote issue.

The Senate this week passed (47-38) a much-amended version of the Green-Lucas bill for a Federal system. Last week, the House rejected the Federal system and passed the Rankin-Eastland so-called "states' rights" bill (S 1285). The Senate also passed this bill, attaching the amended version of the Green-Lucas bill to it as an amendment.

The issue now goes to conference—that is, the House and Senate appoint members to meet and work out a final version of the bill acceptable to both. After agreement, it must then go back to House and Senate again for final passage before going to the President for signature or veto.

The House conferees are Reps. Worley (D., Tex.), Bonner (D., N. C.), Rankin (polltaxer, Miss.), LeCompte (R., Ia.), and Ellsworth (R., Ore.). The Senate conferees are Sens. Green (R., R. I.); Connally (polltaxer, Tex.); Austin (R., Vt.); Hatch (D., N. M.), and Butler (R., N. Dak.).

Wire these Representatives and Senators at once, as well as your own. Urge them to approve the Senate version of S 1612, as the only bill that gives the services a sporting chance to vote in 1944. Don't let the parliamentary mess discourage you—the polltaxers and the anti-service Republicans mean it to.

Veto Bad Tax Bill, Murray Asks

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12—The present tax bill, passed in final form by both House and Senate, should be vetoed, President Murray wrote to President Roosevelt this week in a sharp indictment of Congress for its record of failure and bungling on the issue.

"The bill flouts your oft-repeated call for a fair and realistic tax program," Murray wrote. "Congress has left you no alternative but to veto this travesty on wartime tax programs."

Quoting from FDR's message to Congress as far back as April, 1942, Murray pointed out that Congress adopted "tax measures which rejected your every proposal," for high taxes on big incomes, swollen war profits, closing of loopholes and the like.

"In your message to Congress last month," he added, "you were compelled to repeat your call to Congress for the enactment of a fair and realistic tax program.

"In the face of that call Congress has made virtually no significant changes in the outrageously inadequate bill which it was then considering. Indeed, what changes have been made have actually resulted in a net reduction of the total amount of revenues that can be expected."

PROFITS TO STRATOSPHERE

On only one point did Congress make even a partial concession to the President's appeal for fair and adequate taxation, and at that the concession was sharply limited. This was on the clause allowing the government to renegotiate war contracts it finds have been flagrantly blown up in cost.

The original plan in the House was to junk this clause entirely, thus allowing war profits to move from the sky to the stratosphere. Nationwide indignation forced the Senate to back-track on this, though the back-tracking was only partial.

The joker in the re-affirmation of the clause is that all government claims against profiteers must be subject to court review. This is the same trick that has been tried for years as a means of hampering the activity of government agencies. It means that any attempt to recapture some of the more noisome profits must now face the endless delays of court action, with judges friendly to the corporations doing everything possible to help them at the taxpayers' expense.

If the President vetoes the bill, the whole thing will go back to both House and Senate. A two-thirds majority is required to upset a veto. If the veto is sustained, the whole process of writing a tax bill begins again.

'News Week' Backs CIO Living Cost Study

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12—Chalk this up as just about the most encouraging note sounded this week on the cost of living front.

The CIO-AFL position that the cost of living has risen nearly twice what the Bureau of Labor Statistics says it has was vigorously upheld by a spokesman for big business.

Supporter of labor's position was Ralph Robey, who conducts the column, "Business Tides," in NEWS WEEK Magazine. Writing in the Feb. 7 issue, Robey said that 30 million housewives have proved through their own shopping experience that BLS statistics are a lot of hooey.

Robey, in a round about way, indicated that the housewives see more nearly eye to eye with labor's position—that the cost of living has risen 43.5 per cent—rather than with BLS figures which say it has shot upward only 23.4 per cent.

Discussing labor's fight to show that BLS figures are unreliable as a basis for fixing wage increases, Robey wrote:

ALL ON SIDE OF LABOR

"The argument is all on the side of the labor leaders. This is because the (BLS) index is not, and is not intended to be, a measure of the cost of living for the public at large. It is an index designed to cover the cost of living of only a limited group in our population, and large segments of our working population do not fall in this group.

"Specifically, the index is designed to measure the cost of living of only those families of moderate incomes, say around $30 a week, who live in large cities.

"If you live in a suburban district or a small town or a rural village, this index makes no effort to trace the change in the cost of your living. To fall within the confines of this index you must live in a large city.

"Further if you have an income which enables you to buy things which normally do not come within the scale of living of anyone getting only $30 a week or less, you also fall outside the scope of the area covered by the index.

"In other words, in order for this index to be representative of your cost of living, you must buy only those things which a family of this limited income can buy, and of course, you must buy them in the exact proportion that the Bureau of Labor Statistics has determined is customary for a family with $30 a week income."

Robey pointed out that disappearance of low-price items and increase in consumption of such a basic necessity as food are not measured by the BLS index, "which does not reflect higher costs resulting from your changing, either through choice or from necessity, to better quality products."

"But," Robey wrote, "when we have to make allowance for all of these points, what do we have left? Obviously we have nothing left which is of any appreciable value in determination of a national wage policy.

"That is the reason it was foolish for the administration to use this index for this purpose in the first instance. And it is equally the reason why the labor leaders today are in such a strong position in attacking the index."

Correction

The following errors were made in listing the House vote on the Worley Federal service ballot bill in The CIO NEWS of February 7, 1944.

Rep. Manasco (polltaxer, Ala.) was listed as not voting. He voted "No," which was a wrong vote. Rep. Newsome (polltaxer, Ala.) was listed as voting "Yes." He also voted "No."

Rep. Starnes (R. N. H) was listed as not voting. He voted "Yes." Rep. Edwin Hall (R., N. Y.) was listed as voting "No." He voted "Yes." Rep. Randolph (D., W. Va.) was listed as a "Yes." He didn't vote.

Time Out!

Here's proof that the world does move, and even AFL craft unions move with it. Last week, the AFL Brotherhood of Boilermakers and Iron Shipbuilders voted for the first time to admit women to membership and retired their 75-year-old president, who had been in office since 1908. He'll get a pension of $7,500 a year for life.

* * *

Congress finally passed a tax bill this week. Aside from the fact that it raises only a quarter of the sum needed for the war, that it fails to hit big profits and incomes, that it socks the wage earner, and that the President probably will refuse to sign it, it ought to satisfy everyone. The polltaxers and the Republicans can now go back to the simpler sorts of sabotage, like labor-baiting and price hijacking.

* * *

Colonel John P. Frey of the AFL Metal Trades wants a single central U. S. agency to handle all labor matters. The Colonel says it's more efficient. He must be getting saddle-sore from chasing around all the present agencies with anti-union riders in his hands!

* * *

* * *

No one has been more excited and busy than Sen. Taft (R., Ohio) in his opposition to the federal soldiers' vote bill. He's been chasing and fussing around about it, as if it were a personal concern closest to his heart, and nearly gets a stroke when CIO folks argue with him to let the soldiers vote. Yet we thought he said he wasn't a candidate for President!

Win 5c an Hour Raise

Gaffney, S. C., Feb. 12—A five cents an hour increase, paid vacations, and maintenance of membership and checkoff dues collection clauses were won this week by the United Stone & Allied Products Workers of America in one-year contracts signed with the Campbell Limestone Co., with plants here and at Liberty.

Your Food Supply Is Still an Issue!

BULLETIN: As the CIO NEWS went to press, the Senate was preparing (Feb. 11) to vote on the food subsidy issue. All signs showed that the vote would be against food subsidies, for higher prices and scarcity. An early vote took the lid off milk prices, on an amendment proposed by Sen. Eastland (polltaxer, Miss.) and McClellan (polltaxer, Ark.). This, if sustained, will bring an immediate increase of 1 to 2 cents a quart to the consumer, more later. President Roosevelt is expected to veto the anti-subsidy vote. Wire your two Senators to support the veto, which takes a two-thirds majority to upset.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11—The issue of food subsidies—which means the difference between enough to eat at reachable prices or hunger and inflation—is hot again in the Senate this week, with a vote needed by Feb. 17, the day on which present subsidies run out.

The bill under debate is S 1458, which would kill subsidies by June 30 of this year. It was sponsored by Sen. Bankhead (polltaxer, Ala.), who opened up with a long and hysterical speech charging that lower food prices were "soothing syrups" for the American people and scolding them for wanting more food at less cost.

Bankhead's tirade for higher grocery prices was interrupted by Sen. Maloney (D., Conn.), who was unkind enough to remind the venerable polltaxer that only a few months before he tried desperately to get a $30,000,000 subsidy to small-town newspapers in the form of paid War Bond advertising.

Bankhead, however, was careful to point out that he wasn't against all subsidies—only those on food. Subsidies going to big copper companies and other fat corporations are OK with him, but it really hurts when he thinks about the consumer and the housewife getting even the small break that present subsidies provide.

As The CIO NEWS went to press, strong indications showed that President Roosevelt will veto the Bankhead bill after it passes the Senate. The House passed a similar ban on subsidies last year, and Senate action now sends the bill to the White House.

Hillman Hits Anti-Unity Forces in N. Y. Labor Party

NEW YORK, Feb. 12—"Old Guard" figures in the American Labor Party here are trying to perpetuate themselves in office by raising the "false issue" of "communism," Sidney Hillman, chairman of the CIO Political Action Committee charged here this week.

Hillman's charge came in a letter to George S. Counts and Alex Rose, leaders of the "Old Guard" disruptive faction in the ALP, who have flatly refused proposals for ALP unity based on participation of all union elements in the party.

"The proposal which I made to broaden and strengthen the membership and leadership of the party guarantees that the ALP will not be controlled or dominated by Communists, Socialists or any other group, clique or caucus," Hillman said.

"It was designed to and will place control of the party where it belongs—in the hands of the enrolled members themselves. Apparently you do not desire to have the party reconstituted on this basis."

Hillman's proposals for unity have been backed by leading CIO people here, including Emil Rieve of the Textile Workers, R. J. Thomas of the UAW-CIO, and state CIO and AFL leaders with a few exceptions.

In addition, a number of CIO leaders to whom Counts and Rose took violent exception voluntarily withdrew. This action, Hillman said, "removes the sole objection which you had voiced to my proposal. It completely eliminates the last vestige of what has always been a false issue in this primary campaign—the issue of Communism."

Florida CIO Votes Penalty for Strikes, Backs Fourth Term

JACKSONVILLE, FLA., Feb. 12—Delegates to the convention of the Florida State CIO Council held here this week drew up a strong war program aimed at speedy victory, vigorously reaffirmed their no-strike pledge and voted to expell from membership any person within the CIO who violated the pledge. A resolution urging a fourth term for President Roosevelt was passed unanimously.

Other resolutions urged support for the President's subsidy and price control program; denounced Congressman Clare Hoffman as a fascist; urged passage of anti-poll tax, and anti-lynching legislation, and called for a comprehensive program for aiding returning war veterans.

CIO President Philip Murray was praised for his outstanding leadership and for his "efforts to weld ever greater unity within our ranks" and the activities of Sidney Hillman, chairman of the CIO's Political Action Committee, were endorsed.

In a resolution calling upon Congress to pass legislation providing a uniform Federal soldiers' ballot, the convention asserted:

"We consider it a national disgrace that Congress is allowed to continue sabotaging this simple and most basic right of the Armed Forces because of Congress' blind fears of how the soldier may vote."

Protest WLB Wage Cut Order in Frisco Phone Case

NEW YORK, Feb. 12—WLB reduction of a wage increase order affecting 500 maintenance workers of the Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Co. at San Francisco was sharply protested this week by Pres. Joseph Selly of the CIO American Communications Assn.

Labor members of the Natl. WLB and public member Wayne L. Morse dissented from the order, which reduced a previously authorized $5 increase to $3.

The change was caused by a new WLB order which directed that the Little Steel formula be applied on a company-wide basis rather than to bargaining units.

Selly, in his protest, charged that the board was influenced by the giant telephone monopoly. He called the new order "a shameful commentary on the growing tendency of the board to abandon its principles under the pressure of powerful corporate interests."

"This decision," he said, "adds to a rigid, inflexible and unrealistic policy on so-called wage stabilization, a dangerous move in the direction of thwarting legitimate collective bargaining and giving aid and comfort to company-dominated unions."

Morse's dissenting opinion said that the application of the Little Steel formula on a company-wide basis in this case "has union-busting effects."

FDR Signs Bill Killing Exclusion Act

Washington, Feb. 12—The Chinese Exclusion Act, sore point in our relations with one of our most important Allies, has finally been repealed. President Roosevelt this week signed a proclamation putting the repeal into effect, following Congressional action to that effect last December.

CIO took a leading part in the fight to obtain repeal, pointing out that the action is in line with the principles of United Nations unity.

'Swing' Your Own Show! Here's How

Washington, Feb. 12—The program of providing fun on the job to help boost war production was given a new twist this week by the American Theater Wing Lunchtime Follies.

The group, which specializes in war plant entertainment, offered a new service—"If we can't bring it to you, do it yourself"—and guaranteed to provide the wherewithal at a modest price.

All you need to "hit the boards" are some amateur actors and/or actresses who won't draw cabbages, and $25 to pay for a personalized script for a complete half hour lunchtime follies or swing shift show.

Each mail order show is a complete unit of entertainment, including two original songs with words and music, one original sketch with detailed staging directions, gag routines for a master of ceremonies, one dance routine and a blue print for a factory stage plan.

You can get six complete half hour shows for a bargain price of $125 or a special one-hour show for $50. If you want actors and actresses too, the price is somewhat higher. Details can be obtained from Program Director, American Theater Wing War Service Lunchtime Follies, 145 W. 45th St., New York 19, N. Y.

Gang Against U.S. Army Vote Bill Fear Service Ballots

By ELEANOR FOWLER

Sec.-Treas., CIO Women's Auxiliaries

If you had been in Washington last week with the national auxiliary delegation on the soldier's vote, you would be quite sure that opponents of the federal ballot do not want our servicemen to vote.

In one office after another we had the same experience. The Congressman would start out by saying, "Of course I want the boys to vote and I want them to vote for the whole ticket. You want to limit them to voting for a few federal offices. I don't think that's democracy. They should have their say on the dog-catcher as well as the president."

Then we'd point out that there was nothing in the Green-Lucas-Warley bill to prevent a serviceman from writing in for his full state ballot. In fact the second section of the bill would give mail priorities to state election material. But under that bill, if a boy didn't get his state ballot—if he moved too fast for his mail to catch up with him, or if his state hadn't provided a way for him to vote—at least he'd have the federal ballot. "It's a double guarantee of his right to vote," we'd say.

This was invariably the signal for the Congressman to say, "but it isn't constitutional. Voting procedures are a matter for state law. I care too much for our great democracy to vote for anything that would undermine the constitution."

CONSTITUTIONAL DUTY

"Well," we'd say, "it was constitutional for the federal government to draft our boys to fight for this country. We think it's the constitutional duty of our government to see that they get a chance to vote—at least in our federal elections."

Then would come the dead give-away. The Congressman would shake his finger or his fist and say "all you people care about is a fourth term for Roosevelt."

And in those words these states' rights Congressmen—most of the Republicans and half of the southern Democrats—admit that without a federal ballot soldiers won't vote; and that's what they want because they think that our men and women in uniform would vote for Roosevelt if they had a chance.

That's what we've got to make clear to people. The Congressmen who shout about states' rights and constitutionality are just dodging the issue. They're afraid of the soldier's vote. They don't want the men who are giving their lives to save our democracy to have a chance to vote on who they'd like to see making the decisions here at home.

WHAT TO DO

Just think what that means. Will a Congressman who's afraid to let our soldiers vote be a person who will vote for their interests—and the interests of all the people—in other things? Will he vote for adequate funds for educational opportunities for our boys when they get home? Will he be likely to help them get unemployment insurance to tide them over until they find suitable jobs?

You doubt it. I don't blame you. What can you do? Two things:

1. Find out how your Congressman voted. Write to him and get your friends to write. Thank him if he voted for a federal ballot. Criticize him if he voted against it.

2. Register, get your whole family to register, and work with your CIO political action committee to see that everyone in your community registers in time to vote in the primaries and in the 1944 elections for men who really will represent the people.

Charge Deportation Laws' Illegal Use in Bridges' Case

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 12—Illegal use of deportation laws in a vain attempt to destroy a powerful labor union was charged this week before the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals, hearing the case of Harry Bridges, president of the CIO Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union.

Counsel for the west coast CIO leader cited the glaring lack of evidence against him, in asking the court to set aside Attorney General Biddle's deportation order.

"The government admits Bridges has done no wrong" declared Attorney Richard Gladstein. "Instead his leadership is praised. His deportation is sought merely because as the head of the 1934 Maritime strike he came in contact with certain individuals the government says are Communists."

Defense attorneys pointed out the only evidence directly linking Bridges with "subversive" organizations came from Harry Lundberg, bitter enemy of Bridges for many years and sworn foe of the CIO. Lundberg's testimony was given after he had many times denied knowledge of Bridges' asserted political affiliations, the court was told.

Efforts of the attorney general to make his rulings retroactive were sharply attacked. Defense counsel, which included Attorney Carol King of New York, further blasted Biddle by showing he has only attempted to enforce such a ruling in the Bridges' case.

Recent high court decisions were quoted to point out that Biddle is attempting to deny Bridges free speech and free assembly. Next they quoted rules of the Board of Immigration Appeals to show Bridges was denied a fair hearing when Biddle summarily reversed the board and issued the deportation order without according Bridges any hearing before him.

In attempting to smash these strong legal arguments, E. G. Jennings, special assistant to the attorney general, tried to persuade the court it has limited authority to dismiss the proceedings.

The court is expected to reach a decision on the cases in two to six months.

Tool Grab By Industry Hit by UAW

Detroit, Feb. 12—Industry is putting on a postwar bargain hunting campaign aimed at acquiring government-built machine tools for 10 to 15 percent of what the government paid for them, Walter P. Reuther, vice-president of the CIO United Automobile Workers, charged here this week.

Supporting his charge with an analysis of recent testimony given by K. T. Keller, Chrysler president, before the Truman Senate Committee, Reuther said that Keller is "carrying the ball for the corporate post-war bargain-hunters."

The Chrysler official told the committee, Reuther said, that his company owns 20,665 machine tools, of which 17,909 have been converted to war work, in addition to 19,277 machine tools which were built and are owned by the government.

Keller was reported as saying that if Chrysler cannot obtain these government machine tools for its peacetime operations, "we'd be in a hell of a shape."

The union's analysis is part of a brief filed by the UAW's General Motors Department with the War Labor Board in support of the UAW's current demands for establishment by corporations of post-war labor security funds, out of excess profits.

"Wartime financial gains are not only reflected in high profits and inflated executives' salaries," stated the brief, "but billions of dollars have been added to the capital assets of these corporations at the cost of the taxpayers.

"In addition to the billions of dollars being invested in new equipment and plant expansion on the part of these great corporations, the government itself is constructing tremendous new plants and equipping such plants with billions of dollars in capital equipment, all of which will be acquired by the corporations for little more than a song in the post-war period."

CIO Backs Jewish Home In Palestine

Washington, Feb. 12—CIO support for Congressional resolutions aiding the development of the Jewish National Home in Palestine was voiced this week in a statement by CIO Pres. Philip Murray presented to the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Murray, in urging passage of House Joint Resolution 418 and 419, said:

"We believe that the progress of the Jewish National Home should be permitted to continue unimpeded and unimpaired, particularly in view of the tragic plight of hundreds of thousands of Jews in Europe, and the necessity of providing for them a place of resettlement and rehabilitation after the war.

"The half-million who have settled in Palestine since the issuance of the Balfour Declaration have demonstrated their capacity for building in days to come a free and democratic Jewish Commonwealth based upon the principles of equality and justice.

"We believe that one of the most important results which can come of the present struggle being waged by the democratic forces of the world will be an expanded opportunity for the Jewish people to construct a healthy and normal national life for itself in Palestine."

Soviet Labor Head Named 'Vice-Pres.'

Moscow, Feb. 12 (ALN)—Nikolai Shvernik, Union Central Council of Trade Unions, was named first vice-chairman of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet (Parliament) of the Soviet Union this week, a post corresponding to United States Vice-President.

Elevation to the new post is considered here as further recognition of the part played by trade unions in the life of the country, particularly during the war.

Ship 45% of Columbia Platinum to Nazis

BOGOTA, Feb. 12 (ALN)—The Nazi war machine is receiving as much as 45 per cent of Colombia's platinum output by transshipment from Spain via Argentina, it was revealed here this week by the Confederation of Columbian workers (CTC).

Although the government stipulates that all platinum must be sold to the Bank of the Republic, which controls distribution and exportation, Nazi and Falange agents have succeeded in cornering almost half of the production of this vital war material by paying higher prices.

The fascist contraband ring is headed by Walter Held, well-known Nazi agent in Colombia who is also head of the so-called "Casa Helda." The ring includes two other Nazi agents, Fux and Kraus, according to the revelations.

The platinum is brought to the ports of Buenaventura, Cali and Medellin by two Falangists named Velero and Cajale for shipment to Argentina.

The two Falangists travel with great frequency from Buenaventura to Buenos Aires, Velero having returned to this country from Argentina only recently. At this writing no government action has been taken against them.

It was further disclosed that the contraband activities are being carried on with the help of the Argentine and Peruvian Ambassadors to Colombia. Before Pearl Harbor the Japanese Minister to Colombia received 20 kilos of platinum for approximately $300,000, the report states. The diplomat received the metal personally in his quarters at the Alferez Real Hotel in Cali.

Most of Colombia's platinum is found in the beds of rivers in the Choco district, on the Pacific coast. These deposits are worked by the Choco Pacifico, a U. S. company, or by natives using the most primitive extracting methods.

Toledano Pledge Backs U.S. Drive To Crush Japan

Mexico City, Feb. 12 (ALN)—The full cooperation of labor organizations in 16 Latin American countries "for the complete destruction of fanatic Japanese barbarism and its system," was pledged to President Roosevelt today by Vicente Lombardo Toledano, president of the Confederation of Latin American Workers (CTAL).

Referring to the report on atrocities committed "by Japanese fascists against U. S. war prisoners," Toledano telegraphed the President:

"We pledge support for total destruction of fascism in Europe, Asia and on the American continent. International democracy is inconceivable with the existence of a single fascist state anywhere. We reiterate our appreciation of your great services in the cause of mankind's freedom."

Resurrect Italian Labor Federation

London, Feb. 11 (ALN)—The Italian General Confederation of Labor (CGL), which had 2,500,000 members before its dissolution in 1927 by Mussolini, was reconstituted this week at the Bari Congress of Italian Committees of National Liberation. Headquarters of the CGL will be set up in Bari "until the liberation of Rome," it was announced.

The Congress, attended by 500 representatives of the six anti-fascist parties and the trade unions, called for the immediate abdication of the King and set up a permanent executive committee.

The delegates, coming from occupied as well as liberated Italy, unanimously resolved:

"A government, in which all parties represented at the Congress should participate, must be formed with full powers to deal with the exceptional circumstances. Such a government in Italy should have the task of intensifying the war effort to the utmost, of solving the most urgent problems in Italian life with the support of the masses, and of arranging and guaranteeing the convocation of a constituent assembly as soon as hostilities cease."

To Probe Bolivian Revolt

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 12 (ALN)—The Confederation of Latin American Workers (CTAL) this week named Guadencio Peraza, of the Mexican Teachers Union, to go to Bolivia and investigate at first hand conditions under the military junta of the National Revolutionary Movement (MNR).

Appointment of Peraza followed an exchange of cables between CTAL president Vincente Lombardo Toledano and Major Gualberto Villarroel, head of the Bolivian junta, in which the latter stated that any delegate designated by the CTAL would receive "every opportunity" to see fully the nature of the change in Bolivia's government since the Dec. 20, 1943, coup d'etat.

TO MEET WORKERS

The CTAL delegate has taken with him 30 specific questions concerning the connections of Bolivian revolutionists with Franco Spain and the Ramirez regime in Argentina, political guarantees, race hatred, electoral plans, civil liberties and labor's present status. He will meet with leaders of the Confederation of Bolivian Workers and then will interview government and army leaders and the mine owners.

Commenting on the mission, Toledano said: "Peraza is making a complete examination of the origin, background and aims of the junta and will then report to the special session of the CTAL executive council, meeting in Montevideo in the latter part of this month. Peraza has worked with the CTAL since its foundation and his wide experience guarantees an exact and objective examination of the situation of the Bolivian people."

Meanwhile it was learned here that the appeal for recognition of the new Bolivian government issued in the U. S. in the name of Bolivian labor by Bernardo Ibanez, general secretary of the Confederation of Chilean Workers, was not signed by the CSTB. Ibanez, it is understood, will shortly visit Bolivia to deliver the CIO's $2500 gift to the victims of the Catavi massacre of Dec. 21, 1942.

British Union Membership Tops 8 Million

London, Feb. 12 (ALN)—The membership of the Amalgamated Engineering Union, largest labor organization in Britain's war industries, reached an all-time peak of 915,297 in December, and its financial resources a high of £5,500,000 ($22,000,000), the AEU announced this week.

"This rapid expansion of our union reflects the growth of the whole British trade union movement," the AEU Journal comments. "Last year's increase in membership in all unions over the Dec., 1942, total of 7,781,000 carries aggregate membership well beyond the peak point, attained at the end of 1920, of 8,348,000." Largest gain last year took place in the metal and general labor unions.

"What is particularly significant about these official figures," the AEW Journal continues, "is that nearly three-fifths of the aggregate membership is concentrated in 16 unions. (225 unions are affiliated to the Trades Union Congress.) The AEU is seeking to reduce the number of unions in the engineering industry.

Registration Pushed

CIO Signs 'Em Up For '44 Voting

New York, Feb. 12—Major campaigns to register millions of voters are now under way in industrial centers of the nation on a program mapped by the CIO Political Action Committee.

Backed by the warning that "this is a year of decision," the drive is intended to make every American citizen eligible to vote.

"We cannot let the election in this year of decision go by default because of apathy or indifference," Chairman Sidney Hilman, of the Political Action Committee warned. "Make up your mind we are either going to get a better world or we are going to be thrown backwards. We will not stand still."

Importance of the registration drive is emphasized by figures demonstrating that the entire complexion of today's reactionary Congress would have been changed by the shift of from one to 10 per cent of the voters in 60 districts.

KEYED TO PLANTS

The registration of voters is keyed to shop stewards and plant committees. Card indexes of registered voters are being set up by ward and precinct.

The complete plan, approved at a meeting of the Political Action Committee and its regional directors, includes the following nine steps:

1—Establish a registration committee in each plant, using either shop stewards or other members to cover every department on every shift.

2.—Secure complete membership lists with correct addresses.

3.—Make two file cards for each member to contain name, address, local union, county, ward, election district or precinct and whether registered or not registered.

4.—One card to county, city or appropriate political action committee. Second card filed in local union registration file.

5.—Ward and precinct leaders to call meetings to complete registration in their areas.

9.—Give awards to most successful registration committees.

'WE NEED PAY HIKES' is the message that CIO Packinghouse Workers are carrying to Washington, following a big sendoff from the rank and file at Chicago. Above, workers gather with signs telling of their problems and backing the soldier vote bill as delegates leave to ask for an overall 10 cents an hour increase for 180,000 employes of the industry.

Low Packing Pay May Cause Meat Shortage

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12—"Serious meat shortages are threatened by a manpower crisis in the nation's packing industry," Lewis J. Clark, president of the United Packinghouse Workers of America, CIO, said here today.

"Hundreds of thousands of livestock are cluttering the stockyards of the nation, with slaughtering and packing facilities lying idle because the industry's low wage policy and bad working conditions drive people to other jobs," he added.

"Our members are working 70, 80, 90 and in some cases much as 120 hours a week, and still can't keep up with the need. Overstrain is causing an alarming growth of absenteeism. Experienced packing workers are leaving the industry simply because they can't take it any longer. In many instances, these highly skilled men are getting less pay than unskilled workers in other war industries."

WLB CASE

The Packinghouse Workers have a case before the National War Labor Board, involving a 10-cent-per-hour general wage increase, reclassification of job rates, and pay for time spent changing to special work clothes. This time, he added, averages 45 minutes a day.

"The meat packers," Clark said, "claim that they can't raise wages unless they are allowed to raise prices to the consumer. This claim is false. The meat packers are making triple the profits they made before the war, and they weren't exactly starving then. They can pay decent wages without gouging the consumer any further.

"We are also here to demand that Armour & Co. be required to arbitrate our union's grievances. Our union, in line with the rest of the CIO, has voluntarily agreed to the peaceful settlement of all disputes. We believe that this rule should apply to employers also.

CO. PROVOKES STRIKE

"Armour and Company has adopted a deliberate policy of trying to provoke a strike situation, not only for union-busting purposes but also with the political motive of trying to smear the present administration. Sewell Avery, a veteran at defying the law and the public policy of the United States on labor relations, is a ring-leader on the Armour Board of Directors in this disruptive policy.

"The United Packinghouse Workers want more than anything else to be allowed to do their part in production of a vital war material, meat. Substandard wages, inhuman working conditions and the un-American provocations of Armour & Co. are making it impossible for the most patriotic workers to stick it out.

"These conditions must be ended by firm government action. For this reason, we are asking the government agencies here to step in before the situation grows still worse."

Clark also revealed that the union was seeking labor representation on the War Meat Board.

Arkansas Ads Smear Union Security Plans

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Feb. 12—The drums of anti-unionism are still beating strong throughout the South. Latest tom-tom comes from the Arkansas Gazette, which hired out nearly two and a half pages of its Feb. 6 edition to the union-busting Constitutional Amendment Committee and to some unknown outfit that didn't bother to sign its name. It's a toss-up as to which is worse.

The Constitutional Committee urges readers to write to it "if you believe in true democracy—if you wish to guarantee these fighting sons and daughters of yours and ours an equal opportunity to earn when they return—the right to work regardless of membership in some labor union or lack of it."

A four-column by 13-inch ad features the reproduction of a clipping (from an earlier issue of the Arkansas Gazette) which says: "Picket Chased from Scene by Irate Soldiers."

The ad urges enactment of an amendent to the Arkansas constitution which would provide that no person shall be denied employment because of membership in a union, but also incudes a joker which would prevent even the mildest form of union security. The joker provides that no person may be denied a job even though he should refuse to pay his fair share toward the upkeep of an organization that has won him and his fellow employes substantial gains in wages and working conditions.

The unsigned ad is a double-page spread, featuring a reproduction of eight pages from a publication called the Orthodox Baptist Searchlight. The Searchlight, which says that it is owned by the Missionary Baptist Institute, features an attack against the Office of Price Administration under the headine, "Our Work Against Bureaucratic Socialism!"

FANTASTIC STORY

Under a sub-head, "Wake Up Citizens! It Is Later Than You Think," an article viciously attempts to smear the government with a fantastic tale of how some girl employes are "forced to strip" before their employers before they receive their pay checks.

Wallace Warns U.S. of Threat From Fascists

SEATTLE, Feb. 12—A sharp warning that the American people must take the lead in the 1944 political campaign to save the country from those who would saddle it with a Wall Street dictatorship was sounded this week by Vice-Pres. Henry A. Wallace. Wallace, in the last of three major West Coast speeches, declared that American fascists are desperately mustering their forces in an effort to control both major political parties so that they can present the American people with a choice between tweedlededee and and tweedlededum at the 1944 polls.

He defined American fascists as "those who believe that Wall Street comes first and the country second and who are willing to go to any length through press, radio and demagogue to keep Wall Street safely sitting on top of the country."

Wallace's first West Coast speech was in Los Angeles on "What America Wants," his second was in San Francisco on "What America Can Have," and his third, here, was on "How America Can Get It." Among his audiences were thousands of union members.

JOBS MAIN GOAL

Calling for cooperation of all segments of the population to build an America free of unemployment, Wallace said that the main goal of all truly patriotic Americans must be to provide an economy that will guarantee jobs and the other necessities of life for everyone, while maintaining free democracy.

"The first and most important need has to do with the desires of plain folks who have to work for a living in the factories and the stores, in the schoolhouses and the government offices," Wallace declared.

"More than 50 million of these people with their wives and children have just one basic interest in life—the assurance of a steady job. They would like the assurance of an annual salary or, at any rate, the guarantee of 2,000 hours of work a year."

Lashing out at narrow-visioned business interests that are primarily concerned with profits rather than with the welfare of the people, Wallace said:

"By free enterprise this type of big business means freedom for freebooters. By free enterprise this type of big business means the privilege of charging monopoly prices without interference by the government; the privilege of putting competitors out of business by unfair methods of competition; the privilege of buying up patents and keeping them out of use; the privilege of setting up Pittsburgh-plus price-fixing schemes; the privilege of unloading stocks and bonds on the public through insiders who know their way in and out, up and down, backwards and sideways."

Wallace outlined a five-point plan for obtaining "things it is our duty to have if this American civilization is to grow and go forward." These include good and plentiful food, good and plentiful hospitals, good housing, rural electrification and better schools.

"Prevention of youth erosion," he said, "is more important than prevention of soil erosion.

"The ten million families at the bottom of the pile in the United States have demonstrated during the past two years that they can do good work, provided they have enough to eat and the opportunity to get good training," Wallace said.

"The salvation or damnation of the United States depends in considerable measure on how efficiently we can keep these people at work. If they are kept at work at good wages they can furnish an annual market for at least 15 billion dollars worth of goods and services."

Before the war these people bought only five billion dollars worth of goods a year, Wallace added.

Calling for the adoption of an economy of abundance, Wallace declared:

"That the Russians could go on far in the past 20 years and evoke such an extraordinary response from the people in time of stress is the greatest indictment I know of the scarcity economics as practiced by those who believe that profit and free enterprise are only a few."

Steel Union Offers Plan To Aid Servicemen

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 19—Hundreds of thousands of dollars for servicemen and women who are members of the CIO United Steelworkers of America will be provided them on their discharge if a plan advocated by the union is accepted by the steel industry and the Natl. War Labor Board.

The plan, submitted by the USA to the WLB, proposes that all steel workers in the industry contribute $20 each out of whatever wage increases they may get from current negotiations which are to offset the rise in the cost of living.

The USA proposes that the total sum be matched by industry and be turned over to steel workers in the armed forces when they are mustered out.

Assuring those who are now risking their lives on many batlefronts abroad that "back home the soldiers of production in the mills have never failed them," the conference listed some of the things achieved for the war by the workers in the steel industry that are for the benefit of those in the service:

ASKED FOR ACTION

1. More steel was produced last year than could be used by our Armed Forces. To meet the particular demand for steel plates, a new world's record was made in December by the production of 1,169,000 tons. In January this record was broken with the production of 1,173,000 tons.

2. Steel workers are buying War Bonds at the rate of $200,000,000 a year, and pouring millions more into war relief and Red Cross funds.

3. The union fought for and helped win increased allowances for soldiers' dependents and is vigorously campaigning for the soldiers' right to vote.

4. In all contracts, the union has insisted on provisions protecting job and seniority rights.

5. The USA-CIO helped fight for the present mustering-out pay law, and is waging an unceasing campaign for a stabilized economy to protect the steel workers' families.

Explaining its fight for a wage increase, the conference declared that "the union is endeavoring to obtain the necessary wage adjustment to restore to the steel workers the purchasing power which they have lost as a result of the unchecked rise in the cost of living in the past two years while their wages have remained frozen."

Chairman William H. Davis, of the War Labor Board, the union resolution pointed out, has said that it is only fair to the workers who are drawn into the fighting services to protect their standards while they are away.

CIO Canteen's Ban On Bias Backed

Shreveport, La., Feb. 19—Stand of the CIO Washington, D. C., Council in sponsoring a Labor canteen where Negro servicemen are welcomed on the same basis as white soldiers and sailors was given hearty endorsement here by Local 5 of the CIO Federation of Glass, Ceramic & Silica Sand Workers.

In a wire sent to Pres. Joseph Philips of the CIO Washington Council, members of the local said: "We wish to commend you most heartily for the stand you have taken regarding the co-attendance of white and Negro soldiers and hostesses at the CIO sponsored labor canteen at Washington, D. C."

D.C. Blood Donor Drive Honors 3 CIO Heroes

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19—The shining courage, self-sacrifice and patriotism of three members of the CIO United Federal Workers Union serving in the armed forces called forth this week a response on the home front designed to honor the men and provide practical assistance for the war. A special blood donor drive starting Feb. 21 will be the answer of UFW members here to reports that the three fighters have either been killed, wounded or reported missing.

The three men honored are:

Harold Berkowitz, formerly of the Govt. Printing Office, killed in action in the South Pacific after insisting on a transfer to a front line company. Berkowitz's heroism was hailed by his company commander in a letter to the young soldier's mother.

Bernard Oster, of the Civil Service Commission, reported missing in action in the big air raid over Germany last Jan. 4.

The letter to Berkowitz's mother from Capt. Denton C. Rosentree is shot through with praise for the CIO member's aggressive desire to give everything he had to smash fascism.

Describing how an officer of a headquarters regiment approached him with the request of Berkowitz for transfer to a front line company, Capt. Rosentree wrote:

"The man, your son, was not satisfied with the part he was playing in the war. He felt he could be of more value to his country serving in an active capacity. I accepted him on that basis, and have never regretted it.

"Your son knew very little about a rifle company, but he was eager and willing to learn. He never complained, he always did his best, which was, in the eyes of the company a superior job. I admired his spirit and attitude from the start.

"A few days before we entered this campaign, your son was sent to the clearing company (medics) with malaria. I thought he would be left behind. The day before we embarked I received a note from him saying he had managed to talk the doctors into letting him return to the company. And he had. When he returned he was grinning.

"Only a few minutes after he had been wounded I talked with him—then again he was smiling. Undaunted, he said, 'Hello, Captain—I did my best.'

"Mrs. Berkowitz, I am grateful that I was allowed to know your son. Men of his calibre never die and neither will freedom as long as there are men like him to defend it."

Labor Asks Probe Of BLS; Sends Living Cost Study to FDR

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19—The labor members of President Roosevelt's Cost of Living Committee this week urged that an intensive investigation be made of the part played by the U. S. Labor Dept.'s Bureau of Labor Statistics "in the publication of an index which distorts the basic facts of our war-time living costs."

Submitting a joint CIO-AFL report to the President showing that the cost of living has risen 43.5 per cent since 1941 instead of the 23.4 per cent estimated by the BLS, Pres. R. J. Thomas of the CIO United Auto Workers Union and George Meany of the AFL said:

"Our report reveals that the BLS, with full understanding, has permitted its index to be used as a basis for measuring the rise in the cost of living.

"The BLS is aware of the fact that such use of its index reflects the gravest type of injustice that could possibly be perpetrated by it upon the American people.

"The very failure of the BLS to make clear that its index does not adequately reflect the realistic and actual rise in the cost of living subjects the Bureau to very serious charges.

"For instance, the index of the Bureau does not purport to reflect cost of living rises due to increases in the prices of foods not priced by the Bureau, elimination of low-priced goods, up-grading, deterioration of quality standards or the rising cost of restaurant meals."

The letter to President Roosevelt accompanying the labor members' report pointed out that the three other members of the FDR's cost of living committee—two from industry and Chairman William H. Davis of the War Labor Board—have presented no material on the cost of living.

The labor members said that in view of the inactivity of the three other members of the committee, the CIO-AFL report was submitted directly to the President "because of the intense public interest that obtains regarding this vital issue and the important policies that are predicated thereon."

'Labor Victory' Show Backs Living Cost Figures

New York, Feb. 19—Last week's CIO Labor For Victory Program, which is broadcast over the NBC every other Sunday, featuring a dramatized story about the joint CIO-AFL cost of living report that brought hundreds of letters from listeners to the CIO.

"Housewife" actresses told in poignant terms of their troubles with rising prices, in language that everyone could understand.

Over and over again, the point was made that the actual experience of the people has shown that the cost of living has risen, on the average, the 43.5 per cent that labor claims it has—nearly twice what Bureau of Labor Statistics figures show.

Says CIO Cost Study OK

NEW YORK, Feb. 19—Labor's claim that the cost of living has risen 43.5 percent since 1941 instead of 23.4 percent that the U. S. Labor Dept's. Bureau of Labor and Statistics claims was strongly supported from another industry source this week. Last week a columnist for News Week backed up labor's claims.

Latest support comes from Marshall M. Jacobson, writing in the Daily News Record, a leading newspaper in the clothing industry. Stating that it is assumed in the trade that clothing-price figures for the joint CIO-AFL cost of living report came from the clothing unions, Jacobson wrote:

"Some clothing men have expressed themselves as not being as much surprised by labor's claim of an apparel price rise of 72.2 percent in three years as they have over the naivete of administration supporters who have insisted on sticking to the government price index, which has not reflected, it is contended, the hidden price increases of declining quality standards, manipulations to cope with shortages and black markets, and evasions and violations which are said to have run rampant without an apparent ability on the part of the government to enforce its regulations except in the most sporadic manner.

"Many have wondered how the government could continue to rely on its allegedly false price index with which to measure worker income rights, in the face of wide knowledge that the cost of living has risen substantially above the index by reason of quality abuses which cannot conceivably be reflected in the index, since the government has not been able to stop or check them due to a lack of enforcement funds, for which Congress is blamed."

Labor Gives $600,000 To Russ Relief

New York, Feb. 19—Organized labor contributed $600,000 to Russian War Relief during 1943, Edward C. Carter, president of the organization, reported to the board of directors this week. This sum was contributed by the CIO National War Relief Committee and the AFL relief agency.

Goods purchased with CIO contributions were transmitted to the All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions in Moscow for distribution among destitute union members in the Soviet Union, Carter said. Nearly $7,000,000 worth of relief supplies were consigned to the Soviet Union during the year.

Contributions in 1943 were more than twice greater than in 1942. Carter attributed the increase to a deepening appreciation by the American people of their Soviet allies.

American labor representatives on the board of directors of Russian War Relief include CIO Pres. Philip Murray, AFL Pres. William Green, and Pres. A. F. Whitney, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen.

AFL Boiler Makers Still Anti-Negro

Kansas City, Feb. 19 — Negro members of the AFL Boilermakers union will have to remain in auxiliary lodges, although their membership rights have been extended, according to action voted unanimously at the recent convention held here.

Golden 'Man To Watch' In Labor—SEP

Washington, Feb. 19—"A man to watch" in the labor movement is Clinton S. Golden, says an article called "CIO Big-Shot" in the Feb. 19 issue of the Saturday Evening Post.

Golden who is assistant to the president of the CIO United Steelworkers of America, is the second CIO official to be written up for the Post's series of articles on "some of the more responsible labor leaders of this country." The first, on Pres. R. J. Thomas of the United Automobile Workers, ran in a December issue.

Golden is described by the writer of the article, Merlyn S. Pitzele, labor editor of Business Week magazine, as a union leader "whose mental candlepower has been strong enough to light up some of the darkest recesses of anti-labor prejudice."

Introduce Golden to "blue-chip business groups" such as the Chamber of Commerce, or the American Management Assn., says the writer, and "he gives off ideas that make his employer audiences want to run home and invite the local union business agent in for dinner."

The line of this "ambassador of labor to business" says Pitzele, "is that unions and management, working together, can cut costs, raise profits, pay higher wages and lift the American standard of living to a new high."

This "labor silver tongue," declares the article, "didn't reach the upper rungs of unionism by making pretty speeches. When it was necessary for him to lead a picket line, trade punches with a cop or break a city ordinance and go to jail, he wasn't talking on union-management cooperation to an Elks Club smoker."

Keep Your Eye On Congress

Two important war measures are either in the White House this week for signature or veto or are on the way to President Roosevelt. A third has been vetoed.

These are taxes, food subsidies and the service vote. The CIO has asked President Roosevelt to veto the tax bill, has urged CIO support to the expected veto of the anti-subsidy bill, and is watching the service issue for a line on the action to be urged on it.

The anti-subsidy bill (HR 3477) finally went through both Houses this week and FDR's veto was upheld by the House. Sponsored by Sen. Bankhead (polltaxer, Ala.) and a reactionary-Republican-polltaxer combination, it would increase food prices by at least 10 per cent if sustained. An amendment by Sens. McClellan (polltaxer, Ark.) and Eastland (polltaxer, Miss.) would raise the price of milk by at least one cent immediately, more later.

The service vote issue (two bills, S 1285, S 1612) was still in conference as The CIO NEWS went to press. Rep. Rankin (polltaxer, Miss.) and the two Republican conferees (Reps. LeCompte, Ia., and Ellsworth, Ore.) are adamant against any form of Federal ballot to guarantee the service people the right to vote. For the moment, the situation is deadlocked.

The polltax repeal bill (HR 7) is moving again, toward what may be a floor fight in the Senate this week. Sen. McCarran (D., Nev.), now head of the Judiciary Committee, is in charge and has made a promise to bring it up. Sen. Bilbo (polltaxer, Miss.), the chief filibuster leader, has had all his teeth out and has been trying to get further delays until his new plates are fitted. Now is our time to press hard for an end to stalling, for a quick gag on any filibuster, and for final passage.

There's a new danger in the so-called "Equal Rights" amendment, which would wipe out all social laws protecting women, be used as a wedge against all labor laws. Rep. Cannon (D., Fla.) has put a discharge petition for it on the floor. Two hundred eighteen Congressmen's signatures are required to bring the bill up for debate. Write your Representative to refuse to sign this extremely dangerous petition.

Taxes	Your 1944 taxes, which spare rich, go light on profits, hit low incomes, fail to meet war needs by 75%.	Up to the President to sign or veto.	CIO has urged veto; wire FDR.
Subsidies (HR 3477)	Ends food subsidies; increases food prices 10%; adds 1c a quart and more to milk cost.	FDR veto upheld by House; Senate still to vote on veto.	Wire Senators to uphold veto.
Service vote (S 1285, S 1612)	S 1285 is House bill preventing service vote; S-1612 is much-amended Green-Lucas Federal ballot bill, passed by Senate (which also passed S 1285 as well, S 1612 as an amendment to S 1285).	Temporarily deadlocked in House-Senate conference, House conferees majority (Rankin and 3 Republicans) adamant for S 1285, against S 1612.	Don't fall into trap that this issue is ended; it isn't. Keep up wires for Federal ballot.
Polltax repeal (HR 7)	Gives vote to 10 million Americans, builds national unity for victory.	Scheduled for Senate floor debate this week.	Wire your Senators to support, to gag filibuster, block all amendments.
"Equal Rights" Amendment	Ends laws protecting women workers; is wedge against all labor laws.	Discharge Petition on House floor, requires 218 signers for action.	Write your Representative not to sign.
Labor draft	Introduces compulsory labor. Austin - Wadsworth bill only one now up in Congress	Senate Military Affairs Committee; CIO testimony coming soon.	Write your Representative and Senators to oppose.
S 1272	Makes ban on labor political contributions in Federal elections permanent.	Passed Senate; headed for House Judiciary Committee.	Write your Representative against.

Political 'Fast One' Slipped Over in Senate

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19—Working under cover of the fight over the subsidy issue, the enemies of labor political action slipped over a quick one in the Senate this week designed to put a permanent gag on the political rights of workers.

The quick one was thought up by Sen. Hatch (D., N. M.), who slipped through a quiet amendment to the Federal Corrupt Practices Act barring financial contributions by unions in Federal election campaigns. The bill now goes to the House.

To the innocent observer, this might seem harmless. On the surface, all the Hatch bill (S 1272) does is to put the ban on financial gifts during elections that already exists in the Smith-Connally Act into the Corrupt Practices Act, which dates from 1926.

Actually Hatch's purpose is to make the ban permanent, since the Smith-Connally Act runs only for the duration and six months after. Evidently the approaching invasion of Europe and the advance of the Red Army has got the boys worried that the war might end and the Smith-Connally Act lapse.

Hatch is noted for specializing in whittling down the right to democratic political action. He is the author of the Hatch Act that bars U. S. employes from taking part in any political activity whatever. This gag on democracy is now being tested by a member of the United Federal Workers, CIO.

Hatch evidently loves democracy so much that he doesn't like to have to share it with the people.

Soldier Ballot Bill Marks Time; Issue Not Dead

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19—The soldiers' vote, thrown into a deliberate parliamentary tangle by the Republicans and the polltaxers, was still deadlocked in House and Senate conference as The CIO NEWS went to press this week.

The deadlock came when Rep. Rankin (polltaxer, Miss.), the venerable labor-hater, Negro-hater and Jew-baiter, absolutely refused to move from his opposition to letting the services vote through a Federal ballot.

Following Rankin's lead, the two Republicans on the House side of the conference committee, Reps. LeCompte (Ia.) and Ellsworth (Ore.) also refused to yield in their demands for the so-called "states' rights" Rankin bill, similar to the 1942 law under which only 28,000 service people were able to vote.

The issue is far from dead, though the daily newspapers and other foes of democracy for the armed forces have been carefully cultivating the idea that the fight is all over.

The Senate still has the Green-Lucas Federal ballot bill, which it passed in amended form two weeks ago as an amendment to the Senate version of the Rankin "states' rights" bill.

STALL TWO WEEKS

The conference, in which delegates from House and Senate meet to try to reconcile the two versions of a bill aimed at the same purpose, has been going on for almost two weeks now. The only news out of it has been Rankin's announcement that he would not compromise on his own measure.

This deadlock is an obvious maneuver on the part of Rankin and the Republicans to accomplish two ends: 1) to wear out the interest of the people in the issue and 2) to put over the phoney "states' rights" bill after popular indignation has died down.

SHOOT IN THOSE WIRES

In your messages, keep telling them just two things: 1) to work with the conference committee of either House or Senate, urging the conferees to support the Green-Lucas Federal ballot bill and reject the Rankin bill, and 2) to stand firm for the Green-Lucas bill after the conference finishes and the issue comes up on the floor for a final vote.

If Congress betrays the service men and women by finally passing the Rankin bill, President Roosevelt must be urged to veto it and to make a nation-wide public demand for a Federal ballot based on the Green-Lucas bill.

Says Cartels Lead To Slavery

Washington, Feb. 19—Americans chew the fat more about employment than any other serious subject, Ted Silvey, CIO representative, told a People's Lobby conference on the problem of international cartels held here this week.

Silvey's speech was on the question of whether or not cartels can provide full employment. Even assuming that they could, Silvey said, under such system "those who would be required to work would not be employed, they would be enslaved."

CIO Prints Service Edition

The CIO NEWS this week publishes its first Special Servicemen's Edition, which will be found in the center pages.

The importance of reaching servicemen with labor's story is so great that the CIO NEWS not only asks every reader to send his copy of the supplement to some man or woman in the armed forces, but also to discuss with his local union the possibility of purchasing additional copies to be distributed to members for mailing abroad.

The supplement included with the CIO NEWS is, because of mechanical restriction, not cut for reading. Please follow the simple instructions about folding and cutting before mailing a copy to a serviceman.

Additional copies of the Servicemen's Supplement, with pages cut for reading, may be obtained in quantity lots for distribution. The prices are:

100 for $1.25; 500 for $5; 1,000 for $7.50; special prices for very large orders.

Note on mailing: The Servicemen's Supplement weighs one-half ounce. It may be mailed by the regular first class method or by air mail. There is an eight ounce limit on first class mail sent overseas, and a two ounce limit on airmail. The airmail rate is six cents per half ounce.

It is recommended that the supplement be airmailed so that servicemen will receive the news while it is still timely.

Let The People Decide

Figuring they may as well be hanged for a sheep as a lamb, in this election year, the polltax Democrat-tory Republican combination are getting worse rather than better in their assaults on the public interest.

They have sent to the White House a miserably inadequate tax bill permitting increased profiteering and completely failing to tax surplus wealth.

They have blocked the soldiers' right to vote, through federal ballots, and a bitter-end fight is in progress at this writing against even the faintest concession to our fighting men.

None of these issues are finally settled yet, however. President Roosevelt's veto of the food subsidies ban can be upheld and made to stick. He has also been asked by the CIO to veto the tax bill. And some means to let the servicemen vote may yet be found.

But while we keep up the fight on all these issues, let us also examine the reasons why the tory cross-party clique dare so arrogantly to defy the people's wishes for full voting rights for all servicemen, for control of living costs, and for a fair tax bill based on ability to pay.

These politicians base their hopes for a renewed lease of power at the coming elections on the disfranchisement of as many as possible of some 30 million Americans, who might be expected to vote against them because of their actions.

They include 10 million Americans barred from voting by the polltax; 10 million servicemen and women, most of whom will also be barred by state red tape, if no federal action is taken; and some 10 million war workers who have moved away from their old homes to new war jobs.

To frustrate such hopes of the reactionaries and to elect a real victory Congress—

(1) We must renew our efforts for polltax repeal, which may shortly reach the floor of the Senate.

(2) We must keep up the fight for a full soldiers' vote.

(3) We must throw all our weight behind the campaign of the CIO Political Action Committee to get every working man and woman, and all progressives, registered to vote in the coming elections.

Equal Rights, Unequal Conditions

One of the oldest frauds is up before Congress again.

It is the so-called "equal rights" amendment to the Constitution, and a big drive is on to bring it onto the floor of Congress through a discharge petition.

Most people will agree at once that women should of course enjoy equal rights—and the CIO fights for real equality for women.

So many people innocently endorse the "equal rights" amendment, without looking at what's behind its fair and pleasing mask.

If they looked further, as labor has done, they would find behind the mask the ugly visage of a sweatshop employers' lobby, interested only in obtaining cheap and overworked female labor.

Once adopted, the "equal rights" amendment would be used in every state and industry to destroy existing laws for the protection of women workers against long hours and other conditions detrimental to their physical welfare.

If you are interested in real equality for women in industry, you will support the CIO program for equal job opportunities, equal union rights, and equal pay for equal work—not the phoney "equal rights" amendment.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

AMONG war-boom towns include Miami and those glittering miles of hotel palaces known as Miami Beach.

But don't get any wrong ideas about landing a war production job down there.

We don't mean the kind of boom-town you mean. You won't find new airplane or munition plants, or shipyards, cluttering up Miami Beach.

In the dark of early dawn you may run into folks staggering home from night clubs, but not into leaden-eyed war workers swaying from side to side in packed and jolting street cars on their way to 10-hour jobs.

Sure, it's hard to get rooms in this boom-town too. But it's not a matter of standing in line for a hole in the wall for 30 or 40 bucks a month.

No, at Miami Beach you give the hotel clerk a $50 tip, and he'll fix you up with a nice room for $20 to $35 a day—without meals, of course. Or, if you're lucky, you can get a two-room apartment for $2,500 a month.

And no, pal, before we go any further, we're not writing this piece from anywhere near those golden sands—no such luck. We just read about all this in a widely syndicated series of newspaper articles.

Miami-land, playground of racketeers and other profiteers, always went in for luxury, glitter and glamor that made Arabian Nights stories sound like five-and-ten-cent store stuff.

But in pre-war years it was becoming positively middle-class and even proletarian in spots.

You could drive down in your jalopy, or take a bus or special day-coach train, and have a vacation there for little more than at the average resort—provided you kept away from those gleaming beach castles with "Gentiles Only" signs which pre-dated Hitler.

Then came the war, and with it one of the cleanest acts of social justice that ever happened to Miami-land.

The government said "scat" to the pot-bellied profiteers, racketeers and their kind and took over all the best hotels for some real men. It removed the "Gentiles Only" signs and made the resorts into Army training centers and rest places for returning servicemen.

But this "season" (the months when the idle rich idle in the south instead of in the north), many of the hotels have been returned to private use, and the rich rabble have also returned—and how!

But war has its hardships even for war profiteers. Their pockets have to bulge with so many $50 and $100 bills, to get through the day, that it makes their brick-red or electric-blue wide-bottom pantaloons look positively unsightly.

Even after they've tipped their way ahead of the crowd into a little $2,500-a-month apartment or a $35-a-day room, their troubles are not over.

After an exhausting day lounging on the sand and worrying about the war, and labor "absenteeism," and the unions, and "that man" in the White House and all the rest—and with the weight of a $5, $10 or $20 dinner in their sagging stomachs—the poor fellows have actually to stand in line to get into the best night clubs.

And then the CIO has to complain about a mere 43.5% increase in the cost of living for war workers!

Why they don't even know what HCL means! Who ever heard of a war worker paying $250 for a tie? Yet the Miami-land profiteer playboys are paying anywhere from $50 to $250 for a single tie without a murmur.

And to cover their flat chests, pot bellies and knock-knees from the bathing beauties on the beach, they have to pay $185 for a half-way decent bathrobe.

So the persecuted, over-taxed rich have so few millions left after meeting all these necessary living expenses that they just have to gamble recklessly at Hialeah Park—to the tune of a million dollars in a single day at this racetrack.

Check all these stories of thousands and millions of dollars slipping like sand through the fat hands of the lousy rich at Miami, and plenty of other places, against the Congressional Record and the editorials in your local paper and the millionaire magazines.

Ask the Senators, Congressmen and press stooges of the profiteers what the devil they mean when they say war profits and upper incomes have been "taxed to the limit"—so that the only recourse is a sales tax to soak the poor.

And ask yourself and everyone else what's wrong with at least a $25,000 limit on wartime net incomes as an aid to the morale of our soldiers and war workers—even if it does put a slight crimp in the sales of diamonds, emeralds, multi-colored pantaloons and $250 ties at Miami Beach.

★ Time Out! ★

Prize tale out of Congress this week is the story of Senator "that man" Bilbo, his fight against repeal of the polltax, and his teeth. Seems as though old age caught up with the legislator and his dentist was called upon to make a few replacements. Bilbo, who likes to talk better than he likes to eat, planned to do plenty of filibustering against polltax repeal. Sorely worried about his mumbling due to lack of molars, he approached Senator Pat McCarran, who good-heartedly made an agreement not to call the polltax repeal bill on the floor until Bilbo can be on hand with a full set of choppers to add punch to his windy utterances.

The Marquess of Hartington, running for the British Parliament, has challenged his opponent to a one-hour contest at spreading manure—to prove who is the better man for the job.

Shucks, that's nothing. Bet we have members of our Congress who can spread it thicker and faster than the whole House of Lords—and never stop.

★ ★ ★

A group of the Doukhobor religious sect staged a nude demonstration in Canada this week in protest against military service regulations for conscientious objectors. Apparently they haven't yet heard that people who refuse to fight Hitler not only shed their pants but lose them for good, too!

★ ★ ★

A story from Racine (Wis.) Labor shows what backbone wartime living can give to a person. It seems that the morning mail brought a notice to a Michigan renter from his landlord asking that his property be vacated at once. Confident of his rights under rent control, the unruffled tenant replied:

"Dear Sir:

"I remain,

"Yours truly."

CIO Does Job for Servicemen

CIO Urges U. S. Vote For Armed Forces

Few fights in Congress have caused more argument and more confusion than the question of whether or not the men and women in the armed forces shall vote in 1944.

On one side are the advocates of a simplified Federal system, whereby the serviceman gets a ballot delivered and collected by the Federal government.

On the other side are advocates of a so-called "states' rights" system, whereby 48 different state ballots will have to be distributed to the millions of service people scattered all over the world.

Congressmen and Senators that back President Roosevelt are for the simple, uniform Federal system. The Republicans and a number of Democrats from the polltax states are for the "states' rights" measure.

President Roosevelt, the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy have pointed out that the Federal system is the only efficient and practical one. President Roosevelt, in fact, has called the "states' rights" setup a "fraud" on the services and on the American people.

The labor movement, particularly the CIO, backs the Federal system as the only means of guaranteeing that service people

CIO Backs 4th War Loan

CIO Pres. Philip Murray this month urged CIO members to back the Fourth War Loan drive in '44 by buying more bonds than they did in 1943—$900 million worth, according to the Treasury Dept.

Has More Than Million Members In Uniform

CIO's five and a quarter million men and women want to see the war won as fast as possible and the service people return home to a job and a secure and peaceful life. This is CIO's main aim.

CIO has more than a million and a quarter of its own people in the armed forces and the merchant marine. CIO puts the interests and needs of the armed forces on top of its priority list of things to be done in Washington, with Congress and with the Government agencies.

The CIO record stands clear on these issues:

Service pay: Back in 1941, when the base pay in the Army was $21 a month, the CIO began agitating in Congress to raise this to $50. The raise came through.

Dependents' allowances: Allowances for wives, children and other dependents of servicemen were raised substantially as the result of a CIO and CIO Women's Auxiliary campaign in Congress in 1943.

Before the CIO campaign, the rates were $50 a month for a wife, $12 for the first child, $10 for each additional child.

Today, the rates are $50 for a wife, $30 for the first child, $20 for each additional child.

Mustering-out pay: The CIO worked

A FIRST CLASS WELCOME was extended to servicemen and women at CIO's new Washington, D. C., canteen by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt. She has asked to be placed on the canteen's official hostess register. The First Lady is shown above, acting as a hostess on opening night, Feb. 13. Next to her is Miss Eleanor Nelson, Sec.-Treas. of the CIO United Federal Workers of America. Ex-CIO NEWS Reporter Tells Thrilling Story of Bomber Raid

A former CIO NEWS reporter recently wrote the most exciting story of his life—and darned near lost it in the bargain. The name is Sgt. Walter Peters. The paper he works for is YANK. And the story is about the famous Schweinfurt raid when America's Flying Fortresses blasted Germany's second largest ball-bearing plant with everything except the navigators' instruments.

Peters was lucky enough not to be among the 593 Americans who were reported missing when the Nazis shot down 60 Forts.

PACKED WITH DYNAMITE

Peters, who hails from Providence, R. I., wrote a story about the flight—simple, but packed with dynamite, like:

"There were fighters everywhere, but mostly on our tail. 'The whole goddam Luftwaffey is out today,' somebody said over the interphone. There were single-engined Me. 109s and twin-engined Me. 110s; there were Ju. 88s and FW 190s; there also were Me. 210s, even Dornier bombers, and God only knows what else the Germans had thrown into the fight."

There were fighters all around the Forts and flak so thick "it seemed a miracle we escaped."

"Suddenly we heard a loud, jangling noise, even above the roar of our four engines. We looked toward the navigator. The plate glass on his side was broken. A fragment of flak had found its mark there.

"Zorn lifted his head quickly, took off his gloves and fur cap and felt around that part of his face not covered by the oxygen mask. He winked. He was okay. I took a deep breath—of oxygen.

"Heuser (the co-pilot) was back on the job, his cool voice calling them off again. He reminded me of a stick man at a dice game in a gambling house, but his tone had the confidence that the croupier's doesn't."

There were more fighters and more flak before the big plane headed back across the channel for home. There was kidding back and forth among the crew like when they started off.

As for Pete, "Personally, I just sat back and relaxed, pulled out a cigarette and lit it. The mission was over."

Irishman Helps Jew in Battle For Freedom

The fight for freedom, as outlined by the U. S. Constitution, got a powerful stimulant last month due to the militant action of an aggressive young Irishman named William O'Farrell and to his union, the CIO United Auto Workers.

O'Farrell, whose countrymen have been kicked around plenty, gets sore when he sees some fellow persecuted because he's a Catholic or a Jew or a Protestant or belongs to some other religious faith.

O'Farrell got boiling mad when he saw a quiet little ex-tailor, who has two sons in the Air Force, insulted by a few fellow workers at the Douglas Aircraft Co. near Los Angeles. The workers were laughing at some anti-Semitic leaflets.

O'Farrell, thoroughly disgusted, grabbed the leaflets. They were packed with lies and enough smut to be used as fish bait. He turned them over to the UAW local, which immediately drew up and began circulating petitions bearing the following pledge, with thousands of workers agreeing to abide by it:

"Realizing that unity is indivisible—that the man who speaks against one American on the basis of race, religion or color, speaks against all—I pledge these things:

"That I will not give ear to words of racial or religious hate.

"That I will not be misled by rumors or reports and will not spread either about my fellow Americans.

"That I will give my voice for whatever value it may have to challenge openly and publicly and on the spot any man who speaks in seriousness or jest, along the lines of racial or religious hate."

UAW Postwar Plan Would Guarantee Jobs

Three hundred thousand members of the largest union in the United States have donned battle gear to help our country wipe Hitler, Tojo and other assorted fascists off the map. The union, of course, is the CIO United Automobile, Aircraft & Agricultural Implement Workers of America—more than a million members strong and dedicated to the proposition that every one on the home front must do his utmost to back up the fighting front.

This is the first of a series of articles about what CIO unions have "cooking" in the post-war planning kettle. CIO affiliates generally have two main goals—first, the winning of the war, and second, the construction of a peace that will guarantee to the rank and file people throughout the world jobs, security and freedom.

The theory's good, but the UAW-CIO believes that action is better. UAW-CIO members buy War Bonds by the millions, provide the largest organized source of blood plasma for the services, and contribute millions of dollars yearly to the Red Cross and other war relief agencies.

Whenever a soldier's family meets tough sledding, UAW-CIO local unions shell out financial help, find jobs for needy war widows or for returned veterans. Servicemen's Committees in local unions help them get relocated and readjusted.

About 92% of present UAW-CIO contracts provide that members now in service shall have, when they return, accumulated seniority at the same or nearly the same jobs as the ones they left, if they apply within a 60- or 90-day period after being mustered out.

Servicemen are exempt from union dues as long as they are in service, and they will have no fees to pay to return in good standing.

The UAW-CIO is battling for adequate legislation to meet the needs of returning soldiers. Enemies of labor and of the soldiers credit some of the most effective pressure for a Federal soldier ballot to the CIO, and some of the angriest response to the fraudulent move to deprive the armed forces of the right to vote came from UAW members who recognize that the war can be lost at home unless the unions' political action campaign arouses the people to halt the drive of reaction.

OTHER LEGISLATION

War Policy and Legislative departments are working out other specific legislation to implement the various general demands of the UAW plan, which include:

1. Maximum credits, while in armed forces, under Old Age and Unemployment Compensation laws.

2. An agency to adjust disputed claims without delay.

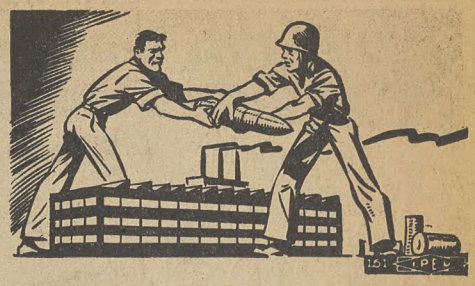
3. Full protection for dependents of those killed and wounded in the war, including an education for minor dependents.

4. Adequate weekly allowances to disabled members of the armed forces and their families, including the establishment of a re-training program for disabled soldiers.

5. A free education, including training for a trade or profession, available to every returned serviceman.

6. A Government-financed program for settling returned servicemen on farm land through individual and community projects.

7. Legal protection to all members of armed services and merchant marine guaranteeing return to former jobs with accumulated seniority.



World Labor Unity Conference Slated for June in London

Labor delegates representing unions from all of the United Nations will meet in London this June in the first world labor conference of modern history.

Union delegates from the CIO, Britain, the Soviet Union, Latin-America and China are getting together to discuss and plan what free world labor can do to speed victory and build a peace based on jobs and security for all peoples.

Pres. Philip Murray, Sec. Treas. James Carey, the nine vice-presidents and General Counsel Lee Pressman will represent the CIO.

The invitation, which came from Sir Walter Citrine, head of the British Trades Union Congress, is in many ways a triumph for President Murray and the CIO.

The CIO originally proposed such a meeting two years ago. From the beginning, the CIO took the position that all United Nations unions should be included, barring none and putting none into any second class or Grade B category.

The AFL, though it was invited, will not be present. AFL top leaders took the line that they couldn't meet with Soviet trade unions or with the CIO, and they've been standing pat on that despite plenty of criticism from their own rank and file members. Thus the AFL will necessarily be left out of world agreements that United Nations labor will make in London.

At the meeting, close to five and a half million CIO workers will be represented; over eight million from Britain; 25 million from the USSR and an estimated three to four million from Latin-America.

In accepting the invitation for CIO, Murray wrote to Citrine that it would "weld the unity of labor, the governments and the peoples of the United Nations in the war against the Axis and assure the establishment of the Four Freedoms in the peace."

One Fight, One Enemy

LOOKING AHEAD

By LEN DE CAUX

THE NEARSIGHTED young political campaigner, going from house to house, found one most sympathetic listener.

"If we don't watch out, we're going to be represented by a greedy, grafting scoundrel," he said.

The man who answered the door nodded and added indignant comments of his own, as his visitor waxed eloquent—until finally he named the candidate he opposed.

"Why, you young jackanapes, that's me you're talking about," the householder exclaimed. "I thought you meant my opponent."

* * *

Most workers remember well the anti-CIO propaganda that filled the papers a few years back. But quite a few didn't realize at first it was really directed against them.

The CIO was frequently pictured as a monster threatening all sorts of evils to working people and the community.

Many workers fell for this propaganda, until they met CIO people and found them to be decent Americans like themselves who had simply joined unions to better their conditions.

* * *

American servicemen have more right than anyone else to curse the slackers, softies, saboteurs, profiteers or any others who through selfishness or malice delay the day of victory.

This paper will be the first to denounce them, whether they be in labor's ranks, in business, politics or anywhere else.

But we shall also expose those who take advantage of the servicemen's long absence from home, to circulate misinformation or wild and lying rumors to poison their minds against American labor—and against their own interests.

* * *

For every unionist who may not measure up, there are millions upon millions of others—your own folks among them—who can look you in the face and say, "We've held the fort."

There's also a too-little-told story about labor's constant efforts to prevent strikes; to boost production; to expose profiteers who obstruct or sabotage; to strengthen the home front; to win higher pay, dependency allowances and mustering-out benefits for servicemen; to win their right to vote, and their right to post-war security and jobs under decent union conditions.

We don't want any servicemen to be in the fix of the politician mentioned above—to realize too late that the labor-baiters and union-busters do mean you and your folks too when they abuse and plot against American labor.

From Amalgamated News & Views

Greetings From CIO President Philip Murray

Through this first Servicemen's Edition of The CIO NEWS, I extend my own hearty greetings and those of the whole CIO to all the men and women in the armed forces of our country, among whom are more than a million and a quarter members of CIO unions.

We want this to be a letter to you from home—from your families, your friends, your sweethearts and your admirers, who are working on the production front to back you up to the limit and to bring you home victorious as soon as possible.

We hope this paper will help to give you a truer picture of what American labor—your own flesh and blood—is doing and thinking and planning in your interests as well as its own and those of our whole country.

Good luck and Godspeed to you all!

Philip Murray,
President, CIO.

WAC Says Workouts Would Make Monkeys Stand Up Straight

"The exercises they give us would make a monkey stand up straight and walk!" That's part of the inside dope about the WACs that was relayed this week to her family by Eva "Bill" Wagner, in training at a Georgia camp. She's the daughter of Martin Wagner, of Washington, D. C., head of the CIO's Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers.

"You should see the outfit we wear. Long-handled drawers, sweat shirts, wool skirts, coveralls and knit cap. We all look like a bunch of stuffed toads but, believe me, when you get out on the open road in one of these open-air jeeps you really appreciate those drawers.

"We started driving this week and so far I've driven a jeep (boy, are those the berries!). You can do anything you want with them, turn on a dime and get nine cents change. I'm really enjoying this and having a swell time."

CIO Pushes For Security Plan

ANYONE who ever drew an unemployment check knows what social security means—the difference between selling apples and having an income that you can rely on temporarily at least until you land another job.

The veterans of the first world war found out all there is to know about selling apples. It's CIO's aim to make sure that veterans of this war never learn a thing about apple selling, or the other kinds of insecurity either.

That's why CIO is pushing hard for Congressional action on the new Social Security bill that will expand and increase the present Social Security system—especially for the men and women coming out of the armed forces.

The new bill, which amends the present law, is called the Murray-Wagner-Dingell bill, after the men who are sponsoring it in Congress. CIO had a big hand in writing it and is taking the leading part in pushing for its early passage.

The first thing every service man will want is a job. Until he gets one, no matter how short the delay, he should be covered by unemployment compensation to see him through the waiting and looking period.

BENEFITS LISTED

Under the new bill, all service people would get $12 a week, plus $6 for each dependent, up to a maximum of $30. This wouldn't depend on your most recent wage earning record, and you'd get it for a maximum of 26 weeks, under the new bill.

Service people will be eligible in the same way for other benefits under the proposed changes in the law.

These include such matters as old age pensions, disability allowances, medical care, hospitalization, aid to dependents and young children, death benefits, and the like.

The new bill would also help service people in getting jobs, by setting up a nation-wide system of U. S. employment offices for all workers. This will be a service to employers as well, and will wipe out the chiselling private agencies that have preyed on workers in the past.

The new bill will cover all workers, including farm workers, domestic workers, seamen and the self-employed. Under the present law, passed nearly 10 years ago, millions of men and women in these categories are left unprotected.

The new social security bill is waiting for hearings in both the House and Senate. High up on CIO's list of progressive legislation is the job of getting this bill passed. CIO aims to get it done in ample time for demobilization after the war.

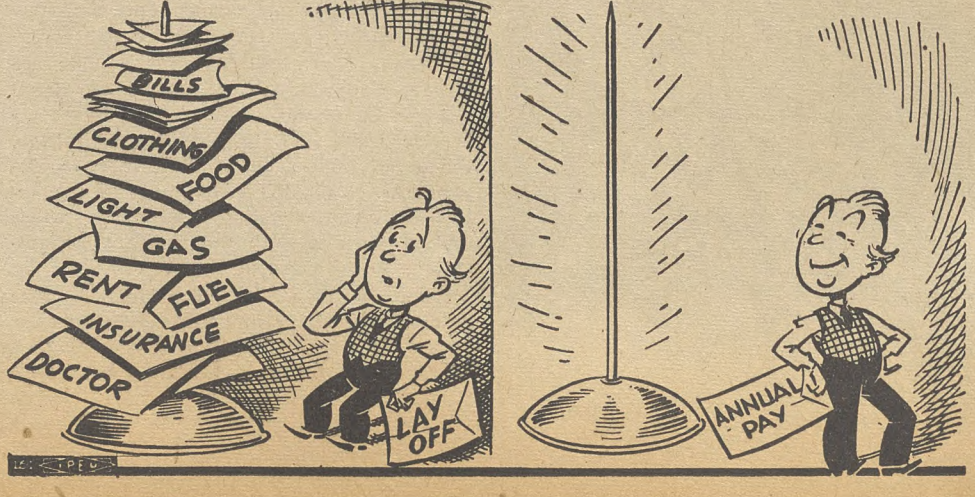
See Annual Pay as Solution For Industry Layoff Problems

One of the curses of a day-wage job has been recurring periods of unemployment, layoffs of a week here, a month and maybe longer there, that take substantial slices out of a worker's yearly income.

It's a cinch that after the war the landlords will still want their rent 12 months a year. The kids are still going to be hungry 365 days out of 365. And shoes and pants and hats and overcoats will still wear out at the same old rate. What's to be done about this, for servicemen and everyone else, after the war is over?

CIO has a plan—a guaranteed annual wage, proposed in current contract discussions by Pres. Philip Murray of the United Steelworkers.

Murray's thinking goes like this: If industry can be guaranteed postwar security by tax refunds, enormous reserves in profits, and other devices, it isn't too much to expect that workers be guaranteed similar protection from unemployment and hunger. The annual wage, he says, is the answer.



Cost of Living Up? Try Eating A Hamburger!

Any serviceman buying a hamburger recently knows a lot about the cost of living—the way hamburgers have shot up in price and slid down to the sawdust level in quality.

That the cost of living has risen 43.5 per cent is proved in a detailed study made by the CIO and AFL and presented to President Roosevelt.

The average rise is nearly twice what government figures estimate. Food is up 74 percent, clothing 72.2 percent, household goods 62 percent, rent 15 percent.

These big jumps hit the workers hard, with their wage rates fixed by law at 15 percent above 1941 by the Little Steel formula. They hit hard at servicemen's families too, with their allowances fixed by law.

That is why the CIO is constantly fighting to push the cost of living down, why it has led in the fight to increase servicemen's dependency allowances, and why it is asking for an end to the "Little Steel" wage formula.

Women, Bless 'Em, Can Do Almost Anything!

Never underestimate the power of a woman! Latest news from the war production front is that they have "invaded" the complicated machine tool industry. And one CIO gal—Mrs. Maude Mark of Aberdeen, Wash.—is doing OK as a "whistle punk" in a logging camp! Says she likes the work, too.

CIO, Vets' Groups Lead Drive for Service Aid

Close to a million veterans of the anti-Axis war have already been mustered out of the armed forces. Thousands more are returning to civilian life, chiefly for medical reasons.

Both the CIO and the veterans organizations are concerned about their welfare. Both want to see that they get proper treatment, proper help in rehabilitation, proper financial aid and other protections.

Early in 1943, the CIO began getting together with the leading veterans' organizations in the country to work on common objectives. Meetings and consultations have been held between CIO and the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the Disabled American Veterans and the American Legion.

The CIO has worked with these veterans' organizations on mustering-out pay, disability compensation, aid to dependents, educational help, the soldiers' vote and the like.

JOBS, SECURITY ARE GOAL

CIO's primary aim for the returned veterans—and about 1,250,000 CIO members are now in the armed forces—is jobs and security after the war. At a recent CIO national conference on postwar jobs, a representative from the Disabled Veterans was a featured speaker. CIO officials work with veterans' leaders on problems in Congress.

Contrary to some reports, CIO has no plans for a separate veterans' organization after the victory. CIO is working now with all the leading groups of veterans—and aims to continue doing so through the postwar years.

LAST JOB

Art Young's 1943 Christmas Card, Drawn Only a Few Weeks Before He Died

Art Young, Cartoonist, Dies

One of the nation's best known cartoonists, Art Young, is dead. Famed for his outspoken social consciousness and for his devotion to labor, he died last month at the age of 77, in New York City.

Some of Young's best drawings were noted for a rare combination of humor and sharp social protest. One of his best showed a hot, bedraggled woman beside a stove reminding her fagged out husband that he has nothing to kick about—he's been working in a nice, cool sewer all day.

Cowan Kiled in Action

Reported killed in action recently was James Cowan, 23-year-old son of Nathan Cowan, national director of CIO's Legislative Dept. Young Cowan's three brothers—all in the services—have sworn to avenge him.

Fighting with the U. S. Army is Pfc. Joseph W. Murray, 28-year-old son of CIO Pres. Philip Murray. Young Murray, a photographer with the Signal Corps, has been chasing Mussolini for the last five months, according to his cousin, Miss Mercedes Daughtery, who's oldster Murray's niece and secretary.

closely with the veterans' organizations on this bill to give a mustered-out serviceman a stake to help in readjustment to civilian life. The present law, which CIO was active in securing, provides mustering-out pay up to $300.

Meantime, CIO is continuing to work with the veterans' organizations on further benefits for returned service people. Obviously the whole problem won't be solved by one lump sum payment at the time of discharge.

Postwar education: Two major bills are before Congress to provide educational chances in schools and colleges for former service people. Both provide for tuition, living allowances, and allotments to dependents. The CIO is on record for practical and generous educational opportunities, and is working with the veterans' organizations to push the program.

Emergency disability aid: Hardship cases result from delays in benefit payments for wounded or medically discharged personnel. The CIO supported a bill in Congress to provide cash aid to these cases, to help the men through period between discharge and their regular compensation. Congress action on this item is still pending.

U. S. Sets Output Record

A united front of American workers, their trade unions and industry, have done a bang-up war production job that has furnished the guns and tanks and planes and ships needed for America's fighting men to smash the enemy.

Here's the score from '41 to '43 as announced by the U. S. War Production Board. One month before Pearl Harbor the index was 100—now it's more than six times that much! The figures follow:

37,600 Killed In Industry

Washington, Feb. 19—Deaths from industrial accidents in the United States from Pearl Harbor to Jan. 1, 1944 numbered 37,600, the OWI reported recently.

In the same period, 210,000 industrial workers were permanently disabled and 4,500,000 temporarily disabled.

Wallace Warns Of Native Fascists

Jobs for those able to work, good food and housing, enough hospitals, extension of rural electrification, and better schools are what the American people want and are determined to have when victory is won, Vice-Pres. Wallace said last week in a West Coast speech.

He warned the people to be on guard against "American fascists," whom he defined as "those who believe that Wall Street comes first and the country second and who are willing to go to any length through press, radio and demagogue to keep Wall Street safely sitting on top of the country."

Votes for Soldiers

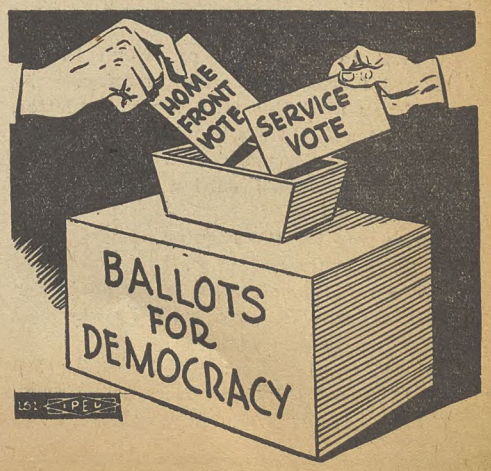
will get a chance to exercise their right to vote. Countless thousands of letters and wires, and scores of CIO delegations have poured in on Congress asking for a Federal voting system.

The House and Senate are trying now (Feb. 18) to resolve the differences between the Federal voting bill of the Senate and the "states' rights" measure of the House.

After this is done, both Houses must pass an identical bill and send it to the President for signature or veto.

In the 1942 elections, a "states' rights" voting system was in operation. Under it, only 28,000 service people voted.



Stretching $'s Further

Servicemen's dependents, low-paid salaried workers, and others receiving relatively fixed incomes are vitally concerned with CIO's campaign to keep down the cost of food, which is the major item in most persons' budget.

Sample of what rising prices mean to poorly paid workers was testimony this month before a Senate committee. Two government girls, members of the CIO United Federal Workers Union, told of their troubles. One was $26.50 in the hole at the end of three months and the other had only $7.13 left of her "high" wages—AFTER borrowing $115 to help meet expenses. She still owes the $115 too.

CIO's program to aid such people urges Congress to keep food prices low to consumers by using subsidies, which would be paid to farmers. The subsidies would allow the farmers to produce more food at prices the consumers can pay. Funds for the subsidies would come from taxes on inflated incomes and war profits.

VETS BACK CIO

Backing up CIO's position, Omar B. Ketchum, legislative representative of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, put it this way:

"The average monthly payments to recipients of allotments and allowances are less than $60, while monthly payments to veteran recipients average about $40. At least half of the income of these groups goes to purchase food. Every time the price of food increases it means real and definite hardship.

"So far as we know, the only sound method yet advanced to absorb any increased production costs without passing them along in a vicious spiral to consumers, is through use of subsidies."

The same position applies to industrial workers' food budgets. Despite talk of "inflated wages," there has been no general wage increase since 1941 beyond the 15 percent in the "Little Steel formula" adopted by the government as a base for wage increases.

CIO War Relief Committee Helps Armed Forces

When the 1941 convention of the CIO established the National CIO War Relief Committee, it signified CIO's determination not to be content merely with producing for victory — all-important as that may be—but to contribute money for services for the armed forces.

During the past two years, the CIO has raised through its war relief committee some 50 million dollars to help service the varied needs of our allies and our own fighting men.

Thanks to these millions of dinner-pail dollars given by CIO workers to the USO and the Red Cross, hundreds of thousands of our boys in uniform are finding much-needed recreational facilities close to wherever they may be stationed.

Many a day-room in domestic army camps has been furnished and equipped with athletic supplies and musical instruments bought with contributions of CIO members.

In cities like Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Harrisburg, hundreds of soldiers nightly enjoy dancing and refreshments at labor-sponsored, labor-constructed, labor-operated USO canteens.

And on a battlefield somewhere overseas, the lives of American fighters are being saved by blood donated by CIO workers.

A less dramatic, nevertheless valuable service rendered by the National CIO War Relief Committee has been its pocket-sized CIO Servicemen's Manual, distributed free to approximately 200,000 servicemen.

Because it briefly and clearly explains the answers to all sorts of legal and legislative questions that befuddle many upon induction, the CIO Servicemen's Manual is one of the most popular booklets among the armed forces.

CIO Steel Plan Would Aid Servicemen

Pittsburgh, Feb. 19—Hundreds of thousands of dollars for servicemen and women returning to work in the steel industry will be provided them on their discharge if a plan advocated by the CIO United Steelworkers of America is accepted.

The plan, submitted by the union to the Natl. War Labor Board, proposes that all steel workers in the industry contribute $20 each, out of whatever wage increases they may get from current negotiations to offset the rise in the cost of living.

The union proposes that the total sum be matched by industry and be turned over to steelworkers in the armed forces when they are mustered out.

Blow For Democracy

China is one of the four major Allies among the United Nations. The United States Congress has recognized this fact by repealing the Chinese Exclusion Act, thus providing for the admission of 105 Chinese a year to the United States, in exactly the same proportion as immigrants from most other nations are admitted. The repeal this month became law when President Roosevelt signed it.

Army Paper Hails Unions As Bulwarks Against Fascism

"It is well to remember that the trade union movement is one of the first bulwarks against Fascism," and that "organized labor with a few minor exceptions . . . has put itself unstintingly behind the war effort." That was the tone taken in the lead editorial in a recent issue of the Midpacifican, "Army Newspaper in Hawaii."

The editorial, "Soldiers are Workingmen Too," said in full:

"Note must be taken of the way certain periodicals reaching soldiers have begun a campaign against labor. This is not new. As in the present case, such drives are based on half-truths, omissions and a paternalistic 'this hurts me more than it does you' attitude.

"Soldiers, generally, are concerned about this unfair carping. Most of them are working men. It is estimated that nearly a million are trade union members. (Editor's Note: The figure is over two million.)

"It is well to remember that the trade union movement is one of the first bulwarks against Fascism. This is proven by the fact that the unions were among the first to feel the iron heel of the Fascists in Germany, Italy and Japan.

"Organized labor, with a few minor exceptions and particularly that of John L. Lewis, has put itself unstintingly behind the war effort. This is proven by U. S. Dept. of Labor figures on the few manhours lost on account of strikes. Labor has won the Battle of Production in 1943. And as to what every soldier thinks of Lewis, that needs no comment.

ONE-SIDED VERSIONS

"Any time a labor dispute is reported, the published version, with few exceptions, is colored in favor of the employer. Yet there are always two sides to any dispute. In these days the working people need a few dollars more to cover the ever-rising costs of living.

"Judging from the financial reports in the Wall Street Journal, industry is well able to comply with such demands. The biggest profit in its history is being piled up despite propaganda to the contrary. The reports include both steel and railroads, now figuring in current disputes.

"The soldier, who is a working man in khaki, asks that both sides be given an even break before going off half-cocked with misleading and hate-producing articles."

FDR Vetoes Ban On Food Subsidy

(See Voting List, This Page)

BULLETIN: President Roosevelt's veto of the high price and hunger bill (HR 3477) that bars use of subsidies to hold food costs down was upheld by a House vote of 226 to 151 today. This means that the polltaxer-Republican gang was not able to get the two-thirds vote together to upset the FDR veto.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19—The high-price and hunger bill banning food subsidies went through both houses of Congress this week and was sent over to the White House, where President Roosevelt is expected to veto it.

The bill (HR 3477) contains an absolute ban on use of subsidies to hold food prices even at present levels. If the President's veto is overthrown, average food prices will increase at least 10 percent and many items much more. One little amendment in the bill, for example, would jack milk up one to two cents a quart at once, more later.

Writing for CIO support to the veto, Legislative Director Nathan Cowan told affiliates: "It means about five cents a pound on meat, three cents on a pound of cheese, one cent a quart on milk (even without the Eastland amendment, and much more with it), and similar increases on certain vegetables and bread."

Cowan urged CIO members to pour the letters and wires in on Representatives and Senators. Those who voted against HR 3477 should be urged to stand firm behind the veto, those who voted for it urged to change their vote.

Meantime, the reactionary-Republican-polltax Democrat gang in both House and Senate that engineered the fight for inflated food prices has been openly threatening to get price control even if they lose to the veto.

This will be done, their spokesmen boasted, by strangling price control and subsidies when the present price control act expires June 30, and must come up for renewal.

Its a god idea to keep an eye on that item too. President Roosevelt asked for full extension of the act when it comes up in June, in his January 11 five-point message. CIO wants it extended too. Start mentioning it to your Congressman in your letters to him now.

Double Flank Attack On Labor—Watch It!

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19—Keep your eye on a double flank attack now being steamed up against labor and against the entire national interest of this country.

The double attack is shaping up on two proposed constitutional amendments, one masquerading under the label of "Equal Rights," the other openly calling for a 75 percent elimination of the income tax.

The "Equal Rights Amendment" is a phony device to kill labor laws that has been kept alive by a small and determined group for about 25 years. The income tax elimination is a new one, thought up by Frank E. Gannett's reactionary "Committee for Constitutional Government." (See John Carlson's book "Under Cover" expose of Gannett and his committee as a native fascist agency.)

The "Equal Rights Amendment" pretends to be simply a means of giving equal rights to all women with men. Under this disguise, it has succeeded in sucking in a lot of people who should know better—including Vice-President Wallace—to support it.

WOULD KILL GOOD LAWS

Actually, as the Womens Division of the U. S. Labor Dept., as labor and as all progressive women's organizations have been pointing out for a generation, the "Equal Rights Amendment" would automatically abolish all laws that protect women workers against industrial hazards, unhealthy working conditions, sweatshops and other extreme exploitation.

Once that was accomplished, the way would be open to abolish all similar labor laws protecting men workers, and the whole structure of progressive social legislation would be open to attack.

"Equal Rights," for all its venerable age, is not decrepit. Only this week it got a new toehold on the floor of Congress, when Rep. Cannon (D., Fla.) put a Discharge Petition for it on the Speaker's desk.

"KILLED" LAST YEAR

This was done after the House Judiciary Committee killed the bill last year as a menace to labor and to national unity. Its wealthy backers and the forces still further behind them hope to persuade or cajole 218 Congressmen into signing the petition, which will bring it up for debate and final vote.

The situation is even more threatening in the Senate, where the bill can be called up at any time, since the Senate Judiciary Committee (also last year has reported it favorably.

The Gannet income tax limitation hasn't got nearly as far, but it's making up in speed for what it lacks in seniority. Introduced last year, it has already passed through 14 state legislatures as a resolution urging Congress to take action on the amendment.

Prize Plum to Rich

Gannett's prize plum to the rich would put a top limit on all income taxes of 25 percent. Thus, a million dollar income would pay no more than $250,000 in taxes, a $100,000 income $25,000, and so on down the line.

Sales Tax Wedge

This, of course, would mean a huge revenue loss that would have to be made up out of low incomes, since the U. S. Constitution would limit revenue from income tax. It would pave the way for the sales tax and every kind of repressive burden on the wage earner, the farmer and the poor generally.

Under the Federal Constitution, a constitutional amendment is passed by a two-thirds majority in both Houses of Congress, which must be ratified by 36 state legislatures or by a special convention of the 48 states. Gannett's drive to get favorable resolutions through the states is intended to build up the appearance of a "demand" for the amendment, and will be followed by pressure on the Federal Congress.

Both these drives are aimed against you, your working and living and eating conditions, and against the welfare of the nation. Watch them—and start writing your Congressmen now to stay away from both.

Senate Record On Bill Banning Food Subsidies

This is the 43-to-28 vote in the Senate that seeks to pave the way for hunger and inflation. It was taken Friday, Feb. 11.

The bill has been vetoed by President Roosevelt, as he vetoed a similar bill last year, and the House has sustained the veto. Wire your two Senators to do likewise, unless they've done so by the time you read this. Then start the pressure again for a bill that will allow the use of subsidies to hold the food price line.

TWENTY-ONE years ago last January, a mechanic named Paul Lukavich signed his first pay voucher as a Studebaker employee.

His son Steve, now in the Marine Corps, was then a chubby baby two years old.

They worked there together till a year ago when Steve became a Marine.

Like the Lukaviches, many other Studebaker father-and-son teams have parted company for the duration—but the solid principles of Studebaker craftsmanship endure.

The huge quantities of Wright Cyclone engines that Studebaker builds for the Boeing Flying Fortress—the tens of thousands of Studebaker military trucks in the service of the United Nations and the other vital Studebaker war matériel—are your assurance of the kind of quality to expect when the war is won and Studebaker car and truck manufacturing can be resumed.

Studebaker-built Cyclone engines keep swarms of Flying Fortresses flying—And Studebaker craftsmen build much other vital war matériel, including vast quantities of heavy-duty war trucks. Studebaker is proud of its part in our country's huge war production program.

Minneapolis Health Plan Aids Nursery Schools

By SUNNY PRESSMAN
Staff Writer, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

This is a story about a unique plan adopted by the City of Minneapolis to aid working mothers. The plan provides for medical service for children attending nursery schools, thus helping to solve one of the worst problems of their operation. The system might well be copied by other cities whose administrators are interested in checking absenteeism in vital war plants.

"Oh! but he really isn't sick. He only has a little sniffle."

"I'm sorry, Mrs. Brown, we can't take a chance of exposing the other children. Keep Johnny home today. If his sniffle clears up by tomorrow, we'll be glad to have him with us again."

"But there is no one home to take care of him. It means I'll have to take the day off from work. You know I missed two days last week too."

"That's too bad, Mrs. Brown. I honestly wish I could help you. But you see we're still working on the problem of how to take care of the children who aren't really sick and yet shouldn't be playing with the other children at the nursery."

"Well, then, what's the use of keeping my job at the factory. I want to do a good job and keep up a good record, and besides I need the money really bad. You know, John, my husband, is in the Army now and with sky high prices for food and clothes for the kids, it's impossible to get along on just the money you get from a soldier's pay. But excuse me, please, I know you're busy, and I don't want to take up your time with my troubles. Thanks, just the same.

"Come, Johnny, today we go home together."

Mrs. Brown was thinking her thoughts aloud—and the thoughts of Mrs Jones, and Mrs. Smith and the rest of our working mothers who have to work to keep their families going—and at the same time want to do their share to keep the supplies rolling to their men at the front and get this war over quick.

Happening Every Day

This isn't a story about one particular mother and one war nursery center—the same thing is happening every day all over the country.

Getting a nursery set up in the neighborhood so mothers will be able to work on the farm or in the factory with some peace of mind—is only the first step in tackling the problem of our manpower shortage.

The next and most important step is to cut absenteeism to a minimum, by solving problems like care of sick children which keep women at home.

There's one city that has solved this problem very successfully—that city is Minneapolis. First they tried all the makeshift methods. They got promises from neighbors. They arranged for one woman in the neighborhood to take a few children. But they found that unless care was arranged on a full-time paid basis, it just wouldn't work.

Then the Child Care Committee turned to the head of the Public Health Service for suggestoins. He, in cooperation with the chief of staff of the hospital, arranged for the nursery schools to use a wing in the city hospital as an isolation center. Children with mild sniffles and minor illnesses are taken to this wing directly from nursery school.

The public health nurse makes the rounds of the 11 nursery centers in Minneapolis, every day, picks up the children that need to be separated from the rest of the group, and takes them to the hospital.

Nursery Wing

Three rooms are set aside for the nursery wing, two rooms with several beds separated by glass partitions and a play room, where the children can play together when they are well enough.

Three trained nursery school teachers are in charge of the wing—who were willing to work irregular hours. The teachers arrange their time schedule to suit themselves. A trained nurse is on duty at night. The children aren't treated like sick patients. They have the same play and attention they would have at nursery school.

NEED MEDICAL CARE: Kids like these in a nursery school in England (which is far ahead of the United States in child care) need medical service as an adjunct to their schooling. See adjoining story for details of a unique plan being tried by Minneapolis.

Of course, the nurse and doctor are available when needed.

For this service the mothers pay 50c a day for each child. Some children stay two or three days, before the doctor gives the okay to leave. One family had three children taking turns with sniffles at the nursery wing in the hospital. The mother didn't lose a day at her job, while the children were getting excellent care.

If a child develops some serious illness the mother can have the child transferred to a ward or put under a private doctor's care.

The Committee ran an open house one evening for parents to come to the nursery wing and see the place for themselves. Their response was very enthusiastic. And as a result, absenteeism on the part of mothers is being reduced to a minimum, and the great relief from worry about their children is releasing new energy for more and better production.

Here is one example of what can be done if we put our heads together, and canvass every possibility in the community. Congratulations, Minneapolis, on a job well done.

Penniless Mother Abandons Child, Couldn't Get Job Due to Lack of Nurseries

NEW YORK, Feb. 19—A penniless mother, the wife of a soldier overseas, and their 11-month-old daughter this week provided dramatic proof of the need for extension of child care facilities in the interests of common humanity and of winning the war.

The mother was Mrs. Elinore Stefanski, 21 years old, whose husband is with the Army in England. She lives at 285 Bedford Ave., Brooklyn.

Mrs. Stefanski was arrested this week, accused of abandoning her child, Barbara. She said that she did so because she did not have sufficient funds to feed the baby, and could not find a job because there was no one to care for the child while Mrs. Stefanski searched for work.

She left Barbara one night this week at the Brooklyn Blood Donor Bank headquarters and the next day managed to find a job to supplement the meager Army allotment of only $80 a month that was insufficient to support her and the baby. Up until two months ago the allotment was only $62, Mrs. Stefanski said.

Faced with a mountain of debt, Mrs. Stefanski took what she thought was the only way out. The drastic step may be the family's salvation, for the court which heard her case affected a reconciliation between her and her estranged mother, with the hope that care will be provided for Barbara while Mrs. Stefanski holds down the job that she needs to keep her family alive.

Women's 'Rights' Line Slick and Dangerous

By ELEANOR FOWLER
Sec.-Treas., CIO Women's Auxiliaries

Don't be too hard on Vice-President Wallace. He didn't realize what he was doing when he endorsed the Equal Rights Amendment. The Women's Party simply swooped down on him and put it to him this way:

"Millions of women are doing a magnificent job on the production lines of our war plants. We owe it to them to ensure them equality of treatment with their men fellow workers. Let's guarantee them equal rights in the constitution by passing the equal rights amendment."

See how good it sounds? They don't bother to say that equality means to them elimination of minimum wage and maximum hours laws for women where men don't have the some protection. And that the equal rights amendment would immediately toss into the waste basket all the protective legislation for women which labor has struggled to achieve.

The Women's Party lobbyists are smooth talkers, too. Really articulate. One of them honored me with a two-hour monologue one day when I incautiously sat down in the Senate waiting room.

A number of Congressmen who introduced equal rights amendment resolutions last year told me that they did it to get some peace in their offices. They didn't realize what they were doing either.

WOULD KILL BENEFITS

They hadn't stopped to figure out that the equal rights amendment would make unconstitutional the benefits to wives and widows of men covered by the Social Security Act since there is no provision in the act for payments to husbands and widowers of women who are insured.

The National Council of Catholic Women, the YWCA, the American Association of University Women, the League of Women Voters, the National Council of Jewish Women, the National Trade Union League are among the national women's groups which have consistently opposed the equal rights amendment. They realize that it would destroy state wage and hour laws for women and bring back sweatshop employment for thousands of unorganized women who cannot secure better standards without the protection of these laws.

They realize that it would deprive wives, widows, mothers and children of many legal protections they now have and need.

NEW CAMPAIGN

There are still laws in some states which forbid women to serve on juries, to hold certain offices, to handle their property without the consent of their husbands, etc. All labor and women's organizations will continue to co-operate in eliminating these discriminations, through specific legislation which will not endanger other gains made by women.

The Women's Party has launched a new campaign for passage of the equal rights amendment; they are urging Congressmen to sign a discharge petition to bring it directly onto the floor of the House for a vote. They have to get 218 Congressmen to sign that petition.

Let's take warning from the experience of Vice-President Wallace. It's up to us to see that our Congressmen understand fully what the amendment means so they can't be fooled into signing. Sit down and write today.

Urge Unemployed Benefits For Merchant Seamen

Washington, Feb. 19—A 10-woman delegation from the Natl. Maritime Union's auxiliary this week presented the House merchant and fisheries committee with a scroll signed by 35,000 Americans in 29 states urging quick enactment of unemployment insurance legislation for merchant seamen.

Headed by Mrs. Alice Barrot, assistant national director of the NMU women's auxiliary, the group had delegates from the ports of Baltimore, Boston, Philadelphia, Providence and New York.

Before the house committee is committee print No. 1, which would for the first time extend to unemployed merchant seamen the benefits received by all shoreside workers.

"The need for such legislation now, when it is possible to build up a large reserve fund because of peak employment, cannot be overemphasized," Mrs. Barrot said. "when peace comes, we must not forget the mangificent contribution our merchant seamen are making towards winning the war."

Labor, Industry, Farmers Vets In Postwar Talks

Atlantic City, N. J., Feb. 19—A conference to "explore the possibility of a common postwar program" is scheduled to meet here this week-end under the sponsorship of the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers. Representatives of "major segments of the economic system," including labor, business, farm and veterans groups have been invited to attend.

CIO representatives expected to be present are James B. Carey, National CIO secretary-treasurer; Clinton S. Golden, assistant to the president of the United Steelworkers; and David MacDonald, secretary-treasurer of that union.

WACs Swell, Says CIO Girl

Washington, Feb. 19—Take it from a CIO girl in the WAC's "the exercises they give us would make a monkey stand up straight and walk." That's part of the inside dope relayed this week by Eva "Bill" Wagner to her family here. Her father is Martin Wagner, head of CIO's Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers.

"I feel swell all the time; of couse, at night you're so tired you could drop, especially after wearing our 'Lil Abners' (that's what we call our high top shoes) all day.

"You should see the outfit we wear. Long handled drawers, sweat shirt, wool shirts, coveralls and knit cap. We all look like a bunch of stuffed toads but believe me when you get out on the open road in one of those open-air jeeps you really appreciate those drawers.

"We started driving this week and so far I've driven a jeep (boy are those the berries!) You can do anything you want with them, turn on a dime and get nine cents change. I'm really enjoying this and having a swell time."

Canada Unions Win Change in Pay Order

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 19—Political action by CIO unions brought prompt action from the government last week when, a few hours after 100 war workers arrived at the Parliament Buildings, Prime Minister King announced that a protested order-in-council on wage freezing would be amended.

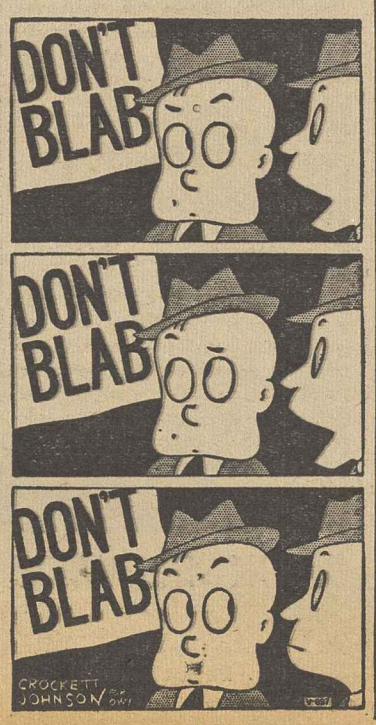
The workers, coming mainly from CIO Electrical, Auto and Gas, Coke and Chemical unions, spent several days interviewing the 245 members of Parliament individually and presenting labor's viewpoint on the wage order and the forthcoming collective bargaining code.

One newspaper described it as the "grass roots movement" of labor.

This was the first organized effort of Canadian CIO unions on political action and it was the unanimous opinion that much influence had been brought to bear on the government. The drive culminated nation-wide protests of both CIO and AFL unions against the order-in-council.

Chief criticisms of the order were that it forbade wage adjustments unless the cost of the product were not increased; froze cost of living bonuses at indefinite amounts of 95 cents and $4.95 weekly; provided that a worker was guilty until proven innocent of violations of the order; and reduced labor representation on a national board from one in three to one in six.

Pres. A. R. Mosher and Sec.-Treas. Pat Conroy, at a meeting with the Cabinet, criticized the government for its anti-labor policies and its failure to consult labor.



CIO Planes Help Navy Flyers Become 'Aces'

Washington, Feb. 19—"Fly a union-built plane and became an 'ace'." That, according to the U. S. Navy, is what Marine aviators in the South Pacific are saying when they refer to Vought Corsair planes, built by members of the CIO United Auto Workers Union.

The Navy Dept. said this week that more than three score Marine aviators using the Corsairs have shot down five or more enemy aircraft each to earn the title of "ace."

AFL Ban on Intl. Labor Meet Hit by Affiliate

VANCOUVER, B. C., Feb. 19 (ALN)—The Vancouver Trades and Labor Council (AFL), at its regular meeting this week, passed a vote of censure on the AFL executive council for refusing to attend the world labor conference in London next June and called on heads of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada "immediately to consider the question of sending delegates to the conference."

Pointing out that the CIO, CTAL and labor organizations in many other parts of the world have already accepted the British invitation, Tom Parkin, of the Machinists, said:

"The conference will lay the basis for labor's program in the vital postwar period. It is regrettable that the AFL executive has taken this position in opposition to the wishes and interests of its six million members."

Referring to the AFL council's argument that the London conference should have been called by the International Federation of Trade Unions, instead of by the TUC, Peter Munro of the Street Railwaymen's Union said:

"What is important is not which organization has called the conference, but the fact that it has been called at all. It will be a tremendous factor in world labor's fight against fascism. Canada should send her own delegates.

"The position of the AFL leaders is exactly that of those reactionary isolationists in the United States who are now fighting the Teheran Declaration."

Sam Shearer, of the Railway Carmen's Union, declared: "This clique in the AFL council, who would sacrifice the working class rather than give up their hatred of the Soviet Union, must be forced to altar their suicidal position."

ILO Parley Invites Axis Unions Here!

London, Feb. 19 (ALN)—The formal invitations to Axis satellites—especially Finland—to send delegates to the Intl. Labor Office conference in Philadelphia next April are causing concern in British trade union circles.

"I am quite sure that there will be very considerable opposition from British labor to Finland's presence," John Brown, secretary of the Iron and Steel Trade Confederation and a member of the British Trades Union Congress general council, declared today. "The matter will certainly be raised at the Feb. 23 meeting of the TUC general council," he added.

Expressing the eagerness of Finnish government and labor officials to be present at the ILO meeting, Eera Vuori, president of the Finnish Trades Union Federation, declared this week that everything ought to be done" to make transportation possible and added: "It would be indeed regrettable if the unfortunate diplomatic situation between Finland and England should keep us from the conference."

One Helsinki official stated that Finnish representatives would get to Philadelphia "even if they have to use a submarine."

Finland is at war with Britain and the Soviet Union, but not with U. S. Rumania and Hungary, the other Axis satellites invited by the ILO, are at war with all the United Nations.

Bolivia Labor Decree Timed To CTAL Visit

La Paz, Bolivia, Feb. 19 (ALN)—On Feb. 8, the day after the arrival here of Guadencio Peraza, special investigator for the Confederation of Latin American Workers (CTAL) of conditions in Bolivia, the government issued a new labor decree providing:

1. For free association for labor unions;

2. That no previous government authorization is needed to form trade unions;

3. That no bona fide labor official can be removed from his job until charges against him are proved.

British Labor Fights Living Cost Index

LONDON, Feb 19 (ALN)—The weekly wage rates of all British workers—including agricultural employes—increased 5 per cent during 1943, bringing the total increase since the start of the war in September, 1939, to 38 per cent, the Ministry of Labor announced this week. These figures do not take into account increased earnings through overtime and extension of payment by results (incentive pay).

The average wage rate increase in 1943 amounted to four shillings and fourpence (88 cents) per week. The cost of living, however, has gone up 45 percent, according to British labor.

The Ministry of Labor announced that its cost-of-living index, which stood at 55 in Sept., 1939, remained steady at 99 throughout last year. This rise of 44 points during the war is equivalent to an increase of 28 percent.

Commenting on this percentage rise, the London Times says this week: "It appears therefore that average wage rates have risen more than the cost-of-living."

British labor, however, sharply disagrees with this view, maintaining that the Ministry of Labor's cost-of-living index is wrongly weighted and that living costs have actually risen more than 45 percent during the war. The Oxford Institute of Statistics estimates a 45 percent cost-of-living increase between Sept., 1939, and Jan., 1943.

CIO to Attend Labor Meet in Montevideo

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19—CIO will attend the Feb. 25 conference in Montevideo, Uruguay, called by Lombardo Toledano, head of the Confederation of Latin-American Labor (CTAL), CIO President Murray said this week in appointing Martin Kyne, Retail and Wholesale Workers, as delegate.

Kyne's appointment came after consultation with Jacob S. Potofsky, chairman of the CIO Latin-American Affairs Committee. He has previously made trips to Latin-America, and served on a joint commission investigating the murder of hundreds of Bolivian tin-miners and their wives and children under the Penaranda regime.

The conference will deal with the serious threats to western hemisphere democracy and military security created by the pro-Axis coups in Argentina and Bolivia.

Toledano, in issuing the invitation earlier this month, warned of a possible military attack on Brazil, which is at war with the Axis, through neighboring Argentina. He also pointed out that Argentine severance of relations with Germany did not mean a change to a pro-United Nations policy by the Argentine dictatorship.

German fascism, seeing defeat in the war, is already preparing bases for a new war in Latin-America, Toledano warned. Only the unity of the workers of all the Western Hemisphere can block this line of retreat and recuperation for the Nazis.

Alejandro Carillo, editor of the Mexican labor daily "El Popular" and head of the Workers University there, told The CIO NEWS this week that Toledano and a full delegation of CTAL representatives will attend the world labor conference called in London June 5. Altogether, about 20 Latin-American delegates will attend, Carillo said.

Carey Backs Anti-Bias Parley

Washington, Feb. 19—"A free labor movement is dependent on the ability of its members to perpetuate the principles on which this nation was founded," CIO Sec'y-Treas. James B. Carey said in a statement issued this week in support of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, which has set aside Feb. 20-26 as Brotherhood Week.

"It seems rather incredible that while we fight a war against Hitlerism on one hand, we can cultivate religious persecution in our American cities on the other," Carey declared in the statement, sent to all CIO-affiliated unions.

Urging workers "to respect the tradition of freedom which has allowed them to organize in trade unions and to worship in the churches of their choice," Carey said that union members "must remain conscious of the necessity to fight actively against religious and racial discrimination in all form wherever they encounter it."

A declaration urging nation-wide observance of Brotherhood Week has been issued by President Roosevelt. "We on the home front must see that history shall not repeat itself in postwar hatred and intolerance," he said.

U. S. Movie Tells Story Of Negro Soldiers

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19—"The Negro Soldier," a moving picture made by the U. S. Army Signal Corps, was shown at a special preview this week to military and civilian representatives interested in bettering racial relations in the armed forces.

Directed by Col. Frank Capra, of Hollywood fame, the picture tells the story of participation by Negroes in wars fought by the United States.

Conveniently sliding over the Civil War in a few feet of film, the picture traces the role of Negro soldiers from Crispus Attucks, an ex-slave who was a hero of the Revolutionary War, to the present conflict.

The picture uses the device of narration by a minister and the mother of a soldier, dramatizing most parts of the story, to show the contribution that Negroes are making in the war against fascism

'Digest' Hit, 'New Yorker' Withdraws Reprint Rights

NEW YORK, Feb. 19—The New Yorker Magazine this week denounced the Readers' Digest Magazine's practice of "planting" articles in other magazines as a "threat to the free flow of ideas" in announcing that henceforth the Digest will not be permitted to reprint articles from the New Yorker. Editors of the New Yorker, in a letter to contributors, pointed out that the Readers' Digest presents as reprint articles a good number of pieces that originate with the Readers' Digest, but are conveniently offered to other magazines first for original publication. The practice, of course, allows the Digest to slant its articles attacking labor and the Roosevelt Administration without having to depend on other magazines doing the job alone.

The New Yorker's note to contributors said in part:

"The Digest started out as a reprint magazine, but grew into something quite different.

"Nowadays a large proportion of its contents is frankly original with the Digest and not presented as reprint material; and of the stuff that is presented as reprint material much actually originates in the office of the Digest and then gets farmed out to some other magazine for first publication.

"The effect of this (apart from spreading a lot of money around) is that the Digest is beginning to generate a considerable fraction of the contents of American magazines. This gives us the creeps, as does any centralization of genius. The fact seems to be that some publications are already as good as subsidized by the Digest.

"Our feeling is that if the Digest wants to publish a magazine of original material, it should do so in a direct manner. We believe it should not operate through other publications to keep alive the reprint myth.

"We don't want to be in the position of receiving for consideration a manuscript that has already been bought and paid for by some one else, for we regard such a situation as unhealthy. We were willing to be digested, but we are not willing to be first supplied, then digested.

"We object to the Digest's indirect creative function, which is a threat to the free flow of ideas and to the independent spirit."

Digest Famine Yarn Proved a Phoney

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 19—The Philadelphia RECORD this week "called" a phoney story printed in the Readers' Digest and proved the magazine and the author of the piece had lied. The article was printed last August, and predicted famine this Febuary in the United States.

Written by Louis Bromfield, who suffers from an anti-Roosevelt complex, the piece was headed, "We Aren't Going to Have Enough to Eat," and sub-headed, "What Muddling in Washington Has Done to Our Food Supply." The article said:

"The (food) situation will grow worse this Fall and reach its most desperate stage this winter, especially from February on. 'February,' Herbert Hoover points out from his experience, 'is always the black month—the month to be feared the most.' If it were possible, I would rather not think about next February. By then most of our people will be living on a diet well below the nutrition level."

The RECORD said that if Bromfield and the Readers' Digest were perfectly sincere in their prophesy of starvation, they can use a simple way to prove it:

"In the next issue of Readers' Digest, let Mr. Bromfield write another article, admitting he was dreadfully wrong. Let the Digest apologize in an editor's note, for giving wide circulation to so shocking and discouraging a prediction, which surely did harm to our national morale."

We'll be waiting for it!

Wallace Hails CIO War Relief Gifts

Oakland, Calif., Feb. 19—Glowing tribute to the CIO for its generous contributions to the war effort and particularly for furnishing the recreation room in the hospital was paid by Vice Pres. Henry A. Wallace in a speech here before 1,000 patients, army officers, CIO leaders and Red Cross workers gathered in the recreation room of the Oakland Area Station Hospital.

Vice-Pres. Wallace stressed particularly the importance of convalescing soldiers using the CIO-furnished recreation room as part of their rehabilitation and pointed out that besides contributing to the War Relief fund, CIO workers are also doing a big job in supplying materials for our soldiers to use in fighting the enemy.

"I have visited many war plants, have talked with the people building ships and planes," Wallace said. "These workers will find themselves quite in the same situation after the war as that of the service men. Their common cause will be not only that of labor but the welfare of the entire country."

Richard Lynden of the War Relief Committee presented the recreation room and a plaque on behalf of the CIO to Col. A. E. McEvers, Commanding Office of the Hospital, who accepted in behalf of the Army.

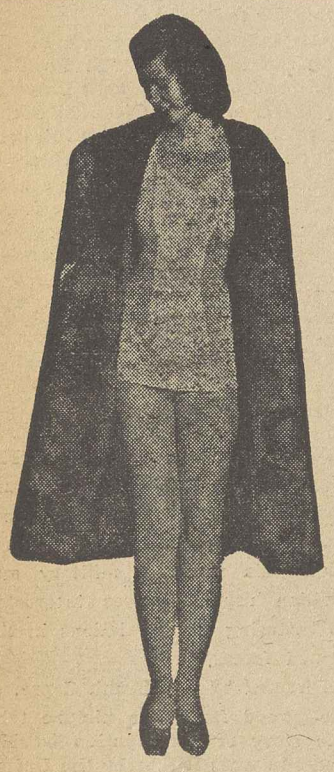
Move to Ban Readers' Digest Spanish Edition

NEW YORK, Feb. 19—Information from South America received here shows that the campaign to ban from the mails the South American edition of Readers' Digest—Selecciones—is gaining headway. The drive has been stimulated by the recent Digest publication of an article by Senator Butler which attempted to smear the "Good Neighbor" policy by a fantastic tale about United States expenditures in support of it.

The reports say that the Brazilian publication Directrizes, the democratic press of Uruguay and Chile and the principal people's organizations of Cuba are demanding that Selecciones, printed in Spanish, be banned as "enemy propaganda."

Fur Workers Set Bond Record

Washington, Feb. 19—Five thousand workers in 536 shops represented by the CIO Intl. Fur & Leather Workers Union bought a total of $805,000 in extra War bonds over and above their payroll savings deductions in the first six days of the Fourth War Loan drive, the union announced this week.



CIO PINUP: American troops in England have chosen Mary Mahan as their No. 1 pinup girl, from a picture which appeared in a union paper. Aviation mechanics who said they'd like to spend 100 hours on inspection with her and Signal Corps men who said they'd like to get their signals crossed with her will have to negotiate with the office where she works—United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers Local 201, at Lynn, Mass.

Says Army Getting Bum Steer on Labor War Job

SUPERIOR, WIS., Feb. 19—The boys "Over There" are getting a badly distorted picture of labor on the home front, says an editorial in The Cooperative Builder, published here.

"If you want to see the boys go really wild, simply mention the strikes back in the states." That, says the editorial, is the "refrain that runs through the war front comments of most newspapermen, radio commentators, politicians, and others who have toured the fronts.

"One gets the impression that the men in our expeditionary forces have become raving maniacs on the subject, possibly shouting imprecations and 'just-you-wait-and-we'll-bash-in-your heads' threats at labor unions, and their fathers and brothers who are members of said labor unions back home."

Although these reports of soldiers' violent anti-labor attitude may be grossly exaggerated, says the editorial, it would seem that they are being encouraged deliberately by forces of reaction "who are eager to seize on the war as an instrument to deliver crippling, below-the-belt blows to labor organizations in the U. S."

While this distorted picture of labor is being widely spread, says the Cooperative Builder, the nation's press and radio "simply ooze" with praise of the patriotism of business.

"Du Pont, Standard and the rest of the profiteering trusts—yeah, even companies of the stripe of Anaconda Cable and Wright Aircraft, that have been indicted for conspiring to produce faulty equipment for our armed forces—all keep telling the home front and the boys 'over there' how unstintingly, unselfishly, patriotically they sacrifice for Uncle Sam."

Add to this, says the editorial, the official anti-labor pronouncements of government and war leaders such as Secretary of War Stimson and General George Marshall, and "is it any wonder then that the boys fighting and dying in the mud of Italy and in the malaria-ridden jungles of the South Pacific develop an anti-labor union complex?

MANY UNION MEN

"No one has bothered to point out to them that the big majority of the men in the ranks and even a good many of the wartime officers, are of the laboring class themselves, and that those much-maligned labor organizations will help them, too, when it is all over and they return to the mines and the mills.

"The boys haven't had a chance to reason out that if the forces of reaction succeed in smashing the unions during the war, they too, will be helpless pawns of big business that is leaving no stone unturned to emerge from the war more powerful and better organized than ever."

In conclusion the editorial urges unions, farm groups, cooperatives and liberals to "leave no stone unturned to give the boys over there a more balanced picture of the situation."

United Labor Group Pushes Calif. Registration Drive

OAKLAND, Calif., Feb. 19—A united labor movement this week opened an intensive drive to register for the 1944 elections every union member in war-boom Alameda and Contra Costa counties.

With representatives of CIO, AFL, Railroad Brotherhoods and independent unions participating, the newly formed United Labor's Legislative Committee laid plans for action at a meeting held here at the AFL Temple. Ninety unions, with a membership of over 100,000 are affiliated with the committee.

Headquarters will be opened in the business section here to push the registration drive, which was put number one on the current list of political activities, in preparation for the 1944 Presidential election.

The joint labor committee has already secured from the Alameda County Board of Supervisors an appropriation of $5,000 to help pay for the mechanics of registration.

A comprehensive plan has been put forward to register the thouands of new workers in this community in their homes and at places of employment.

Officiating at the founding of the new organization were States Attorney Robert W. Kenny and AFL State Federation of Labor Sec. C. J. Haggerty, who sounded the keynote in this as well as all other communities by declaring:

"The first and most important thing I know is to get your people registered to vote."

Permanent officers of the committee were elected, including: President J. C. Reynolds, AFL; 1st Vice-Pres. G. F. Irvine, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen; and Sec.-Treas. Kathleen Griffin, CIO.

CIO Victory In Ducktown Frameup Case!

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Feb. 26—Eight copper miners, members of the CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, who were the victims of framed-up charges of conspiring to destroy government property during the 1940 strike at the Tennessee Copper Co. at Ducktown, finally won their freedom at a second trial held here last week.

Four of the eight men who were convicted at the first trial were freed on a directed verdict because of "insufficient evidence" and four were found not guilty by a jury.

The U. S. Supreme Court in a decision handed down in March 1943, threw out the original conviction on the basis that the "confessions" used against them had been obtained by "third degree methods."

The men freed by the jury were M. C. Anderson, international representative of the union; John E. Simmonds, Earl Hubbard and F. M. Woodward. Freed by the directed verdict were M. L. Ellis, Robert L. Balley, John D. Queen and Robert Rhodes.

All the men except Anderson were members of three local unions in the Ducktown basin of Tennessee, which carried on a nine-month strike against the Tennessee Copper Co. that ended in April 1940.

Switch to CIO

Charleroi, Pa., Feb. 26—A victory over an AFL union which had previously signed a two-year contract with the company, was won this week by the CIO Federation of Glass, Ceramic & Silica Sand Workers in an election among employes of the McBeth-Evans Division of the Corning Glass Works here.

Murray Hails Red Army

New York, Feb. 26—High honor to the Red Army on the eve of its 26th anniversary was paid this week by CIO Pres. Philip Murray, in a telegram received at a dinner here by the National Council of American-Soviet Friendship. Declaring that he regretted his inability to attend, Murray wired:

"I would like to join with others in paying tribute to the Red Army and to the Russian people in their remarkable display of courage in frustrating efforts of the Nazi Army to overrun their country, thereby buoying not only the hopes and aspirations of the Russian people but all the peoples throughout the world who believe in and adhere to democratic principles."

Murray cited "the firm resolve of all members of our great CIO movement to make all of the sacrifices necessary to bring a speedy, victorious termination of this war," and said that "our CIO is definitely committed to the support of our great country . . . and its gallant Allies."

Army Paper Hails UE No-Strike War Record

NEW YORK, Feb. 26—The win-the-war production record of the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers was enthusiastically praised this week by "Stars & Stripes," official daily newspaper published by the U. S. Army in London. Taking notice of labor's no-strike pledge, a "Stars & Stripes" editorial said:

"Bad news travels fast. Labor strikes and lockouts are no exception, for in time of war such news is sometimes sensational.

"The loyalty of American labor, on the other hand, seldom makes the headlines, for in time of war such loyalty is expected and often taken for granted regardless of circumstances; but in fairness we would like to give you a report from the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America.

REPORT TO SERVICEMEN

"Recently this union issued a report to its members in the armed forces. "Topping the long list of achievement was a record of no strikes since Pearl Harbor, for the electrical workers had given their solemn pledge to produce the war goods you would need without interruption, and they have kept their pledge.

"And while you GIs may all be proud of your record in training and battle, the men you left behind on the production line are equally proud of the recent tribute paid them by the Under-Secretary of the War, Robert P. Patterson, who said: 'As we turn towards the tougher struggle ahead, it is gratifying to note the excellent record made by your union in observance of its no-strike pledge. With that kind of backing our soldiers will move into the decisive phase of the war with an overwhelming superiority of fire power and equipment over the armies of Hitler and Hirohito."

"The record of America's electrical worker," the editorial concludes, "has been supported by the vast majority of all labor in America. Strikes have been the exception, not the rule, and workmen and women at home have broken every production record in their all-out effort to provide weapons of war on time to fill every need."

TWU Beats AFL

Memphis, Tenn., Feb. 26—Workers at the big American Finishing Co., textile dyeing and finishing plant, voted two-to-one for the CIO Textile Workers Union of America in a Labor Board election held here Thursday. The vote was 607 for the CIO to 363 for the AFL.

Bishop Says Labor Record 99% Good

DALLAS, Tex., Feb. 26—Labor's record of continuous production to help win the war has been better than 99 per cent good, and those who seek to tell members of the armed forces otherwise are doing a disservice to the nation, according to Bishop G. Bromley Osnam, of Boston, speaking here this week at a forum conducted at Southern Methodist University.

"It is particularly dangerous," Bishop Bromley said, "to develop an anti-labor attitude in the minds of our soldiers and sailors. Our very future lies in the ability of management and labor to work together through the extension of the democratic principle to industry.

"We have trained our youth for war. They have become expert in the use of weapons. It would be tragic if they were to return inflamed against labor and without knowledge of the fact that labor has given itself patriotically to full production in its pledge to win the war."

Even Blind Can See the Value of Unions!

ALAMEDA, Calif., Feb. 26—The value of the trade union movement is written so plainly on the pages of history that "even the blind" can read it! Here's proof:

The Alameda Club of Adult Blind this week unanimously adopted a resolution recommending that all blind persons employed in industry join and actively participate in labor unions.

'Greedy—Not Needy' Tax Vote

Here's the vote in the House that gives "relief not to the needy but to the greedy" in the 1944 tax bill, passed over labor's protest and FDR's veto.

This tax bill, fastened on the nation at war for its life, fails to raise more than one tenth of the money needed for the war, fails to touch big incomes and war profits, hits at the low income groups and takes food money from the people down to the $12 a week level.

Remember this voting record. Don't fall into the trap of believing that the issue is dead. There'll be more tax bills—and a new chance to fight for fair taxes to win the war and strengthen the nation for the peace.

Rollcall Vote on FDR's Veto of the Tax Bill

A "yes" vote is a vote to over-ride the veto and make the tax bill law. A "no" vote is a vote to sustain the veto.

What You Have to Do to Vote in '44

With this issue, The CIO NEWS continues its exclusive listing of voting requirements by states. The information is based on a questionnaire sent by The CIO NEWS to the secretaries of the 48 states.

Five questions were asked: (1) registration requirements; (2) absentee voting; (3) polltax, if any (4) residence requirements, and (5) primary dates.

When a state is omitted from alphabetical order, it means that information on that state has not yet come in.

In some states, special sessions of the legislature are being held or are scheduled to deal with voting requirements for people in the armed forces, or to change other regulations. As information on these developments comes in, The CIO NEWS will publish it. Readers are urged to send us any changes and to point out any errors.

FLORIDA

Registration: The registration laws are not uniform throughout the State, and it is therefore suggested that you write the supervisor of registration of your home county or town for information. If you have ever registered, it may not be necessary for you to register again. Members of the Armed Forces are not required to re-register. U. S. government employes may re-register by mail, when necessary, with the supervisor of registration in their home county or town.

Absentee voting: None, except for members of the Armed Forces. They may obtain ballots from the Secretary of State. Completed ballots should be returned at least 10 days before election.

Residence requirements: 1 year in State, 6 months in county, 90 days in precinct.

Primaries: May 2.

INDIANA

Registration: In person with clerk of circuit court or clerk of home city or town, any time up to 29 days before election (registration resumed after the primary, on May 15). If you do not move from the county and do not fail to vote within two years, registration is permanent.

Absentee voting: Apply for ballot, either in person or by mail, to clerk of circuit court, or clerk of home city or town, no more than 30 or less than 2 days before election. Completed ballot to be received by county board of election commissioners before closing of polls on election day.

Residence requirements: 6 months in State, 60 days in township, 30 days in ward or precinct.

Primaries: May 2.

MISSISSIPPI

Registration: In person any time up to 6 months before election, with clerk of circuit court of home county. Members of the Armed Forces register when they apply for absentee ballot.

Absentee voting: A member of the Armed Forces, Merchant Marine or Red Cross—or a person in his or her behalf—may apply for ballot within 60 days before election to the registrar in his home county. Completed ballot is to be sent to a person chosen by such voter, for delivery on election day to the election officials. There are no provisions for absentee voting other than the above.

Polltax: $2 a year, cumulative for two years. Armed Forces are exempted.

Residence requirements: 1 year in State, 6 months in county.

Primaries: July 11.

RHODE ISLAND

Registration: In person any time up to June 30, with your local board of canvassers or town clerk. Members of Armed Forces may apply to Secretary of State not later than June 15 for absentee registry form, which must be delivered to the Secretary of State not later than midnight, June 30.

Absentee voting: Apply for affidavit form for ballot, either in person or by mail, to Secretary of State not later than October 9. Application may also be made by a person in your behalf. Signed affidavit must be received by the Secretary of State by October 13. Completed ballot should be postmarked no later than midnight on election day, and received by the Board of Elections on or before midnight, November 20.

Residence requirements: 2 years in State, 6 months in city or town.

Primaries: None.

SOUTH CAROLINA

Registration: In person with clerk of home county or city any time up to 30 before election.

Absentee voting: Apply for ballot to the secretary of your local voting precinct, enclosing sufficient postage for registry of the ballot to you. Completed ballot must be returned by registered mail to reach your home precinct at least three days before election.

Polltax: $1. Penalties imposed after January 1 (approximately 1% for each month). Women are not liable for polltax.

Residence requirements: 2 years in State, 6 months in county, 60 days in precinct.

Primaries: August 29.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

The 1944 tax bill, which the President aptly called "relief not for the needy but for the greedy," has been fastened on the nation by House rejection of FDR's veto (299-95)). As the CIO NEWS went to press, the Senate was expected to act on the veto very quickly, with all the odds that it also would reject.

This doesn't end the issue of taxes to win the war and take the burden off the poor. A new bill can be introduced at any time, and the entire campaign for fair and adequate taxes started again. The strategy of the anti-FDR coalition that first wrote the present unfair bill and then passed it over the veto will be, of course, to bury the whole problem, at least until next year.

Meantime, the score stands at this: Congress has passed a bill that only raises one tenth of the amount needed, that raises it from the low income groups and leaves the rich and the war profiteers untouched.

Other issues are still very much alive; the Senate has still to act on the veto of the anti-subsidy bill, the polltax repeal bill is coming up on the Senate floor soon, the soldiers' vote is still in deadlock.

Keep pressing on all of these issues, regardless of the much publicized "revolt" in Congress. After all, we put the Congresmen there in the first place. And in November—if we register and vote—we can put some better ones in place of some of them.

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Taxes (HR 3687)	Your taxes; spares rich, soaks poor, helps greedy.	Passed by House over FDR veto. Becomes law when Senate passes it.	Remember how your Congressmen voted. Prepare for the next tax bill.
Subsidies (HR 3477)	Ends food subsidies; increases food prices 10%; adds 1c and more a quart to milk.	FDR veto upheld by House; Senate still to act.	Wire Senators to uphold veto.
Service vote (S 1285, S 1612)	S 1285 is House bill preventing soldiers from voting. S 1612 is much amended Green - Lucas Federal ballot bill, passed by Senate as amendment to S 1285.	Still deadlocked in House-Senate conference. Rankin and gang holding out for S 1285; Worley offering to compromise S 1612 down to nothing.	Don't fall into the trap that this fight is over. Keep pressure on for Federal ballot (S 1612) no compromises.
Polltax repeal (HR 7)	Gives vote to 10 million Americans.	Scheduled for early Senate debate and vote.	Wire your Senators to support; to gag filibuster; reject all amendments.

(NOTE: Action should begin now on several major issues coming up in the next few weeks. Principal one is renewal of Price Control Act, which expires June 30. Appropriations for U. S. war agencies (OPA, WLB, NLRB, etc.) coming up beginning April. Watch against attempts to cripple price control and work of U. S. agencies.)

FDR Veto Says:

New Tax Bill Aids Greedy, Not the Needy

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26—With a melodramatic assertion of its policy of giving "relief not for the needy but for the greedy," Congress this week over-rode President Roosevelt's veto and made the 1944 tax bill law.

The action was accompanied with loud applause from the daily press and much talk of a Congressional "revolt." Major bombshell of the whole affair, of course, was the resignation—and immediate re-election—of Sen. Alben Barkley (D., Ky.) as Senate Majority leader, fully reported in the daily papers.

In a last minute appeal for a sound and fair tax program, CIO Pres. Philip Murray urged the Congressmen and Senators to uphold the veto, describing the bill as passed as "simply aimed at protecting and broadening special privileges."

"The most diabolical feature of the proposed measure is that in failing during wartime to obtain sufficient funds through increased taxes on the basis of ability to pay, Congress proposes to make those in the armed forces, upon their return to civilian life, pay for the war in addition to the sacrifices they have made while in the service of their country," he said.

President Roosevelt's denunciation of the bill was sharply expressed when he called it "not a tax bill, but a tax relief bill providing relief not for the needy but for the greedy."

FAILS TO TAX PROFITS

After reviewing its failure to tax wealth, big profits and special privileges, he wrote in his veto message that it had been suggested he should be satisfied with a crust, even though he had asked for "a loaf of bread to take care of this war for the sake of this and succeeding generations."

"I might have done so," he said, "if I had not noted that the small piece of crust contained so many extraneous and inedible materials."

These "extraneous and inedible materials" included, as Pres. Murray summed up in his letter, such items as continuance of the Victory Tax that hits down to the $12 a week level, continuance of tax exempt bonds, depletion allowances, separate returns for wealthy couples, and the like.

One of the heaviest charges against the bill is its failure to raise more than one-tenth of the amount ($10 billion) that the Administration asked as necessary to help win the war.

This was done not only by refusing to tax big money and by continuing special privileges, but also by freezing the social security rates at their present one per cent, which cost the U. S. over $1 billion.

The 1944 tax bill is now law. There will be a new tax bill coming up before very long, because the U. S. needs the money to help win the war. Labor's campaign for adequate taxes based on ability to pay will begin again with the new bill.

Rubber Workers Ask 12c an Hour Wage Increase

By PAT CROZIER

CLEVELAND, Feb. 26—A 12 cents per hour general wage increase, to restore the balance which the Little Steel formula was intended to preserve between wages and the cost of living, was unanimously demanded by 180 delegates to a special wage conference held here last week-end by the United Rubber Workers, CIO.

The wage policy statement calls upon the War Labor Board to consider on an industry-wide basis all wage demands put forward by the rubber union.

In addition to the 12-cent general increase, these demands include a night shift bonus of 10 cents for hours worked between 6 p.m. and 6 a.m., additional rate adjustments for skilled maintenance men and millroom workers, and uniform paid lunch and vacation periods throughout the industry.

The conference also recommended that URW local unions include the following provisions for servicemen in their contracts:

1. A bonus of at least one month's pay at past average hourly earnings for all employes entering the armed services.

2. Benefits to dependents of employes in the armed services. Local union and management to contribute jointly to pay benefits to dependents of employes needing special assistance.

3. Special safeguards for disabled veterans ensuring them work at their old jobs or jobs for which they may be fitted.

COMPROMISE DEMAND

In arriving at the 12-cent figure, the delegates struck an average between the 23.4% cost of living increase reported by the Bureau of Labor statistics, and the 43.5% figure reported by the labor members of the President's Committee.

Using 34% as a compromise estimate, the conference stated that with wage increases to compensate for a 15% increase in the cost of living already received, there is still a 19% rise which must be met.

Should the WLB refuse to grant the night shift differential requested, the conference called for a general wage increase of 17 cents to correct the gap between rubber wages and the cost of living increase.

Steel Wage Case Panel Named

Washington, Feb. 26 — Government machinery to settle the wage demands of the CIO United Steelworkers Union ground out progress slowly this week with the appointment of a War Labor Board panel which is to decide the question of procedure to be followed in hearing the merits of the case.

Meanwhile, a full-page editorial in Steel Labor, official organ of the USA, warned that "Big Steel Has a Postwar Plan—Let's Crush the Unions."

The editorial said that high placed officials of the steel industry have never wholeheartedly accepted maintenance of membership and checkoff collection of unions dues and that "they are biding their time for a campaign to crush the union."

The WLB procedure panel, which is slated to begin hearings shortly, includes the following representatives:

Gloucester, N. J., Feb. 28—A record of supporting every War Loan drive was kept up to date this week by Local 26, CIO Barbers & Beauty Culturists, by purchase of a $100 bond during the 4th War Bond campaign.

Hunger Bloc Still Plots

Washington, Feb. 26—Clear light on the hunger and scarcity strategy to kill food subsidies in Congress came out this week when Sen. Robert Taft, (Ohio) proposed to drop the fight now but to take it up again when the price control law comes up for renewal June 30.

Taft's tipoff was given on the question of continuing the Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC), which buys and resells food and other products. It was on this measure that Sen. Bankhead, (polltaxer, Ala.) originally fastened the food subsidy ban that was vetoed by the President, with the House upholding FDR.

Now Taft is resigned to continuing the CCC, even if, in his own words, "it impliedly approves for the time being, at least, the subsidy program." He's resigned, he says, because "obviously the place to deal with it (subsidies) is in the renewal of the Price Control Act which expires the 1st of July, and we will have full opportunity then to say how long subsidies may be continued."

Renewal of the Price Control Act was one of the points in President Roosevelt's five-point message of January 11, and was endorsed by the CIO. Subsidies was another.

It's not too early to begin writing your Representative and your two Senators about the renewal issue that comes up three months from now. Start telling them that renewal of the Price Control Act must be accomplished, with no bans on the full use of subsidies to keep the cost of living at present levels.

Transport Service Union Wins 11c An Hour Raise

CHICAGO, Feb. 26—Several million dollars in back pay and an 11 cents an hour wage increase covering 12,000 dining car employes, red caps, station ushers, Pullman laundry workers and train porters have been negotiated with 50 railroad companies, the CIO United Transport Service Employes announced this week.

The union hailed the success of the negotiations as "its greatest victory which firmly establishes it in the railroad industry."

The union said a complete victory was won "over the 15 non-operating Brotherhoods who had strenuously sought to isolate the UTSEA-CIO wage demands before and during the period of governmental operation of railroads."

A proposal made by the union to the 50 or more railroads with which it held contracts calling for a national bargaining committee to negotiate UTSEA-CIO demands was accepted by the railroads.

Urge Polltax Repeal Now

Torrington, Conn., Feb. 26— U. S. Senators got an eloquent plea for quick passage of the polltax repeal bill (HR 7) from the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers Womens Auxiliary here this week, in an open letter which said:

"We are fighting bloody war all over the world today to suppress slavery and aggression, and yet, here in the country that is the very staunchest supporter of freedom, we have a vicious and enslaving polltax that keeps professional politicians of eight states on the seniority list of Congress."

Methinks They Do Protest Too Much

With injured innocence, the polltax Democrats and tory Republicans are wailing and gnashing their teeth about the shameful treatment they are suffering from that bully in the White House.

He not only vetoed their tax bill, but expressed his opinion of it in plain American which every voter can understand.

Their lamentations also stimulated the tear glands of many Congressmen who should have known better. So they joined with the poor persecuted little Lord Fauntleroys of special privilege in overwhelming votes to over-ride the President's veto.

But while Capitol Hill still resounds with cries of "he hit me" and "he can't do that to us," let us inquire tactfully whether there wasn't just a teeny-weeny bit of provocation on the other side—say, some spitting in the President's face, some trampling on labor, some "nuts to you and the war effort," or the like.

The country elected the President with full knowledge of the general program he intended to administer.

It also elected a Democratic majority to Congress—many of them riding in on the President's coat-tails—and rather naively assumed his party would back him up in enacting this program.

But no sooner were elections over than most of the polltax Democrats joined the Republican opposition in an unprincipled combination to fight the administration and to defy the country's wishes.

The majority thus formed has lost not a single opportunity to insult, smear and obstruct every effort of the President and his administration to carry through a win-the-war domestic program.

It has opposed with particular bitterness every proposal that would benefit labor and the common people.

The President of the United States not only has the constitutional right, but also the obligation, to veto any legislation which he deems contrary to the national interest. And there is still no law against using plain and understandable language—even about taxes.

Both the CIO and the AFL applauded the President's veto of a tax bill designed to feed the greedy at the expense of the needy, to starve the war, and to make our fighting men on their return pay war costs which Congress refuses to meet from war profits.

All honor to the minority in Congress who voted to unhold the veto. And as for the wailing tories, they do protest too much — revealing their sense of guilt and their fear of what the voters will think of them.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

THE squealing in the country's hog pens over Pres. Roosevelt's veto of the feed-the-greedy tax bill was so terrific it must have been heard even above the roar of battle on the Anzio bridgehead and the atolls of the Pacific.

Battle-grimed doughboys must have wiped away a furtive tear at this callous threat to unlimited slop for America's profit-hogs.

Certainly the press-hogs squealed to high heaven about Roosevelt's "unwise veto," "major blunder," "defiance of Congress," etc.

And the hog-tenders in Congress added their falsettos to the general squealing. In scenes of unparalleled emotion and vituperation, hog-tenders of both parties defied a President who dared to set the interests of the war and of the needy ahead of the interests of their own greedy favorites.

★ ★ ★

This was the third of three outspoken Roosevelt messages to Congress.

The first exposed the fraud of pretending to let the soldiers vote, without cutting a way for them through the maze of state restrictions, as only a federal ballot law can do.

The second was the veto of the ban on food subsidies, which Roosevelt rightly described as "an inflation measure, a high cost of living measure, a food shortage measure."

Both of these messages caused some dismay and confusion among the profit-hogs, their press and their slop-slingers in Congress.

But when Roosevelt vetoed the tax bill as "providing relief not for the needy but for the greedy," he really took hold of their profit nerve and twitched it.

★ ★ ★

(1) Congress rejected the Treasury Dept. proposal to raise a billion by a 10% income tax increase on corporations earning above $25,000 a year.

(2) Congress also refused to raise more revenue from the rich by reducing estate tax exemptions and increasing estate and gift taxes.

(3) The bill continues every possible loophole for the profiteer, including tax-exempt securities, separate returns for rich couples and special favors for oil and mine owners.

(4) The bill continues the miscalled Victory Tax on the poorest of the poor, and taxation which cuts directly into substandard food and clothing budgets of working families.

(5) In refusing to levy adequate war taxes on ability to pay, Congress proposes to make the men and women in the armed forces, on their return to civilian life, pay the costs of the war which it will not levy now from war profiteers.

The veto of the food subsidy ban did not cause so much excitement in Congress as the tax veto, because the high-cost-of-living bloc anticipated it and were even in a sense relieved at being saved from the results of their own wrong-doing.

They wanted to show their loyalty to the price-profiteers and the big-business "farm bloc." But they feared the wrath of millions of housewives when the prices of food would begin soaring still higher as the result of a subsidy ban.

As to the almost unanimous press denunciation of Roosevelt, that is nothing new for him or for labor.

The millionaire press, financed by big-business advertisers, is the most obvious mouthpiece of predatory profit interests, whenever their special privileges are threatened by progressive social measures advocated by labor or any political leader.

Most of the American people realize this in any national election, when the issues are really brought home to them, and react in reverse to the tory extremism of the press.

Some Washington dopesters even claim that Roosevelt deliberately provokes the press to win popular support on the rebound!

★ ★ ★

Much is made of the idea that Roosevelt is defying Congress. But it's really vice versa.

Polltax Democrats, elected by a tiny minority of well-to-do citizens, and tory Republicans, elected in the absence of our fighting men and millions of war workers, have consistently ganged up against the progressive national program desired by the American people when they re-elected Roosevelt.

This reactionary combination has come to correspond to a sort of American House of Lords—representing special interests through restricted franchise; while the gallant Congressional progressives supporting Roosevelt and labor on such issues as the soldiers' vote, subsidies and taxes uphold American democracy and representative government.

America's No. 1 Smear Master

The CIO Political Action Committee has taken the offensive against Martin Dies, whom Chairman Sidney Hillman calls "America's No. 1 Smear Master."

Six years ago this polltax Congressman was given an appropriation and a committee to investigate "subversive and un-American propaganda."

Since then the Dies committee has done nearly everything else but what it was instructed to do.

It has concentrated chiefly on the most brazen, scandalous and unsupported smear campaign against CIO unions, the Roosevelt administration and all liberals and progressives.

Before long, it became clear that the Dies committee was the fruit of an anti-New Deal conspiracy on the part of polltax Democrats and tory Republicans.

The Republicans were speedily rewarded for their support of the committee by its election-time smears against Frank Murphy in Michigan, Culbert Olson in California and other progressive Democrats.

But although the real character of the committee was soon revealed, it has been continued in existence year after year by those who started it.

Only a minority in Congress has dared to stand up and fight it, because of fear of the "red smear" technique on the Nazi model, of which the Dies committee is the chief American exponent.

This year, Dies is again running true to form by making a smear campaign against the CIO Political Action Committee his first order of business.

"It is high time that someone in America challenged Martin Dies' abuse of Congressional power," Hillman declared, in announcing he would make all his committee's records available to the FBI or any other authorities really empowered to investigate, but would refuse to submit them to any freebooters from the Dies committee.

Hillman pointed out that not by any stretch of imagination could the Dies committee's powers to investigate "un-American propaganda" be perverted to cover interference with the right of American working people to exercise their voting privileges for the election of win-the-war and progressive candidates for public office.

Now that the United Nations have Hitler on the run, the chances should be better for all true Americans to call the bluff and clip the claws of the chief American imitator of his propaganda methods.

★ Time Out! ★

Here's good sense from a Congressman—Rep. Outland (D., Calif.), speaking about the Washington Times-Herald, the capital's own end of the Patterson-McCormick newspaper Axis:

"In the meantime, the war effort in particular and American democracy in general, will be better served if all of us, press, citizens, yes, and even Congressmen, will bear in mind that we are not fighting the war of 1812; neither are we fighting Russia.

"We should not be fighting President Roosevelt and his administration; we are fighting a war against Japan and Germany and the vicious rotten system that they both represent. Washington's so-called independent newspaper would be doing its country a great service if it stopped publishing such cheap un-American editorials."

Murray Hits 'Equal Rights' Bill

Threat to Job Safeguards For Women

Washington, Feb. 26 — The so-called "Equal Rights" amendment is a "deceptive label" concealing "the means of robbing women of many of the rights and protections that have been won for them over a long period of social advance," and should not be supported, CIO President Philip Murray told Congressmen this week.

Writing to urge them not to sign the discharge petition now before the House, Murray said: "It is particularly unwise to destroy these rights and protections at a time when millions of women are carrying out their patriotic duty by working in war industries.

WOULD WRECK LAWS

"The CIO, and the entire American labor movement, have led in the struggle for progressive social legislation for the protection of women workers. The labor movement has similarly led in the long campaigns for women, has opposed and continues to oppose any discrimination against them.

"Passage of this amendment would not secure this equality of treatment, except at the heavy cost of abandoning the great body of laws that protect women workers from exploitation."

The drive for the amendment, pushed by an organization of wealthy women called the "National Women's Party," is going full blast in the House, where they have already secured about 20 of the 218 signatures they need to get the bill on the floor, and is pushing along in the Senate, where the measure can be called on the floor at any time.

WEALTHY LADIES

These wealthy ladies, with nothing else to do, have limitless time to lobby, and they use two main techniques on the Congressmen and Senators.

No. 1 is the "you're for equal rights aren't you" technique which operates like the old "when did you stop beating your wife" trick. The unwary Congressman who replies, of course he's for equal rights for women, but doesn't know how phoney the amendment is, is usually sunk, for then the lobbyists pounce on him for an endorsement.

No. 2 is the war of attrition, which consists of wearing down the victim until he'll do anything to get the lobbyists off his neck and out of his office—the anything meaning endorsing the "Equal Rights" amendment. This technique has worked on a number of people—including the Vice-President of the U. S.—who know better but seem paralyzed when the "National Women's Party" gets to work.

Congressmen must be told over and over again that the "Equal Rights" amendment would wipe out 50 years of social gains, would as Murray said "return women workers to conditions that they and the organized labor movement, together with Congress, have long sought to eliminate."

They also must be told that the amendment is not the way to remove whatever inequalities now exist, such as discrimination in some states against women serving on juries, limitations on their right to handle their own property, etc.

Hillman Denies Dies' Demand For CIO Books

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26—The un-American Dies committee has no authority to conduct a smear job on the CIO Political Action Committee, Chairman Sidney Hillman said this week in refusing to turn over records and files to one of Dies' gumshoe men.

At the same time, the Committee will cooperate with recog-nized Federal and legitimate Congressional agencies on any amount of investigating, Hillman said, revealing that the FBI had been given all records of the group following Rep. Howard Smith's request to Biddle that the Justice Dept. look into the organization.

"It is high time that someone in America challenged Martin Dies' abuse of Congressional power," Hillman said. "The Committee, speaking for the membership of the CIO, flatly challenges the authority of Martin Dies to investigate it under the terms of the resolution on which he operates.

"The CIO Political Action Committee was organized for the purpose of mobilizing the members of organized labor, their families, their friends for progressive political action.

"It is a perversion of reason and common sense to hold that it is un-American or subversive to ask these millions of American citizens to give their support to such a program of political education in this crucial year."

Calling Dies "America's No. 1 smear master," and reciting the praise Dies has received from "such characters as Fritz Kuhn, the imprisoned Nazi Bund leader, and a score of other home front fascists," Hillman asked:

"Why does Martin Dies seek out our Committee at this time? Why does Martin Dies attempt to stifle the political rights of Americans? Can it be that he fears them?"

Hillman Praises CIO NEWS

Washington, Feb. 28—Congratulations on "the splendid job" done by the CIO NEWS in its recent Full Employment Supplement were voiced this week by Sidney Hillman, chairman of CIO's Political Action Committee, in a letter to Len De Caux, editor of the paper and CIO publicity director. The supplement "covered" the political action meeting held January 14 and 15 in New York City.

"I want to congratulate you on the splendid job which you did," Hillman wrote. "The CIO NEWS is a very important factor in our work, and I want to assure you of my cooperation in furthering the good work that you are doing."

Child Care Drive Backed by Joint Congress Appeal

A statement submitted by them said:

"At the present time, only 65,772 children are being taken care of in 2,243 child care projects. This does not begin to meet the existing need, as evidenced by the fact that four out of five women hired today leave their jobs because of home problems. One of the most common of these is lack of adequate care for their children.

"The War Manpower Commission estimates that one out of every seven women workers has a child needing care. This means that at least 142,000 more children than at the present will need care by July 1 if the recruitment program is to be successful.

MORE MOTHERS WORK

"As you know, an increasing number of women with small children are being forced to seek employment as fathers are drafted into the armed forces.

"The health and safety of our children, as well as the achievement of our war production goals, depend on speedy provision of the necessary funds.

"The program at present is at a standstill. No new projects can be opened, even though applications for 302 child care projects from local communities, certified as essential to the war effort, are pending. Facilities cannot be provided for the children in these areas and the existing projects will be forced to close as their grants expire unless this appropriation is granted at once.

"A further step is necessary to the fulfillment of this program. The limitation of $40,000,000 imposed by Act of Congress of July 15, 1943, on the amount of funds permitted to be used for maintenance and operation of these war services should be lifted. Failure to remove this limitation would mean a total collapse of the child care program.

"Women cannot do their best work in their war jobs if they are constantly worried and insecure about the care of their children. We owe it to our fighting fathers to safeguard the health and future of American youth."

Textile Wins 3 Victories In 2 Months

Newark, N. J., Feb. 26—The CIO Textile Workers Union rolled up its third straight victory in this state within the last two months by winning an election this week at Johnson & Johnson Co., New Brunswick. The score was: CIO 999, Independent Assn. 810, no union 49.

According to Regional Director Sol Stetin, recent victories were won at the Botany Mills in Passaic, involving 4,000 workers, and at United Piece Dye Works, of that city, by a 10 to one majority.

Form CIO Council in New Hampshire

Washington, Feb. 26—New Hampshire was added to the list of states where the CIO has Councils with the chartering this week of a new State Industrial Union Council at Nashua. This is the 36th State Council to affiliate with the CIO.

Represented on the new CIO State Council are 10 textile, six shoe and two steel workers locals. President of the Council, Louis J. Guilmet, has just been inducted into the armed forces. Vice-Pres. George O. Fecteau, has therefore taken over the duties of president.

Frank W. Dichard is secretary-treasurer and Frank Phelan recording secretary. Francis B. Ertel and Paul Novick are vice-presidents.

Union X-Ray Drive

Baltimore, Feb. 26—A campaign for periodic chest X-rays of shipyard workers has been started by Local 43, CIO Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, with the cooperation of the Maryland Tuberculosis Ass'n. For a fee of $1 union members may have the examinations made at the local's hall.

To Your Health!

The CIO NEWS this week starts a new monthly feature, dedicated to advancing the health standards of CIO members. The column is written by a man well known in medical circles who, for the present at least, prefers to make his contribution anonymously.

Now and then in the newspapers you will see an announcement that the death rate has dropped a fraction of a point or two. This is usually followed by the puzzling statement that, in spite of all the wartime shortages and dislocations, the public health is apparently better than ever.

The catch in this is that death rates and mortality statistics tell little about the state of public health. All such figures do is give an idea of the volume of deaths from all causes. They provide no indication of the amount of sickness, the severity of sickness, or the kinds of sickness that may be going the rounds of the community or the nation.

31% MORE ILLNESS

Let's look at some statistics of a different sort, to see if there are any grounds for complacency about wartime health.

The U. S. Public Health Service keeps tab on some 250,000 industrial workers and publishes reports of the amount and kinds of sickness they suffer.

The report for the second quarter of 1943 was released recently. It shows that during this period there were 31 per cent more cases of illness lasting eight or more days than during the corresponding three-month period in 1942.

The greatest increase was in respiratory diseases which shot up 68 per cent over the 1942 figure. Pneumonia increased 88 per cent; influenza and grippe, 77 per cent; bronchitis, 75 per cent; neurasthenia, 40 per cent; stomach ailments, 25 per cent; diseases of the heart, arteries and kidneys, 20 per cent; rheumatism, 14 per cent; diarrhea, 13 per cent.

MANPOWER LOST

This is not reassuring. These people were workers and the diseases recorded were severe enough to keep them off the job for eight days or more. That represents a lot of lost manpower. And these statistics indicate that the situation is getting worse.

Under wartime conditions an increase in sickness is practically inevitable. Longer hours, harder work, a shifting population, crowding in substandard and boom-town housing, shortage of doctors, and—for a lot of people—the high cost of living, all combine to have an unfavorable effect on health.

By improving working conditions, unions make an important contribution to health.

Through representation on defense councils and other civic groups, unions can do much to improve community services that promote health.

Finally, by letting their elected representatives know which side their political bread is buttered on, union members can make their influence felt on such important health measures as the Wagner Social Security bill and the farm subsidy measure.

Thomas Raps Labor Dept. On Living Cost Smokescreen

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26—Cost of living statisticians of the Department of Labor were charged today by UAW-CIO President R. J. Thomas with "the letting out of a false statistical smokescreen to cover up inadequacies" of the cost of living index.

In a letter to Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, Thomas attacked Dept. of Labor statisticians for "collaborating with the Detroit News in an attempt to prove that George Meany of the AFL and I were wrong in charging some weeks ago that the real increase in the cost of living was greater than the increase shown by the Bureau of Labor Statistics . . . "

The Thomas-Meany report, submitted on behalf of the labor members of the President's Cost of Living Committee, showed a 43.5% increase in living costs for the country between January, 1941, and December of 1943, as against a BLS increase of 23.4%.

Thomas charged that the survey of Detroit food prices sponsored by the Detroit paper and the BLS would not meet a single criticism leveled by labor against the cost of living index.

"We did not charge dishonesty or deliberate inaccuracy on the part of the BLS or any of its agents . . . Now these officials are seeking to prove that Meany and I were wrong by a public demonstration that BLS agents are dishonest. These learned statisticians might as well try to prove that the moon is made of green cheese by showing that 2 plus 2 equals 4."

N. Y. CIO Bills Would Aid Vets

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 28—CIO-sponsored bills providing substantial aid for veterans when they return from the war have been introduced in both houses of the New York Legislature.

The bills would set up a Veterans Aid Administration with $5,250,000 to spend. The program advanced by CIO would:

1. Assist veterans with free job placement, rehabilitation and vocational training, with regular wages while at school.

2. Establish "five-day-week" work projects for veterans at prevailing wage rates fixed by collective bargaining.

3. Recommend unemployment insurance and workmen's compensation benefits for all veterans.

4. Provide a special fund for education of veterans.

Women Pack Punch In '44 Political Drive

By ELEANOR FOWLER
Sec.-Treas., CIO Women's Auxiliaries

Auxiliaries all over the country are really getting their teeth into the CIO political action drive. Faye Rubin, president of the National Maritime Union auxiliaries, has been serving for weeks as a registrar in the San Pedro NMU hall. Her regular hours are 10 to 3, but on Monday, when all the men come to meetings, she stays all afternoon.

She has sent out a letter to all the ports urging her auxiliary sisters to ask to be deputized as registrars in their communities. She reports that it costs nothing and that you can earn something as registrar.

Mary Vessey, president of the Farm Equipment auxiliaries, is busy with the Women's Committee of the 7th Congressional District in Chicago. They have a great variety of women's organizations involved and are setting up "Good Neighbor" clubs in every block where families meet together to discuss how their Congressman voted on various issues and how they can all work together for needed community services. In an hour and a half one evening they collected 1,500 signatures on Soldier Vote petitions.

The Columbia River District Council of Woodworker auxiliaries decided to make the primary election the main auxiliary activity in Oregon for the next few months. They have a big job to do before May 19, primary day, to build up support for Dean Wayne L. Morse, who has resigned from the War Labor Board to run for senator.

REGISTRATION JOB

Lucie McCallie, secretary of the CIO Oil auxiliary in Southgate, Calif., is giving a demonstration of how an auxiliary member can do an extremely effective political action job. She's a deputy registrar and is going from house to house in her precinct seeing to it that everyone of the 1,600 people living there register to vote in 1944.

Our Canadian sisters are setting a fine example of making the auxiliaries a real force in community life. Mrs. Bud McCool of Mine, Mill Auxiliary 117, of Sudbury, Ontario, has recently been elected to the Women's Advisory Council of Sudbury. This is the first time that the families of miners have been represented by one of their own members on an important civic board. That auxiliary also has the distinction of being the largest of the 27 women's organizations represented on the Women's Voluntary War Service Committee of Sudbury.

These instances illustrate the pattern through which the auxiliaries can make a tremendous contribution to the CIO political actoin drive. The first job is to convince our own members of the importance of registering and voting and the first slogan is "Every auxiliary member a registered voter."

WORK WITH UNIONS

The second step is to offer the cooperation of the auxiliary to the union political action committee. Get members to serve as registrars in the union hall and to go door to door calling on union families.

And finally the auxiliary itself must reach out to work cooperatively with other women's organizations in the community, carrying to them the CIO political action message.

In many communities it should be possible to develop immediately a joint city-wide women's program on registration with a wide variety of organizations participating.

Murray Backs Hillman Stand on N. Y. Labor Party

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26—Full CIO national support for the efforts of Sidney Hillman, Political Action Committee head, to unify and rebuild the New York American Labor Party on a solid trade union basis was given in a letter from CIO President Philip Murray to Hillman this week.

"I am writing to express to you and to the other members of the CIO Political Action Committee my personal congratulations on the splendid progress your committee is making in rallying all labor and liberal elements for united progressive and win-the-war political activity," Murray wrote.

"I have followed closely your efforts in New York and other states to work out a basis for united action by labor unionists and other progressives, and have noted how carefully you have adhered to the purposes and policies outlined by the last CIO convention.

"Please accept my assurances of complete confidence in the policies your Committee is pursuing and of wholehearted CIO support for your constructive endeavors."

Murray's action comes in the midst of a terrific anti-CIO campaign by the New York Post and the World Telegram, in which they have tried to build up a picture of American Labor Party and CIO splits on the so-called "red" issue.

OLD GUARD HYSTERIA

This supposed split has been colored by a continuous campaign of "red" hysteria directed by George Counts and Alex Rose, old guard ALP state officials, who have repeatedly rejected the Hillman unity plan.

"The action of Mr. Murray and the CIO gives the lie to rumormongers, irresponsible writers and chronic factionalists who sought to create the impression that the Hillman plan is not the CIO plan," Hyman Blumberg, vice-president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and chairman of the Committee for a United Labor Party, said here in releasing the letter.

The anti-unity gang, sparked by David Dubinsky, are fighting to keep control of the State Labor Party at the forthcoming March primaries, having already lost control of the ALP in New York City.

They also got a sharp set-back this week in upstate Rochester, when the Hillman unity forces won a contest for endorsement of state primary candidates at a meeting called by old-line ALP officials.

The endorsement, adopted by several hundred to four opposing votes, endorsed the Hillman unity plan, supported Unity Committee primary candidates, and called for a fourth-term draft of President Roosevelt.

Political Action Discussed At Education Meet

New York, Feb. 26—Political action and the role of labor education in postwar planning were among the subjects discussed at the 23rd annual Washington's Birthday Workers Education conference held here last week-end under the auspices of the American Labor Education Service.

J. Raymond Walsh, director of the CIO Dept. of Education & Research, who opened the conference, focused attention on current problems confronting the labor movement today and after the war.

Kermit Eby, his assistant, was among the speakers who discussed the need for political action at a dinner meeting Saturday night.

CIO delegates among the discussion leaders included Donald Montgomery, UAW Consumer Counsel; George Weaver, director of the CIO Committee to Abolish Racial Discrimination; and Esther Peterson, Dept. of War Activities, Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

Congress Please Copy!

New York, Feb. 28—A CIO union set a good example for Congress this week on the soldier vote issue. The union was Local 65, Wholesale & Warehouse Workers, whose officers voted unanimously to endorse a proposal that ballots for election of union officers be sent to all members in the armed forces. The plan will be submitted to the union's convention this April.

Tips on Helping Kids Like Nursery School

By SUNNY PRESSMAN
Staff Writer, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

If you are a working mother and you're planning to enroll your child in the war nursery center in your neighborhood there are certain things you should be prepared to do.

Going to nursery school is a brand new experience to you and your child—let's call her Jane. Both of you will have to make an adjustment to a new life. Jane's happiness and sense of security at nursery school will depend to a large extent on her first week or two in school. You have an important part to play in making nursery school a happy experience.

First, before you bring Jane to school, tell her simply and casually about the school, the children she will have as playmates, the things she will do for a short visit for the first time. Let her watch the children in her age group play with the equipment. Out of doors it may be swings and sandbox, building with boxes. Indoors it may be painting, block building, playing in the doll corner. Let Jane join in the play if she wants to.

If Jane has this opportunity to see the school, meet the teachers and join the children in play, or perhaps just see how it feels to sit in the swing and watch, her adjustment to this new experience will be so much easier.

The nursery schools welcome your cooperation and in fact encourage the mothers to make appointments for such visits at their convenience. The first visit need last no longer than one hour. As a rule you'll find that your child will want to stay on, to watch the children or try out the equipment herself.

Explain to Jane, when you have to go, that you'll come back again the next day and stay longer.

If you can possibly arrange it, it would be best for Jane to be in nursery school only part of the day for the first week. If the child seems content the parent will be urged to leave her and come back to pick her up after the morning play period for the first day or so. After that she can stay without you through lunch. By the end of the week Jane will feel at home with her playmates and you can leave her in the morning for the full day and call for her on your way home from work.

Of course this means that either you, or some adult close to Jane, will have to be on call during this first week of adjustment. And you should make every effort to work it out that way.

You'll find that Jane will wave goodby from the doorstep of the nursery with a happy smile each morning. And the peace of mind this experience will give you will be worth every effort you make to have Jane feel happy and at home the first week at school.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

W. H. Crawford, Dist. Dir., USA-CIO, reports a double victory at National Traffic Guard Co., Decatur, Georgia: maintenance and production workers voted 216 to 68 for CIO; guards, who were in a separate unit, voted 7 to 1 for CIO. This culminates a two-year attempt to establish an organization there.

Frank J. Bender, Reg. Dir., Baltimore, reports: Owens Illinois Can Co.: USA-CIO 379, AFL 182. Albert Atallah, Dist. Dir., USA-CIO, was in charge of the campaign.

G. Geo. DeNucci, Reg. Dir., Columbus, reports: Corrugated container Co., Columbus, Ohio: Paper Workers Organizing Committee, CIO 24, against 3. Rep. Walters was in charge.

CIO's technical employes scored a decisive victory at the Cutters Laboratories, large west coast manufacturing chemists and manufacturers of blood plasma products and pencillin, choosing FAECT-CIO as their bargaining agent by a vote of 308 for CIO to 122 for no union.

Ohio Valley Transportation Co. employes of Huntingtn, W. Va., in an NLRB election voted 71 for CIO to 63 for AFL. This culminates a four-year struggle to get proper union recognition. It is a significant victory, under the circumstances, and all those participating are to be congratulated.

August Scholle, Reg. Dir., reports: Army Air Force Cafeteria, Detroit: CIO 9, against 4. Paul Domeny, LIU No. 1064, Detroit, participated in this victory.

The Playthings and Novelty Workers Intl. Union held their annual convention at the Senator Hotel in Atlantic City this weekend, and laid plans for an organizing campaign.

Organizing the unorganized continues, but we must enhance our efforts and bring the many hundreds of thousands still unorganized workers under the banner of our great movement. We have much to do. I cannot too strongly urge every one of our regional, sub-regional directors, representatives and staff to intensify their rganizing activities.

N. A. Zonarch, president, Aluminum Workers of America, reports production workers at Alcoa Rolling Mill, Chicago, Illinois voted 735 for AWA-CIO to 260 for AFL.

New Canada Code Makes Bargaining Compulsory

OTTAWA, Ont.—Canadian labor was given a Labor Relations Code this week which provides for compulsory collective bargaining, compulsory arbitration and outlaws company-dominated organizations. The Code, which was in the form of an Order-in-Council, was hailed by the Canadian Congress of Labor (CIO) and the Trades & Labor Congress (AFL).

It is estimated that the Code will apply to 2,500,000 of Canada's 3,500,000 industrial workers, with an estimated 700,000 of them now organized.

United pressure by the labor movement resulted in the passage of favorable legislation and the scrapping of many unfair clauses contained in preliminary drafts. The Code applies to all war industries although any provisions may make it applicable to all industries within its jurisdiction.

Under the Code, a National Labor Relations Board is set up, comprised of not more than eight members. This Board has the power to examine the records of a bargaining agency, and conduct a vote or otherwise satisfy itself that the agency is a proper one to act for the employes.

APPEAL MACHINERY

Employers must bargain with employes once their agency is chosen. Following certification, the employer may be given 10 days' notice for the opening of negotiations.

If an agreement has not been completed after 30 days' negotiation and either party believes it will not be completed in a reasonable time, an appeal can be made to the Board. The Minister of Labor shall then appoint a conciliation board under similar arrangements provided under the 25-year-old Industrial Disputes Investigation Act which has now been repealed.

A significant feature of the Code is the use of "shall" compared to the "may" of previous labor legislation.

BANS BOSSES' INTERFERENCE

The Code provides that "no employer shall dominate or interfere with the formation or administration of a trade union or employes' organization or contribute financial or other support to it."

It further states: "No employer may refuse to employ any person because that person is a member of a trade union or employes' organization; impose any condition in a contract of employment seeking to restrain an employe from exercising his bargaining rights; or compel any employe by threat or otherwise to abstain from becoming or continuing to be a member of a trade union or employes' organization."

CAMPAIGN CONTINUES: Led by Uncle Sam, who really is Sec. Wallace Addison of the Political Action Committee of the Indianapolis (Ind.) Industrial Union Council (CIO), a bevy of pretty war workers buttonhole passersby asking for support of the federal ballot. Toledano Hails Kyne As CIO Delegate To Montevideo Parley MEXICO CITY, Feb. 26 (ALN)—Before leaving this week to attend the special executive council session in Montevideo of the Confederation of Latin American Workers (CTAL), of which he is president, Vicente Lombardo Toledano expressed great satisfaction over the CIO's designation of Martin C. Kyne, vice-president of the United Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employes, as CIO fraternal delegate to the meeting.

"An authority on Latin American social problems, he has demonstrated his ability with the Bolivian investigation," Toledano said, referring to Kyne's participation as a labor member of the Magruder Commission in the 1943 investigation of conditions in Bolivia following the massacre of tin workers at Catavi.

Alejandro Carrillo, director of the Mexican labor newspaper, El Popular, and executive committee member of the Confederation of Mexican Workers, returned this week from the U. S. and reported that "labor and government there are very interested in the Montevideo conference." The principal point on the agenda at Montevideo will be the elaboration of plans to meet the Axis-inspired threat to the Americas.

Passing through Costa Rica on his way to Montevideo, Toledano stopped off briefly to congratulate Teodoro Picado on his election as new president of that country as "a great triumph for progressive and democratic forces."

Picado defated Leon Cortes Castro by a vote of 78,341 to 42,646 in last Saturday's election. Pro-Axis Cortes Castro earlier had been charged with planning a coup d'etat with support from the Axis and a U. S. company with heavy investments in Costa Rica. Picado, who will be inaugurated in May, succeeds President Calderon Guardia.

Potofsky Tells of CIO Wish For Latin-American Welfare

New York, Feb. 26 — CIO's concern for all economic and social problems of Latin-America's 130 million people as expressed in a letter to Secretary of State Cordell Hull this week, sent by Jacob S. Potofsky as chairman of the CIO Committee on Latin American Affairs.

In asking for CIO participation at an Inter-American Technical Economic Conference to be held next September, Potofsky wrote to Secretary Hull:

"We recognize that the economic development of the Latin-American countries and an improvement in the living standards of the 130 million Latin Americans will not only be of inestimable benefit to the people of these countries but will also make a tremendous contribution to the prosperity and well-being of our own country.

"In addition, we believe that organized labor in this country can make a substantial contribution to the work of that conference."

Meantime, Potofsky released another letter, sent to the nine CIO Latin American Committee members on sending Martin C. Kyne to the Montevideo conference called by Lombardo Toledano, head of the Latin American Confederation of Labor, (CTAL).

This meeting, he wrote, will be for the purpose of "considering and taking action on the threat to democratic rights" indicated by recent fascist coups in Argentina and Bolivia.

Save Waste Paper!

One of the most acute problems facing the government today is the manufacturing of sufficient quantities of paper and paperboard to meet the demands of the military and critical civilian requirements.

Thousands of extra tons of waste paper are needed immediately to replenish the fast dwindling inventories at the paper mills which are now dangerously low.

Australian Soldiers Get Ballot

Washington, Feb. 26—While Rankins and Republicans plot deadlocks and compromises to steal U. S. soldiers' right to vote, the Australian buck private not only has his right to vote guaranteed, but has his ballot brought directly to him wherever he is.

This is described in an article in "Southwest Pacific," Australian government magazine printed by the Commonwealth Information Dept. in Sydney.

According to the writer, the Australian law gives the vote to all service personnel 18 years of age or over, under a federal system of distribution, collecting and counting ballots.

Special officers are detailed to go to the front with ballots for the men. With each officer goes a "scrutineer" whose duty is to see that the ballot is cast according to law.

Election material of both sides is circulated in exactly equal amounts by the government.

"Many of the troops actually cast their votes while engaged in active combat with the enemy," the article says. At one front line spot, "the electoral officer and his scrutineer had to crawl on their hands and knees through an alley of Japanese machine-gun and rifle fire to reach Australian troops in their forward positions."

Soldier Vote In Deadlock

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26 — With Congressman Rankin and his two Republican allies on the House conference committee still holding out for a "states' rights" bill on the soldiers' vote, and the Senate conference committee still firm on the much-amended Green-Lucas Federal ballot plan, the deadlock on the issue continued this week.

While the deadlock continues, of course, November gets closer and the service men and women get further from realizing their hope of exercising the right they're fighting for—the right to vote in the 1944 elections.

On the House side, Rep. Worley came up with still another "compromise" proposal—this time giving away the whole principle of the Federal ballot as in the Green-Lucas bill, and some more besides.

Under Worley's reported plan, the Federal ballot would go only to those service people who haven't got a state ballot, and then their Federal ballot would be subject to all polltax, registration and other state requirements as they stand now. This actually would be a retreat beyond the 1942 law, which at least waived polltax and absentee registration requirements for servicemen receiving state ballots from home.

Worley's plan would thus preserve less than the shell of the original Green-Lucas bill, since no state would be required to count any ballots that did not meet polltax and absentee requirements. Many states do not even have absentee registration, and there would be little time for overseas men to comply with the laws of most of those that do.

While the deadlock continues people who want the soldiers to vote should press their Representatives to work against the Rankin "states' rights bill" and should urge their Senators to stand firm on the Green-Lucas Federal ballot measure.

Who Says Navy Doesn't Want to Vote?

NEW YORK, Feb. 26 — The slander that servicemen are interested only in pinup girls and don't give a hoot about the right to vote was nicely debunked this week by a Naval lieutenant, writing in the Feb. 19 issue of the N. Y. times.

Overseas for 18 months and anxious to have his say in determining who shall be commander-in-chief of the nation during the vital years of the war, Lt. James A. Parks Jr., USNR, rote from Pacific waters:

"This election is of more importance to us in the fighting forces than any temporary bypass of a state's right. If our Congress is genuinely interested in seeing that every serviceman gets the vote he is entitled to, then they must realize that the Army and the Navy must handle the voting machinery for their own personnel. They cannot possibly do this if every state and its peculiarities are to be considered.

"The arguments set forth for the several states to handle the voting have sounded ridiculous to those of us who have heard them in some remote hole tucked away on an island.

"Can you imagine what percentage of us would get to vote if each state had to mail us a ballot to our own little hole and then wait for an answer?"

War Dept. Muddle

Charges Plants Shut Where Workers Seeking Jobs

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28—The U. S. War Dept. that has endorsed demands for a draft of labor this week ordered cutbacks of production in vital war plants that will throw 50,000 small arms plants employes out of their jobs in an area where unemployment already is a problem. The "utter lack of planning" and the tremendous waste of manpower were sharply criticized by the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, in a letter to Senator Harry S. Truman, head of the Truman Investigating Committee, written by UE Legislative Rep. Russ Nixon.

EFFICIENT PLANTS CLOSED

Nixon cited layoffs scheduled for the immediate future at U. S. Cartridge, St. Louis; Lake City Ordnance, Independence, Missouri; Western Cartridge Co., East Alton, Ill.; Twin City Ordnance, Minneapolis; Evansville Ordnance, Evansville, Ind.; and Des Moines Ordnance, Des Moines, Iowa.

"The War Dept. and the War Production Board, in selecting the plants to be cut back, are violating all considerations of national manpower allocation, are closing down the most efficient and maintaining in operation the least efficient small arms ammunition plants, and are closing the plants most favorably located from the standpoint of military security," Nixon charged.

"The cutbacks are applied with virtually no advance notice to labor or management, and without any apparent plans for the utilization of the released manpower and the vast industrial facilities for which the government has just recently expended many millions of dollars."

Nixon said that the War Dept. has ordered cutbacks in areas where unemployment already is a problem, while scraping the bottom of the labor market to find employes for similar plants that are going full blast in other sections of the country.

Nixon charged that the War Dept. apparently has been influenced by business-as-usual interests that seek to keep private plants—no matter how inefficient—in operation, while more modern government-owned facilities are shut down.

"The utter lack of planning here revealed demonstrates the fundamental correctness of labor's opposition to National Service—Labor Draft legislation," Nixon declared. "The government in these layoffs is tragically failing to use the means of manpower planning and mobilization that are already available without additional legislation.

"Under such circumstances, labor's presumption of the probable misuses of National Service Legislation is proven to be wise."

New Order Makes Job Shifts Easier

Washington, Feb. 26—The War Manpower Commission this week had cheering news for workers who have legitimate reasons to change jobs but are prevented by wartime restrictions from doing so unless they can prove their cases in often long-drawn-out hearings.

The Commission announced that it has changed its procedure to speed up issuance of statements of availability (allowing job transfers) and has revised its machinery for handling appeals so as to eliminate some injustices which occasionally have delayed transfers for as long as 90 days.

The changes came as a result of action taken by the national Labor-Management Policy Committee, largely through the efforts of Michael Ross representing the CIO and Frank Fenton speaking for the AFL.

APPEALS SETUP

The new setup on hearings for job changes and on appeals:

1) Gives any interested party the right to appear and to be heard at an area hearing; (2 limits the vote at the hearing to equal members of management and labor representatives; 3) provides that each worker and employer be advised of his appeal rights when informed of the decision in his case; 4) limits appeals to evidence presented at the hearing; 5) allows unrestricted right of appeal to all interested parties; 6) makes final any statement of availability issued, and 7) limits appeal steps to three.

Murray Warns Of Cloud Of Unemployment

Washington, Feb. 26—The threat of "a cloud of unemployment" on "the horizon of victory" exists and must be met by CIO activity to ensure jobs for all in the reconversion period, CIO President Philip Murray said this week.

"Reconversion unemployment must be held to a minimum or eliminated," he said. "The CIO conception of winning the war includes security for all Americans in the peace.

"This means our continued striving for utilization of all our resources. It is not too early now to apply ourselves to problems of reconversion and full production of civilian goods."

Ted F. Silvey, former secretary-treasurer of the Ohio state CIO, has begun his duties as liaison man between CIO and government war agencies, and will work on this and other problems under direction of Clinton S. Golden, who represents CIO as vice-chairman of the Manpower Commission and the WPB.

Nelson Pledges Labor To Be Consulted In Industry Changes

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26—A pledge that labor will be consulted in working out post-war plans for reconversion of industry was made this week by Chairman Donald Nelson of the War Production Board to 14 top CIO and AFL officials, led respectively by Presidents Philip Murray and William Green.

Stressing the point that the nation still has an expanding total war program and that the overall needs of total output will continue, Nelson said that there would, of course, be some changes in production emphasis due to the changing needs of the fighting forces.

FEW CIVILIAN GOODS

"We are going to be cutting down on some types of munitions because in certain cases we have now built up adequate stockpiles for the moment," he said. "However, let us be perfectly clear about one thing: even though some of us can stop making certain munitions which are now in surplus, very few of us are going to be able to return to the production of civilian items.

"The expanding munitions program will continue to require the energies of an overwhelming proportion of labor and management.

"In spite of all the talk about reconversion there is little of it actually in the cards until after Germany has been defeated. The most critical period of the war, from the military standpoint, still lies ahead.

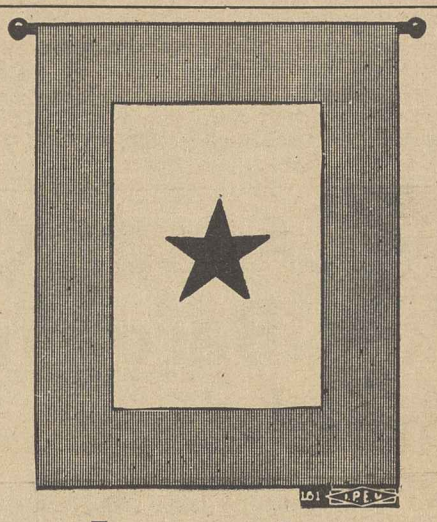
"It would be a catastrophe if we should mislead ourselves into slackening our efforts just at the time when the best that we have in us is critically needed."

Re-Elect Curran, Mills

New York, Feb. 26—Pres. Joseph Curran and Secy.-Treas. Saul Mills of the Greater New York CIO Council were unanimously re-elected this week. Both have been in office since the Council was formed in 1940.

YOUR MEN

... in the Army, in the Navy, in the Merchant Marine. They fight against fascism for democracy.



While They Fight the Axis

... a majority of Congress in Washington tries to deny them the right to vote.

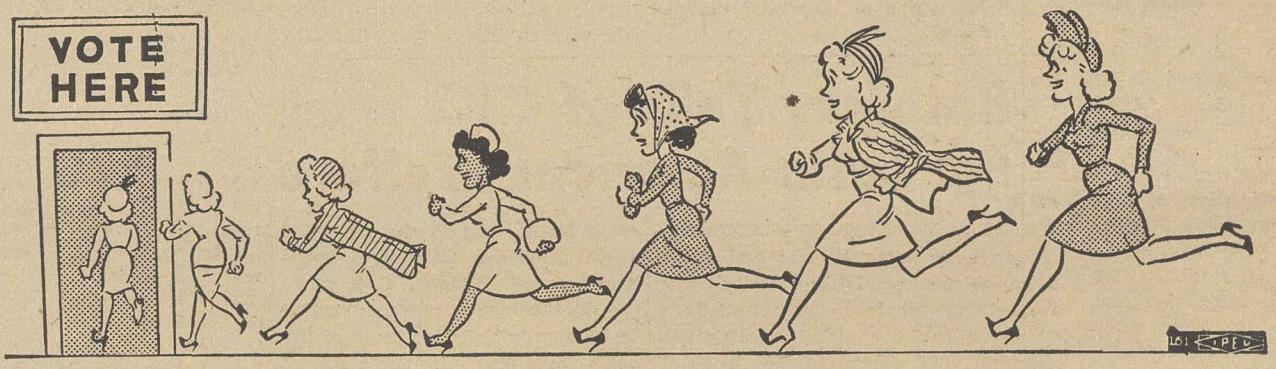
That same majority fights for sky-high food prices by voting to end subsidies that hold food prices down.

These Congressmen are not helping you and your men to win the war.

Will such a Congress help build the kind of America your men are fighting for?

You want action by Congress to bring victory and ensure jobs, security, freedom from want and freedom from fear after the war is won.

It's your duty to your fighting men to see that the Congressman you elect this November stands for these things. This year your vote as a woman counts more than ever before.



Here's What You Should Do!

1. Know your Congressman. Watch what he does in Congress. Get his record from the union, the auxiliary or the CIO Political Action Committee in your community.
2. Register so you can vote in 1944. Find out where, when and how from the above organizations, from your city hall or the county clerk.
3. Vote for the kind of representative in Congress who will help you and your fighting men now and after the war. Vote for victory and security.

Soldier Vote 'Compromise' Kills U. S. Ballot

CIO President Murray today wrote to all Congressmen and Senators urging them to reject the phony 'compromise' plan that ends Federal balloting and to work and vote instead for a bill modelled after the original Federal ballot plan in the Green-Lucas measure (S 1612).

CIO Scores 2 More Aircraft Victories

DETROIT, Mar. 4—The CIO won two more important aircraft election victories this week, one of which completed the organization of the giant Glenn L. Martin Corp. by the CIO United Auto Workers. The other victory was chalked up by the CIO Transport Workers at Pan-American Airways, Miami, Florida, in the first vote ever held under the Railway Labor Act in the air transport industry.

The Martin vote, at the Omaha, Neb., plant, found the UAW-CIO rolling up 60.3 per cent of the ballots to 39.5 per cent for no union, according to UAW Aircraft Director Richard T. Frankensteen. Previously the UAW had won an election held at the other big Martin plant near Baltimore, Md.

In the Pan-American vote, among mechanics, the CIO won 582 tallies to 281 for the AFL and 327 for an independent union. Among maintenance employes, CIO scored 171 to 5 for no union.

Fight St. Louis Cutbacks

St. Louis, Mar. 4—CIO officials here last week began organization of a community campaign to meet the blow of unemployment caused by a sudden Army Ordnance Department cutback order at the St. Louis Ordnance Plant, one of the world's largest producers of small arms ammunition.

The cutback, second of its kind to affect the St. Louis plant, will cause the layoff of 12,500 workers. 10,000 lost their jobs as a result of the first order a few weeks ago.

Most heavily affected is the United States Cartridge division of the Ordnance Plant, where 11,000 workers, most of them members of the CIO United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, are being laid off. The Siemers Lane plant of the McQuay-Norris, Co., also part of the Ordnance Plant, will lay off 2,500, mostly members of the CIO United Auto Workers.

CIO Council officials and delegates from the Central Trades and Labor Union last week met with Mayor A. P. Kaufmann and representatives of the Chamber of Commerce and government officials in an attempt to send a civic delegation to Washington to secure allocation of other types of war production to St. Louis.

CIO Unions Lead in Labor Board Votes

WASHINGTON, Mar. 4—As in previous years, CIO unions led all the rest in the number of Labor Board elections won during 1942-43. More than half a million workers voted for CIO unions in 1,766 elections won by the CIO, out of 2,350 in which it took part.

AFL unions participated in 2,018 elections and won 1,398, receiving a total of 267,118 votes. Unaffiliated unions took part in 745 elections, and won 416, receiving a total of 140,780 votes.

A total of 515,271 votes were cast for the CIO in elections won by its affiliates, some 100,000 more than were won by the AFL and unaffiliated unions combined.

These figures are from the eighth annual report of the Nat'l. Labor Relations Board, released last Sunday by NLRB Chairman H. A. Millis. They cover the fiscal year from June 30, 1942, to June 30, 1943.

Two significant developments in the Board's activities during the past year stand out, Millis commented in releasing the report—"the increasing acceptance of the principles underlying the Nat'l. Labor Relations Act and the growing industrial custom of using the Board's machinery rather than the old-fashioned method of direct action and strike."

More requests for secret ballot elections were presented to the Board than in any year since the Board's inception, he declared, and fewer charges of employer unfair labor practices were received.

More than 75 percent of all the elections were one-union affairs, not involving contests between competing labor organizations.

The total of 9,543 cases filed was the third largest in Board history. Sixty-four percent, or 6,140, were election cases, and 3,403, or only 36 percent, were unfair practice cases.

WLB Upholds Equal Pay Principle

WASHINGTON, Mar. 4—The policy of the War Labor Board in directing equal pay for equal work in dispute cases was reaffirmed this week when the Board unanimously ordered the Aluminum Co. of America to set up rates at its Vernon plant in Los Angeles "on the basis of job content, irrespective of the sex of of the worker."

The CIO United Automobile Workers is bargaining agent for the 3,500 workers at the plant. The number of women employes has increased from about 10 in January 1941 to more than 600 at present.

The Board directed that a present differential of 10c an hour between the minimum hiring-in rates for men and women should be maintained except on jobs where women were hired to replace men or on jobs where men and women work interchangeably.

BLOOD FOR HEROES: The outstanding heroism of three members of the CIO United Federal Workers Union in the armed forces was honored this week by members in the nation's Capital who conducted a special blood donor drive to aid servicemen. Among the many who contributed a pint apiece were, left, Miss Marion Brown and Mrs. Helen Shonick.

The Din Would Be Terrific!

San Francisco, Mar. 4—A suggestion that a microphone be placed in Congress so that the nation might hear important proceedings, was made here this week by Natl. Maritime Union.

"We are sure that every Congressman who feels that he is truly representing the wishes and demands of the majority of his constituents would welcome such an arrangement," stated the NMU.

UAW-CIO Wins First Ontario Runoff Vote

Windsor, Ont., Mar. 4—The first runoff election under Ontario collective bargaining laws was won this week by the CIO United Auto Workers among office workers at the Ford Motor Co. of Canada.

The original election was protested by a company union after the UAW scored 355 votes to 327 for the phoney outfit. In the runoff the UAW soundly trounced the company union by 393 to 294.

CIO Man Honored For Heroism Far Beyond Line of Duty

Washington, Mar. 4—Heroism far beyond the line of duty that cost a member of the CIO American Communications Ass'n. his life was honored this week by the U. S. War Shipping Administration.

The ACA member was Peter A. Carrier, a radio operator on the S.S. Melville E. Stone, which was torpedoed and sunk. The WSA said that Carrier, a resident of Columbia, Mo., stayed at his radio key until the last to attract the attention of rescuers for the ship's crew. Carrier went down with the ship.

Wage Earners On Short End, Outlook Says

Washington, Mar. 4—Relative increases in the share of the national income have gone least to wage earners, the Economic Outlook, monthly CIO publication, shows in its current issue released this week.

While the gross increase of the share going to workers was naturally highest, since they are numerically by far the largest group, the fact that many millions more workers are employed cuts the relative share down to last place in the list.

Thus, while wage and salary earners increased their gross take by 131 percent, the actual relative increase is only 61 percent, the Outlook says. These figures for wage and salary earners include men in the armed forces.

"In all private non-farm industries, for example," the Outlook says, "aggregate salaries and wages rose between 108 percent between 1939 and mid-1943. Employment in these industries rose 29 percent during the same period. The average annual income per employee, therefore, rose only 1 percent."

Cooperation Vital for Jobs, Says Potofsky

Cincinnati, Mar. 4—Full employment after the war means cooperation of "free enterprise," labor and government, Jacob S. Potofsky, secretary-treasurer of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, said here this week.

"The problem is too big for free enterprise, for big business alone," he said. "It must be a cooperative effort of all phases of American life."

Full employment means a full economy, he added, declaring that from $150 to $200 billion a year in national income is required. The NAM's plan for a $100 billion national income will mean a permanent group of millions of unemployed, he said, which would be used to beat down workers' wages and living standards.

PLEDGE TO DEAD: The picture above is a reproduction of a painting by famed artist and CIO member Rockwell Kent, honoring the heroes of the Natl. Maritime Union who gave their lives to "keep 'em sailing." The seaman, made strong by his faith in democracy, is vowing vengeance against the tin fish that sunk his ship.

Murray, Guild Head, Marries Brophy's Niece

New York, March 4—Miss Mary Bernice Welsh, niece of John Brophy of the National CIO, and Milton Meadowcroft Murray, president of the American Newspaper Guild, were married here February 21. Mrs. Murray was formerly secretary to her uncle, who is director of Industrial Union Councils.

ANG Pres. Murray has been on the national staff of the CIO Political Action Committee here since January 15, in charge of labor press publicity and mobilization of the labor press for the 1944 election campaigns. The couple will therefore make their home temporarily in New York.

R. J. Thomas Honored

Detroit, March 4—Nearly a thousand men and women active in the labor movement of the nation and in the civic life of Michigan attended a testimonial dinner in honor of Pres. R. J. Thomas, who recently completed his fifth year as head of the CIO United Automobile Workers.

UAW Takes Strong Stand Against Strikes

DETROIT, Mar. 4—Drastic measures aimed at strengthening the union's no-strike policy were made public this week by Pres. R. J. Thomas of the CIO United Automobile Workers. The new policy, setting forth a two-fold procedure, was adopted by the union's executive board at its meeting in Los Angeles in February.

It provides first for systematic reporting to the International Union of all incidents by which management seeks to provoke strikes, and secondly proposes to discipline individual members,, groups of members or locals "which may be responsible for unauthorized walkouts in violation of the International constitution and of its war-time no-strike pledge."

"Where unauthorized strikes occur, under the policy adopted by the Intl. Executive Board, all services will be withheld from the worker or workers responsible," the Board stated.

"Furthermore, the local union or the International Union, or both, will proceed, if necessary, even to the extent of revoking charters and reorganizing locals which fail to take proper steps to comply with the constitution and the no-strike pledge."

Expressing its determination "to fully meet its responsibilities in the prosecution of the war," the policy statement recalls that the union at its national convention held in Buffalo in October, 1943 resolved by overwhelming vote to reaffirm, without qualifications, its no-strike pledge.

"The considerations which prompted the action of the convention are even more impelling at the present time," declares the new policy statement, "when millions of fellow Americans are poised for a gigantic, bloody invasion of Europe; and absolutely nothing should be left undone to provide them with the weapons of war as fully and as speedily as possible.

Pointing out that the overwhelming majority of our membership has scrupulously complied with constitution and the no-strike pledge, the UAW statement declares that only "an extremely small number of our members have ignored their solemn duty and have indulged in work stoppages."

Name Panel In Textile Wage Case

Washington, Mar. 4—Appointment of a tripartite panel to conduct hearings on wage disputes involving the CIO Textile Workers Union and some 20 companies in the Southern cotton textile industry was announced this week by the War Labor Board.

Frank McCallister, assistant to the CIO members of the regional WLB in Atlanta, Ga., has been named to represent labor. Dr. Lloyd Reynolds of Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Md., was appointed chairman and public member of the panel.

About 20,000 workers are covered by contracts which the CIO union has with textile companies involved in the cases. The companies are located in North and South Carolina, Georgia, Kentucky, Alabama, and Texas.

The panel will hold a preliminary hearing in Washington March 11 to determine procedure for conducting further hearings on the merits of the disputed wage issues.

The union's contracts with some of the companies involved have expired and have been extended by mutual consent. A few of the concerns are negotiating contracts with the union for the first time.

What You Have to Do to Vote in '44

With this issue, The CIO NEWS continues its exclusive listing of voting requirements by states. The information is based on a questionnaire sent by The CIO NEWS to the secretaries of the 48 states.

Five questions were asked: (1) registration requirements; (2) absentee voting; (3) polltax, if any; (4) residence requirements, and (5) primary dates.

When a state is omitted from alphabetical order, it means that information on that state has not yet come in.

In some states, special sessions of the legislature are being held or are scheduled to deal with voting requirements for people in the armed forces, or to change other regulations. As information on these developments comes in, The CIO NEWS will publish it. Readers are urged to send us any changes and to point out any errors.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

The soldiers' vote has gone through another "compromise" wringer that would leave practically nothing of the original idea of getting a ballot to service people that the Federal government could deliver and collect. Under this "compromise," only those soldiers whose states have accepted the idea of a Federal ballot will get one, and then only if their states have no provision for absentee voting; then, on top of all that only overseas service personnel can get even this complicated ballot. Otherwise, the "states' rights" plan, under which only 28,000 soldiers were able to vote in 1942, would go into effect.

Many people throughout the country think the soldiers' vote issue is dead. This is just what the Rankins and the Republicans want you to think. It's far from dead. Following the conference committee acceptance of this latest "compromise," the whole business now goes back to Senate and House again for passage, rejection, or amendment.

Pour the wires in on both Representatives and Senators. Urge them to work and vote for a return to the original Federal system of balloting, as in S 1612, the Green-Lucas bill passed by the Senate. Urge them to reject the Rankin "states' rights" bill (S 1285) as ineffective and undemocratic. Urge them to reject this latest "compromise"—which is no compromise at all, but a surrender to the whole conspiracy to deny the service men and women the right to vote in 1944.

Now that the Senate has voted to over-ride FDR's tax veto, the polltaxers and the Republicans are out on a new line of sabotage and harassment.

This new line is to wreck vital U. S. war agencies by cutting off their funds. This week, a Senate sub-committee of the Appropriations Committee voted to throttle the Fair Employment Practices Committee, set up by the President. Sen. Russell (polltaxer, Ga.) has said that Congress will follow this up on other U. S. war agencies. The FEPC, of course, angers the polltaxers by carrying out FDR's order to end anti-Negro and anti-other minority discrimination in war industries.

Sen. Taft (R., O.), is already boasting of what he'll do to subsidies and food prices when the Price Control Act comes up for renewal June 30, and plans are now being laid to cut OPA to pieces on appropriations.

Meantime, major bills are awaiting action. Closest of these to action is HR 7, the polltax repeal bill. Keep the wires warm on this measure.

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Soldiers' vote (S 1285, S 1612)	This week's 'compromise' is a complete surrender of Federal ballot plan, if it goes through.	After present "compromise" is passed by Senate-House conference, it goes back to both Houses for passage and then to FDR.	Urge Representatives and Senators to return to S-1612 after conference report; reject so-called "compromise" which is a surrender.
Polltax repeal (HR 7)	Brings 10 million Americans into democracy.	Ready for Senate debate and vote.	Keep urging gag on filibuster; no amendments; early passage.
Subsidies	CCC now extended, without subsidy ban of HR 3477.	Hunger and inflation bloc threatening to get subsidies June 30 on Price Control Act renewal.	Prepare for major campaign around this renewal.
Labor draft	Austin-Wadsworth bill only one in Congress.	Senate Military Affairs Committee; CIO testimony coming up.	Write your Representative and Senators against.

New Soldier Vote 'Compromise' Kills Federal Ballot Plan

BULLETIN

CIO President Murray today wrote to all Congressmen and Senators urging them to reject the phony 'compromise' plan that ends Federal balloting and to work and vote instead for a bill modelled after the original Federal ballot plan in the Green-Lucas measure. (S 1612).

WASHINGTON, Mar. 4—In a perfect orgy of compromise, the Senate and House conferees on the soldiers' vote this week reduced the whole issue close to a technical absurdity—and then, one day later, when everybody thought the final retreat had sounded—added another.

Starting with what should have been a simple issue of whether or not the men and women in the armed forces would be allowed to vote this year, the bill now sent back to both House and Senate for final passage resembles this legalistic jungle:

1. A Federal ballot is sent by the government to a) those service personnel whose states have no absentee balloting arrangements and b) those who swear they have not received a state ballot by Oct. 1, provided their home state governor has certified by Aug. 1 that the state would count the soldier's Federal ballot if received in due order.

2. Resting a whole day after this, the conference then came out with a further amendment to the agreement limiting the above procedure to service personnel serving outside the continental United States, that is, overseas.

RANKIN STILL RANK

Even with this, Rep. Rankin, (polltaxer, Miss.) isn't satisfied. It still assaults and violates the Constitution, he says, and "might prove dangerous if not disastrous."

Sen. Green (D., R.I.), co-author of the original Green-Lucas Federal ballot bill (S 1612) which the Senate passed, commented that the newest compromise would not let as many servicemen vote as were able to vote in 1942, when 28,000 soldiers cast ballots.

If this compromise goes through both sides of the conference committee, the proposed bill must then go back to both House and Senate for re-passage before going to President Roosevelt for signature or veto.

Once back in both House and Senate, the whole struggle for a Federal system that will guarantee government distribution and collection of ballots to the services can begin again.

Army News Biased, Says Marine Sergeant

WASHINGTON, March 4—A 21-year-old Marine Sergeant back on furlough after two years of bloody fighting in the South Pacific this week said that the news which reaches the troops is so badly distorted that at one time the men at his island station thought that almost half this country was on strike.

The Sergeant was John Ryan Devereux 3rd, of nearby Chevy Chase, Maryland, who comes from a family with a military history that goes back to the Civil War. He's a veteran of three major campaigns— Bougainville, Guadalcanal and Russell Island.

Devereux's comments boldly underlined the need for widely circulating the CIO NEWS Servicemen's Edition to offset some of the vicious anti-labor lies that are dinned into the ears of American fighting men.

"Our command used to pick up broadcasts from the States and put them out in mimeographed form," Devereux explained. "We got the dope that everything was going haywire. I got so worried about it I wrote my father, but I felt a lot better when he said that less than 1 per cent of working time was lost by strikes.

"It kind of hurts to hear about people back home walking off the job," he said. "The boys at the front don't like it a bit. But then they figure that most of the people must be working pretty hard, because the gear has improved a lot and the flow of it is so much faster than it was at the early years of the war."

Asked if the servicemen are interested in voting, Devereux said emphatically yes—and they want to do it by federal ballot, he declared.

"A lot of guys are young fellows who never had a chance to vote before," he said. "They don't know all about the technicalities. It's too hard for them to find out all the dope about a state's system of voting. What they want is one, simple federal ballot—and they want it bad."

UAW Survey Shows GI's Want Federal Vote Plan

WASHINGTON, March 4—Run through the armed forces with a fine tooth comb and you won't scratch one GI Joe in a thousand who isn't vitally interested in voting in the 1944 Presidential election and who doesn't want to do it by federal rather than by state ballot.

That's the opinion anyone would get if he looked through a handful of post cards written by servicemen—members of the CIO United Auto Workers—and released this week by Richard T. Frankensteen, UAW's legislative director.

Everyone of the cards gets in a big plug for the right of servicemen to vote and most of them are emphatic about wanting to cast their ballots through a simple system. Samples chosen at random say:

"I believe the servicemen should have the right to vote through a national voting system, NOT handled by individual states, in order to speed handling and assure a voice."—Sgt. Marsh Cahoon, Camp Chaffee, Ark.

DEMOCRACY AT HOME

"Democracy begins at home. We fight for it. Why not let us practice it here and in the fox holes? I believe every serviceman is entitled to his or her vote . . . "—F. O. Hughey, MS 3/c, USNCB, Gulf Port, Miss.

"Why should one distinguish between the right of a serviceman and the right of civilians? Are servicemen aliens of some type? Of course we should vote. Any one with common sense can see that."—Pvt. William L. Sanders, Lake Forest, Ill.

"Servicemen serve their country during times of danger and attack. Is voting too dangerous a task for the servicemen? I don't think so! I believe in servicemen voting!"—Bunch M. Surystun, Camp Park, Calif.

"Servicemen should have as much if not more right to vote than civilians. Just because we're in service doesn't mean that we've lost our good common sense. We demand the right to decide upon issues of the country we're striving to keep free for free people."—S. F. Olevinski, MM 2/c, New York.

"I think every serviceman should have a right to vote because in my opinion, that is what he is fighting for . . . we'll be cooperating with the national leaders we elect now, after we win this war."—Pvt. John Zajac, Lincoln, Neb.

Aid to Soldier Vote

Lansing, Mich., Mar. 4—To permit soldiers and sailors to vote in the final election, Michigan has set its primary for July 11 instead of the usual September date. The law is so drawn that it will dovetail with legislation Congress may adopt on letting those who are fighting for democracy vote in democratic fashion.

USA Political Paper

East Chicago, Ind., Mar. 4—A 16-page community newspaper named the Harbor Labor Sentinel and aimed to bring labor's political action drive into the industrial area of East Chicago-Hammond, Ind., is to be launched by local 1010, United Steelworkers, with other unions joining in sponsoring it.

Fair Job Practices Under Attack

Hitlerism is rearing its ugly head in the United States in the present attempts to "get" the Fair Employment Practice Committee.

The purpose of this Committee, established by President Roosevelt, is to promote war production and national unity by preventing job discriminations against American workers on account of race, creed, color, etc.

One of the chief reasons of manpower shortages, where they arise, is the refusal of employers to give jobs to women workers, to Negro workers or to other Americans ready and eager to work.

Such discriminations also lead to the racial friction and even riots that have been so damaging to war morale and war production.

Hitler and the Nazis have tried to undermine the unity of every country they are fighting by promoting Negro-baiting, Jew-baiting and other prejudices and discriminations.

These serve the purpose of our enemies by hampering war production, creating division and disunity among Americans and spreading Nazi ideas.

Because the FEPC has tried to do the essential war job assigned to it, it has incurred the enmity of all fascist-minded elements in the United States, including both conscious and unconscious stooges of the Nazis.

It is being attacked by the labor-baiting and administration-baiting Howard Smith committee in the House, which is also attacking the War Shipping Administration for allowing Negro seamen equal job opportunities with white seamen.

In the Senate, an attempt is admittedly being made by the polltaxers to kill the FEPC outright by preparing to cut off its appropriation.

The CIO, being based on true Americanism, not Hitlerism, has worked ever since its inception for equal job opportunities for all American workers, regardless of race, creed, sex or other differences.

In defending the FEPC and all other sincere attempts to end unfair discriminations, the CIO will expose and fight bitterly all those who propagate Hitleristic ideas of racial intolerance, division and discrimination.

Nutty As A Nazi Fruitcake

It is a successor to the "former National Soul-Cratic League, that it has been dissolved for a nimble and effective actions, upon the national and international complications of political and economical strategic situations," according to the circular.

The "national efficacious American Party" charges that the American people "have been suffering from a mass-persecutions, mass-extinctions, mass-starvation, mass-murder, clever-artifice and systematic robbery . . . and all of these occurrences are upon our part of forgetfulness, carelessness, ignoramousness and monotonousness voice."

It calls upon the American people "to save their constitutional freedom, christiandom and the independent national treasury Vault: instead of selling their freedom and brains, for a wall papers NOW." To which we can only add: "And a kiddley divey too."

Through most of the weird and lengthy concoction there runs a consistent strain of FDR-baiting, Jew-baiting, red-baiting, United Nations-baiting, with the utmost violence of language, that makes it read like a dozy doats edition of the United Mine Workers Journal or the Hearst press.

It all goes to show the effect on disordered minds of the flood of scarcely concealed Nazi propaganda that still goes through the mails and is printed in newspapers like those of the McCormick-Hearst Axis.

Sucker Heroics

Rep. Charles A. Halleck, GOP big-shot from Indiana, told the Cincinnati Advertisers' Club that he "would lay down his life in the fight to keep America free of grade labeling."

"If, in the end, I poison myself by eating the wrong kind of food," he declared, or cut my throat by using the wrong kind of razor blade, or freeze to death sleeping under the wrong kind of blanket, I shall go to my reward secure in the knowledge that I have lived and died as a free-born American should."

Most other free-born Americans would prefer to pay controlled prices for honestly labeled goods, rather than to join Charley in a sucker's death.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

CONGRESS has finally hatched a scheme whereby any soldier can vote—provided he is overseas and has maintained continuous residence in his state for umpteen months, unless of course he has failed to observe sections 1034BX to 543523YZ of the state laws and to carry on a six months' correspondence in triplicate with all state officials concerned.

Naturally all bets are off unless the governor of his state signifies approval, or if the soldier fails to prove he didn't receive a state ballot by October 1, or if the governor doesn't say a federal ballot is within states' rights by August 1—and of course the soldier must show proof he applied for a state ballot before September 1.

The state legislature also gets its fingers in the pie somewhere down the line, and doesn't have to agree to anything.

It's all very simple, if the soldier finally says nuts and decides not to try to vote. But if he wants to have a say in the country he's fighting for, there are 48 varieties of complications which he had better hire legal counsel to unriddle in between battles.

The situation is strictly SNAFU, as they say in the Army.

And oh, we nearly forgot, each soldier has got to swear an oath by or before some date or another—which ought to be easy, if he just thinks how far some politicians have gone to stop him from voting.

★ ★ ★

The much touted Congressional "revolt" is really a revolt against democracy and common decency on the part of an undemocratically elected polltax minority acting in cahoots with the tory Republican minority to usurp control of Congress.

Let the revolters be judged by their works — particularly their shameful treatment of our absent service men and women.

(1) The rejection of a simple federal soldiers' ballot cannot by any stretch of imagination be called a victory for "representative government" over "executive dictatorship."

It is a successful attempt to prevent as many servicemen as possible from voting.

The reactionary clique that has snarled up the soldiers' vote in every sort of state restriction has done so because it fears that most servicemen's votes would be cast for Roosevelt, for progressive social and win-the-war policies, and against everything for which the tory clique stands.

(2) Another achievement of the revolters was the ban on food subsidies, stopped only by the President's veto.

This was a device to raise food prices and to make the working people, and the servicemen on their return, pay the costs of the resulting profiteering and inflation.

(3) The most publicized "revolt" of all, thanks to Alben Barkley, was the over-riding of the tax bill veto.

This simply transfers much of the burden of war costs from greedy profiteers to the shoulders of the needy, leaving huge unpaid debts for the returning servicemen to pay.

One unintended result of this "revolt" is to get more people to thinking about tax legislation, and what's in it, than ever before.

The more they examine the new act, the more they will find evidence of how it relieves the greedy at the expense of the needy.

While the changes in individual federal taxes are relatively small, for instance, they are worked out in such a way as to add to the taxes on the lower incomes and reduce those on the higher incomes.

A single person earning only $600 a year will have to pay $3.28 more under the new law, and every individual with up to $2,500 a year has to pay more.

On incomes above that, on the other hand, taxes are progressively reduced to the point where persons with incomes from $500,000 to $750,000 save from $10,000 to $15,000 in taxes.

Equally unjust is the complete failure of the new bill to tax war profits and upper incomes adequately or to close any of the present loopholes whereby the rich escape paying their fair share of taxes.

Time Out!

* * *

The secret is out. Where does John L. Lewis get the mental food that makes him belch forth such blasts against the CIO, the administration and all progessivism?

After listening to a recent red-baiting tirade against the CIO, the reporter interviewing him exclaimed:

"You sound like Westbrook Pegler."

"Believe it or not," Lewis replied, "I read him every day."

* * *

The Mine Workers Journal, Lewis' personal propaganda sheet, has come out with his blessings on Big Bill Hutcheson of the AFL Carpenters' Union for Hutcheson's blasts at FDR. Time was when Lewis and Hutcheson made connections a different way, but a common hate is a wonderful thing—it can even make some men forget a sock on the jaw!

Tax Bill 'Sticks' Workers, Lets Rich off Easy

WASHINGTON, Mar. 4—Now that the smoke has cleared away over the "revolt" against FDR's veto of the tax bill, with newspapers cutting down their 21-gun salutes of approval, let's take a good look at what the House and Senate did to the lower-income groups—and to the higher ones—when they passed the final tax bill.

This table, comparing the rates paid under the previous tax law with those under the new bill that has gone into effect, shows what a married person with two dependents paid under the old law and will pay under the new one:

INCOME	TAX UNDER PREVIOUS LAW	TAX UNDER NEW LAW
$1,200	$19.86	$21.28
1,500	29.19	31.28
1,800	38.53	41.28
2,000	57.75	66.95
2,500	171.69	190.99
3,000	290.74	314.16
4,000	532.22	563.86

Now look at what Congress did to the higher groups. For single taxpayers there are consistent decreases in taxes in all the upper brackets, ranging up to savings for "the greedy" of as much as $15,000 a year. For comparative purposes the following figures are for married persons with two dependents:

INCOME	TAX UNDER PREVIOUS LAW	TAX UNDER NEW LAW
$20,000	$7,453.75	$7,580.95
25,000	10,676.06	10,814.36
40,000	21,547.85	21,719.49

Not very large increases for the "big shots," when you consider the size of the income and what the taxpayer has left after all taxes are paid!

The new tax bill is even nicer to the really big fellows, the ones with annual incomes over the $50,000 level. They actually get their taxes cut, not increased. Here's how it works:

INCOME	TAX UNDER PREVIOUS LAW	TAX UNDER NEW LAW
$60,000	$38,088.63	$38,051.78

Maybe this is what President Roosevelt meant when he called the new tax bill "relief not for the needy, but for the greedy," and what Philip Murray meant when he said the bill was "aimed at protecting and broadening special privileges."

It should also be remembered that the new bill raises only one-tenth the $10 billion the President asked to help finance the war. This new bill, therefore, means that postwar generations will have to pay an undue share of the tax bill for this war—that should have been borne by those able to pay.

Keeping Score for '44

Senate's Vote On Tax Bill Veto

This is the vote in the Senate to over-ride President Roosevelt's veto of the "relief for the greedy, not for the needy" tax bill. The total was 72 to re-pass the tax bill, 14 against and 10 not voting.

"W" means "Wrong;" that is, a vote for the bill and against FDR and the CIO. "R" means "Right," a vote against the 1944 tax steal, for FDR, in line with CIO tax policy. "NV" means "Not voting."

Polltax states are marked by an asterisk (*).

Wagner Act Upheld By Top Court

Washington, March 4—The U. S. Supreme Court this week upheld Wagner Labor Relations Act policy, ruling that individual contracts between an employer and an employe cannot be used under any circumstances to limit the terms of a collective bargaining agreement.

The Court, in an eight-to-one opinion, said:

"Wherever private contracts conflict with the functions of the National Labor Relations Act, they obviously must yield or the act would be reduced to a futility."

The Court said that the ruling does not prevent employes or employers from making individual employment contracts, provided that they do not conflict with a collective bargaining contract and thus violate the National Labor Relations Act.

The decision, which upheld an NLRB order directing the J. L. Case Co., of Rock Island, Ill., to bargain with the CIO United Workers Union, also said:

"The very purpose of providing by statute for the collective agreement is to supersede the terms of separate agreements of employes with terms which reflect the strength and bargaining power and serve the welfare of the group."

Golden Plan

Dismissal Pay Urged For War Workers

WASHINGTON, March 4—Dismissal pay and higher postwar job priority as incentives to war workers to stick to their jobs as long as they are needed were suggested this week by Clinton S. Golden, vice-chairman of the War Manpower Commission. Commission Chairman Paul V. McNutt said he approved the idea in principle and has directed his staff to prepare a detailed memorandum on the proposal for further study.

Golden, assistant to President Philip Murray of the United Steelworkers, suggested the incentive plan in the course of a discussion of absenteeism and turnover problems at a meeting of the WMC Management-Labor Policy Committee, and the committee requested that the WMC staff give careful study to the proposal and bring back a definite plan.

"I am informed that absenteeism mounts with every announcement of good news from the fighting fronts," said Golden. "In many cases this is explained by the fact that the worker, believing the end of the war is near, has taken time off to look around for a peacetime job. Or, hearing of layoffs due to production adjustments, he may think the time has come to assure his postwar future, and quit his war job.

"I believe that in justice to these workers and in the interest of their orderly demobilization after the war, some plan should be evolved which will give them some sense of protection, recognition and reward.

"Such a plan should be applied, I think, to industries of a war and emergency nature whose temporary character is clear. I think we should be able to say to workers in such plants:

"'If you people remain in this industry until it is indicated that your services are no longer needed, you will then receive a dismissal wage based upon your length of service and total earnings. It will be payable in whole or in part only at the time it is indicated that your services are no longer needed. You who have met these conditions also will be placed in a priority position for postwar job placement second only to that of veterans. In other words, the last people to leave these industries which are of a temporary nature, but whose production is of such great importance, will be the first ones to receive consideration for placement in other jobs upon the termination of their services by their employers.'

"I think that if this whole thing could be thought through, it could be evolved into a plan that would have a profound effect upon the attitudes of people in these war industries, their fears of sudden dismissal or their temptation to follow the old rule of every man for himself, without regard to the war program."

Aircraft Meet Urges Stabilized Pay Plan

CHICAGO, March 4—Stabilization of wages in the aircraft industry based on "equal pay for equal work," regardless of the locality where the work is performed, was one of the major recommendations made this week at the first national aircraft conference held by the CIO United Auto Workers Union. Nearly 300 delegates, representing three-quarters of a million organized workers, also called for modification of the Little Steel formula to permit wages to reach the level of the actual rise of the cost of living.

The conference, chaired by UAW-CIO Vice-Pres. Richard T. Frankensteen, asked for the establishment by the Natl. War Labor Board of a national aircraft commission, similar to existing shipbuilding and lumber commissions, to replace the present national airframe panel of the WLB.

Abolition of the merit rating system of pay was recommended, and the substitution of a flat rate or an automatic rate progression setup was urged.

MILLION AIRCRAFT JOBS

In his report to the conference, Frankensteen stressed the need to plan now for the post war period, and suggested that the nation set a goal of one million jobs in the manufacturing end of the aircraft industry and of two to three million more in servicing and auxiliary lines.

He declared that the following steps are necessary to reach such a goal:

(1) Establishment of a favorable national economy by securing unconditional victory over the Axis powers; post-war political and economic cooperation among the United Nations and defeat of the reactionary forces in the November election.

(2) Development of the technological improvements to make possible a light, safe plane for family use.

(3) Reduction of plane prices to create mass demand and mass production.

(4) Facilitation of the reconversion process by setting aside from war profits pay severance and lay-off bonuses and by initiating retraining and educational projects for workers who do not plan to return to the industry.

Among actions taken by the conference were resolutions recommending: Repeal of the polltax, passage of a federal soldiers' voting bill, adequate subsidy legislation, and the Murray-Wagner-Dingel social security bill.

The delegates also supported President Roosevelt's veto of the "greedy, not needy" tax bill, called for extension of child care facilities, and recommended that the UAW-CIO Education Dept. make political action its number one job for 1944.

UAW Natl. Education Parley

Chicago, March 4—With a theme of "education in action," the CIO United Auto Workers Union last week held its first national education conference, with 450 delegates—95 of them women—coming from all parts of the nation.

The purpose of the conference, called by UAW-CIO Education Director William H. Levitt, was to pull together local education committeemen for analysis and discussion of educational work.

Keynote speakers included: Robert Weaver, executive director of the Mayors' Committee on Race Relations, talking on "Minority Groups in the Postwar World," and Raymond McKeough, CIO Political Action Committee regional director, speaking on "Political Action for '44."

Sees Million Plane Jobs After War

New York, March 4—A prediction that the postwar aircraft industry in the United States can provide employment for more than a million workers was made this week by Richard T. Frankensteen, vice president of the CIO United Auto Workers Union, writing in the February 28 issue of the New Republic Magazine.

Frankensteen, head of the UAW-CIO's aircraft division, said his prediction is based on the following assumptions:

1. "That the United Nations carry through to a complete and unconditional victory over the Axis, and establish thereby the bedrock foundation of a peaceful and democratic world.

2. "That political and economic co-operation among the United Nation continues to develop for winning the peace and assuring the democratic development of a world economy.

3. "That the American people rally in this year's election to defeat the rightist reaction at home which would snatch away from us the victory over fascism.

4. "That American labor, industry and farm groups press for an economy of full production and employment, with gross national production running at levels of close to $200,000,000,000 a year."

Free Posters

New York, Mar. 4—Colorful posters expressing the fundamental themes of democracy are available to unions and other organizations free on request to the Institute for American Democracy, Inc., 415 Lexington Ave., New York City, the organization announced this week. The posters are 18 by 24 inches, suitable for bulletin board use.

CIO Political Pot Boils

'No Secrets' on Political Action, Hillman Says—Closing Door on Dies

NEW YORK, Mar. 4—CIO's Political Action Committee "has no secrets to hide from any properly authorized Congressional committee," but will fight the un-American Martin Dies smear plot, Sidney Hillman, CPAC chairman, said this week in a letter to all Congressmen.

Hillman's letter quoted from an editorial attacking Dies in the Washington Post, which said: "We believe that he (Hillman) will find full support in our courts of justice and in the sense of fair play of the American people."

This, Hillman told the Congressmen, "reflects a substantial public point of view and interprets fairly the motives that inspired me to reject the illegal efforts of Rep. Dies.

'No Secrets'

"As I said in my statement to the press on Feb. 18, we have no secrets to hide from any properly authorized Congressional committee. We will, however, resist by every legitimate means the efforts of Martin Dies to thwart the civil and political rights of the American people."

Dies' smear job on the Political Action Committee has been running into rough water in Congress as well as in the newspapers, with a number of Congressmen hitting him sharply for trying to deny American workers their right to take political action.

An earlier attempt by Rep. Howard Smith, the bank president and labor-hater from polltax Virginia, to have Philip Murray indicted for violating the Smith-Connally Act through the Political Action Committee has become one of the most resounding flops in recent polltax history.

Rep. Eberharter, (D., Pa.) a member of the Dies Committee and a fighter against Dies' smear tactics, has been criticizing the attacks on the Political Action group, pointing out that they were started without the knowledge of the Dies committee members—a familiar Dies technique.

And Rep. Sadowski (D., Mich.) said on the House floor: "The members of the CIO have the same right to exercise their franchise as any other group of citizens, without being subjected to investigation by Congress.

"The members of Congress and the American people will recognize the unfairness of this investigation of the CIO and will support the refusal of that organization to submit its records to the gentleman from Texas."

UNION TRIMS: Some 15,000 posters like this have been distributed to all union offices, shops and halls in a patronize-the-union drive launched last week by the CIO Barber & Beauty Culturists Union in New York City, with the support of the N. Y. CIO Council. Goal of the campaign is the unionization of every barber and beauty shop in the city.

Texas Labor, Farmers Unite Against Reaction

FORT WORTH, Texas, Mar. 4—This city was the scene of a precedent smashing political action meeting last week when for the first time in the history of Texas farm, labor, old age groups and other progressive associations joined to push a legislative program designed to promote better social legislation and better representation for Texans in state and national legislative bodies.

A total of 99 accredited delegates representing over one-half million Texans formed the Texas State Joint Social and Legislative Conference to help win their demands.

Attending the meeting were representatives of CIO, AFL, the National Farmers' Union, Railroad Brotherhoods, State Pensioners Protective Organizations, United Legislative Committee of Dallas, Citizens Progressive League, Townsend Clubs, Allied Printing Trades, Social Security League, Brewery Workers and the Southwestern Telephone Workers Union.

By unanimous vote the conference agreed to:

1. Work for uncompromising victory over the Axis and "support the commander-in-chief in his win-the-war-now program."

2. Urge maximum pensions for the aged.

3. Support the Office of Price Administration in its efforts to control prices.

4. Fight for a federal soldiers' ballot.

5. Oppose payment of the poll tax and seek legislation to discontinue it.

6. Support the President's seven-point stabilization program and demand the rollback of prices and continued payment of subsidies.

7. Demand continuation of the AAA program and parity prices to farmers.

8. Advocate the proposition that every person in the state, regardless of race, color, or creed, shall have equal education and economic opportunities, and enjoy an American standard of living.

9. Urge every returning war veteran be returned to his former employment, where possible, and rehabilitated where necessary.

10. Seek legislation for a true secret ballot.

11. Demand that "states' rights" shall not be perverted to deny the constitutional rights of Texas citizens.

Get Off Fence, On Beam—CIO

Washington, March 4—Thousands of Baltimore war workers speaking through nearly a score of representatives this week told Maryland Congressmen to get off the fence on issues that are of vital concern to all the American people.

A one-day delegation to the national capital, led by the Maryland and District of Columbia Industrial Union Council, urged:

1. Enactment of a federal soldier voting bill.

2. Passage of the anti-polltax bill.

3. A crackdown on Congressman Martin Dies for the smear job he is attempting to do against the CIO Political Action Committee, which the delegates described as "the present democratic movement that has developed—the resurgance of political activity by five million trade unionists."

4. A vote against the miscalled "equal rights" amendment which would wipe out laws protecting the health of women workers.

5. Revision of the Little Steel formula to allow wages to keep pace with the rising cost of living, and support for President Roosevelt's economic stabilization program.

6. Passage of the Scanlon Wage Bill to help provide pay increases for federal employes.

O'Connell Made Montana Director

Seattle, Wash., March 4—Former Congressman Jerry J. O'Connell, of Butte, Montana, this week was appointed as CIO Political Action Committee director for that state.

In announcing the appointment, Roy W. Atkinson, regional director of the committee for Montana, Idaho, Oregon and Washington, said that O'Connell has wide experience in his state and is known as a staunch supporter of President Roosevelt and his program.

Political Action In Nutmeg State

New Haven, Conn., Mar. 4—The United Labor Legislative Conference of the 3rd Congressional District, made up of the CIO, AFL and Railroad Unions, this week unanimously voted endorsement of President Roosevelt's conduct of the war on the home and fighting fronts.

'Fortune' Piece Tells of Steel Union

Washington, Mar 4—An article on the policies, plans and officials of the CIO United Steelworkers, carried in the February issue of "Fortune," says that the social outlook of the steel companies has changed rapidly since "Big Steel's Myron Taylor first signed with Phil Murray in 1937."

Even though "Bethlehem's Eugene Grace and Republic's Tom Girdler may still mutter under their breath," writes the author, John Chamberlain, "the steel industry has long since ceased to be a wrecker of unions."

In describing the union's leadership, Chamberlain says that Pres. Murray in meeting people, "has the friendliness of a favorite uncle." Van A. Bittner and Clinton S. Golden, Murray's chief assistants, he declares, "carry the Murray philosophy down into the districts."

The USA sec'y.-treas. is described as "the handsome, well-tailored David J. McDonald, who has been Murray's trusted assistant since 1923."

Harold J. Ruttenberg, head of the USA research department, who was called by an eminent professor, "a walking encyclopedia of the steel industry," is, according to the article, "genial and remarkably boyish, yet his mouth can shut in a tight line, and in his younger days he was an amateur heavyweight boxer."

Joe Scanlon, who is running USA research during Ruttenberg's absence, is described as a "cocky, gay, tough-hombre Irishman" and also "an intellectual" who can "make challenging speeches before learned societies."

Vincent Sweeney, publicity director, is described as an "Irish-American with the violet-blue eyes, stiff gray-black hair, white skin and quiet demeanor of a certain type of intellectual Gael."

Schools Help Build Good Citizenship

By ELEANOR FOWLER
Sec.-Treas., CIO Women's Auxiliaries

Two splendid suggestions for reaching women in our communities and interesting them in registration and political action have come to our attention.

The first is a "Good Citizenship" week in the schools, which could be initiated through the Parent-Teacher organizations.

It would be a week during which all our school children would learn something about how their government functions, and how the citizens participate by registering and voting. And part of the program would be to ask each child to take home to his parents a sheet of information on who is eligible to vote in each community and how to become a registered voter.

COMPETITION SUGGESTED

You might even have a competition between classrooms, with a prize offered by the PTA for the classrooms reporting the highest percentage of parents who are registered voters.

They offered a $5 War Stamp in the school my daughter attends for the class which had the largest number of parents in attendance at the first PTA meeting of the term, and my life wouldn't have been worth living if I hadn't gone.

There's nothing quite equal to the persistence of a child who has been sold by the teacher on the importance of doing a certain job. If that job were to see that parents register to vote, I'm sure we'd have a very high proportion of parents registered.

The public libraries, too, might cooperate in this kind of a community-wide good citizenship drive. During March, when OPA is putting on a drive to ask housewives to get copies of the community price lists from their War Price and Rationing Boards and use them to check prices, the public libraries are helping by putting book marks in all the books they issue calling attention to the campaign. They might do the same sort of thing to urge readers to register and vote.

They're putting up posters for the OPA campaign, too. Perhaps they could sponsor a poster competition for school children in the good-citizenship drive which could be displayed at the library, judged by a committee and the best of them distributed to neighborhood stores for display.

CONGRESS CLUBS

Hartford, Conn., has started another good plan for reaching women on political action. They have "Congress Clubs," non-partisan, non-sectarian, neighborhood groups of women who meet twice a month to discuss and take action on legislation that affects the average person.

These clubs are organized in the neighborhoods and have these aims:

"1. To win the war on the home front.

"2. To uphold the President's program.

"3. To uphold and maintain our democratic way of life."

They study and discuss issues that are up in Congress, write to their Congressmen and their newspapers on those issues, hold public meetings with prominent speakers, and pay visits to their Congressmen and local officials.

Why not try these ideas in your community? The political action committees of our unions and auxilaries, working with other civic minded community groups, could start the ball rolling.

Ask Runoff At N. C. Yard

Wilmington, N. C., Mar. 4—Petition for a new election at the North Carolina Shipbuilding Co., here has been filed with the NLRB by the CIO Marine & Shipbuilding Workers.

Union officials say the workers are flocking into the union now, convinced that they were fooled by promises the company made before the election held Sept. 3, 1943, to keep the CIO union out.

These promises were not kept, they assert, after the CIO lost the election.

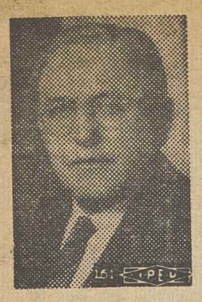
CIO Man Writes Novel

New York, Mar. 4—The CIO American Communications Ass'n. could boast of a novelist among its members this week. He is Alexander "Sandy" Saxton, whose first book, "Grand Crossing," is selling fast. The novel is the current selection of the Book Find Club, 112 E. 19th St., New York City.

Windfall for Women

Chicago, Feb. 26—About $600,000 in back pay and wage increases were won by 1,000 women at the General Motors Corp. Buick plant in Chicago as a result of an equal pay for equal work victory of Local 6, United Auto Workers (CIO). Individual retroactive pay will run as high as $750.

TALKING TURKEY: to Congress this week was the delegation, above, of women from the CIO United Auto Workers Union, who came from Michigan to plug for a federal soldiers' voting bill. Seated with them are, left, Congressman Louis C. Rabaut and Congressman George Sadowski. Every one of the women has either a husband or son in the armed forces. The marine in the background is the husband of one of the women.



Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

Reg. Dir. Frank Cronin, Omaha, reports: Glenn L. Martin-Nebraska Co. run-off election, as follows: 60.3 per cent for UAW-CIO, 39.54 per cent for no union.

Al Whitehouse, Dist. Dir., USA-CIO, advises: Williamson Heater Co., Cincinnati, Ohio: CIO 305, against 242.

A. R. Hardesty, CIO Sub-Reg. Dir., Dallas, reports: Emsco Derrick & Equipment Co.: USA-CIO 96, against 31. This was the second attempt to organize this plant. The election last August resulted in a tie.

Carl Albrecht, Southern Dir., Amalgamated Clothing Workers, advises: Mason & Hughes, Inc., Clarksville: CIO 61, against 47. Most of the credit for this victory goes to ACWA Organizer Bessie Moore and honorable mention to Goodrich Local 194, URWA, for splendid cooperation and assistance.

Paul Christopher, Reg. Dir., Tennessee, reports: American Finishing Co., Memphis, Tenn.: Textile Workers, CIO 607, AFL 363. The entire Tennessee Textile Workers staff and the Memphis CIO organizers are to be complimented for the fine job done.

Christopher also reports: At McDonnell Aircraft plant, Memphis, Tenn., UAW-CIO received over 65% of the votes in a cross-check made by the NLRB. UAW Rep. Jimmy Boyette conducted this fine campaign. The Newspaper Guild won an election at the Memphis Publishing Co., by a vote of 30 to 2.

These victories in Tennessee mean we have won bargaining rights for an additional 2,000 workers this past week. Congratulations to all participating!

The United Furniture Workers held their Eastern Seaboard Conference in Boston last week-end, reporting to the delegates that since their May, 1943, convention, 46 NLRB elections covering 7,700 workers have been won by this organization. Nine of these elections covering 1,200 workers have occurred since January 1, 1944. Best wishes for continued success!

Pres. Morris Muster, United Furniture Workers, reports: Northern Furniture, Cheboygan, Mich.: CIO 261, no union 108. Brown Bros., Gardner, Mass.: CIO 50, no union 15. Institutional Furniture Co., Grand Rapids, Mich.: 61 to 39. W. F. Whitney Co., South Ashburton, Mass.: 76 to 32.

CTAL Asks Continental Unity Against Fascism

MONTEVIDEO, March 2 (ALN)—Declaring that Argentine-based fascism is the greatest danger to Latin America today, Vicente Lombardo Toledano, president of the Confederation of Latin American workers (CTAL), this week told an emergency meeting of the CTAL, at which Martin C. Kyne is the CIO delegate appointed by President Murray:

"Our most urgent problem is the maintenance and strengthening of democracy in the face of the growing menace emanating from fascist Spain, operating through Argentina as the agent of Germany. CTAL must devise concrete means, working with continental Democrats, to smash this Fascist threat to America.

"Without the 'Falange Espanol,' the present Argentine regime could not exist and could not become the focal point for disturbances in other countries, making possible the December 20 coup in Bolivia and similar adventures in other countries."

Calling on the Argentine people to restore their liberties, Toledano pledged the aid of the CTAL to help oust the Argentine fascists.

Sharply criticising the AFL's refusal to participate in the world labor conference called by the British Trades Union Congress at London next June, "at a time when labor unity is vital in the face of the facist menace," Toledano declared: "The CTAL will no longer tolerate AFL trickery and this council will act against the saboteurs of international labor unity."

He condemned Matthew Woll, AFL vice president, as the instigator of attempts to "lure CTAL affiliates to the AFL," and declared that the CTAL will work closely with CIO and TUC to counteract any attempted sabotage by the AFL at the International Labor Office meeting in Philadelphia on April 20. Toledano will be present at the ILO session as the delegate of the Confederation of Mexican Workers (CTM).

He urged the AFL to abandon its present attitude in order to make possible the fullest Pan-American labor collaboration, "based on fraternity and equality."

Praising CIO's progressivism and friendship with Latin-American labor, Toledano said: "The CTAL is proud of its alliance and genuine friendship with the CIO." Present at the meeting was the representative of the CIO, Martin C. Kyne, vice president of the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employes.

Greetings From Murray

Greeting the session in the name of CIO President Philip Murray and CIO's 5,285,000 members, Kyne praised the unity of the Americas and stressed the ideals contained in Vice-President Wallace's "Century of the Common Man" speech.

Meanwhile the General Union of Workers of Uruguay charged the AFL with being linked with Argentine fascists who, using "independent" unions in this country, attacked the CTAL meeting as "communist."

Bernardo Ibanez, general secretary of the Confederation of Chilean Workers (CTCH), who visited the United States last month, revealed at yesterday's session that the AFL had invited the CTCH to leave the CTAL in order to establish a new Latin American Labor Federation, and added: "I refused and the CTCH is remaining firmly united with CTAL." Ibanez urged CTAL affiliates to avoid "provocative offers" and maintain their solidarity.

Argentine Delegates

One of the most dramatic features of the meeting has been the presence of representatives of 365 individual Argentine unions, outlawed by the Fascist government there. They disclosed that Col. Juan Peron, leader of the "Colonel's Lodge," which runs that government, had sent special agents here to spy on the CTAL meeting and made every effort to prevent attendance of Argentine delegates.

Of equal importance was the surprising support of the conference by La Prensa, leading newspaper published in Buenos Aires, Argentina.

La Prensa, defying possible recrimination, declared: "The CTAL's defense of democracy makes the meeting worthwhile even without other achievements," adding that Axis propaganda had clouded the Argentine viewpoint.

Attended by delegates from Argentina, Chile, Peru, Venezuela, Costa Rica, Paraguay, Panama, Mexico., Colombia, Uruguay and the CIO fraternal representative, the emergency session of CTAL's Executive Council was opened on Monday by Enrique Rodriguez, Uruguayan labor leader, at a meeting of 15,000 persons in Municipal Theater. The gathering was addressed by Uruguayan Vice President Dr. Albert Guani, who also heads the Inter-Governmental Committee for Emergency Political Defense.

The meeting was also attended by prominent diplomats and legislators.

Dr. Juan Amezaga, Uruguayan President, received Toledano in a special audience on Monday and returned the greetings of Mexican President Manuel Avila Gamacho. This action was widely interpreted as solidifying anti-fascist continental unity and strengthening Dr. Amezaga's democratic regime. Toledano was also received by the Uruguayan foreign minister.

CIO Challenges BLS Cost Figures

WASHINGTON, Mar. 4—CIO and AFL are willing to rest their case on living costs with the American housewife, and have challenged the Bureau of Labor Statistics to do the same, R. J. Thomas, UAW-CIO president, and George Meany, AFL secretary-treasurer, said this week.

The challenge came after the BLS reply to the original CIO-AFL cost of living study which showed that costs had gone up 43.5 per cent rather than the 23.4 percent claimed by the BLS Index. The BLS reply, which simply said loudly and irritably that "it ain't so" without offering real evidence, drew this comment from the two labor leaders on President Roosevelt's Cost of Living Committee:

"The report is based on evidence from hundreds of American housewives, who have suffered an increase of at least 43.5 percent in their living costs since Jan. 1941. The BLS distorts our findings, as it has continuously distorted the rise in wartime living costs, and does not answer the basic data and major conclusions of our report.

"We propose the following question be submitted to a public opinion poll of American housewives:

" 'The CIO--AFL report found living costs rose 43.5 percent since Jan., 1941. The BLS reports that they rose only 23 percent. Which report is most closely confirmed by your own experience?' We challenge the BLS to submit to this poll.

"We shall shortly make available to the Presidential Committee on the Cost of Living a full analysis of the BLS confessions and laments, which make up the most insulting document to organized labor that has emanated from the Labor Dept. since its creation more than three decades ago."

L-M Exhibit Gives Play To Management

Washington, March 4—The War Production Board held its first labor-management exposition here this week to focus attention on the need for still greater war production in 1944, and to demonstrate how cooperation between employers and workers can help to boost output.

The exposition, in the Commerce Dept. building, put heavy stress on contributions made by employers, but in most instances glossed somewhat lightly over the equally substantial contributions made by trade unions.

Most exhibits definitely subordinated or failed to list the names of unions that hold contracts with the companies—with a few exceptions, chiefly those of firms that have established stable relations with CIO unions.

The exhibits featured labor-saving devices invented by workers and showed how labor-management cooperation has aided the war by cutting down on absenteeism, boosting worker morale, etc.

WALLACE IS VISITOR

A visitor on Congress night (which competed rather unsuccessfully for attendance with a free feed offered to Congressmen by the fantastic Jack & Heintz Co.) was Vice-Pres. Henry A. Wallace, who spent better than an hour with WPB Chairman Donald Nelson inspecting the exhibits.

Exhibits that gave labor an equal "play" with management included: Westinghouse — UE-CIO; Bridgeport Brass — CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers; and Firestone — CIO Rubber Workers.

Murray Hails British Production Conference

By ANTHONY JENKINSON

NEW YORK, Mar. 4 (ALN)—CIO union leaders, representing more than 3,000,000 workers in U. S. war industries, this week sent messages of greeting to the nationwide British production conference, to be held in London March 12 under the auspices of the National Council of Engineering and Allied Trades Shop Stewards.

The purpose of the conference, according to the council, is "to prepare for the coming second front, which will demand a supreme effort by workers in our key industries—steel, shipbuilding, aircraft and munitions." Over 2000 delegates are expected.

CIO President Philip Murray, writing in his capacity as president of the United Steelworkers of America, declared in a letter to shop stewards' secretary Ken White:

"On the occasion of your nationwide production conference I am extremely happy to send greetings from the steel workers of America. This union, like all unions affiliated with the CIO, has gone all out in our determination to help supply not only our own troops, but those of the United Nations, in winning the war.

"It might be interesting for your conference to know that during 1943 the United Steelworkers of America helped turn out more steel than could be used by our armed forces. This has been officially attested by government officials of the U. S. Currently, the particular need is for steel plates, and new production records have been set in December and January. We are now striving to beat our latest record.

"We are proud of the production record of labor in America," Murray concluded. "We extend to your conference our best wishes."

"In behalf of the 1,200,000 members of the UAW-CIO, virtually all of them war workers, I am glad to extend my greetings to your nation-wide production conference," UAW-CIO Pres. R. J. Thomas said.

"The UAW-CIO is dedicated above all else to the winning of the war against the Axis and to the translation of the victory into concrete democratic gains for labor, both politically and economically. We are proud of our production record, which includes having taken the leadership, even before Pearl Harbor, in advocating the conversion of our peacetime industries to war production. We glory also in similar accomplishments of the National Council of Engineering and Allied Trades Shop Stewards.

WORLD SOLIDARITY

"I hope to be able in person this summer to convey the feelings of solidarity which our workers feel with those in Britain. In the meantime, please accept my wishes for a most constructive and productive conference."

John Green, president of the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers, said: "The shipyard workers of America greet your national production conference and express our sympathy with your program and objectives."

"In the name of more than 600,000 war production workers of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America, CIO, I am honored to extend our greetings to your production conference," UE secretary-treasurer Julius Emspak declared.

"The electrical workers of America, in common with all Americans, have the greatest confidence in the workers of England. We know that the combined forces of the American and British and Soviet production soldiers, together with the heroic men and women of our armed forces, are making every sacrifice to bring the war to a victorious end as soon as possible. The efforts of such a coalition of great people cannot fail either in the war or in the peace that will follow."

CIO, AFL Unite to Battle Absenteeism, Delinquency

New York, March 4—Action to reduce absenteeism, increase production and cut down on the causes of juvenile delinquency was taken this week jointly by the CIO and AFL War Relief organizations in an agreement calling for intensified union participation in community efforts to solve these problems.

The joint agreement was made by the Natl. CIO War Relief Committee and the AFL Labor League for Human Rights.

Joseph D. Keenan, vice-chairman of the Office of Labor Production of the War Production Board, has concurred in the agreement reached by the two labor committees and has given assurance of full government cooperation in the development of their program.

The joint agreement provides that labor will endeavor to aid in the elimination of such war-time difficulties as insufficient housing, inadequate health faciltes, and the absence of facilities for care of children of working mothers. Conditions of this nature, according to the agreement, have impaired the efficiency and well-being of war workers.

Among other things, the agreement also calls for development by labor of a referral system to direct workers to facilities available to them through local welfare agencies and other community organizations.

The plan will be put to work at once in seven key communities, chosen after careful study as typifying the problems to be met in industrial centers all over the country. These key cities and areas are Bridgeport, Conn.; Philadelphia, Pa.; Detroit, Mich.; Chicago, Ill.; San Diego, Calif.; Cleveland and Akron, Ohio; and St. Louis, Mo.

From this beginning, the program will gradually be extended in scope until it has been put into effect on a nationwide basis.

Read What Made Smith Wake Up Screaming

Washington, Feb. 26—The piece that made Howard Smith, the wing-collared labor-hater from Virginia, wake up screaming for Atty-Genl. Biddle to prosecute Philip Murray and the entire CIO is called "Labor's Political Aims," a reprint of an article in the American Magazine by Pres. Murray that set forth CIO's aims in getting the Political Action Committee going.

Smith said that Murray and the whole CIO should go to the hoosegow because they were violating the Smith-Connally Act by being interested in the 1944 elections.

But read for yourself what gave the polltax statesman the horrors. It's in pamphlet form, and you can order it from the Publicity Dept., CIO, 718 Jackson Pl., Washington 6, D. C. Price, 100 for $1.50, 500 for $6., 1,000 for $10.

To Open South's 1st CIO Canteen For Servicemen

Memphis, Tenn., Mar. 4—The first CIO Servicemen's Canteen in the South will be opened here soon, the Memphis CIO Council has announced here. A Servicemen's Committee elected by the Council has rented a hall in the building right under CIO headquarters in the center of town.

Programs of dancing, music, entertainment, forums, and suppers are being planned for Saturday nights by local unions, and on Sunday afternoons and evenings the canteen will be open for reading, lounging, writing and light refreshments. Coffee will be served free at all times.

Besides giving financial backing, local unions are competing with one another to see who can donate the most furniture, radios, pianos, games and other useful things.

Prices Up, Pay Not; Action Needed—CIO

Newark, Mar. 4—Citing the 43.5 rise in the cost of living reported by the joint CIO-AFL cost of living survey, the Greater Newark Industrial Union Council this week called for revision of the national wage policy to bring pay scales into line with prices.

In other resolutions, the Council pointed out that the fight to prevent inflation and to stabilize the nation's economy must be waged even stronger and that measures like the Austin-Wadsworth draft-labor bill will cause disruption of the war effort.

CIO Fights Drive Against Negro War Workers

WASHINGTON, Mar. 4—A double-barreled polltaxer attack on the Fair Employment Practices Committee, which fights anti-Negro and other minority discrimination, shaped up in Congress this week, with an affiliate of the AFL playing the shameful role of stooge.

In the Senate, the polltaxers, led by Sen. Russell (D., Ga.) are openly seeking FEPC's abolition, through the familiar trick of cutting off its funds. The pretense is that all FDR-established agencies must be subject to Congress review after 12 months of operation; the real intention, as Russell admitted, is to get FEPC.

The second barrel is being shot off in the House, where the Smith (polltaxer, Va.) smear committee is holding what it likes to call hearings on whether or not the FEPC is "exceeding its authority" as a U. S. war agency.

With the exception of one member, Rep. John Delaney (D., N. Y.), the whole committee is sure that the FEPC is committing a serious offense by trying to get Negro war workers into war jobs where they are needed to keep up war output.

Also being smeared by the Smith gang is the War Shipping Administration, which is "guilty" of assigning Negro seamen to ships carrying war cargoes. And the sorry stooge that give them a dash of union color is the AFL's Seafarer's International Union, hollow relic of the old, corrupt and very dead Intl. Seamen's Union that was sent to the junkpile by CIO's Natl. Maritime Union some years ago.

The SIU, which has about 5,000 members on the east coast compared to the NMU's 85,000, believes in anti-Negro segregation, admits it, and is proud of it. John Hawks, one of its officials, said this during Smith committee testimony.

What's more, the SIU takes the amazing position that the FEPC and the War Shipping Administration are violating the President's order against discrimination by shipping Negro seamen together with white seamen, since this promotes "racial friction." The FEPC and the WSA, therefore, ought to be abolished, and besides, their officials are all a bunch of "fellow travellers."

Sharply contrasted with this is the NMU-CIO policy of an absolute ban on discrimination in the union and its record of Negro and white seamen working and risking their lives together with a total absence of friction.

This is what Frederick N. Myers, NMU vice-president, had to say this week in his testimony before the Smith committee, after he had pointed out that more than 8,000 of NMU's 85,000 seamen are Negroes:

"Not one NMU ship has been delayed or missed a convoy because of a shortage of manpower. Our vessels have been fully manned with skilled and experienced seamen . . . We have been able to do all this by strict adherence to a policy of no-discrimination and by giving full opportunity to all seamen to make their contribution to the war effort, regardless of race, creed or color.

"The war has now reached the stage where a showdown is in the offing. The coming land invasion of Europe will call for a more extensive application of this policy than ever before. In such a perspective, there is no room for segregation or discrimination."

The lynch spirit being whipped up against Negro war workers isn't confined to the polltaxers in Congress alone. This week, the South Carolina state legislature passed a resolution praising the segregation policy and threatening to kick the "damned Northern agitators" out.

This resolution, written in the true Hitler style of race baiting, was loudly applauded by Sen. Smith (polltaxer, S. C.) on the Senate floor and was widely distributed to the daily newspapers by the Associated Press.

This is a campaign year, and every year polltaxers have tried to use race hatred to defeat the New Deal. This time there's also a war on, a war that Hitler tries to win by promoting race hatred in America and in all his enemies.

'Monty' Ward Bias Bared

Chicago, Mar. 4 — Montgomery Ward, billion dollar mail order house, is being accused of "flagrant discrimination against minority groups" by Local 20, United Retail, Wholesale & Dept. Store Employes. The charge was made in a memorandum submitted to the Chicago Council on Religious and Racial Equality.

"The only jobs open to Negroes in the Chicago properties of Montgomery Ward," declares the memorandum, "are those of porter, bus boy, bus girl, elevator operator and matron. The bulk of mail order house, retail store and warehouse jobs are therefore closed to Negro workers.

"Although Ward's runs large advertisements in the 'Help Wanted' sections of the newspapers every day, scores of Negroes have been turned away from the employment office and refused employment."

Truman Report Hails Labor's Aid to War

American labor's production record "exceeds anything of its kind ever achieved in the history of the world," the Truman Investigating Committee of the U. S. Senate reported this week. Listing production of 20 million tons of ships, 153,000 airplanes, 1.5 million trucks, over 30,000 naval vessels and countless munitions and other supplies since 1941, the report said of labor's share: "To make all this possible, our workers contributed nearly 45 per cent more man-days of work in 1943 than in 1939, despite the fact that more than 10 million men were withdrawn from the labor pool for the armed forces."

Marine General Praises Workers

Washington, Mar. 11—"One reason that we are running well ahead of our Pacific timetable is that production of fighting ships for the Navy, and all the accessories that go with them, is far ahead of schedule." That tribute to men and women workers on the home front was paid this month by Lt. General Alexander A. Vandegrift, Commander, USMC.

Hatchet Gang Plots Cuts in Funds Of Vital U. S. Agencies

WASHINGTON, Mar. 11—As predicted, the fund-slashing boys are active in Congress this week, with violent cuts planned for vital U. S. War agencies already voted in the House Appropriations Committee and others cooking.

So far, the House Committee has voted to cut $22 million from war agencies charged with responsibility for child care centers, aid to schools, hospitals, clinics, recreation and the like. Housing for war workers was cut $17 million from a budget request of $25 million.

This is the beginning, and these recommendations have not yet been voted on by the House. The school lunch program, however, already has been killed in a House vote. After the House acts, all these measures go to the Senate for final passage.

Last year, the House voted to cut funds for such vital war agencies as the Natl. Labor Relations Board, the War Labor Board (OPA), and the like. In addition, Congress adopted the trick of shackling appropriations with riders to prevent these agencies from doing a proper job. This was done most notoriously with OPA and the NLRB, the OPA being forbidden to employ enough enforcement officers and the NLRB being saddled with the Frey company union rider.

Congress doesn't dare to cut funds for the Army and the Navy, though possibly many Congressmen might like to. They know that popular anger at such direct slashing at the country's war would overwhelm them.

They haven't been made to realize that the people regard such matters as child care, war workers' housing and health, clinics and the like as just as important to the war as arms and munitions.

Perhaps a few thousand letters from war workers, their wives and their friends and neighbors would help. The Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee is Rep. Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.). His address, and the addresses of all Congressmen, is House Office Bldg., Washington, D. C.

Fur Workers Back FDR

New York, March 11—Unanimous endorsement of President Roosevelt for a fourth term was voted this week by the CIO Furriers Joint Council of this city, with locals pledging to raise $25,000 by voluntary contributions to support a political education campaign.

Thought-Wave Organizing—One For the Books!

Toronto, Ont. — Americans accustomed to the fanfare of collective bargaining elections would have difficulty working under the latest procedure ordered by the Ontario Labor Court here which forbids everything except "thinking" by workers prior to an election.

In a case in question, the CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers union won a vote four months ago at the Lake Shore mine owned by the late multi-millionaire Harry Oakes by a majority of four to one over a company union. The court ordered a new vote because of electioneering by the MM&SW.

In the second vote to be held in two weeks, the judge has ordered that no union meetings of any kind may be held within 50 miles of the Lake Shore mine at Kirkland Lake.

No literature or written material of any kind may be delivered or sent by mail to any mine within 50 miles of Lake Shore.

No public meetings must be held at which there is any reference to the vote or the claims of either party. Radio addresses are forbidden with any reference to the relations between the company and its employes. Any factual statement announcing the voting procedure must be approved by the court.

CIO Charges Selfish Bearing Interests Slow War Program

WASHINGTON, Mar. 11—Protection of selfish interests, bad planning and substandard wage schedules are chiefly responsible for the critical shortage of bearings which is keeping vital aircraft grounded, three CIO unions charged here March 9.

Conditions in the bearing industry, now 10 months behind scheduled in output, were brought to light at an all-day conference held by the United Auto Workers, United Electrical Radio & Machine Workers and United Steelworkers, representing 85% of the industry's 80,000 workers. UAW Vice-Pres. Richard Frankensteen was chairman.

Main charges leveled by spokesmen at the conference were:

1. The Timken Rollerbearing Co. of Canton and Columbus, O., is diverting priority materials to civilian production to satisfy old customers; its warehouses and aisles in the plants are jammed with boxed bearings; workers and machines stand idle, with morale at very low level.

2. Timken Co. and 9 other firms refuse to sublet contracts for fear other companies will learn their methods and compete with them in the post war period.

3. While Timken has its warehouses overflowing with material, other firms are holding down production deliberately to prevent accumulation of a backlog. Manpower is improperly utilized, while machines on second and third shifts are left idle.

4. The industry has a terrific turnover rate, Frankensteen reported. U. S. employment service has been referring workers to the industry at the rate of a 1000 a week with a net gain of only 200 a week. Nearly three-fourths of all separations are voluntary quits.

Responsible for this are the substandard wages paid in the eastern part of the industry and the wage differential between men and women, which varies from 5 to 23c, Frankensteen said. War Manpower Commission admitted Dec. 29 that the industry's low wage level was directly responsible for the poor recruitment.

Price Control Act Threatened by Tories

WASHINGTON, Mar. 11—The fight over the Price Control Act, which comes up for renewal June 30, stepped up this week with loud demands from the Republicans for quick action and with an increasing flood of threats to kill subsidies and other enforcement means when the time comes.

One leading Republican reactionary, Wolcott of Mich., has already promised to produce a new Price Control Act within a week or two and to press for early adoption. Polltaxer pals are already openly boasting of how they'll "end OPA bureaucracy" when they get their chance.

What it boils down to is this: the Price Control Act must be renewed. If it isn't, the lid is off all prices and inflation runs wild. When it is renewed, it must be without crippling riders or amendments, and with adequate funds and staff for enforcement.

At the time of the last appropriation, in 1943, the majority in Congress fastened a rider requiring OPA to get all policy-making personnel from one source—business. This is a definite discrimination against labor, and must be removed in the renewal.

ENFORCEMENT FUNDS CUT

The Congress also slashed enforcement funds to the bone. They must be restored—OPA now has only a few dozen inspectors, needs hundreds to do a real job. Grade labelling of food, which enables the consumer to tell what he's getting and thus checks hidden price hikes through quality chiselling, was also outlawed by Congress. This barrier must be removed as not only a matter of fair play but also a prime necessity in enforcement of price ceilings.

Congress also refused to allow OPA to make test purchases to use as evidence against ceiling violators. Every other Government agency is allowed to do this. The Treasury, for example, couldn't check counterfeiting without it; the FBI couldn't check a hundred law violations without it. Yet OPA can't buy anything to prove a law violation. This barrier to enforcement must be removed.

The Republican reactionaries and their polltax pals are pressing for quick action for one purpose—to have lots of time for sabotage and harassment while the debate goes on. They're not doing it out of love for price control—their past record shows that.

Demos Rate Wallace Tops

Washington, March 11—Vice-Pres. Henry A. Wallace is still way out front as a running mate for President Roosevelt—assuming that FDR will enter the lists again this Fall. The Gallup Poll this week showed the folowing national percentages for prospective candidates among rank and file members of the Democratic Party:

Wallace, 46 per cent.

Secretary of State Hull, 21 per cent.

James A. Farley, 13 per cent.

Congresman Rayburn, 12 per cent.

Wallace led even in the South his score by regions being: East 47 per cent,South 42 per cent, Midwest 46 per cent.

FEDERAL LAW (applies only to election for President, Vice-President, U. S. Senators and Representatives). Under this law passed by the last Congress, in 1942, registration is not required, regardless of any State regulations covering registration. A member of the armed forces may apply to the Secretary of his home state for an official war ballot. Postcards are provided for the purpose. Completed ballot must be returned to the Secretary of State in which the vote is cast, in sufficient time to permit him to deliver it to the election officials before the polls close on election day.

March 13, 1944

TO ALL CIO AFFILIATES:

I am sending you this letter to make sure that no one in the CIO misses the second issue of THE CIO NEWS Servicemen's Edition, the March copy of which is published this week.

THE CIO NEWS Servicemen's Edition makes an exceedingly valuable contribution to the CIO's campaign for acquainting the members of the armed forces with the true picture of labor's contribution toward the war.

The need for reaching servicemen and women with more of our publicity is so obvious that it is needless for me to discuss it. THE CIO NEWS Servicemen's Edition is one of the best ways we can possibly tell them of the work that we are doing on their behalf.

I most urgently recommend that CIO International Unions, Industrial Union Councils, Local Unions and other affiliates make arrangements to have this paper mailed to their service members.

They should also distribute as large a number of copies as possible to CIO members at home, who should be asked to mail the edition to relatives and friends in the armed forces.

Further particulars about obtaining THE CIO NEWS Servicemen's Edition and mailing it to servicemen will be found on the attached sheet.

Fraternally yours,

Philip Murray,
President

TRUTH ABOUT LABOR is what members of the armed forces need, and one of the best ways to get it to them is through The CIO NEWS Servicemen's Edition, the March issue of which is part of this paper. A letter from CIO Pres. Philip Murray—reproduced above—urges all CIO affiliates to send copies of the Servicemen's Edition to members in the armed forces. Bundle order lots cost 100 for $1.25; 500 for $5; 1,000 for $7.50. Special arrangements for mailing to union lists of servicemen. Order from CIO NEWS, 718 Jackson Place, N.W., Washington 6, D. C.

CIO Steel Plan Gives Aid to Small Plants

WASHINGTON, Mar. 11—Twenty small semi-integrated steel producers are presently "confronted with disaster and bankruptcy" as a result of wartime distortions in economy, Philip Murray, president of the USA-CIO, told the War Production Board today in a detailed analysis of their problems which also proposed a practical plan to keep them in business.

Located in some 23 cities and towns, the plants employ more than 30,000 workers, the study shows.

The purpose of the survey made by the union over a period of many months is "to prevent the deterierioration of a dozen thriving communities into ghost steel towns, stop the further concentration of steel production in the huge steel corporations, and to save more than five and one-half million annual tons of steel-producing capacity for the continued prosecution of the war and for post-war use," Murray said. In summarizing the steps that should be taken, Murray emphasized:

1. The Federal Government has already invested over $60,000,000 in five DPC (Defense Plant Corporation) blast furnaces, all of which are scheduled to be shut down. These furnaces have an annual pig iron capacity of 2,115,000 net tons.

2. The Federal Government should sell pig iron to the small semi-integrated steel producers at below OPA ceiling prices, but not below cost of production, so that they continue in business.

3. The Federal Government should sell returning battlefield scrap iron and steel below OPA ceiling prices to those small semi-integrated producers who, after receiving pig iron at below OPA ceilings, are still non-competitive with the huge steel corporations.

Murray proposed creation of a Small Steel Commission to administer this plan, consisting of three persons, one each from the Federal Government, the steel industry and the United Steelworkers.

FACE BANKRUPTCY

"Of the 20 small steel producers confronted with disaster," he said, "one is on the verge of suspending steel producing operation. Another is operating at only 40 per cent of capacity, and several others are confronted with having to abandon operation before the war is won.

"Few, if any, are operating at capacity. Together, these 20 companies produce 5,678,000 tons of steel ingots a year."

In addition to the 20 companies specifically studied, Murray said there are 10 other small semi-integrated steel producers with 13 plants "that may also be confronted with disaster and bankruptcy." These 10 small producers have a combined steel producing capacity of 842,000 net tons of ingots a year and employ 9,000 employes.

"Whether any of these small producers should be permitted to purchase pig iron and battlefield scrap at below OPA ceiling prices should be determined by the Small Steel Commission," he suggested.

MARKET DIFFICULTY

The present wartime economic plight of small steel producers is due to the fact that they can no longer buy low-cost carbon scrap iron and steel and that they have to buy larger than normal amounts of pig iron to make up for the shortage of scrap—all of which has pushed costs to a point where few can produce and sell steel at OPA ceiling prices.

Many of these firms have price relief from OPA—averaging around $2 a ton—paid for, in the main, by the government through Lend-Lease and war contractors who have had to purchase the products of these firms at above OPA ceiling prices, he said.

Washington, Mar. 11 — Amid an atmosphere of company bickering and with all signs pointing to a lengthy stalling campaign, the case of the United Steelworkers of America-CIO started this week on its way through the machinery of the War Labor Board.

Led by USA-CIO President Philip Murray, Secretary-Treasurer David J. McDonald and General Counsel Lee Pressman, the union demanded that the entire case, including the 17-cent wage increase, be heard by the panel and that its recommendations then be passed on to the full Board.

Opening gun in the company drive was fired by John C. Gall, attorney for Yougstown Sheet and Tube, who proposed that the wage increase not be considered at all, since it involved breaking the Little Steel Formula. Gall's proposal was followed by an accusation from John A. Stephens, vice-president of U. S. Steel, that the USA-CIO was "deliberately" trying to attack the national stabilization program.

MURRAY REPLIES

This brought a sharp reply from Murray, who said that Stephens' statement was "designed obviously for the purpose of reaching the newspapers and creating an impression in the public mind that we are engaged in some diabolical enterprise."

Gall's proposal to shunt aside the wage demand was sharply criticized by Pressman, who pointed out that it had been deliberately injected as the day's session was closing in order to confuse the issue and the public.

Following discussion, the panel set Wednesday, March 22, for the union's argument on the basic question of the 17 cents an hour wage increase. This demand forms a large part of the entire case of the USA-CIO, and is a major plank in the whole of CIO's wage policy.

David J. McDonald, replying to Gall's move to shelve the wage issue, characterized it as "headline hunting" and made it clear that the increase rested entirely on the merits of the steelworkers' case. This, he indicated, will be made public when the brief is filed March 22.

An additional crack by Stephens, in which he implied a strike possibility, brought a further reply from President Murray in which he pointed out that he had no intention "to disrupt these proceedings, obstruct the work of the panel or encourage in any way whatever a stoppage of work."

ARGUMENT ON PROCEDURE

Before setting the Wednesday date for the USA-CIO presentation of the wage issue, the panel, headed by David L. Cole of New Jersey, heard long arguments on procedure, in which the company representatives clearly indicated a desire to drag out the proceedings.

Company spokesmen argued for having each of some 128 companies concerned deal separately and individually with each point in the union's demands as it came up.

As Pressman pointed out, this would involve endless repetition that could easily be avoided by having one or two company representatives speak on the issues for all. Otherwise, he said, the delay could be prolonged for months and the time of the board, the companies and the USA-CIO wasted in going over the same points in the same way ad infinitum.

As the case stands now, some 500,000 steel workers employed in the basic steel industry are involved.

Truman Report Hails Labor's Aid to War

WASHINGTON, Mar. 11—High praise to American labor, whose "astounding performance exceeds anything of its kind ever achieved in the history of the world," marked the Third Annual Report of the Truman Committee set up by the Senate to investigate the war production program issued this week.

Listing the production of 20 million tons of ships, 153,000 airplanes, 1.5 million trucks, over 30,000 naval vessels and countless munitions and other supplies since 1941, the report said of labor's share in this output:

"To make all this possible our workers engaged in manufacturing, mining and agriculture contributed nearly 45 per cent more man days of work in 1943 than in 1939, despite the fact that more than 10 million men were withdrawn from the labor pool for the armed forces. In manufacturing alone, our workmen contributed 89.6 per cent more man days in 1943 than in 1939.

"This astounding performance exceeds anything of its kind ever achieved in the history of the world. The results obtained are the best answer to the critics of the home front."

ALL WORKERS SHARE PRAISE

All Americans can share in the satisfaction at this record, the report added, since "the success is due to the accumulated efforts of the millions of people who have each done their share rather than to any miraculous planning of a few experts at the top."

In a special word of praise to women war workers, many hundreds of thousands of whom are organized in CIO unions, the report said: "Women in particular deserve credit for filling the huge gap created by manpower requirements of the armed services."

In addition, older workers who have come out from retirement deserve a special word for their contribution to a job that assures the war will be won "more quickly and with fewer casualties."

HITS "SERVICE" ACT

In view of this record, the Senate Committee report opposed the idea of a national service act at this time, calling instead for more efficient use of available manpower, for an end to waste in its present use, for proper allocation of materials, contracts, etc.

Dismissing the "morale" factors that are supposedly involved in a labor draft, the report commented: "This argument looks suspiciously like sacrifice for sacrifice's sake, and those making it forget that the civilians to be regimented for the sake of raising Army and Navy morale are the parents and relatives of the men in service, and, to the extent of over a million men, veterans who have received honorable discharges."

The alleged existence of large scale strikes, the report added, is not a reason for putting through the labor draft. "Strikes in mining, manufacturing, and construction in 1943 resulted in a loss of manpower of less than one-fourth of one percent of the manpower actually used, whereas the manpower contributed by labor in that period exceeded that used in 1939 by 76 per cent."

DEALS WITH PROFITS

The report also went into the profit situation, showing that profits have increased by staggering amounts since 1939, even after taxes are subtracted and after renegotiation of contracts has taken place.

Of the 100 U. S. corporations doing the most war business, "only nine have been found free of excessive profits in 1942." Twelve firms upped their profits 10 times, 18 increased them three times, and 12 which had operated at deficits had profits ranging from one to 18 million dollars.

Re-negotiation, which allows the government to recapture some of the flagrantly excess profits, kept them down from fantastic increases such as 172 times above the pre-war level in one case. In the last tax bill, a determined effort to do away with re-negotiation almost succeeded in Congress—and at that the process was seriously handicapped in the final bill.

STEEL OUTPUT RECORD

The report, a lengthy document of 210 pages, went into detailed surveys of production in a number of categories, including steel, copper, lead and zinc, aircraft, lumber, etc.

On steel, the report cited an all time production record of nearly 90 million tons in 1943, No vital war program has failed or has been retarded very seriously for lack of steel."

At the same time, the report added that civilian steel consumption has practically stopped for the past two years, and that today certain steel products could well be used for essential civilian goods.

The Truth Will Out, But Needs Some Help

Cutting through the curtain of lies and distortions that has hidden from our servicemen and much of the public the true story of American labor in this war, comes the 200-page report of the Senate's Truman committee investigating the national defense program.

This impartial report, based on long and careful investigation, tells of the "astounding performance" of American labor in war production that "exceeds anything of its kind ever achieved in the history of the world."

The report reveals how much harder and longer labor has had to work to achieve these results. It shows how difficult has been labor's position since it voluntarily gave up "its principal weapons for enforcing its rights," remarking that "many of the critics of labor have not done as much."

The report places wartime strikes in proper perspective, showing how well labor has kept its no-strike pledge, and how few and small have been the stoppages of war production.

It places the blame for such stoppages as have occurred on management and government as well as labor.

The report presents some startling figures on war profiteering, revealing increases of net profits after all taxes ranging up to 10 times more than the pre-war average for many companies.

Of this 200-page report, with all its wealth of information, you are lucky if you found 200 words in one issue of your daily paper. And such reports come only once or twice in a year.

For all of the rest of the year, you are regaled with stories of little short-lived wildcat strikes here or there; with editorials berating labor for this or that; and with an endless stream of press, political and radio propaganda designed to falsify or obscure the true story of labor's contribution to our victory effort.

All this falsification is bad enough for the morale of our civilian population. But it is even worse for our servicemen overseas, who rely for most of their incomplete information on the same poisoned sources of anti-labor propaganda.

If the big-business press will not reform to the extent of giving a fairer picture of labor, in the interests of national unity and victory, surely it is up to the government to see that our fighting men get such true facts about labor as are revealed in the Truman report, in counter-balancing proportion to the poison that constantly seeps through to them from the anti-labor press.

On The Control And Eradication of Pests

While considering a bill "for the control and eradication of certain animal and plant pests and diseases" and a number of other miscellaneous purposes, the House of Representatives, after some debate, voted down an amendment to allot $50 million for school lunches for children who would otherwise be inadequately fed.

There was no objection to spending government money to combat animal and plant diseases. But the idea that something should also be done to protect undernourished school children from disease brought tory Congressmen to their feet in violent objection.

Rep. Carrier of Kentucky expressed surprise that the Congressmen should be so concerned with the health and comfort of livestock, and so willing to spend money "to rid cattle of ticks and other parasites," but so callous to the need of supplying improperly fed children with hot lunches.

This is only one sample of the warfare against the people's welfare that is being waged by the combination of polltax Democrats and tory Republicans that has usurped control of Congress.

The House Appropriations Committee has already voted to cut $22 million from the budgets of war agencies concerned with child care centers, aid to schools, hospitals, clinics, recreation, etc.

It has cut funds for housing war workers by $17 million from a budget request of $25 million, and funds for price control and for most other beneficial social purposes are also seriously threatened.

Leading the fight are the same group of politicians who put through the tax bill to relieve the greedy at the expense of the needy, who voted to ban food subsidies, and to deny voting rights to most servicemen.

But it may be too late for you to do anything about getting a better Congress at the next elections, if you don't register to vote in time.

Find out when and where you can register from your union, from the nearest office of the CIO Political Action Committee, or from your City Clerk or the Office of the Registrar of Voters in the City Hall.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

THOSE poor children, the newspaper publishers, only want "a paper doll that they can call their own." But oh, those "flirty-flirty guys with their flirty-flirty eyes!"

If you have tears to shed for the dog in the manger, spare a few for the few millionaires who have cornered control over nearly every word we may read in the daily press.

They call their paper dolly "freedom of the press," and if you so much as blink your eye to remove a cinder, they accuse you of designs on it.

They shrieked "naughty-naughty" at the Wagner Act, because under it even newspaper employes are considered people and entitled to organize in unions.

And now they're pouting at the War Labor Board, because it says the Newspaper Guild is entitled to maintenance-of-membership clauses in its contracts the same as other unions.

Said the dog in the manger: "If any working animals get a sniff at the fodder I'm lying on, they will not only interfere with my freedom to lie, but also with the people's freedom of access to fodder."

Said the WLB industry representatives, on behalf of the publishers: "The editorial writer or reporter cannot help but feel certain restraint in his writing, if he must maintain good standing with his union. . . Public opinion is in a large degree molded by our newspapers. To reach an intelligent opinion of labor problems, the public must have the favorable and the unfavorable facts. A newspaper must have the facts and all of the facts available to it, if it is to enjoy . . . freedom of the press."

How about the "restraint in his writing" felt by the employe of an anti-labor publisher who can blue-pencil everything he writes and deprive him of a livelihood at any time?

The Guild could not influence the writing in any paper it has a contract with, even if it tried to—which it doesn't.

It has a clause in its constitution which provides against barring or penalizing any person "by reason of sex, race, or religious or political convictions, or because of anything he writes for publication."

The publisher has absolute control over editorial content because he can hire whom he pleases; blue-pencil, edit or slant anything his employes write; and discipline or fire any employe who doesn't produce what he wants.

And the proof of the pudding is that the Guild has Guild-shop contracts with Hearst and other papers, whose content, to put it mildly, does not show a trace of labor influence.

The WLB labor members rather pointedly remarked that they and most other Americans "would be deeply grateful if many newspaper publishers were as careful to print labor news as impartially as their reporters write it."

But the real point is that the publishers' own arguments boomerang back on them with the force of a sledgehammer.

Some of them argued that even a mistaken idea that the Guild influenced news publication would "open to suspicion the integrity of the publisher's news columns and immediately and injuriously affect the publication in public esteem."

What kind of public esteem do they think they enjoy as it is, when millions of working people know that the selection and editing of news is controlled for the most part by a few millionaire publishers and the other big-business interests associated with them?

As they say, "to reach an intelligent opinion of labor problems, the public must have the favorable and the unfavorable facts."

Sure. But why then don't most publishers print the favorable facts about labor, and give them an equal play with the unfavorable?

★ ★ ★

Labor yields to none in its devotion to true freedom of the press. But this calls for publication of "the facts and all the facts," instead of the present "restraints" on writers to slant their output to suit the bias of anti-labor bosses.

The shoe fashioned by the publishers about "restraints" imposed on writers, slanting of news, suppression of facts about labor, etc., fits nobody but themselves. Let them wear it.

Time Out!

Congress has just voted money for the control and eradication of pests and diseases of cattle and plants. The same day, the same Congress voted to deny money to the school lunch program, that gives poor kids one hot meal a day. Any connection between eradicating pests and eradicating well fed children is purely coincidental.

* * *

Rep. Dies made a long speech this week accusing the CIO Political Action Committee of employing 500 "communists" to "overthrow the parliamentary system of government." Maybe its just a coincidence, but there's an election coming up in November and the CIO committee, along with everyone else who wants to win the war, is working to turn out a big vote against defeatism and reaction and for victory and progress.

It's just a "coincidence," of course, that every Dies' attack over the past six years on progressive political and labor action has always been made when an election was coming up, either in Congress or in a big industrial plant.

$4,500 Bonus Plan for Veterans

FDR Order Gives Job Preference

New developments on veterans' legislation the past few weeks in Congress include formulation of a combined bonus plan by all the standard veterans' organizations except the American Legion—which has its own plan announced.

The combined plan deals with service adjustment payments, and would see that returned veterans get payments up to $4,500, dependent on length of service and amount of service overseas. The Legion plan does not take length of service into account. It does have an elaborate setup to centralize control of all vets' service in the Veterans Administration.

Meantime, President Roosevelt has ordered first preference for veterans in U. S. jobs. Administration leaders—and the CIO—are also pushing for early enactment of the new Social Security bill which gives veterans full unemployment compensation if they lack jobs when first demobilized, and provides health, maternity, and child aid programs to help all workers, including demobilized servicemen.

CIO is working closely with the standard veterans' organizations on an all round program to help returned soldiers make the necessary adjustments to civilian life. As one step in this, CIO unions have waived

Congress SNAFU's Soldier Vote

After months of Congressional battling and almost endless "compromises," the soldiers' vote bill has been reduced to what CIO President Philip Murray and administration leaders have called a "technical absurdity."

As it now stands, subject to final Congressional action within the next week or two, the servicemen will get a vote in 1944 provided he can wade through this procedure:

1. If he can (a) swear on oath he hasn't received a ballot from his state by Oct. 1; (b) his state has no absentee balloting arrangements; and provided further (c) his state will count his ballot if he can satisfy points (a) and (b) and if it's received on time and in due order.

2. Provided he's serving overseas and not in the continental U. S.

According to Sen. Green, Democrat of Rhode Island and one of the authors of the original Federal soldiers' ballot plan, this

Dept. of Trial And Tribulation

Yep, it's still with us—the Dies Committee, we mean. Last month Congress gave the unabashed Texan $75,000 more for his smear jobs, with the conservative Washington POST "editorializing":

"It is a sorry commentary on the character of our Congressmen that only one of them, Mr. Marcantonio of New York, spoke in opposition to this appropriation. 'I submit,' he said, 'that on the basis of the past and present record of this committee, it will contribute only to disunity and confusion.'"

CIO Man Wins Air Medal

A CIO member this week was awarded the Air Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster for "meritorious achievement while participating in aerial flight against the enemy." He is 2nd Lt. Kenneth M. Van Leuven, a member of CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, Local 1421, at Los Angeles.

Lieutenant Van Leuven was wounded in action over western Europe and is now a prisoner of war in Germany. The medal was presented to his wife, Mrs. Edith Van Leuven.

Blood Plasma Saves Lives

Lynn, Mass.—Two veterans recently returned from the South Pacific told members of the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers employed at the General Electric River Works here, how important blood plasma is in saving the lives of wounded soldiers.

The two service men who spoke at the first of a series of rallies sponsored by the Labor-Management Committee to speed up blood donations were Staff Sgt. Charles Kelly, who had 300 square inches of skin burned off in the battle of Midway, and Capt. W. H. Whorf, who spent more than four months at Guadalcanal.

Sgt. Kelly credits the fact that he is alive to the blood plasma he received, and Capt. Whorf said that many young Marines at Guadalcanal who were badly burned owe their lives to blood injections.

initiaton fees for veterans, have carried all union members now in the armed forces on their books without dues, and have won seniority rights which accumulate while men are away from their civilian jobs.

Main point in CIO's postwar program, as in the report of Bernard Baruch and John Hancock to FDR, is always full employment for all Americans, which of course includes servicemen and women.

As CIO points out, the U. S. has achieved almost full employment under war conditions. There's no reason why the country can't have jobs for all after the war is won.

CIO Plugs Red Cross Fund Drive

With the Red Cross 1944 War Fund campaign for $200,000,000 in full swing throughout the country, CIO workers are helping assure the Red Cross services to the armed forces for another year through adding contributions of money to their regular contributions of blood, time and skill.

Working with other sections of organized labor through Joint Labor Committees and pooling their efforts with management through Labor-Management Committees in individual plants, CIO unions are helping thousands of Red Cross chapters meet local quotas in the drive.

CIO representatives are serving on boards and committees of the Red Cross, nationally and locally. On duty with the Red Cross in every theater of war are CIO men and women serving with the troops, in Red Cross clubs or manning clubmobiles which visit servicemen assigned to isolated spots.

Wall plaques in domestic army camp recreation rooms identify the furnishings as donations of CIO unions through Red Cross Camp and Hospital Councils.

Huge bundles of war relief garments and surgical dressings for the Army and Navy have been turned out in record time by CIO garment workers and by CIO auxiliaries.

Most dramatic contribution of CIO members is the group contribution of blood for conversion into plasma. Spurred by reports from CIO men in the service who have been treated by plasma, local unions visit blood donor centers regularly or arrange contributions through visits of mobile units of the Blood Donor Service.

Calling on CIO locals and councils to give unqualified support to the present campaign, CIO President Philip Murray, who is a member of the Red Cross Board of Incorporators, said:

"We cannot but realize the vital necessity for continuation of these and other services of the Red Cross and realize the necessity also of doing our utmost to see that the goal is met during the 1944 Red Cross War Fund campaign."

Soldier Vote

will result in fewer service votes than in 1942, when only 28,000 were able to vote under the existing law.

The issue has been fought in Congress on the level of "states' rights" vs "Federal control." Chief "states' righters" have been the Republicans, backed up by Congressmen from the eight polltax states of the South.

CIO President Murray summed it up in a recent letter to Congress when he said:

"The issue is a simple one—how to place a ballot in the hands of every service man and woman. This can be done only through a simple, uniform Federal ballot.

"Those opposed to effective soldier voting have deliberately sought to obscure this simple issue. They have acted in the hope of wearing down both the interest of the country and the resolutions of those in Congress who are intent on seeing that every serviceman gets a chance to vote."

CIO Steel Plan

Jobs, Bonus, Aid to Servicemen

By VIN SWEENEY

ROUNDING out a program for its members in the Armed Forces which not only guarantees them their jobs when they return but seeks to give them a special "bonus" upon discharge, the CIO United Steelworkers of America is arranging to set up a special department within the Union for World War II veterans.

Upwards of 200,000 men and women from steel are in the Services, backed up on the home-front by the "soldiers of production" who have broken more than 5,000 records to give the Nation and those in the fighting forces more steel than could be used last year.

This production record brought from Lieut. Gen. Brehon Somervell, commanding general of the Army Service Forces, this commendation in a letter to Phillip Murray, president of the Union:

"The War Department is most grateful for the almost unbelievable production record attained in 1943 and recognizes this record to have been a major contribution to the success of the Armed forces of the United Nations."

Nation-wide interest among civilians and those in the Armed forces has attended the Union's proposal that out of current wage proposals before the War Labor Board each steel worker contribute $20 to be matched by the industry—to be paid on a pro-rata basis to steel workers in the Armed services when they are honorably dicharged, or to dependents of those who may die while in service.

Nearly a million servicemen have already been returned to civilian life, demonstrating the wisdom of the Union's insistence more than two years ago that contracts protect their seniority while in the service. These discharged servicemen have returned to the mills—all the time spent in the service helping to pile up their seniority.

Current wage negotiations of the United Steelworkers are aimed at protecting standards. On this point, Chairman William H. Davis of the War Labor Board holds the view that: "Not to protect those standards would justly give rise to a sense of insecurity and frustration among the workers who remain at home; and it is only fair to the workers who are drawn into the fighting services that their standards should be protected while they are away."

Also on the home front, virtually every local union in steel has joined with other CIO unions in the campaign to give those in the armed forces the right to vote by Federal ballot.

Out of the formation of hundreds of Local Union committees set up to guard the interests of those in the armed forces has developed the tentative program to set up a special department, perhaps on a national scale, to help the returning veterans. It is expected that this suggestion will receive primary consideration at the forthcoming convention of the Union, to be held in Cleveland.

"The Steelworkers are not seeking any particular credit for turning out more steel than the Nation could use, for buying bonds at the rate of some 200 million dollars a year, for blood banks, for millions poured into charities," said President Murray.

"It is our duty to do these things. All we desire is that our sons and brothers in the fighting forces know that wherever they serve they can do so with the assurance that the soldiers of production in the mills have never failed them."

Send CIO News to Servicemen, Is Plea of Air Force Sergeant

"It is to be hoped that the Servicemen's Edition (of The CIO News) will act as an antidote to the poison which is being spread by the commercial press against labor's effort to win the war," writes S/Sgt. Howard L. Hurwitz, from the 1st Air Force, Mitchel Field, N. Y.

Noting that there are more than 2,000,000 union men in the armed forces, Sgt. Hurwitz warns that "there is a danger that they will lose their union consciousness unless contact with the union on the home front is maintained."

"You can help maintain the union spirit," he advises, "by urging each local to compile a list of CIO men with their current addresses and send direct to them a copy of the Servicemen's Edition."

Take Another Load of Pegler And - - - There

Soldiers in the South Pacific can take Westbrook Pegler or leave him alone—and the majority of them want to do the latter. That's the gist of a survey conducted among servicemen in Hawaii, by the Army Newspaper, "Midpacifican."

The survey on Pegler, anti-labor Scripps-Howard columnist, was conducted by Cpl. Jim Ritchie, "The Inquiring Reporter," in answer to a letter from a soldier who wrote: "We feel Pegler promotes disunity between fighting men overseas and the working people back home. Would you please use Pegler as a topic of your Inquiring Reporter column?"

"Answers to the question," Cpl. Ritchie wrote, "indicated that a majority of soldiers in the CPA are in disagreement with the writings of Westbrook Pegler—in short, they seem to believe his extremely critical pieces tend to promote disunity."

Here are the pros and cons from several replies printed in the "Midpacifican"—the total printed score was five to two against Pegler:

Pfc. Thomas C. Hughes, San Francisco: "Westbrook Pegler and disunity are synonymous; to me they mean the same thing. If he was in Germany, he'd be a partner of Dr. Goebbels. His half-truths, distortions and exaggerations couched in his inimitable

LOOKING AHEAD

By LEN DE CAUX

BACK in the U. S. A. after a two years' absence, Marine Sergt. John R. Devereux, veteran of the Bougainville, Guadalcanal and Russell Island campaigns, was surprised and "kind of shocked" by some things.

"I thought it would be pretty rugged here—no chow, no gas," he said. But he found plenty of cars running, and a lot of belly-aching about rationing coming from full bellies.

"From what we had heard over there, you'd think the Administration had ruined the country," Sgt. Devereux added. But he found the U. S. "just as American and just as unruined as ever."

He also thought he'd find "half the country on strike." But when he got back, he realized "it was all blown up for us."

* * *

Actually America is just as much as it was, if not more so—and too much so in some respects.

The lousy-rich are lousy with war profits, instead of peace profits. They're still griping that they're "over-taxed," and that the New Deal and labor are ruining them. They still have most of the press for their mouthpiece.

The poor are still plenty poor and still "getting the blame."

The crooks are just as crooked. Dirty politicians are just as dirty. There's still plenty of ballyhoo and baloney.

But 99% of the American people are just as decent as they've always been. They know what their fighting men are going through. They're working their heads off to show their appreciation, to speed the victory, and to keep America a country worth returning to.

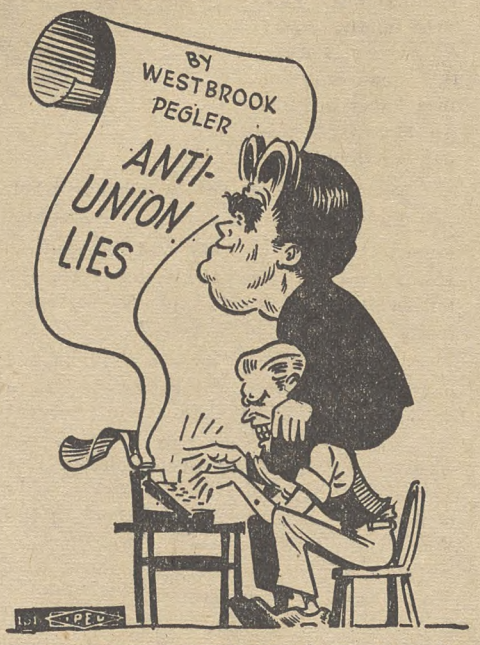
* * *

How come all the distorted stories that trickle through to the troops then?

They're due to privilege, politics and pelf—just as in pre-war days but with some new war wrinkles.

Millionaire special privilege still controls the press and other means of manufacturing opinion. Papers like the Chicago Tribune and the Hearst press have added to their usual labor-baiting new devices to create hatred and division among Americans and among the United Nations.

This is an election year. A progressive administration is in power, supported by most of the working people. So the tory special-privilege crowd will stop at nothing to smear both labor and the administration. And they have plenty of means to get their ideas across to the troops.



THE SECRET'S OUT! John L. Lewis, bushy browed head of the United Mine Workers (NOT a CIO union), revealed this week where he gets his mental food. A reporter who patiently listened to a CIO-baiting tirade by Lewis told the mine workers' chief, "You sound just like Westbrook Pegler." "Believe it or not, I read him every day," Lewis said of the anti-labor columnist.

Truth About Reader's Digest

Factual Or Phoney? Here's The Record!

THE "Reader's Digest," mighty midget of American periodicals, is under withering fire from win-the-war forces on two continents.

Is the Digest a magazine vitally interested in building the broadest possible unity to help defeat the Axis, or is it an organ of defeatism that is primarily concerned with fighting battles of its own on the home front?

The answer is important to every American, for the Digest has tremendous effect in molding public opinion, with a world circulation of 9 millon and an estimated reader audience of better than 50 million.

There is proof aplenty that the Digest—which claims to be impartial—has sandwiched distortions and dangerous half-truths between innocent human interest stories.

One answer to where the Digest stands was provided last month by Senator Joseph F. Guffey of Pennsylvania, who denounced the Digest for publishing "unconscionable lies" in an article that falsely accused the U. S. government of spending $6 billion on "a boondoggling program" in Latin America.

DIGEST'S "GHOST"

Guffey disclosed that the author of the article, Senator Hugh A. Butler of Nebraska, had made a two-months trip to South America under the auspices of the Digest; that he was accompanied by a member of the Digest's research staff, and that his article was "ghosted" by Stanley High, an anti-Roosevelt Digest editor.

Guffey declared that the Digest was "a tool and a toy of a power-crazed publisher," that the real purpose behind the article was to undermine the Good Neighbor policy and thereby contribute "to the defeat of President Roosevelt's magnificent administration in the forthcoming national election of 1944."

Less than a week later, Senator Kenneth McKellar of Tennessee, backed by figures from the Senate Appropriations Committee, charged that the Digest-Butler figures were 95 percent wrong. Secretary of State Hull repudiated the "fallacies" in the article, and Vice President Wallace made a public apology to our Latin-American allies for the Digest's insult.

WAS REPRINT MAGAZINE

The Digest started out 23 years ago as a reprint magazine, but since 1933 it has been using a lot of original articles, some of which it "plants" first in other magazines for the purpose of later reprinting.

This practice was sharply criticized this month by the New Yorker magazine, which refused to renew its contract with the Digest allowing the magazine to reprint New Yorker articles. Said the New Yorker:

"The Digest is beginning to generate a considerable fraction of the contents of American magazines. This gives us the creeps, as does any centralization of genius. The fact seems to be that some publications are already as good as subsidized by the Digest . . . we object to the Digest's indirect creative function, which is a threat to the free flow of ideas and to the independent spirit."

Generally, any magazine, no matter how impartial it pretends to be, takes on the color of the publisher's ideas. The publisher of the Digest is De Witt Wallace, and his ideas, as reported by George Seldes in In Fact, do not make pleasant reading. Seldes quoted Wallace as telling the Digest staff:

"We do not want Germany completely defeated. I think Germany should be beaten up a bit, and I prefer that the American Army does it, so that Hitler will learn who is boss in this world.

"But I do not want Germany smashed. What will become of the continent of Europe if Hitler is killed and Fascism completely eradicated? The Russians will conquer all of Europe . . . We also need a little fascism in the United States to keep this country in order."

Perhaps this may help explain the fact that Wallace, in the August, 1943 issue of the Digest, "digested" an article by Frederick Heizer Wright, who one month earlier was indicted as a paid Japanese agent.

That same issue carried an article by Louis Bromfield entitled, "We Aren't Going to Have Enough to Eat." He predicted that by this February, "most of our people will be living on a diet well below the nutrition level."

Just for the record, we're getting along OK, thank you, Mr. Bromfield. There may not be a lot of steaks in the butcher shops, but there are plenty of other kinds of meat—and all the other foods needed for a healthy diet, too—despite your scare story that was designed to discredit the war food policies of the federal government.

GUARD AGAINST PROPAGANDA!

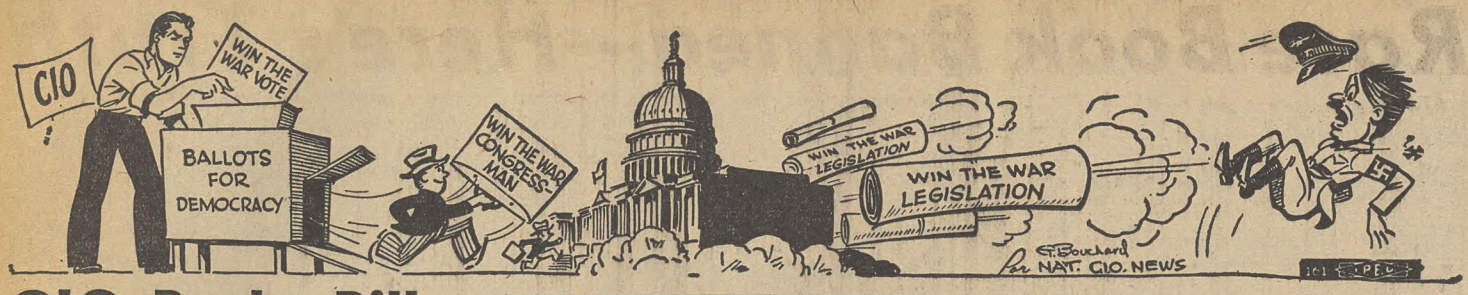
On the war itself, the Digest contributed this "gem," written by anti-labor, anti-Roosevelt Stanley High:

"This is not a democratic war. It is not a New Deal war. The Administration should not act as though it were a Roosevelt war." Seven paragraphs later the article sneeringly describes as "generalizations" the Atlantic Charter, the Four Freedoms, and Vice-President Wallace's speech on the "Century of the Common Man," in which he called for guarantees of jobs and security for all the American people.

This is but a brief review of the magazine that claims to be an "impartial" reprint of other American publications, but that is building up a defeatist philosophy in the minds of the American people.

If you read the Digest, be on guard against its propaganda!

"Hoot mon, it's some breeze!"



CIO Backs Bills To Aid N. Y. Vets

ALBANY, N. Y.—CIO union-sponsored bills providing substantial aid for veterans when they return from the war have been introduced in both houses of the New York Legislature.

The bills would set up a Veterans Aid Administration with $5,250,000 to spend. The program advanced by CIO would:

1. Assist veterans with free job replacements and rehabilitation and vocational training, with regular wages while at school.

2. Establish five-day-week work projects for veterans at prevailing wage rates fixed by collective bargaining.

3. Recommend unemployment insurance and workmen's compensation benefits for all veterans.

4. Provide a special fund for education of veterans.

The bill would prohibit any discrimination against veterans and would provide for two representatives each for veteran and labor groups to formulate policy in the new administration.

V-Mail Letter from Italy

From Sgt. Martin Watkins, U. S. Army, to his buddies in UAW-CIO Local 719, at Brookfield, Ill.

"What do we think of labor on the home front? What do I think? How about the CIO and the UAW?

"Listen, brother, a million of us CIO boys are in the Army, fighting for keeps, with no holds barred. Most of you have sons or brothers or husbands in the fight. The first American to die in this war was a union man. And every day I see what the American workman is turning out for victory. And every day it adds up against fascism, for freedom the world over.

STREAM OF EQUIPMENT

"I remember the great stream of trucks and jeeps at the port in North Africa the day we landed. In a short space of time they had transported many thousands of troops away from the eyes of the enemy observation planes to their bivouac areas and had distributed the guns and ammunition, food and equipment that came with us. Overhead we saw the stream of planes starting on their trouble-making mission for Hitler.

"There is a great bond between the soldier overseas and his brother on the production line. And we are not hoodwinked by any of this anti-labor propaganda, which strangely enough emanates from the same old, well-known isolationists, appeasement and native fascist element who enjoy the comforts and security of peaceful America."

Says GIs Want Jobs After Victory

"We feel that we are entitled to go back to our old jobs," writes BM 2/C Charley Sweyko of the USN, from somewhere in the South Pacific. In a letter to a staff member of The CIO News, Charley, who used to be business agent for CIO Shipyard Local 43, in Baltimore, says:

"There must be some arrangements made so that when we get back after this war there will be enough jobs for all the servicemen. We don't feel that we are better than anyone else, but we would like to see that the people in the States look out for our interests."

OK, Charley, we will!

Senate Report Hails Output Record

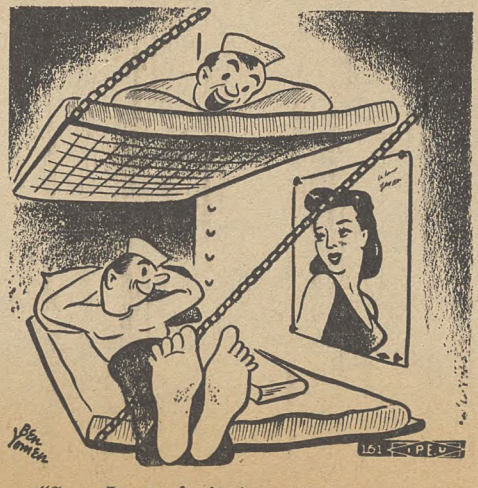
Here are a few figures on U. S. war production, taken from the report of the Truman Committee in the U. S. Senate that was set up three years ago to keep tab on war output. According to the report, the U. S. has produced in war material:

20 million tons of shipping, including 30,000 naval vessels; 153,000 airplanes; 1,500,000 military trucks; close to 90,000,000 tons of steel (in 1943 alone) and "countless" rounds of ammunition.

To make this output, American labor, the Senate Committee says, put in "nearly 45 per cent more man-days of work in 1939, despite the fact that more than 10,000,000 men were withdrawn from the labor pool for the armed forces."

The report, signed by a Senate committee that includes Republicans as well as Democrats, wound up by saying that all Americans can feel pleased with this record since "the success is due to the accumulated efforts of the millions of people who have each done his share rather than to any miraculous planning of a few experts at the top."

And in a final note, the Senate report warns that the production job is far from over—won't be over, in fact, until the victory is won and the Nazis and the Japs are defeated and peace is restored.



"Say, Jones, is it true your pinup girl has a union label?"

More About Pegler

Pvt. Edward R. Porter, Richmond, Va.: "Westbrook Pegler is not a columnist but a fifth columnist. He writes propaganda which poisons, splits and sows seeds of confuion in the ranks of the American people. His muckraking attacks on labor give moral aid and support to fascist elements at home and abroad."

Race Book Banned—Here's Truth

(In the interest of truth and with the firm belief that the facts should be made available to servicemen as well as civilians, The CIO NEWS herewith prints the first of a series of three articles—excerpts from the pamphlet, "The Races of Mankind." The pamphlet was written by Dr. Gene Weltfish and Prof. Ruth Benedict. It was approved by competent authorities as scientifically accurate, but was denied to servicemen and women who are overseas after Representative Andrew J. May, of Kentucky, objected to it because it did not agree with his particular brand of racial philosophy.)

Thirty-four nations are now united in a common cause—victory over Axis aggression, the military destruction of fascism. This war, for the first time, has brought home to Americans the fact that the whole world has been made one neighborhood. All races of man are shoulder to shoulder. Our neighbors now are peoples of all the races of the earth.

Americans know better than most how much hard feeling there can be when people of different races and nationalities have to live together and be part of one community. They know that there is often conflict.

Today when what we all want more than anything else is to win this war, most Americans are confident that, whatever our origins, we shall be able to pull together to a final victory.

Hitler, though, has always believed we were wrong; he has believed that hard feeling would break out and leave us defeated. He has been sure that he could "divide and conquer." He has believed that he could convince nonwhite races in Asia and Africa that this is a "white man's war." He has believed especially that America was now a no man's land, where peoples of all origins were ready to fall to fighting among themselves.

The Bible story of Adam and Eve, father and mother of the whole human race, told centuries ago the same truth that science has shown today: that all the peoples of the earth are a single family and have a common origin.

The greatest adventure story in the history of the world is the spread of early man to all corners of the globe. The world had a small population then, and many of these pioneers were for centuries as separated from other peoples as if they lived on another planet. Slowly they developed physical differences.

Those who settled nearer the equator, whether in Europe, Asia, or in the Americas, developed a darker skin color than those who settled to the north of them.

People's hair is often the same over great areas: frizzly hair, lank hair, wavy hair. Europeans remained quite hairy, but in some parts of the world body hair almost disappeared. Blue eyes appeared in the north. In some places in Asia a fold of skin developed over the inner corner of the eye and produced what we call a slant eye.

After the discovery of America by Columbus, Europeans began traveling to every quarter of the globe, and all the new peoples they met were complete strangers to them.

Europeans thought they were different creatures and named a lot of different "races." Gradually the Europeans described each one as having a skin color, kind of hair, kind of lips, height, and head shape that was peculiar to that "race." Nowadays we know that this was a false impression.

Let us take the brain itself. Because the brain is the thinking organ, some scientists have tried to find differences in the size and structure of the brain among different groups of people. In spite of these efforts, using the finest microscopes, the best scientists cannot tell from examining a brain to what group of people its owner belonged.

The average size of the brain is different in different groups, but it has been proved over and over again that the size of the brain has nothing to do with intelligence.

Army Paper Praises CIO Output Record

High praise for the production record of the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers of America was voiced this month by "Stars & Stripes," official daily newspaper published by the U. S. Army in London. Taking note of labor's no-strike pledge, a "Stars & Stripes" editorial said, in full:

"Bad news travels fast. Labor strikes and lockouts are no exception, for in time of war such news is sometimes sensational.

"The loyalty of American labor, on the other hand, seldom makes the headlines, for in time of war such loyalty is expected and often taken for granted regardless of circumstances; but in fairness we would like to give you a report from the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America.

REPORT TO SERVICEMEN

"Recently this union issued a report to its members in the armed forces. Topping the long list of achievement was a record of no strikes since Pearl Harbor, for the electrical workers had given their solemn pledge to produce the war goods you would need without interruption, and they have kept their pledge.

"And while you GIs may all be proud of your record in training and battle, the men you left behind on the production line are equally proud of the recent tribute paid them by the Under-Secretary of War, Robert P. Patterson, who said: 'As we turn towards the tougher struggle ahead, it is gratifying to note the excellent record made by your union in observance of its no-strike pledge. With that kind of backing our soldiers will move into the decisive phase of the war with an overwhelming superiority of fire power and equipment over the armies of Hitler and Hirohito.'

"The record of America's electrical workers," the editorial concludes, "has been supported by the vast majority of all labor in America. Strikes have been the exception, not the rule, and workmen and women at home have broken every production record in their all-out effort to provide weapons of war on time to fill every need."

UAW in Strong Ban Against Strikes

CIO's largest union, the United Automobile Workers, took steps at the last meeting of its executive board to plug up any weak spots that in rare cases might break through its strong no-strike policy.

Stressing that the overwhelming majority of its more than a million members strictly live up to the no-strike pledge, the union adopted stern measures to discipline any individual member or local that might ignore "their solemn duty" and take part in a work stoppage.

The new policy:

1. Provides for systematic reporting to the International Union of all incidents by which management seeks to provoke strikes.

2. Proposes to discipline members or locals by withholding all union services, and if necessary, "proceed even to the extent of revoking charters and reorganizing locals which fail to take proper steps to comply with the constitution and the no-strike pledge."

Keep Your Eye On Congress

By the time you read this, the Senate will most likely have acted on the newest—and worst—version of the soldiers' vote bill. Under this latest of a long series of "compromises," servicemen and women will find it so difficult to vote, due to the maze of "states' rights" red tape, that even fewer service votes will be cast than the 28,000 cast in 1942.

There is a chance that the Senate will reject the newest surrender on the principle of the Federal ballot and throw the whole matter back to conference with the House again. Meantime, our job is to keep wires and letters rolling in urging a return to the principles of the original Green-Lucas bill—a uniform, simple Federal ballot under which the U. S. will deliver and collect the votes.

The struggle over renewal of the Price Control Act is shaping up. Republicans are demanding immediate action, so that they will have ample time to sabotage subsidies and other essential parts of price control.

Labor and the President want the act renewed, with no ban on subsidies to hold the price line, with enough enforcement funds, with all restrictions and discriminations make price control difficult and uncertain removed. Start writing your Representatives and Senators now.

Action on the polltax repeal bill (HR 7) may come within a week or two. Keep pressing for a Senate vote; no filibuster, no amendments.

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Soldiers' vote.	Final "compromise" is complete surrender of Federal voting plan; means fewer service votes than the 28,000 able to vote in '42.	Senate to act Mar. 13, House later. If passed, it goes to FDR for signature or veto; if not, back to conference again.	Keep urging return to simple, uniform Federal voting plan as in original Green-Lucas bill.
Price control act renewal.	Present act expires June 30; new funds for OPA also coming up.	No bill yet; Republican demand for early action to give ample time for price control sabotage, killing of subsidies.	Start writing now to Representative and Senators to renew act without bars on subsidies or crippling riders on enforcement, etc. Also urge full and free use of OPA funds for enforcement.
Polltax repeal (HR 7)	Brings 10 million Americans into democracy.	Heading up for Senate vote soon.	Keep urging early vote; no filibuster, no amendments.

(WATCH THIS! The reactionary fight to cut vital war and home front government agencies funds has begun, with first scores going against the war effort. Already cut by House Appropriations Committee are funds for child-care, hospitals, clinics, recreation, war housing. OPA, NLRB, War Labor Board, etc., funds are coming up. Write your Representative and Committee Chairman Rep. Cannon (D., Mo.) urging full funds, no crippling riders.)

CIO Protests

Soldier Vote Bill Still Sells Out Servicemen

WASHINGTON, Mar. 11—The supply of "compromises" on the soldiers' vote bill, which was beginning to look inexhaustible, apparently did come to an end this week with the final measure reported to the House and Senate that may be acted on in the Senate by the time you read this.

Under this final sell-out, which was voted against by two of the 10 conferees (Sens. Green and Hatch), the Federal ballot will go only to those servicemen from states with no absentee voting provisions, and then only if the states accept their ballots in advance.

Protesting against this last week, CIO Pres. Murray called it not a compromise but "a complete surrender of principle," whose "obvious effect will be to harass and bedevil the serviceman to the point where he will give up in despair of achieving his democratic right to vote."

A similar protest was made by Sidney Hillman as chairman of the CIO Political Action Committee, and both called on the House and Senate to reject it. If the Senate votes this latest proposal down, the issue will go back to conference between the two Houses.

DEWEY IN PHONEY MOVE

Meantime, New York's Governor Dewey, coy aspirant for the Republican nomination, put in a bid for popularity on the issue that immediately backfired, even in the newspapers. Dewey's plan followed slavishly all the "states' rights" lines that have been used in sabotaging the soldiers' vote to date, and was criticized by even such a newspaper as The New York Times.

As Pres. Murray pointed out in his letter to Congress, the whole strategy has been to delay and obscure the issue until the country's indignation blows over and popular interest in the issue is worn down. After this has happened, the enemies of the soldiers' right to vote plan to slip over a bill completely killing the Federal ballot and then proclaim themselves as the men who have won the ballot for the services.

By keeping alert and keeping interest alive, organized labor can still block this shabby strategy. After the Senate vote, the issue comes up again in the House. If the two disagree, it goes again to conference.

After a new conference and a new bill is passed, it goes to FDR for signature or veto. There's room for plenty of action during all this process.

Textile Wage Hearing Slated

Washington, Mar. 11—Shortage of textiles has finally directed the government's attention to complete neglect of the textile worker's role in the war production picture, John Edelman, representative of the Textile Workers Union, stated here this week.

The War Labor Board has announced that a special panel to hear the wage demands of the TWU for the cotton-rayon section of the textile industry has seen set up and hearings will open later this month. Edelman said. The union is asking a basic hourly wage of 60c.

Call to Action

Fair Job Group's Crisis on March 20

WASHINGTON, Mar. 11—Here's a little-noticed item on the Congress agenda that may have escaped your attention—and one that should be noticed, digested and acted on.

Next week, Mar. 20, the Fair Employment Practices Committee comes up for renewal of its appropriation. The Committee has been doing an essential war job of carrying out FDR's order barring discrimination against Negro and other minority workers on war jobs.

The FEPC has been under heavy attack in both House and Senate. The polltaxers are openly yelling for FEPC's extinction. They've put the Smith "Special Investigating Committee"—read "smear committee"—on FEPC's trail. They've been openly threatening the whole idea of combatting job discriminations against Negroes and other minorities, in Congress and in some southern state legislatures.

The CIO has backed the FEPC from the beginning. The FEPC asks for only $500,000 to carry on its work. The obvious purpose of the forces against FEPC is to perpetuate race hate and discrimination, with a view to discrediting FDR and blocking the CIO in its campagn for fair treatment of Negro workers.

Racial discrimination and race hatred are Hitler's foremost weapons against the United Nations. We can help fight Hitler by fighting for the continued existence of FEPC. Write to your Congressman now—urge him to support the FEPC, to work and vote for the full $500,000 appropriation to enable it to carry on its essential work.

'Fighting 60' Advisory Group

Washington, Mar. 11—Carrying on its fight for everyone who eats, the Congressional Committee for the Protection of the Consumer, more briefly known as the "Fighting 60," this week added a labor-farmer-consumer advisory committee to itself.

On this committee are Sidney Stolberg, Farmers Union; Martin Miller, Railroad Trainmen; Lewis Hines, AFL; Caroline Ware, Assn. of University Women; and Frances Saylor, UERMW, who is secretary.

In an open letter issued this week, the "Fighting 60" warned that the high price and hunger bloc hasn't altogether lost heart with the defeat of the subsidy ban in the sustaining of FDR's veto of HR 3477.

Insurance Hearing

New York, Mar. 11—Negotiations for a salary increase covering 14,000 industrial insurance agents of the Prudential Insurance Co. broke down this week when a U. S. Dept. of Labor conciliator was unable to discover a basis for agreement in separate meetings with the union and the company.

The CIO Office & Professional Workers called for a conciliator when the company flatly refused to consider any increase.

CIO Air Hero Gets Medal

Los Angeles, Mar. 11 — A CIO member this week was awarded the Air Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster for "meritorious achievement while participating in aerial flight against the enemy." He is 2nd Lt. Kenneth M. Van Leuven, a member of Local 1421, CIO, United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers here.

Lt. Van Leuven was wounded in action over western Europe and is now a prisoner of war in Germany. The medal was presented to his wife, Mrs. Edith Van Leuven.

Retraction Week

Columbus, O., Mar. 11—It's retraction week for the wire services that supply news copy—much of it anti-labor—to the daily papers.

This week the Associated Press put out a correction on a story about a merchant seaman, a member of the Natl. Maritime Union, denying an earlier story that he had struck the captain and that a ship on which he worked carried troops.

Last week United Press apologized for the second time for an untrue story of an unpleasant incident at the Teheran conference of Pres. Roosevelt, Marshal Stalin and Premier Churchill.

Ticks Rate Over Kids As House Kills School Lunch Program

This at least is the official position of a House majority in Congress, which this week voted down an amendment to HR 4278, a bill to control "certain animal and plant pests and diseases" which would also have allotted $50 million for school lunches.

The connection between the bill and amendment may seem a little obscure, but that was the way it was presented to the House by the Agriculture Committee in charge of HR 4278.

POLLTAXERS VS. KIDS

There was nothing obscure about the amendment to the reactionary Republicans, led by Bell of Missouri, and the polltaxers, led by Whittington of Mississippi, who fought it bitterly on grounds ranging from economy to the duty of parents to feed their own children.

A few Congressmen fought for the measure, which has been of great help not only to underprivileged children but also to kids in war centers where feeding is an acute and very expensive problem.

These included men such as Rep. Sabath (D., Ill.), Voorhis (D., Calif.), and Carrier (R., Ky.). Carrier tried to shame the House by saying he was pleased with "the interest this Congress has taken in livestock" but couldn't understand its opposition "to furnishing school children with hot lunches."

The bill now goes to the Senate. Perhaps the Senators can be persuaded by the voters that $50 million to give decent lunches to poor kids won't either break the country or wreck the constitution—and might on the contrary help morale and war production, to say nothing of our future citizens' health.

WLB OK's Guild Maintenance Pacts

WASHINGTON, Mar. 11—The phoney argument that a maintenance of membership clause in a CIO Newspaper Guild contract would threaten the freedom of the press was washed off the record this week by the Natl. War Labor Board in an eight to four decision which upheld the contention of the Guild that a maintenance of membership clause would not be "an abridgement of freedom of the press or a violation of the First Amendment to the Constitution." Four public members of the Board voted with four labor members to form the majority.

The majority opinion in the case, involving the Guild and the Harrisburg, Pa., Patriot, quoted the Guild constitution as proof that membership in the union would not be a bar to expression of any opinion by a newspaper writer. Several other publishers participated in the case.

The Guild constitution forbids denial of membership or penalizing any member "by reason of sex, race or religious or political convictions, or because of anything he writes for publication."

The majority opinion, written by WLB Chairman W. H. Davis, pointed out that publishers have an absolute right to hire whom they choose, to edit copy as they desire, and to discharge employes who fail to conform to whatever standards the publishers may set.

In a concurring opinion, the labor members of the board—Van A. Bittner, John Brophy, Robert J. Watt and James A. Brownlow—said:

"The labor members of this board, and indeed any disinterested observer of the American scene, would be deeply grateful if many newspaper publishers were as careful to print labor news as impartially as their reporters write it."

In a statement hailing the decision, Guild Pres. Milton Murray said:

"We trust that the small group of publishers involved will accept the decision of the board as a basis for future negotiations with the Guild in order that the burden of collective bargaining disputes before the WLB may be reduced.

"It should be noted despite the provocation of uncertainty and delay for hundreds of Guild members during the determination of the proceedings forced by the publishers, there has been no interruption of work. The American Newspaper Guild has a 100 per cent record of no strikes since Pearl Harbor."

Wage-Hour Report Shows Law Attacked

Washington, March 11 — Six states made direct efforts to nullify the Federal Fair Labor Standards Act during the past year, Wage-Hour Administrator L. Metcalfe charged in his annual report to Congress made public here this week.

In spite of supposedly high war-time wages, more than one-third of the cases which involved payment of $17,000,000 in illegally withheld wages to 390,000 employes concerned failure to pay minimums of 30c to 40c an hour.

"At the very time that the Congress was reducing the appropriation in the spring of 1943, six states were passing laws that discriminated against wage claims," the report declares, "reducing to periods of as little as six months the time in which a worker may sue to collect wages legally due him, while not similarly reducing the period in which the butcher or baker or landlord may sue the worker.

"Some of this legislation refers specifically to the Fair Labor Standards Act. Some may be unconstitutional. All is aimed at its defeat in practice."

In a discussion of child labor, the report asserts that the number of young workers under 18 employed in industry have increased during the war period at about the same rate as the number of women. A million more girls and boys, 14 to 17 years old, were at work in April, 1943, than would have been employed if the country were not at war.

Cruden, Rubber Union Publicity Man, to GI

Akron, O., Mar. 11 — Robert L. Cruden, publicity director for the CIO United Rubber Workers since 1937, expects to enter the army this month. In a message of farewell to readers of the United Rubber Workers, he said:

"Reaction in America is carefully preparing for the 1944 election. It wants Roosevelt driven from the White House. It wants to wage civil war against American labor. It wants to make a deal with Hitler and Hirohito—because it fears the prospect of a free peoples' world outlined by Roosevelt, Churchill and Stalin at Teheran. Pres. Roosevelt has many burdens. He needs the strength of a united people behind him."

CIO WOMEN HONORED: Miss Mary Slade, CIO Woodworkers Union; Lt. Comdr. Helen Schleman, assistant director, Women's Reserve, U. S. Coast Guard; and Mrs. Elizabeth Kennedy, CIO Auto Workers, at the ceremonies honoring outstanding women production workers conducted by the War Production Board. One of Mrs. Kennedy's sons is in the Coast Guard and she is operating his machine at the plant. That's real inspiration to produce, she says.

Hail Output Records Of Women Workers

WASHINGTON, March 11—Two CIO members were among the seven women production workers presented with certificates of merit this week for their outstanding records at ceremonies conducted by the War Production Board.

Officers of the women's corps of the Army, Navy, Coast Guard and Marines paid tribute to their sister soldiers of production during the presentation, which took place at the WPB's Labor Management Committee exhibit.

Miss Mary Slade of the CIO Intl. Woodworkers, whose picture won a cover award for the "Timberman" last September, is a setter on a saw carriage in Enumclaw, Washington. She is 19 and single and she works on the day shift now. But she says that most of the 200 women in the mill work night shift, 6 P. M. to 3 A. M., because their husbands are home then to keep an eye on the children.

Since they've gotten a woman on the Labor Management Committee in her mill, Miss Slade says, conditions have improved a lot for the women workers. They've got their own lunch room, for instance, where they can sit down at tables to have their sandwiches and coffee.

Mrs. Elizabeth Kennedy from local 260 of the United Automobile Workers, CIO, works in the Tightflex plant in Newark, New Jersey. Two years ago no women worked there. Now there are 5000 and Mrs. Kennedy is one of the shop stewards.

She has two sons in the armed services. The first day she worked in the plant she noticed little plaques giving the name of the boy who had left each machine to join the armed forces. She said was awfully proud when she was assigned to her son's machine.

They're Either Too Young Or Too Old

By TED COX

Times have changed and the change isn't much fun for the gals.

There's the now-old story of changing expressions:

"IN 1933, they said—What a man!

"IN 1943, it was WHAT? A man?.

"AND in 1944 it's the innocent question: What's a man?"

The popular song complaining that "they're either too young or too old" is more than a piece of music—it's a reflection of a tough condition in wartime America.

MISS HUTNIK

Yeah, sister, it's tough. But, even if the telephone doesn't ring as often as it did, there are a few things you can do—and you'll be helping the morale on the fighting fronts more than a dozen lectures while you're doing it.

You can spend an evening or two a week writing letters, and even if a correspondence date from half-way across the world isn't as exciting as having the guy there in the flesh, it's a lot of fun.

Ask Pauline Hutnik, office secretary of Local 217, United Automobile Workers Union. Pauline is the sparkplug of the local union's servicemen's welfare committee and she regularly writes and receives at least 25 letters a week.

You can bet there are no boring evenings for her—nor for the half dozen other girls in the local who also keep up steady correspondence with soldiers and sailors they never saw.

Women's War Work Honored This Week

By ELEANOR FOWLER

Sec.-Treas., CIO Women's Auxiliaries

This is a week to honor women. In the Soviet Union great meetings are being held to pay homage to the tremendous part which women have played in making the victorious offensive of the Red Army possible.

Similar meetings are being held in a number of American cities. In New York, trade union leaders like Rose Schneiderman, president of the National Women's Trade Union League, and Ruth Young of the CIO Electrical and Radio Workers, joined with such women as Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune and Dorothy Thompson in paying tribute to the women of our Russian ally. In Detroit Faye Stephenson, president of the CIO Auxiliaries, and Elizabeth Hawes, author of "Why Women Cry," were featured speakers at a similar gathering.

WASHINGTON HONORS

Here in Washington our American women have also been honored. Seven women chosen for their outstanding production records, were awarded certificates of merit in ceremonies held during the War Production Board's Labor Management Committee exhibit.

Our American women haven't been called upon to make the same heroic sacrifices as their European sisters, but their contribution to the war effort is very real, and it does your heart good to see them get some credit for it.

There are some very practical ways in which we can show our appreciation, too, and at the same time make it possible for the additional millions of women needed in our war industry to go to work.

PLENTY OF PROBLEMS

At the present time four out of five women placed in war industry jobs in this country quit. They don't quit because they're unpatriotic, either. They quit because conditions at home and on the job make it impossible for them to continue. They can't find care for their children. They can't find ways to do their shopping, or get adequate meals or decent housing. These are a few of the problems they face which they can't solve by themselves and which in many cases they aren't being helped to solve.

In January 1944, 15,600,000 American women were working. By June, 18,700,000 are needed. The Women's Advisory Committee of the War Manpower Commission has urged women's auxiliaries of the labor movement to sit on local womanpower committees to help in recruiting new women workers and in improving conditions which prevent women from taking jobs and keeping them.

So that's one thing we can do—serve on our local woman power committees and push an active program for needed community facilities for women workers.

But you can't have child care centers and many other needed services without funds. And many communities don't have the funds to meet these problems. They must depend on federal help. That's why the Lanham Act War Public Works and Services program was started.

Today the funds already appropriated by Congress have almost been used up. The Federal Works Agency, which administers Lanham funds, has no money for any new project. Over 300 projects are already waiting in Washington, approved as necessary to the war effort, waiting for a new appropriation by Congress.

Fighting for that appropriation is the most important immediate way for us to express our appreciation of the job our women war workers are doing. The House Appropriations Committee has cut the $150,000,000 asked by the President to $127,000,000. The whole $150,000,000 is vitally needed.

WRITE YOUR SENATORS TODAY. Tell them how urgent that $150,000,000 is to help our women workers to do their job for victory. Urge them to speak and vote for it.

Plucky Army Wife Fights Rising Prices

WASHINGTON, March 11—Jean Micklo, plucky 20-year-old wife of Andy Micklo, private first class, has to skimp pretty sternly to keep herself and her young son Mickey, not yet two, on the $80 a month allotment she gets as a serviceman's wife with one child—with prices shooting skyward, she did it, and how she feels about it is excellently told in words and pictures in the March issue of the Ladies Home Journal under the snappy title, "Life Without Fathers."

The secret of how Mrs. Micklo managed to scrape by on the $80 and raise her baby, born after Andy was drafted, lies "in what you don't buy yourself—like stockings, or a winter coat," the article explains.

"I was pretty sunk," Jean said, "when Andy's draft orders came. I'm an orphan, and he has only a widowed mother. We didn't have a dime."

10 WEEKS BEFORE ALLOTMENT

And then it took ten weeks before her allotment started coming. Each morning for ten weeks after Andy left, Jean met the mailman. No check. The $100 she and Andy had managed to save was gone. The rent piled up.

Finally in desperation, she appealed to the Army Emergency Relief and received help.

Mrs. Micklo and Mickey are doing OK now, on some pretty stern skimping, but she and the baby would have a tough time to get along if the cost of living shot up a few more points.

The case of this family poignantly illustrates the need to keep down the rapidly rising cost of living by use of food subsidies and price control, as per CIO's demands to Congress.

Postwar Plan for Britain

Jobs a 'Must,' Says Labor; Asks Govt. Run Some Plants

LONDON, March 11 (ALN)—The British Trades Union Congress, in its official policy pamphlet, "TUC in Wartime," released this week, announces that the first plank in its postwar platform is "full employment with adequate pay and the best possible social conditions."

It warns that in order to achieve this goal "it will demand complete public ownership of certain industries, with a degree of regulation for all industries." Sir Walter Citrine, TUC general-secretary, is author of the pamphlet.

Indicating that the TUC may not agree to continuation of coalition government after the war, Citrine says: "While we believe that it would be possible to achieve full employment, we are not yet convinced that this country will seriously pursue a full employment policy after the war, using methods we approve.

"We cannot give any pledges in the absence of knowledge of the policy to be pursued by the government and the attitude adopted by all other political parties." At the same time, he adds that British labor affirms its pledge "never to let its war effort fall below 100 percent."

ASK POSTWAR HOLIDAY

Immediately following the end of the war, the TUC calls for a month's holiday with pay for all workers—to be arranged on a staggered system; a government census of all persons employed in industry, together with a production survey to ascertain the time necessary to re-tool and re-equip factories with new machinery and materials; bulk government orders of pre-fabrication housing units, refrigerators, vacuum cleaners, radios, etc., and basic manufactures such as steel girders and bricks for the "insatiable rehabilitation needs" of Europe and the Soviet Union.

The TUC does not believe that the simple demobilization formula of "first in, first out" is feasible. It suggests that key workers be the first to be released from the armed services, and that the distribution of these demobilized forces returning to industry be based on the government's pre-war Schedule of Reserved Occupations.

This schedule was drawn up by the government in 1939, but was discarded in 1941 when the requirements of the armed forces prohibited automatic deferments for any group of workers. The TUC proposes that the schedule be revived in the period of demobilization, and applied in reverse order, to prevent any suspicion of wangling.

The TUC also calls for increased consultation with trade unions on production problems, and advocates continuance and extension of the present 3,000 joint production committees which, it states, have been "doing excellent work."

Commenting on the necessity of "rebuilding the international trade union movement," the TUC reaffirms its hope that the forthcoming world conference in June will "prove fully representative of the organized workers of the world."

It declares that invitations were sent out to 71 trade union organizations in 31 countries, that "organizations invited included all representative trade union organizations of the United Nations," and that "special efforts have been made to secure the appointment of delegates from colonial trade unions."

ILO Postwar Plan Calls for Social Security Benefits

WASHINGTON, Mar. 11—Principal postwar plan of the Intl. Labor Organization, to be unveiled at a meeting in Philadelphia April 20, will be to make Germany pay social security to the workers it has enslaved from occupied countries.

This postwar plan was revealed to newsmen here at a lunch for the ILO's director, Edward J. Phelan, who told his guests that the ILO hoped the scheme would go into effect as soon as the "armistice" was signed with Germany.

In response to questions, Phelan made the astonishing assertion that the Nazi German social security system was "much better" than that of most other European countries, and those enslaved workers who were not covered by social security in their own countries would, he implied, receive substantial payments.

Those who were covered before they were enslaved would receive the benefits of their own countries, paid by the Germans as a form of reparations. The millions of enslaved workers who have been murdered would not be provided for in the ILO proposal, Mr. Phelan indicated.

The ILO, set up after the first world war, has had CIO representation at only one of its meetings and CIO hasn't yet been asked to this one. The AFL has usually been considered to represent all U. S. labor, whose delegates are appointed by the Labor Dept. here. According to newspaper reports, President Roosevelt has asked AFL Pres. William Green to consent to the presence of a CIO delegate at the April meeting.

Trade unions of the Soviet Union have not been invited either, though Mr. Phelan explained that "everything possible" was being done to secure their attendance April 20.

The presence of the CIO at the April ILO meeting would knock out one of the AFL officialdom's main reasons for refusing to attend the World Labor Conference being held June 5 in London. Invited to that by the British Trades Union Congress, the AFL Executive Council refused on two grounds 1) the presence of the CIO and 2) the presence of a Soviet union delegation.

Earlier reports showed that the ILO invited delegations from Finland, Hungary and Rumania. The U. S. is at war with the last two countries; both Britain and the USSR are at war with Finland.

Name Canadian Labor Delegates

Toronto, March 11 (ALN)—The Canadian Congress of Labor (CIO national unions) this week elected C. H. Millard, Canadian regional director of the United Steelworkers of America; Robert Livett, president of District 18, United Mine Workers; and T. C. McGuire, secretary of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employes, as its delegates to the world labor conference in London in June.

Toledano, Brazil President In Labor Talks

Mexico City, March 11 (ALN)—President Getulio Vargas of Brazil this week invited Vicente Lombardo, president of the Confederation of Latin American Workers (CTAL), to visit him in Rio de Janeiro to discuss continental problems, including the relationship of Brazilian labor to the CTAL.

Toledano is expected to meet with President Vargas on his return from Montevideo, where he is attending a CTAL executive council meeting.

Have you registered yet for the important 1944 Presidential election?

Labor Press Parley Talks of World Unity

NEW YORK, Mar. 11—World labor unity in the war and after victory dominated the discussion at the second conference of the American Labor Press Assn., joint CIO-AFL organization of union press editors and publicity people.

Jacob S. Potofsky and Emil Rieve spoke on hemisphere labor and world labor, Rieve discussing the London labor meeting set for June 5, at which he will be a delegate, and Potofsky discussing Latin-American labor as chairman of the CIO Latin-American Affairs Committee.

Mayor LaGuardia, a guest speaker, spoke on the need for U. S. labor unity to oppose reaction in Congress and in other parts of the nation. Julius Hochman, an official of the AFL Ladies Garment Workers, repeated previous pleas for more labor public relations work.

John J. McCloy, Asst. Secretary of War, spoke to the meeting on problems of Allied Military Government in liberated areas of Italy. According to his speech, AMG is working to re-establish collective bargaining, to eliminate Fascists from government, and to get normal economic machinery and industry functioning again.

PRAISES TOLEDANO

Potofsky dealt with the need for labor to carry through the "Good Neighbor" policy, both to build hemisphere solidarity and to fight off the inroads of Nazism in Latin America. He praised the role of Lombardo Toledano as leader of the Confederation of Latin-American Labor (CTL) which, he said, was a strong unifying force in our neighboring republics.

Rieve spoke briefly on the London world labor conference, stressing the need for unity of all United Nations' workers regardless of their manner of organization or of differences between those methods and our own.

Other speakers included Maury Maverick, on "Labor and Small Business"; George Baldanzi, Textile Workers executive vice-president, on "The AMG—a Labor Point of View"; Len De Caux, who acted as chairman during a part of the two-day conference; and others.

Officers relected included J. B. S. Hardman, Amalgamated Clothing Workers "Advance"; Tom Wright, UE "News"; Len De Caux, The CIO NEWS; Vin Sweeney, Steel Labor; Svend Godfredson, "Packinghouse Worker"; and Maurice Forge, "Transport Workers Bulletin."

Reader's Digest—Factual or Phoney?

By LOUIS OGULL

The Reader's Digest, mighty midget of American periodicals, is under withering fire from many win-the-war forces on two continents.

There is proof aplenty that the Digest has sandwiched lies, distortions and dangerous half-truths between innocent human interest stuff and patter. In wartime this is a matter of grave concern because of the tremendous power of the Digest in molding public opinion.

Let us apply the test of whether or not the Digest is helping to win the war. It is the test labor has set for itself in its all-out war effort.

First, let us ask why this richest magazine, with a world circulation of approximately 9,000,000 and a reading public estimated at 50,000,000 should lay itself open to serious attack as an organ of defeatism.

Guffey Expose'

Sen. Joseph F. Guffey (D., Pa.) provided the answer on the floor of the Senate Dec. 7, 1943. He was denouncing the Digest for the "unconscionable lies" it published in an article over the signature of Sen. Hugh A. Butler (Rep., Neb.). That article accused the government of a $6,000,000,000 "boondoggling" program in Latin America.

Guffey disclosed that Butler had made a two-month trip to 20 countries under the auspices of the Digest; that he was accompanied by a member of the Digest's research staff; and that the finished article was prepared by Stanley High, an anti-Roosevelt editor of the Digest.

Guffey then asserted the Digest was "a tool and toy of a power-crazed publisher," that the real purpose behind the article was to undermine the Good Neighbor policy and thereby contribute "to the defeat of President Roosevelt's magnificent Administration in the forthcoming election of 1944."

Digest 95% Wrong

Less than a week later Sen. Kenneth McKellar (D., Tenn.), of the Senate Appropriations Committee, backed by figures culled from committee records, charged that the Digest-Butler figures were 95% wrong. Sec'y. of State Hull repudiated the "fallacies" in the article and Vice-President Wallace made a public apology to our Latin-American allies for the gratuitous and shocking insult.

Since the Digest-Butler article was published, newspapers in Chile and Uruguay have called for a boycott of Selecciones, Spanish edition of the Digest. In Cuba, President Batista has been asked to bar it from the mails.

In Rio de Janeiro the newspaper Directrizes says the Digest "continues to serve groups interested in dividing the United Nations, supporting pro-fascist and fascist currents." It cited a number of Digest articles to show that in an "apparently inoffensive form" it circulates Fifth Column propaganda throughout Latin-America."

Was Reprint 'Mag'

The Digest started out 23 years ago as a reprint magazine. Since 1933, however, it has been using a lot of original articles. Yet it continued to promote the "reprint myth in the public mind." That myth has now exploded in the face of DeWitt Wallace, its founder and publisher.

On Feb. 9, 1944 the New Yorker magazine ended its agreement permitting the Digest to reprint New Yorker material. The New Yorker cited as the reason:

"Of the stuff that IS presented as reprint material much actually originates in the office of the Digest and then gets farmed out to some other magazine for its first publication . . . . .

"The Digest is beginning to generate a considerable fraction of the contents of American magazines. This gives us the creeps, as does any centralization of genius.

Threat to Ideas

"The fact seems to be that some publications are already as good as subsidized by the Digest . . . we object to the Digest's indirect creative function, which is a threat to the free flow of ideas and to the independent spirit."

The New Republic followed up this blast with an editorial attack on March 6, saying it "will no longer use material which originates in the Digest office," and asserting that the Digest "rejects a substantial amount of good writing in the magazines which do not conform to its specialized political and social views.

"That is one reason, and perhaps the chief reason, why the Digest finds it necessary to write articles and give them away in order to have them reprinted."

CONGRESSMAN DRIPP by Yomen

"MISS SNOOT, ROUND UP ALL MY RELATIVES I'M MAKING A SPEECH IN CONGRESS TODAY!"

How to Register Told by New CIO Pamphlet

New York, Mar. 11—Why every worker should register and vote in the 1944 elections and how to go about the job of getting it done is explained in an illustrated pamphlet issued this week by the CIO Political Action Committee. It is called "Every Worker A Voter."

Among the issues at stake in the 1944 elections, says the pamphlet are:

How quickly and completely will we beat the Axis?

Will we all have jobs after the War?

Will our trade unions be smashed?

Will the cost of living soar out of sight?

Twelve essential steps in getting workers registered are explained, beginning with the setting up of a registration committee in the plant and concluding with a suggestion for some reward for the best member of the committee.

The pamphlet may be obtained from the CIO Political Action Committee, 205 E. 42nd St., New York 17, N. Y.

Push Broad Registration Drive in S. F.

San Francisco, March 11—An all-out registration-to-vote drive under broad auspices of civic, welfare and labor groups has started here in preparation for the 1944 presidential election.

The program was launched this week at a meeting called by the League of Women Voters. The community-wide campaign will seek to inform every San Franciscan of his right and duty to be registered to vote in this year's elections.

Among organizations represented in the registration effort—indicating its broad nature—are: CIO and AFL Councils, Junior Chamber of Commerce, Council of Jewish Women, Real Estate Board, Democratic and Republican Parties, Council of Churches, Council of Civic Clubs and Business & Professional Women.

CIO to Push Race Pamphlet Despite Sniping

New York, March 11—The Natl. CIO War Relief Committee is going to go right ahead distributing the pamphlet, "The Races of Mankind," to members of the armed forces despite the fuss raised in Congress by Rep. Andrew J. May (D., Ky.), who blocked official distribution of the pamphlet by the Army.

In commenting on the action, Natl. Director Leo Perlis of the Committee said:

"We believe this pamphlet is one of the best weapons in the hands of our soldiers. It is certainly one of the best answers to Hitler's Aryan creed.

"It promotes tolerance by showing the brotherhood of mankind, the likeness and the fundamental unity of the races. It states that the cure for race prejudice lies in freedom from fear.

"It emphasizes one of the fundamental principles for which our men and women in the armed forces are fighting."

Vote 37-5 for FAECT

New York, Mar. 11—A group of design engineers and draftsmen at the Federal Radio Receptor Corp. voted 37 to 5 for the CIO Federation of Architects, Engineers Chemists & Technicians.

CIO Lists Steps To Aid Postwar Plan

WASHINGTON, Mar. 11—CIO fully supports the general approach of the Baruch-Hancock report to war and postwar problems, and has concrete suggestions on achieving its objectives, President Murray said this week in writing to War Production Board chief Donald Nelson.

"The general approach of the Report is predicated on certain basic assumptions with which the CIO is completely sym-pathetic and to which we offer our wholehearted support," Murray wrote.

Citing the report's statement that "there is no need for a postwar depression," and its belief that the postwar period can bring greatly higher living standards and economic security, Murray said:

"This is precisely the objective of the CIO with regard to all measures that must be adopted both for the winning of the war and the peace that will follow.

"We are of the firm belief that the tremendous mobilization which we have demonstrated during the war can be maintained for peace secured through the unity which has been established at Cairo and Teheran among the United Nations."

In recommending certain specific steps to carry out the promise of the report, Murray urged adoption of the CIO's Industry Council Plan for full participation of labor with government and industry in the solution of war and postwar problems. Other specific recommendations by Pres. Murray included:

"Effective participation of labor" on the War Production Board in dealing with "the planning and programming of maximum war production, necessary civilian production and contract cancellation."

Labor and industry representatives to be added to the "Surplus Property Board" and effective labor participation in the "Office of Work Director."

Establishment of a national board composed of representatives of industry, labor, agriculture and government "charged with the responsibility of advising the President and the Office of War Mobilization regarding policy and its administration pertaining to the basic problems of planning and programming of maximum war production, necessary civilian production, contract cancellation, reconversion and postwar production.

In addition, President Murray also urged job security now and in the postwar period; dismissal pay for displaced war workers; jobs at adequate pay and good conditions for all returning veterans and for displaced war workers; adequate care for veterans in all health matters, and enactment of the Murray-Wagner-Dingell bill to improve social security.

Recognizing that the report is not "a blueprint covering every conceivable problem and situation which may arise in connection with our reconversion to a peacetime economy," Murray concluded his letter by saying:

"All that can now be done, in our judgment, is to set forth certain basic objectives, goals to be striven for, and the major steps that must be taken or arrangements made to implement these policies. It is with this in mind that I have made the foregoing concrete suggestions.

"The CIO is most anxious as it has been during the war period, to make its maximus contribution for our nation and for our membership in establishing a peaceful and abundant life for the people."

Polltax Repeal On Deck

Senate Reported Set To Act April 1; Rush Wires!

WASHINGTON, Mar. 18—The big chance to rid the U. S. of the polltax once and for all is getting close—and with everyone pushing, the job can be done.

According to the latest commitments, the polltax repeal bill (HR 7) will come up for Senate action April 1. The procedure will go something like this:

Following three or four days of debate—with polltaxers leading a filibuster—the Senate will take a cloture vote. A cloture vote, if successful, ends the filibuster and allows the bill to come to a final vote.

Cloture is the key to repealing this drag on the nation's war. If it succeeds, the repeal bill passes. If it fails, the bill is then at the mercy of polltax Senators who are apparently willing to shove aside all war business the Senate may have while they talk the measure to death.

A cloture vote takes a two-thirds majority—which is 64 Senators of the total of 96. A number of Senators have indicated that they will vote for cloture, if necessary. Counting the normal number of Senate absentees, probably about 55 or 60 yes votes will clinch the cloture and kill the filibuster.

The key to victory on this vital war measure, therefore, is to urge your two Senators to: first vote for cloture; second, accept no amendments; and, third, vote for the bill itself.

Don't assume that your two Senators have agreed to vote cloture. Even if they have, Senators are like everybody else—they need to be reminded of their commitments and promises.

A VITAL WAR MEASURE

Everyone by this time is familiar with the arguments against keeping the polltax on the statute books. It's undemocratic. It prevents 10,000,000 white and Negro Americans from voting. It immobilizes a big section of our working and farming population just at the time when they should be politically most active—active to win the war and ensure a stable, people's peace.

Repeal of the polltax is not just a "Southern" issue. Polltax Congressmen like Dies, Smith, Cox and Co. are not just the South's misfortune. They're a drag on the progress of the entire country, and a big block on the path to victory.

BEHIND ALL GAGS

Behind every measure to gag unions, jack up prices, harass the government's war agencies, thwart the President's war leadership, you'll find polltaxers. Working through the Congressional system of giving key assignments to those with the longest records, the polltaxers control the most important committees in both House and Senate.

The things they do in these committees and on the floor of Congress affect the whole country, North as well as South. The Smith-Connally Act was aimed at industrial workers; Smith and Connally are both polltaxers. The bill to ban food subsidies was the work of a polltaxer, Bankhead of Alabama.

Bills aimed at depriving farmers of the benefits of subsidies, of crop insurance, of Farm Security Administration help, are usually sponsored by polltaxers and supported by them.

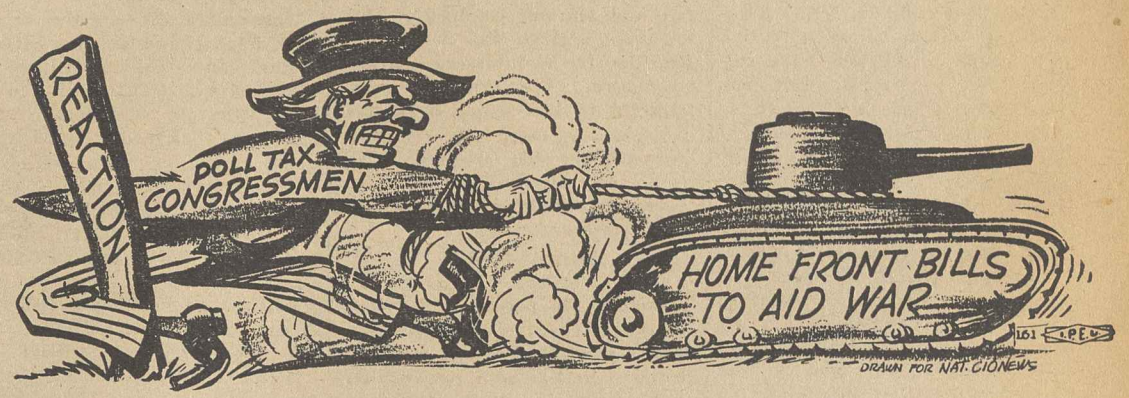
The bill just passed that effectively deprives the soldiers of their right to vote was sponsored by a polltaxer, Rankin of Mississippi. In an "unholy alliance" with reactionary Republicans, polltax Democrats like Rankin jammed this bill through Congress, a bill that FDR called "a fraud on the American people" and on the servicemen.

Repeal of the polltax is no more a "Southern" issue than any other war and home front measure Congress has to deal with.

Led by Philip Murray, the CIO in unity with the entire labor movement wants the polltax repealed.

Now's the chance!

Our Polltax—



This is OUR polltax. Every election it keeps 10,000,000 of US—10,000,000 American citizens, white and Negro both, on the outside of our democracy looking in.

Ten million Americans are disarmed in the greatest war ever fought for freedom and survival by OUR polltax; disarmed because they're prevented from using democracy's greatest weapon—the right to vote.

Every two years, as a result, our polltax brings us Congressmen like Martin Dies, Howard Smith, Gene Cox, Tom Connally, Bilbo and scores just like them.

And they bring us things like the Smith-Connally Act and the Dies Committee and the Smith smear jobs on the Wagner Act, on OPA, on every labor and war agency that tries to do a job for the people, not on the people.

Our polltaxers and their Republican pals gang together to shower us with higher food costs, with unfair tax laws, with gags on unions and threats of gags on political action. Latest fruit of this "unholy alliance" is the bill making it impossible for millions of servicemen and women to vote in 1944.

Yes, they're ours all right, these polltaxers, even though we didn't vote for them.

They're ours by default, and they'll stay ours just so long as we let the Polltax Repeal Bill (HR 7) lie around unpassed in the Senate.

Now's the Time

The Polltax Repeal Bill (HR 7) can come up in the Senate April 1. We got it through the House last year, by a big majority. The Senators will vote for it the same way the House did IF . . .

. . . IF it can be forced past the filibuster polltax Senators are preparing for it now.

It takes a cloture vote to end debate and kill the filibuster. A cloture vote takes a two-thirds majority of the Senators, which is 64.

Some people—mainly polltax Senators, though others follow their line—claim that cloture is undemocratic. They argue that Congress should never cut off debate on anything.

But the polltax Senators who hope to filibuster the repeal bill to death aren't interested in democracy—no matter how loudly they cry out about it.

If they were really interested in democracy, they would vote for HR 7 as quickly as it came up, because the polltax is the most undemocratic institution in America.

The opponents of cloture and of the repeal bill also cry out about "states' rights."

But what about the "states' rights" of the 10,000,000 Americans who live in the eight polltax states — where they're effectively denied the right to vote?

Don't they have something to say about the "right" of a polltax state political machine to deny them the right to join with all their fellow Americans in making democracy work?

After all, the citizens of the eight polltax states fight for their country. Why can't they vote for their country—even if it does take a cloture vote and repeal of HR 7 to make it possible?

Of course everybody has written and wired his Senators on the Polltax Repeal Bill (HR 7) before. But lots of Senators have short memories and they bank on the voters having short memories too.

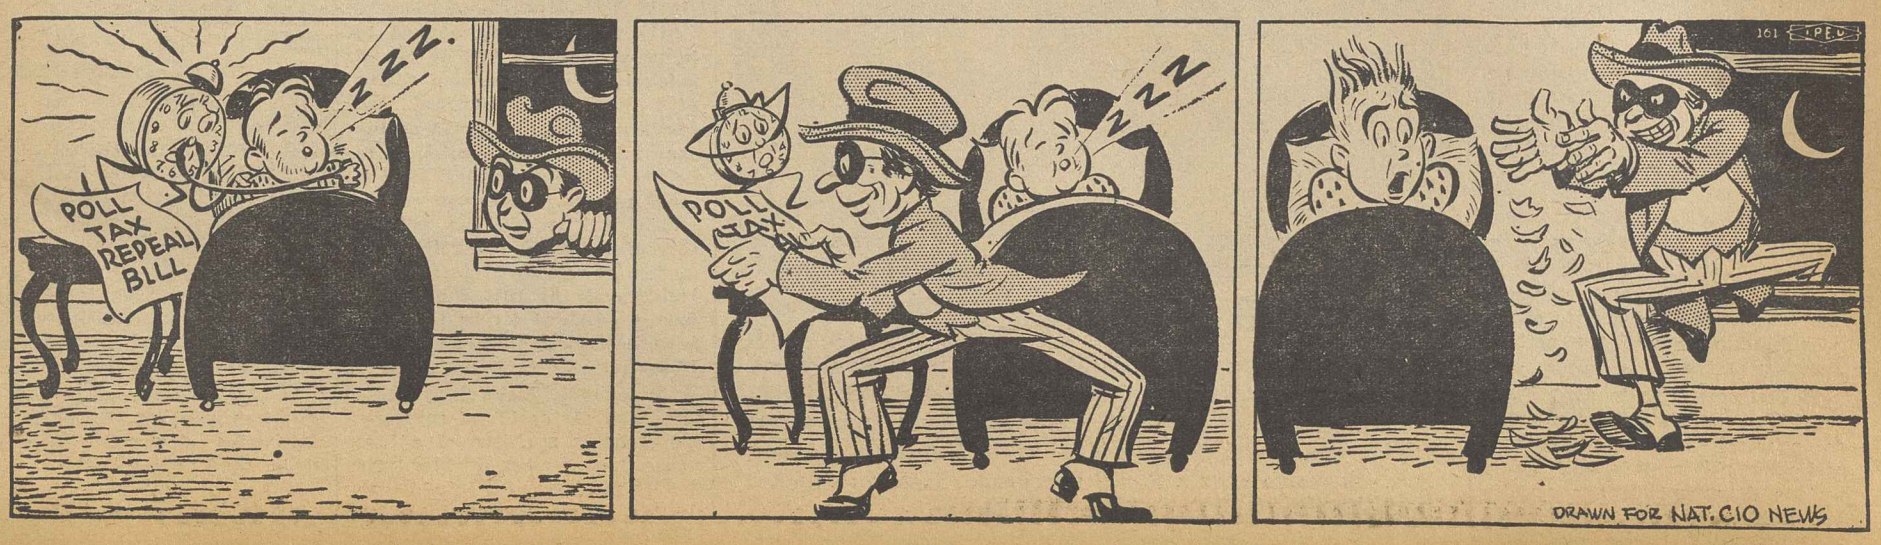
Once Again, Now

April 1 is coming up. Write, wire, visit if you can, your two Senators. Urge them: 1) To vote for cloture (end of filibuster; 2) To vote for HR 7 without any amendments or changes.

The Polltax Repeal Bill (HR 7) doesn't need any amendments or changes. All it needs is to be passed right away.

And then we can get rid of our polltaxers and get on with winning the war.

DATE LATE FATE



CIO Transport KO's Company Union, AFL

By MAURICE FORGE

PHILADELPHIA, March 18—The CIO scored a major victory here when the Transport Workers Union won the hotly-contested election among the 9,200 employes of the Philadelphia Transportation Company, largest poll ever conducted by the Pennsylvania Labor Relations Board. The TWUA beat the AFL Amalgamated Association of Street Railway Employes by three-to-one and administered a similar defeat to the "independent" union, thus bringing to an end a half century of company unionism and ineffective AFL organizational attempts in this vast transit system. The TWU scored decisive majorities among street car, bus, elevated and subway employes in the transportation and maintenance departments, who voted in separate units.

James J. Fitzsimon, TWU Vice-President under whose direction the year-old organizing drive culminated in this outstanding victory, characterized the result as "a clear and decisive expression of PTC employes' desire for genuine collective bargaining through a bona fide American labor organization — the Transport Workers Union, CIO. The outcomes assures the people of Philadelphia the safe, efficient and uninterrupted transportation service which we have pledged in accordance with our no-strike policy and in the interest of winning the war.

"We are confident that all PTC employes will unite behind our efforts to negotiate a good contract and to establish stable labor relations in our transit system. The Transport Workers Union has pledged full support to our Commander-in-Chief and together with all labor we will redouble our efforts for speedy victory.

"We want to express our sincere thanks to the Pennsylvania Labor Relations Board for the fair and efficient conduct of the elections and to the police authorities for maintaining orderly procedure. We are especially grateful to the people of Philadelphia for their fairness and sympathy which assured PTC employes this opportunity to make their decision in this democratic fashion."

MURRAY AIDS

CIO President Philip Murray extended his personal attention to the PTC drive and addressed the largest gathering of PTC workers in the final pre-election rally held in Town Hall on March 9. The smashing TWU victory is a direct tribute to Murray's outstanding leadership and to President Michael J. Quill of the Transport Workers Union, who was chief target of a campaign of villification.

The fighting TWU president endeared himself to PTC workers by his forthright and effective leadership throughout the drive, during which he addressed many indoor and outdoor rallies and met with scores of workers' committees.

One of the significant results of the election is the repudiation by these 9,000 workers of "Red"-baiting, racism, and other forms of psychological warfare borrowed from the Nazis, which were injected in the campaign by irresponsible elements in the AFL and by the company union.

The entire CIO in the City of Philadelphia and in the State of Pennsylvania rallied behind the TWU drive in PTC. A United CIO Committee to Support Transit Labor was formed several weeks ago.

The Committee, which rallied affiliates and the public, consisted of Michael Harris, Philadelphia Industrial Council President, Charles Weinstein, manger of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers Joint Board, Joseph Hueter, Textile Workers, Harry Block, UE District 1 president, and Herbert Moyer, Shipbuilding Union leader. George Craig, CIO Regional Director, and John Phillips, State CIO President, were equally active.

PRE-VICTORY SMILES lightened the faces of CIO Pres. Philip Murray (right) and TWU Pres. Michael Quill as Murray received a long and tumultous ovation from 3,000 employes of the Philadelphia Transportation Co. at a final pre-election rally under the auspices of the Transport Workers Union.

Anti-GI Vote Bill Passed

WASHINGTON, March 18—Orating about "states' rights" up to the last indecent minute, a majority in the House and Senate this week passed a GI ballot bill that will effectively rob 10,000,000 service men and women of their right to vote, if it finally becomes law.

The bill, criticized by the President, by CIO Pres. Murray, by Sen. Barkley, administration leader, and a minority of pro-service Congressmen, as even more restrictive than the 1942 service vote law that enabled only 28,000 to vote, now goes to the White House for signature, veto or validation within 10 days without the President's signature.

Under this bill, engineered by Republicans and polltax Democrats, the soldiers' right to vote is so hedged in and restricted by "states' rights" red tape that it will take legal wizardry and the patience of Job for a soldier to achieve in 1944 the basic democratic right he's fighting for.

PROVISIONS OF BILL

According to its provisions, the servicemen and women can vote in 1944 provided:

1. The serviceman has not received a State ballot and has sworn an oath to that effect by Oct. 1.

2. His State has absentee voting machinery.

3. His state will accept his Federal ballot if he doesn't get a state ballot or it has no absentee voting apparatus. This has to be certified by the governor of his state.

The Senate vote on the final "compromise" version of the bill was 47 to 31, which means that a veto by the President would be sustained, if he vetoes the bill. The House vote, 273 to 111, indicates that a veto would have less of a chance of surviving there.

If the bill is vetoed, however, a sustaining vote in the Senate would throw the whole issue back to Congress. The campaign for a workable soldiers' vote bill would then begin all over again, with CIO pressure for a return to the Green-Lucas bill that originally passed the Senate, only to be blocked in the House.

The line-up of Republicans against a workable bill was clear from the beginning. In the Senate, 24 out of 30 voting Republicans were for the phoney "states' rights" measure; in the House, 175 Republicans out of 187 voting members. Democrats were about evenly divided; 23 in the Senate for the phoney bill, 24 against, and in the House, 97 for and 96 against.

In a quick move to clear the air on the whole "states' rights" issue, President Roosevelt wired all the 48 state governors as soon as the House vote was in to query them on their state's attitude toward accepting or not accepting a Federal ballot from their residents in the armed forces, provided the other requirements in the bill were met.

Murray Asks Funds For Anti-Bias Agency

WASHINGTON, March 18—Voicing a strong demand for continuance of the fight against job discrimination as a vital war measure, CIO Pres. Philip Murray today urged Congress to give the Fair Employment Practice Committee its full cooperation and to defeat the crippling Russell rider.

Murray's statement came as a House Appropriations subcommittee prepared to take up Mar. 21 the $500,000 FEPC request, and as the Senate moved to consider Sen. Russell's (poll-taxer, Ga.) plan to put FEPC and all other war agencies set up by FDR through the Congressional third degree.

"While this move appears reasonable," Murray said, "there is evidence that it is aimed at hobbling this particular war agency. If Congress desires to put FEPC under its control, it has the opportunity to do so in passing any one of a series of bills that have been offered for continuance of FEPC. These measures, sponsored in the House by Reps. Scanlon, Dawson, Marcantonio and LaFollette, should be supported."

POLLTAXER DRIVE

The fight against the FEPC, led by the polltaxers, is a part of a polltaxer plus reactionary Republican scheme to discredit the Administration by hamstringing the fight against Jim Crow job discriminations.

Congressmen and others more interested in fighting FDR and labor than they are interested in fighting the Axis hope to turn Negro voters against the war Administration and thus to garner their votes in 1944. Pres. Murray put the finger on this when he said in his statement:

"Millions of patriotic Negro citizens and members of other minorities in the nation are eager to do their share in producing war materials for the coming invasion of Hitler's fortress Europe. Many of them are prevented from making their contribution to victory by the vicious practice of job discrimination.

WAR ISSUE

"The issue is not only one of justice to a great and patriotic sector of our population. It is also a matter of grave concern to all who have the interests of full war production and the national security at heart."

If Congress tries to deny FEPC its full appropriation, or attempts to sabotage its work by hamstringing riders, this will be "a serious detriment to our country and a blow to our armed forces, both as to morale and as to their military strength," Murray added.

Meantime, the four bills to continue FEPC sit in the House awaiting action. Three of them offered by Reps. Scanlon, Dawson and La-Follette are identical and are in the Labor Committee awaiting hearings. The fourth, sponsored by Rep. Marcantonio, is pigeonholed in the Judiciary Committee. Marcantonio has a Discharge Petition out to force his bill on the floor.

CIO is supporting these bills, as well as the appropriation. As Murray pointed out, the $500,000 asked is a very small sum of money, but the cost of "failure to grant this appropriation, and the cost of hobbling FEPC with restrictions, would be incalculable."

Farm-Labor, Demos Join In Minnesota

Minneapolis, Minn., Mar. 18—Merger of the Farmer-Labor and Democratic parties in Minnesota, under discussion by political groups here for some time, went forward as planned when state committees of the two parties met here earlier this month and completed the necessary legal formalities.

A date for a state convention was set tentatively for April 7.

The Democratic central committee has adopted a resolution suggesting that the Minnesota delegation to the national Democratic convention be instructed to support Roosevelt and vote under the unit rule.

St. Louis, Mo., March 18—Pres. R. J. Thomas of the CIO United Auto Workers will speak on the politics of post-war housing at a Natl. Housing Conference to be held here March 24-25.

Some of the nation's housing experts, including Herbert Emmerich, commissioner, Federal Public Housing Authority, and B. J. Hovde, president, Natl. Public Housing Conference, are listed among the speakers.

WASHINGTON, Mar. 18—Here's how "simple" the miscalled soldiers' vote bill passed this week by House and Senate actually is—and an indication of what a man in a foxhole has to plough through to find out whether or not he can vote in 1944.

It's a quote from the bill as passed:

"(b) The provisions of this title shall apply to, and the ballot provided for by this title, may be used by—

"(1) an individual referred to in paragraph (1), (2), or (3) of subsection (a), if he is a citizen of a State whose Governor has certified, prior to July 15 of the year in which the election is to be held (A) that such State has made no provision for procedure which will enable the citizens thereof to whom subsection (a) applies to vote by State absentee ballot, and (b) that the use of ballots provided for by this title is authorized by the laws of such State; or

"(2) an individual referred to in paragraph (1) or (2) of subsection (a), if he is a citizen of a State whose Governor has certified, prior to July 15 of the year in which the election is to be held, that the use of ballots provided for by this title is authorized by the laws of such State, even though the Governor thereof does not make the certification referred to in clause (A) of paragraph (1), but only if such individual states in his oath that, prior to September 1, he made application for a State absentee ballot, but, as of October 1, has not received it."

No wonder Senator Barkley, (D., Ky.), Administration leader, said after reading this into the Congressional Record:

"I challenge anyone to find an ordinary man not steeped in the intricacies of the law who can understand, after reading that, whether he will be entitled to vote or even receive a ballot."

Price Control Renewal Fight Begins In Congress—Fast, United Action Needed

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, March 18—The big push to renew the Price Control Act opened this week, with the first hearings before the Senate Banking Committee March 15 taken by Chester Bowles, OPA head, in pleading for renewal and for continued use of subsidies to hold food prices in check.

As the hearings began, the strategy of the profit-and-hunger gang in Congress became clear in a series of proposed changes that would cripple both the Act itself and its enforcement after June 30, the date by which it must be renewed.

At the same time, CIO, consumers, farmer groups, housewives and other people interested in effective price control began planning their drive to renew the Act without hamstringing riders or cuts in funds, and with improvements to strengthen the Act and its enforcement.

Further signs of a major reactionary drive to destroy the war economy were seen in Congressional threats—notably from Rep. Wolcott, (R., Mich.) to write the "Little Steel" wage straitjacket into the price control law.

FOR EFFECTIVE CONTROL

A five-point program for effective price control, which will be supported by CIO and other progressive groups includes:

1. Repeal of the present ban against quality grade labeling of retail goods.

This ban, passed as an amendment to the Act last year under Sen. Taft's leadership, makes it impossible for consumers to tell what they're getting, and thus opens the way to quality chiseling on everything consumers buy and use.

2. OPA is at present required to hire policy-making personnel only from those who have had experience in "business, industry or commerce." This hands over the policy jobs to those who are least interested, by virtue of their connections, in doing a real job on price control.

Removing this rider on the OPA will allow it to round out its personnel with people from labor, farm groups, consumers, housewives, and the like, and will make for better control and enforcement.

3. An amendment to allow OPA to sue for damages from violators, where the consumer fails to sue within 10 days.

This would correct one of the most serious shortcomings of the Act and allow much tighter enforcement. So far, only a thin trickle of consumers has brought suit against violators, because of the time and trouble involved. Letting OPA sue would put the people in charge of enforcement in a position to enforce.

4. Authorization for OPA to buy samples for evidence to use in prosecution of violators. Just because Congress did not specifically authorize this, though not forbidding it, the Comptroller-General has ruled it out. Every other U. S. agency has this authorization, as does every village police force. Laws can't be enforced without it.

5. Adequate funds for hiring enforcement personnel. The last Congress appropriation cut these funds below the bone, so that OPA has less than one enforcing agent per county. OPA has had $9,000,000 for this, needs many times that amount.

With this goes a determination to resist the attempt to freeze "Little Steel" into law. As CIO has pointed out, "Little Steel" is far behind even the admittedly inadequate Bureau of Labor Statistics' estimate of the rise in living costs. Currently, the United Steelworkers, under Pres. Murray's leadership, are battling to crack the formula and raise wages to something more nearly in line with the actual 43.5% increase in living costs.

AGAINST EFFECTIVE CONTROL

The lineup against price control, led by reactionary Republicans and their polltax pals from what is officially the other side of the House and Senate, has a program that would completely emasculate the act and make enforcement impossible.

Vocally, of course, they're all out for price control and against inflation. Nobody, except some of the more reckless food monopoly lobbyists, has the nerve to come out and say he's against price control and for the good old "law of supply and demand."

Actually, the program of the sky-high profit boys would take the lid completely off control and enforcement and let inflation run wild, at the expense of all workers and consumers and at the cost of terrific setbacks to war production and the whole war economy. Boiled down, their plans include:

1. Putting every OPA policy, order and regulation into individual court tangles all over the country. This would make setting general policy to apply on a national scale impossible. Every individual who felt himself aggrieved by an OPA policy or order could drag it through the courts ad infinitum.

2. Setting up a Board of Review over the OPA Administrator—with the obvious purpose of harassing his every move.

3. Re-defining "parity" along the lines of the Pace bill that was defeated in 1942, which would raise food prices by figuring farm labor costs in parity. This would benefit only the large scale corporation farms, where labor cost is a factor, not the smaller farms where most labor is done by the farmer and his family.

4. Increasing milk and fuel oil prices by amendment to the act, as in the Disney and Eastland-McClellan bills that have been kicking around Congress for sessions.

5. Transferring food pricing to the War Food Administrator, thus robbing OPA of one of its main functions and making it even more difficult for labor, consumers and other public groups to be heard on the cost of food.

6. This is the baldest one of them all—a plan to delete the phrase "to eliminate profiteering" from the statement of purposes now in the Act.

7. In addition to all the above, a number of statements have been made threatening to ban all use of subsidies to hold food costs down when the Act is renewed. Taft and Wolcott are both leading in this. The subsidy ban was defeated when FDR's veto of the Bankhead bill was upheld, but the boys are far from discouraged.

FIGHT JUST BEGINNING

The fight around renewal of price control is just beginning. On the price control side are President Roosevelt, labor, some Congressmen, led by the "Fighting 60" in the Congressional Committee to Protect the Consumer, consumers, CIO auxiliaries, church groups and the like.

On the other side are the reactionary Republicans and their polltax allies, pushed on by the food monopoly lobbies and the profiteers, plus, of course, most of the daily press.

The difference between eating decently, between payable rents and clothing prices, and hunger and inflation is at stake. CIO members and their wives must take the lead in organizing now—not next June—to see that the Act goes through on time, without crippling riders, with needed improvements.

5 & 10 Shows CIO Majority

New York, March 18—A large majority of the 400 warehouse workers of F. W. Woolworth Co. have expressed their desire to belong to Local 65, Wholesale & Warehouse Workers, union officials stated this week in announcing a petition to the Labor Board for certification as sole bargaining representative.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

The miscalled soldiers' vote bill has been finally passed by both House and Senate, and has gone to the President for signature or veto.

As it stands now, the bill is not a "compromise" but a complete surrender on principle, as Pres. Murray said last week. The service vote is so hedged around with restrictions that it is very likely even fewer soldiers and sailors will be able to vote than the 28,000 that were able to vote last election.

* * *

The struggle over price control is heading up very rapidly, with the opening of hearings before the Senate Banking Committee this week. The Price Control Act expires June 30. Reactionary Republicans and the polltaxers want to saddle both the Act and the OPA appropriation with restrictions that will end subsidies to hold food prices, and to surround both enforcement and the Act itself with legal halters that will make effective price control impossible.

It's not too early to start campaigning on this issue now. Acquaint yourselves with all the facts on Price Control.

Enlist your neighbors, the CIO Auxiliaries and all housewives in the drive to renew the Act without crippling amendments, to secure full funds for OPA without restrictive riders.

* * *

According to Senate commitments, the polltax repeal bill (HR 7) will come up for debate April 1. The polltaxers plan to begin the filibuster right away, talk the bill to death as they did once before. A cloture vote is needed to end the filibuster. Cloture takes a two-thirds majority, 64 Senators.

Cloture is the key to victory on HR 7. No matter how many times you've written your two Senators on this, do it again.

* * *

The Fair Employment Practice Committee is asking this week for $500,000 to carry on the fight against job discrimination on grounds of race or national origin. Pres. Murray has asked oCngress to give the full sum. At the same time, Sen. Russell (polltaxer, Ga.) has a trick amendment aimed at ending FEPC by putting all U. S. war agencies set up by FDR under Congress' surveillance. Wire your Senators to oppose.

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Soldiers vote.	As passed, makes it impossible for servicemen to vote through "states' rights" red-tape.	To White House for signature or veto.	If vetoed, rush wires to Representative and Senators to sustain, repass original Green-Lucas Federal ballot plan measure.
Price Control Act.	Renewal of Price Control Act of 1942, due June 30.	Hearings began in Senate Banking Committee	Organize drive to renew without crippling riders.
Polltax Repeal (HR 7).	Brings 10,000,000 Americans into democracy.	Action in Senate promised April 1.	Wire Senators urging cloture to end filibuster.
FEPC appropriation and Russell rider.	$500,000 for FEPC to combat job discrimination; Russell rider in Senate would cripple FEPC.	Appropriations sub-committee in House, March 21.	Rush wires urging full funds, no crippling riders.
FEPC continuation bills. (Four)	Make FEPC permanent; offered by Reps. Scanlon (HR 3896); Dawson (HR 4004); La Follette (HR 4405); Marcantonio (HR 1732). The first three are identical.	Scanlon, Dawson, LaFollette bills to House Labor Committee; Marcantonio bill to Judiciary Committee, with Discharge Petition out.	Urge your Representative to ask early hearings on all four measures. The first three are identical, have triple sponsorship to add weight.

(ATTENTION: Keep watching for appropriations on vital U. S. war agencies, which are coming up soon. Watch for full funds to keep them operating and to block crippling riders aimed at obstruction.)

Price Control At Stake

If you require something more substantial than air to live on, you should be vitally interested in what happens to the Price Control Act, when it comes up for renewal in the near future.

What you will pay for your food, clothing and shelter depends on Congress. And wrapped up in the same question is the progress of the war itself, which can be seriously threatened if Congress yields again to the inflationary price-profiteers.

In its last session, Congress weakened and endangered price control by banning quality grade labeling; by barring disinterested persons from OPA administration and insisting that administrators be chosen from the business interests directly concerned; by providing insufficient funds for OPA enforcement, and by other actions.

A dozen new moves are now on foot to cripple price control still further, including Sen. Taft's threat to add an amendment to the act banning food subsidies.

The Congressional Committee for the Protection of the Consumer (the "Fighting 60") is opposing these new moves; is seeking to repair the damage done in the last session; and is pushing a number of proposals for strengthening price control. Let's back them up!

Soldiers' Vote

The Hill labored for three months and brought forth a Rube Goldberg mousetrap.

The alleged soldiers' vote bill finally passed by Congress contains more screwy and complicated devices to prevent servicemen from voting than the ordinary mortal brain can even imagine.

A gallant minority of Congressmen, with the energetic support of the CIO, fought right down the line for a simple uniform federal ballot that would enable most servicemen to vote.

But it was overwhelmed by a combination of polltax Democrats, who don't like the idea of letting too many people vote, and tory Republicans, who feared the service vote would go against them.

Whether President Roosevelt vetoes the bill or not, and regardless of the final outcome, the CIO will keep up the fight with every means at its disposal to give as many servicemen as possible the chance to vote.

We shall also remember how our Congressmen voted on this basic issue of democracy, and be spurred to new efforts to bring out the biggest possible home front vote in the coming elections.

Time to End Polltax

On April 1, the polltax repeal bill, H.R. 7, already passed by the House, is due to come up for Senate action.

This is the chance of a lifetime to bring the right to vote to 10 million disfranchised Americans; to give the people in the polltax states a chance to elect progressive Congressmen; and to make our democracy really function for winning this war.

Everyone of us can help by letting our Senators know how strongly we feel about the polltax.

Urge them (1) to vote for cloture to kill the polltaxers' expected filibuster; (2) to accept no amendments—another device to stop effective action; and (3) to vote for the polltax repeal bill itself.

Back Up The FEPC

President Philip Murray has thrown the full weight of the CIO behind the President's Fair Employment Practice Committee, now threatened with extinction by bigoted preachers of racial prejudice who echo Hitler's ideas.

Urging Congress to grant in full the small appropriation asked by the FEPC, without crippling amendments of any kind, Murray declares that the Committee's continuance is "a vital necessity to full war production, to the morale of millions of American citizens and to national unity."

The purpose of the FEPC is to stop job discriminations against Negro citizens and members of other minorities, so that all Americans may have the right to do their share in producing for victory.

Urge your Congressman to be on his toes to prevent any interference with this vitally important patriotic activity.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

WRITING from his palatial "doghouse," the U. S. Chamber of Commerce building in Washington, Pres. Eric A. Johnston warns labor that it, too, may land in the same doghouse business has occupied these many years.

Labor got into the "master-bedroom" after 1933, according to him, while business was socked and socked and socked and driven into the doghouse.

But "it's just three jumps from the master-bedroom to the doghouse," says Johnston, and right now labor has a priority for those three jumps.

Looking out from their shacks and shantytowns towards the luxurious abodes of the lords of business and industry, the hosts of labor will doubtless learn with surprise that it is they who have been occupying society's "master-bedroom."

With wages frozen by the Little Steel formula, while living costs have risen 43½%, the men and women of labor may even envy Poor Fido Business the bones so regularly delivered to his doghouse door.

These include record-breaking profits—yes, since 1933 and even more so since the war—and government guarantees of normal rate of profits for two years after the war.

While labor gets socked with Smith-Connally Acts, with food-subsidy bans, with soak-the-poor taxation, a reactionary majority in Congress jumps to every bark that comes from the "doghouse" occupied by the Chamber of Commerce and the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers. And a servile press even anticipates these barks.

If you can offer labor the same kind of service business has so long enjoyed in its snazzy, air-conditioned doghouse, all we can say, Mr. Johnston, is—oh boy, just lead us to it!

It seems that some people have been trying to "smear" Congressman Dies, or so he claimed—and on the strength of this claim, he was granted one full hour in the House to try to wipe off the smear.

Dies complained bitterly he was the victim of what he called the "smear-by-association" — namely that his associations with fascist elements were used to make it appear that he was a fascist.

Oh deary me, can it really be that anyone should be so unprincipled as to use against Dies himself the tactics on which his committee has a virtual monopoly!

Anyhow, Dies in his speech very successfully re-established his copyright claims to the "smear-by-association." He applied it to smear the whole CIO, the Roosevelt administration, and by implication every progressive and win-the-war candidate and policy which the CIO supports.

If, in all fairness, the House should also grant one hour to every American smeared by Dies, as it did to the smear-master himself, it would have to remain in continuous session for years to come.

In its unsuccessful attempt to dispose of the facts presented in the CIO-AFL report on increased living costs, the Bureau of Labor Statistics left its ivory tower of pretended impartiality to get quite nasty in 'spots. But it never got its feet down on the solid ground of known facts.

The anti-labor press unanimously gave its approval to the BLS answer, however, without bothering to look into its fallacies.

One of the more common editorial "arguments" was that if an agency "set up to look out for labor's interests" insisted living costs have gone up only 23.4% since Jan. 1, 1941, then why should we worry about labor's evidence that they have gone up 43.5%.

In case you had forgotten, the BLS is part of the Dept. of Labor, which once was theoretically supposed to service labor, like the Agriculture Dept. services farmers and the Commerce Dept. looks out for business interests.

But the BLS has now gone over completely to the anti-labor camp. It is carrying on a virulent campaign of faked statistics and specious propaganda against labor's wage claims.

For these services to the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers, the BLS has won the plaudits of all wage-cutting employers and their press. But it has lost the confidence of all housewives, who know from their own budgets that living costs have increased twice as much as the BLS claims.

Labor and Our Schools

In a message to American school teachers, CIO Pres. Philip Murray urges them to "keep alive within the heart of every school child the ideals of democracy," to serve the interests of all the people, and "to shun the selfish interests of the vested few."

His message accompanies a new CIO pamphlet, "Labor and Education," which demonstrates labor's vital interest in education, not only for its own children but for the democratic progress of our whole society.

The pamphlet shows that all is not well with our educational system. It is being starved for funds in many cases. Racial and other discriminations are rife. The Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers and other selfish interests are deluging teachers with their propaganda. And the schools are not rendering anything like the service they could, due to reactionary opposition.

The CIO urges more labor representation on Boards of Education; closer labor attention to textbooks; equal educational opportunities for rural and Negro children; an end to present curtailments of education; higher pay for teachers; and more child care centers for children of working mothers.

Congress Vote on GI Ballot

This is the House and Senate vote on the phoney soldiers' vote bill. The bill now goes to President Roosevelt, who can sign it, veto it or let it become law without his signature by March 25.

If he vetoes it, rush wires to your Representative and Senators to sustain his veto and to re-pass the original Green-Lucas Federal ballot plan.

The bill as passed does about everything it can to make it difficult for the servicemen and women to vote. It is so hedged around with "states' rights" restrictions that probably fewer servicemen will vote than the 28,000 that were able to vote in 1942.

The actual vote was on a conference report of a committee chosen from House and Senate to work out a "compromise" bill. A vote for the conference report is a wrong vote, indicated by "W." A vote against the conference report is a right vote, indicated by "R." "NV" means not voting. Asterisks indicate polltax states.

Keep this voting record for future reference—especially around early November, 1944.

Ohio CIO Publishes Political Action Guide

COLUMBUS, O., Mar. 18—The anti-labor program of reactionary forces in America is based on the same fallacy as Hitler's—"that the workers and the people haven't the intelligence to fight back," says a Political Action Guide just issued by the Ohio CIO Council.

Aimed at showing labor how to fight effectively on the political front against forces out to destroy democratic rights in America, the 27-page mimeographed pamphlet tells how to set up political action committees in Councils and locals, and explains how the committees should function.

Specific instructions are given on how to set up a central card file of all CIO members in the community containing information of whether or not they are registered to vote, and suggestions are made for the efficient use of the file by breaking down by wards, precincts and blocks, and by townships, villages and cities.

In a section dealing with popularizing the CIO's political action program, the pamphlet stresses the necessity of making plain not only what the CIO advocates but also what it is does not stand for, such as starting a third party, taking over the organization of a political party, or endorsing any one party.

Will Prove 'Extortion' Of Profits By Steel Firms, Murray Says

WASHINGTON, March 18—The United Steelworkers will prove that the economic stabilization law of 1942 has been mis-applied through the "Little Steel" formula, and that steel companies have extracted "hidden profits" from "the public pocket at the expense of our citizens and the nation's soldiers," USA-CIO Pres. Philip Murray this week declared at a War Labor Board panel hearing in the steel case.

The USA-CIO is challenging "the workability of the so-called Little Steel formula," Murray said in refuting the company argument that the WLB cannot consider the union's demand for a 17 cents an hour wage increase.

"I can understand why the corporations are attempting to run away from the case," he said. "It is but natural when testimony is to be produced that will prove extortion if not actual theft from the public pocket.

"We propose in the course of testimony to lay before you certain facts which will prove the methods by which the intent and purpose of the October 2 law have been misapplied.

Living Cost Rise

"The organization I am privileged to represent intends to ask the WLB for restoration of the relations supposed to exist between prices and wages as of Sept. 15, 1942."

Murray's reference here was to the fact, established by the joint CIO-AFL cost of living study, that prices have gone up not the 23 percent estimated by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, but 43.5 percent, with food alone up 74.2 percent.

The steel companies asked the Labor Dept. to certify the case to the WLB in the first place, Murray added, in answering their complaint that the Board does not have the right to even make recommendations to the President on the Little Steel formula.

"Industry asked the Labor Dept. to certify the dispute before the Board," he said. "Industry should not at this late date attempt to deny this organization the right to present evidence concerning the dispute itself.

"Is it that industry has something to hide? Are they afraid that people will get to know something going on behind closed doors. Is there something secretive in their attempt, which seeks to deny the right to investigate the facts by the only agency set up by the government to do so?"

This attitude, he pointed out, breeds national disunity and creates a situation that does not help the national war effort.

"This is an act of perfect asinity on the part of American industry that often provoked disputes that interfere with the operation of the war," he said. "These misunderstandings create mistrust in the public mind and cause internal conflict in the country."

Political Know-How Described In UE Guide

NEW YORK, March 18—Here's the know-how on labor political action, reduced to its simplest and most concrete terms and published by the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers under the title, "UE Guide to Political Action."

The guide is actually a complete handbook of 162 pages, including very useful lists of key Congressmen; maps; lists of government agencies; Congressional committees; a roster of CIO Political Action Committee regional offices; registration instructions by states, and instructions on how to join political parties.

It has detailed instructions on what to do, how to do it, when it must be done and why. The Guide also stresses the important connection between political action in terms of electing office holders and keeping them on labor's side of the fence after they're elected.

A section is devoted to the extreme importance of lining up women—not only women war workers, but the even more numerous housewives—with the win-the-war political programs of the CIO. In addition, it tells how to get joint action with all other groups in the community — churches, fraternal clubs, business groups, etc.

HOPE LIES WITH PEOPLE

As the Guide says: "There is one hope of compelling our public office-holders to follow a patriotic, people's program rather than a program dictated by small but powerful interests opposed to the war and the whole idea of postwar security for all. That hope lies in the political strength of labor, farmers—the American people."

Published at the same time is a 16-page pamphlet: "The People Can Win in 1944" with the same message in condensed form.

The Guide is 50 cents a copy.

Women Want to Work, UAW Survey Finds

Detroit, Mar. 18—A survey just completed by the CIO United Automobile Workers indicates that 85 per cent of women workers employed in war plants wish to continue working after the war is over, UAW Pres. R. J. Thomas said here this week.

The figures were obtained through a questionnaire submitted to a substantial sampling of the 350,000 women members of the UAW-CIO.

Commenting on the findings of the survey, Thomas said that the answer to the women who wish to continue working after the war should not be the Hitler attitude of "no jobs for women." He urged instead, a program of jobs for all based on maximum utilization of the nation's machinery, labor power and natural resources.

"Our nation cannot afford to return to the kind of economy of 'normalcy' where women, Negroes and other minority groups are denied the right to work," Thomas said.

Denies CIO Seeks 'Capture' of Democratic Party

Kellogg, Idaho, March 18—CIO wants to work with the Democratic Party for the election of win-the-war candidates and is not interested in attempting to "capture" the organization, Regional CIO Political Action Committee Director Roy Atkinson told a meeting called this week by the Central Democratic Committee. The meeting was attended by representatives of CIO, AFL and local political organizations.

Guild Details News Bias

New York, Mar. 18 — A black story of distortion and suppression of news during the majoralty election campaign last November is told in a pamphlet called "White Paper" issued here by the American Newspaper Guild.

Written by the executive board of the Detroit Guild after a careful investigation, the White Paper shows how and why Detroit's three daily papers prevented the public from reading and hearing about labor's reasons for supporting Frank Fitzgerald for mayor against Edward Jeffries, candidate backed by the press, who was later elected.

Stressing that the Guild acted "only as a watchdog protecting the ethical standards of journalism," the pamphlet explains that it is not Guild policy to exert economic power as a union to influence the editorial content of a newspaper.

The Guild pamphlet says that the three Detroit papers, News, Times and Free Press, all refused to take an ad about a radio speech by Guild Pres. Milton Murray in behalf of Fitzgerald, candidate backed by labor and Negro gorups.

It also accuses the Detroit News especially of "deliberate unfairness in the handling of campaign news stories, especially in location of such stories in the paper," and "underhanded and unwholesome dealings" with a member of the Jeffries campaign committee.

Congress Saves $'s Hurts 5 Million Kids

BY ELEANOR FOWLER
Sec.-Treas., CIO Women's Auxiliaries

The defeat of the school lunch program in the House of Representatives last week is a very good symbol of the importance of political action.

Do the women of this country think that a Congress which votes down after one day of hearing and one hour of debate a program which has furnished hot lunches to about five million school children for five years is the kind of Congress that will look after the welfare of our people?

You ought to read that debate! The public debt is so big, say the opponents of the program, we've got to cut down. Our people are rolling in money-so let them feed their own children. That's their job.

No consideration for the millions of working mothers who can't run home from the factory to fix Johnny a hot lunch. No thought of the 30,000,000 families living on fixed incomes who are worse off now than before the war. No feeling that our country has a responsibility for seeing that every child gets a healthy start—and that means, first and foremost, adequate nutrition. A handful of labor's friends pointed those things out but they were crying in a wilderness. The vote was 136-54 against federal help for school lunches.

It makes your blood run cold to think of what would happen to the people if those economy hounds in Congress had their way.

The school lunch program cost a little under $50,000,000 of federal funds this year and provided lunches for about 5 million school children, more than half of them in rural areas.

The sponsor of each of those lunch projects signed a contract with the December of Agriculture —promising to serve free or below cost those children unable to pay the full cost of lunches served and certifying that they could not operate an adequate school lunch program without the financial assistance of the War Food Administration.

What we actually need by any sane standards of national welfare is expansion not curtailment of the school lunch program. We need more city lunch programs. Not long ago a study of more than 7,000 Chicago school children showed nearly ¾ living on diets way below the minimum recommended by scientists for health.

We shudder when we read the hideous story of Nazi starvation of the children of Europe. Let's remember that far too many of our own American children are severely undernourished and demand that our country assume its responsibility for them.

The fight for the school lunch program for the coming year has just begun. There still is a good chance of getting the appropriation if Congress hears how we feel about it. Write your Congressman today.

And while you're writing, take a vow that you'll register and vote in 1944. The only real safeguard for the school lunch program as for all other good social legislation is the election of a Congress really representative of the people next November.

Steps to Victory In Your Backyard!

By SUNNY PRESSMAN
Staff Writer, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

Get a head start on your victory garden by planting your seeds indoors! (You still have time to set out the seeds so the plants will be strong enough and ready to go outdoors when the weather turns warm.)

Most vegetables can be started from seed outdoors—but some, like tomatoes, cabbage, eggplant and green peppers, take such long growing seasons that they have to be started indoors.

If you follow these steps, your indoor garden will bloom for you:

STEPS FOR INDOOR PLANTING

1. First, get yourself some wooden boxes, called flats. You can buy them or make them 12 to 15 inches square and 3 or 4 inches deep. Make enough small holes in the bottom for drainage. Cover these holes with pieces of a broken flower pot or pieces of glass so the soil won't wash out.

2. Get some good rich soil. Buy some—you won't need very much. Sift it through an ordinary sieve to get rid of the stones and other coarse materials. If the soil is dry, sprinkle water over it before putting into the flats. Fill the flats and press the soil down with a board to make it perfectly flat and smooth.

3. Draw a thin stick or the back of a pencil across the flat, making furrows about ½-inch deep about two inches apart. Plant the seeds 1 or 2 inches apart in the furrows. All seeds should be planted twice as deep as the width of the seed. Very small seeds can be planted less than ½-inch deep.

4. Cover the seeds with the sifted soil and press soil down firmly but gently. Whether you plant seeds indoors or outdoors, the soil must be pressed down firmly enough so that the seed is in good contact with the soil on all sides. This is important for the seeds to get the moisture they need is start growing.

5. After the seeds are planted, water the seeds with a fine spray, so the soil covering the seeds won't wash away.

(To be concluded)

POOR KIDS' CHAMPION: Congress, which has its own subsidized restaurant, turned down a $50,000,000 appropriation to provide lunches for undernourished school children in rural areas. In a scathing speech in the house, Rep. Adolph Sabath (D., Ill.) scored Republican opposition to the lunch program. (Federated Pictures.)

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

A real achievement! The CIO Transport Workers Union came through with a smashing victory over a three-way opposition among the employes of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Co.—opposition being the PRT Independent Union and the AFL, who came in to salvage what they could, and the company. The vote was 4410 for CIO, 1815 for PRT Independent Union, 1637 for AFL.

This climaxes a campaign over a period of many months in which every known trick was resorted to by the opposition. The AFL came in as a nuisance value for the main objective of stopping the CIO from getting these workers a bona-fide labor union.

TWU-CIO Rep. Fitzsimon was in charge of the campaign. He and local officers, representatives and staff have done a splendid job. Pres. Murray, Sec.-Treas. Carey, Pres. Michael Quill of the TWU-CIO, and the writer addressed mass meetings of these workers. With all the vicious propaganda, the men and women on this system refused to be bamboozled and are determined to establish industrial democracy in this important enterprise. Hence, the vote for the CIO.

Reg. Dir. George Craig and staff rendered every cooperation, as did other representatives of CIO unions in the area.

No Truck With World Labor, Say AFL Leaders

WASHINGTON, Mar. 18—Showing a grim determination to stay isolated from world labor, the AFL Executive Council, speaking through Pres. Wm. Green, this week turned down President Roosevelt's request that it consent to CIO's presence at the Intl. Labor Organization meeting in Philadelphia, April 20.

Green's letter said that the AFL wouldn't go to the meeting if CIO was invited, and added with a firmness worthy of a better cause: "We cannot, under any circumstances, change our attitude in this respect."

AFL 'MONOPOLY'

Under the ILO set-up, labor delegates are appointed by the governments that belong to ILO and are chosen from the "dominant labor organization" of the country represented. AFL leaders have consistently monopolized ILO delegations with one exception, when the CIO had a delegate with half a vote at the Havana meeting in 1939.

This latest refusal by AFL officials to work with United Nations labor, unless organizations they don't approve of are kept out, follows their refusal to attend the World Labor Conference called for June 5 in London.

The AFL officialdom's refusal there was based on the same reason: participation of the CIO—with the added fact that they dislike the trade unions of the Soviet Union.

Conventions

Washington, Mar. 18 — The convention of the CIO's American Communications Association will open in Kansas City, Mo., March 27, the ACA announced this week.

The next CIO body scheduled to hold its annual convention, according to information received at CIO headquarters here, is the Texas State Council, which will meet in Dallas, Tex., April 14.

In May two international unions and three more State Councils have scheduled annual meetings. They are:

Montana Council, Missoula, May 1.

Utah Council, Salt Lake City, May 2.

Virginia Council, Danville, May 4.

United Steelworkers of America, Cleveland, May 9.

Amalgamated Clothing Workers, Chicago, May 15.

British Steel Union Hits AFL on London

LONDON, March 18 (ALN)—By refusing to attend the world labor conference in London next June, called by the British Trades Union Congress, the AFL is "doing the allied cause a disservice," Man and Metal, official organ of the Iron and Steel Trades Confederation, states in an editorial this week.

The I&STC, whose general secretary, John Brown, will shortly be visiting the U. S. as a delegate to the ILO conference in Philadelphia, is one of Britain's oldest and most conservative unions.

Declaring that the AFL's refusal "was not entirely unexpected," the journal says: "When the CIO accepted the invitation, it was inevitable that this in itself would influence the AFL decision. The hope, however, remained that in view of the important character of the conference the differences between both organizations would for the occasion be put in the background.

"To what extent the AFL was ready to do this is not certain, because from the official statement issued to the press the fundamental objection appears to arise from the fact that the Russian unions were to be represented at the conference. The AFL take their stand on the ground that the Russian unions are not free and independent organizations, but simply agents for their government.

"We in this country fully recognize that they are not independent organizations in the sense that the unions are in Britain or America, but whether the bald definition that they are merely agencies of the Soviet government is adequate to cover the precise relationship that exists between them and the state is a debatable point, and at best perhaps an over-simplification.

"If this means that only trade unions functioning within a capitalist society can be reckoned as bona-fide organizations, then such a theory can find little acceptance among British trade unionists, for it make no allowance for the different place trade unions must occupy in a socialist society compared with their position in a capitalist state.

"This for the moment may be a matter of academic interest," the journal continues. "Surely there is a bigger issue at stake, and this is the issue of the future and the chance we are to have of making anything out of the postwar world. It is recognized that there is scant hope for our future security and peace unless Russia, America and ourselves discard some of our preconceived ideas and make an effort to understand each other.

"We may not like some of the Russian methods, and they on the other hand can say the same of us. But it is the hope of all forward-minded people that under the impact of our common sacrifices in the struggle against the filth of fascism, the barriers of misunderstanding are and will be finally broken down."

Mexicans Charge AFL 'Meddling'

MEXICO CITY, March 18 (ALN)—El Popular, daily newspaper of the Confederation of Mexican Workers, charged editorially this week that the policy of the American Federation of Labor in "attempting to meddle" with Latin American labor organizations "is directly opposed to that of the U. S. government and responsible Americans."

The editorial followed the charge last week by Vicente Lombardo Toledano, president of the Confederation of Latin American Workers (CTAL), that AFL Vice-President Matthew Woll was trying to "lure CTAL affiliates to the AFL," and the revelation by Bernardo Ibanez, secretary of the Confederation of Chilean Workers, that the AFL had invited his organization to leave the CTAL and form a new Pan-American labor organization.

"There are many members of the AFL who do not approve of the policy of those who happen to be their leaders," El Popular continues. "There exists also the CIO, a powerful North American labor force, led by honest and brilliant fighters who have maintained excellent relations with the CTAL. And there are other forces which are not disposed to let the unity and friendship of the peoples of the Americas be destroyed.

The U. S. government, El Popular declared, "has attempted to build a friendly, cooperative system of Pan-American relations, based on mutual respect and the Good Neighbor policy. President Roosevelt, Vice-President Wallace, Wendell Willkie and other North Americans of varied political tendencies have untiringly proclaimed their desire that Latin America's rights and independence be respected. How then, can we explain the fact that the AFL works against this spirit of cordial understanding?

"It should be obvious that the intrigues of these leaders are reviving the old suspicions which Latin America had of Yankee intentions. It should be obvious that these labor bosses are simply harming the relationship between Pan-American labor and democratic forces. We make the observation because it is necessary that the great majority of the North American labor movement, as well as all democratic forces in the U. S. government, become aware of the harm to Pan-American unity which this stupid meddling is causing.

"The AFL leaders' attempts to revive the Confederacion Obrera Panamericana would, if successful, be a victory for those North American magnates who want to place Latin America under the yoke of their financial interests."

At the same time, the conservative newspaper Ultimas Noticius, which was on the Nazi legation's payroll before Mexico broke with the Axis, praised the AFL in a front page editorial for its campaign against Toledano.

Hits Franco Falange As Axis Agent Here

MONTEVIDEO, March 18 (ALN)—Terming Franco Spain the guiding force behind Axis espionage and anti-democratic coups d'etat in Latin America, the emergency session of the executive council of the Confederation of Latin American Workers (CTAL), which concluded its sessions here this week, urged the severance of diplomatic relations with Spain by all Pan-American governments.

Martin C. Kyne representing Pres. Philip Murray, was the CIO's delegate to the meeting.

The Argentine government of Gen. Edelmiro Farrell could not exist without the Falange Espanol, "the agent of Nazi intrigue in the Americas," a unanimously-passed resolution declared. Support was pledged to the Supreme Junta of National Unity of Spain, formed in January in Madrid to fight Franco.

The council condemned AFL attempts to "split the CTAL" and voted full confidence in CTAL president Vincente Lombardo Toledano. Recommending the formation of national unity committees in every Latin American nation, the council declared that this was essential to "combat domestic fascism and the spread of fascism from other parts of the continent."

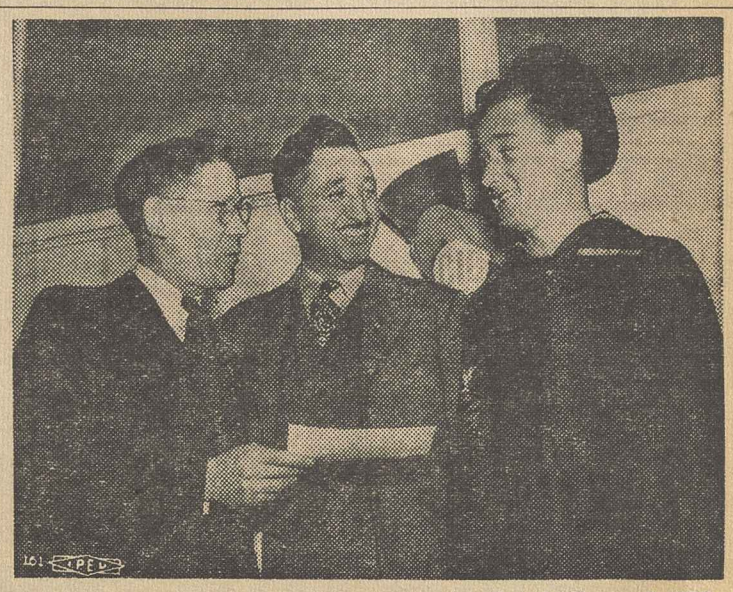
All affiliates were urged to organize aid for the labor movements in Argentina, Paraguay and Bolivia in their fight to restore democracy, and the freedom of all political and labor prisoners was demanded.

PUSH WORLD UNITY

The council unanimously voted to participate in the June conference of world labor called by the British Trades Union Congress, and in the April meeting of the International Labor Office in Philadelphia.

"Such conferences," the council declared, "will aid victory." The CTAL sharply condemned racial discrimination, especially "against Mexicans working in the U. S." and voted to establish liaison committees with refugee labor organizations.

The council heard the report of its special investigator to Bolivia, Guadencio Peraza, who declared that "the Pan-American decision not to recognize the Bolivian junta makes its position difficult and unstable." Toledano announced that a new delegation will be sent to Bolivia to urge the democratization of the country and seek guarantees for organizational and press freedom.



PLENTY PERSONAL is the feeling of CIO members toward the Red Cross, for most of them have relatives serving with the armed forces. This week, in Los Angeles, CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers' members doubled their annual contribution. Above, Morris Zusman, chairman, State CIO War Relief Committee, pledges full support, with State CIO Pres. James Thimmes and his son, Philip, smiling approval.

Reader's Digest—Factual or Phoney?

(Concluding Article of a Series)

By Louis Ogull

Walter Winchell has several times rapped Paul Palmer, Reader's Digest senior editor. On Feb. 20, 1944, Winchell broadcast that the proofs of "Dynamics of War and Revolution," written by Lawrence Dennis, now under Federal indictment on on sedition charges, had been submitted to the German ambassador by Palmer.

It is this same Palmer who was editor of the American Mercury when the American Civil Liberties Union in June, 1937, sued it for libel. The ACLU annual report described the magazine as a "spokesman for the fascist viewpoint." In December, 1937, the New Republic showed how Palmer performed his duties as editor:

Phoney Plan

"A few months ago the editors of the American Mercury approached Henry F. Pringle . . . asked him to write an article about the New Republic and the Nation . . . He was promptly paid . . . (Later) he was told firmly that the American Mercury would not print his article. It explained that what that magazine wanted was an article indicating that the liberal journals were tools of Moscow and constituted a danger to the U. S.

"Mr. Pringle replied that he did not propose to stultify himself by writings things that he regarded as unfair and untrue. Thereupon the matter was dropped until Mr. (Harold Lord) Varney was persuaded to write the article."

De Witt Wallace appointed Palmer as "senior editor" of the Digest in November, 1942. That same month George Seldes reported in In Fact that Wallace told his staff:

"We do not want Germany completely defeated. I think Germany should be beaten up a bit, and I prefer that the American army does it, so that Hitler will learn who is boss in this world.

"But I do not want Germany smashed. What will become of the continent of Europe if Hitler is killed and Fascism completely eradicated? The Russians will conquer all of Europe . . . We also need a little Fascism in the United States to keep this country in order."

On July 8, 1943 the U. S. indicted Frederick Heizer Wright, an editor of the N. Y. Daily News, as a paid Japanese agent. This did not deter Wallace from "digesting" an article by Wright in the August issue of the Digest.

That August, 1943 issue also contained an original Digest article by Louis Bromfield entitled "We Aren't Going to Have Enough to Eat." It contained this statement, which was okay with Wallace:

"The situation will grow worse this fall, and reach its most desperate stage this winter, especially from February on. 'February,' Herbert Hoover points out from his experience, 'is always the black month—the month to be feared the most.' If it were possible, I would rather not think about next February. By then most of our people will be living on a diet well below the nutrition level."

The Digest put this heading over the Bromfield article: "What muddling in Washington has done to our food supply." It has not yet published any article showing that most of our people are not living on a diet below the nutritiion level. Odds are that no such article will ever appear.

Backed Jan Valtin

Wallace was a leading sponsor of Jan Valtin and helped foist the gigantic literary hoax, "Out of the Night," upon an unsuspecting public.

Valtin, whose real name is Richard Krebs, was arrested by the U. S. as a dangerous enemy alien in 1942. The Government indictment charged that "within the past five years the subject (Krebs) has been considered an agent of Nazi Germany.

It added that "independent inquiry reveals that Krebs was a material witness for the German Government and that his testimony was instrumental in securing a treason conviction in 1934 against a fellow member of the ISH (International Seamen and Harbor Workers) at a time when the alien (Krebs) alleges he was a Nazi antagonist."

News of Krebs' arrest led Gov. Culbert Olson of Calif. to make public the names of those who urged him to pardon Krebs for a 1926 crime committed in Los Angeles, where he slugged a Jewish merchant because "the Jew made me mad." Wallace's name was among them.

A recent article by Stanley High, entitled "It is Not a New Deal War," published in the November, 1942, Digest, was brought to the attention of FBI with a request to probe the Digest and decide whether it is aiding or hampering the winning of the war.

The High article, another Digest original, categorically said:

"This is not a Democratic war. It is not a New Deal war. The Administration should not act as though it were a Roosevelt war." Seven paragraphs later it sneeringly describes as "generalizations" the Atlantic Charter, the Four Freedoms, and Henry Wallace's "Century of the Common Man."

In conclusion the author asserts: "If we are only ankle-deep in the war, as Elmer Davis recently said, it is because in Washington we have only ankle-deep leadership."

The trade union movement, especially the CIO, has come in for harsh treatment by the Digest. It's easy to see why. One or more blasts can be found in virtually every issue, with William Hard, the Digest's own specialist in labor-baiting writing most of them. Once a liberal, Hard became a press agent for the Natl. Association of Manufacturers.

Doubtless because of wide-spread protests, the Digest threw a sop to labor in the current issue, a discovery by Hard that "Whites and Blacks Can Work Together."

Space does not permit examples of Digest-disseminated anti-Semitism, Negro-baiting, and anti-Soviet tirades. The CIO will gladly furnish them on request.

This is the Digest—the publication which enters millions of homes and offices in many languages each month; which is sent to servicemen on every battlefront; which is used in thousands of schools and colleges in the U. S. and Canada. It is the only magazine, incidentally, accepted by the Civilian Defense Volunteer Office for the boys in service.

Let the people know it for what it really is.

Sees Captive Son in Movie

New York, Mar. 18—Not everyone can go to the neighborhood movies to find out what has happened to a beloved son or sweetheart reported missing in action thousands of miles away on some fighting front.

But that is exactly what happened yesterday to the mother and sweetheart of Salvatore Scalare last reported in the Phillipines and about whom there was nothing but silence since Corregidor.

Mrs. Scalare, who lives at 2064 58th Street, Brooklyn, and Jennie Macari, young and beautiful coat finisher, member of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, walked into a movie to forget their troubles.

"We sat there quietly watching the newsreel, and suddenly we saw Sal," Jennie said. "He was marching among the captured American soldiers with his hands raised high in the air and with cruel-looking Japanese guards watching them.

"His mother shrieked, and when the management of the theatre found out what happened, they let us see the whole reel, which had been captured from the Japanese. They even gave us a copy of the film, Sal's mother has it now. You can see him as plain as could be."

CIO Relief Unit Issues GI Paper

New York, Mar. 18—First issue of "48," a baby tabloid newspaper published for servicemen and women by the Natl. CIO War Relief Committee appeared here this week.

CIO Pres. Philip Murray, in a message of greeting to the new papers said: "It is entirely fitting that the Natl. CIO War Relief Committee, which has raised millions of dollars among our members for the benefit of our fighting men, should by means of this newspaper further strengthen the bond of brotherhood between the American in uniform and the American in overalls."

Suggestion Resurvey

Corning, N. Y.—Suggestion awards at the Corning Glass Works (Ind.) have been doubled as the result of a resurvey of L-M committee methods. New suggestion boxes and locations were set up, novel suggestion blanks designed, and promotional literature rewritten.

Murray Reaffirms No Strike Pledge; Hits Steel Firms

GARY, Ind., March 18—A bedrock stand for continuation of CIO's strong no-strike pledge was reiterated this week by Philip Murray, president of CIO and of the CIO United Steelworkers of America, in speeches marking the dedication of the USA's new $100,000 headquarters in this city.

Addressing a capacity crowd that included high representatives of labor, industry and politics, Murray told members of the union:

"If I thought that any of you were going to participate in wildcat strikes or slowdowns, I couldn't be your leader any longer. I'm not going to lead anyone who would obstruct the war effort and thereby cost even a single soldier's life."

Discussing the USA's wage case before the Natl. War Labor Board, Murray said:

HITS COMPANIES

"We are not threatening a strike. But we have a progressive program. We hope to bring into being some very substantial changes of an improving nature affecting all our collective bargaining contracts."

The CIO president assailed the steel companies' "singular tactics" which he declared are aimed at "blackening the name of the union" on the eve of bargaining demands.

Murray said the steel firms have engaged the services of one of the largest publicity companies in the country to cover the nation with "vicious misleading propaganda calculated to so misguide the people that they will become antipathetic toward our union."

Murray explained that in the field of collective bargaining, you either are "ethical or resort to slugging." He said that Hitler had tried the latter method and failed, and that the steel companies would also if they should seek to try it.

"Organized labor," Murray declared, "has made its contribution in the field of amity and good will. My notion is that that is the only way we can win this war—by the people working together.

"Some look for a return of riots, bloodshed, unemployment, eviction and poverty after the war. The mission we have to perform as members of the CIO—the crusade we have to conduct—is to create a better understanding and help make a better life for all."

"We're trying to give sensible direction—and we're supporting the President of the United States and all other right thinking leaders who are trying to maintain real concepts of justice."

POSTWAR PLANS

Discussing the postwar world, Murray said:

"I have long observed that when the laborer and the farmer receive a decent reward for their work, the rest of the country gets along all right. We can't afford another depression and if we're big enough to whip Hitler and the Mikado, we certainly ought to be big enough, after the war, to whip our economic problems."

Among guests at the opening were UAW-CIO Pres. R. J. Thomas, Governor Henry F. Schricker, Mayor Joseph E. Finerty, Rep. Ray J. Madden and David J. McDonald, secretary-treasurer of the USA. Program chairman was Elie T. Colosimo.

New York, March 18—Ban imposed by the USO on distribution of the popularly-written scientific pamphlet "Races of Mankind" to servicemen through USO centers has been upheld by USO board of directors, the Natl. CIO War Relief Committee stated here this week.

CHILD LABOR competes with the work of adults on a 50-50 basis in Durham, N. C., CIO Pres. Philip Murray, heard this week from Hugh Willett, 17-year-old member of the CIO Textile Workers Union, who came to Washington with 11 other young workers from all parts of the country to tell their problems to the U. Murray Opens Steel Case, Asks 17c Raise CIO Pres. Philip Murray, head of the United Steelworkers, this week opened the union's case for a 17-cents-an-hour wage increase before a Natl. War Labor Board panel, in an effort to bridge the gap between the rising cost of living and the steelworkers' wages.

CIO Does Job, Army Paper Tells GI Joes Abroad

WASHINGTON, Mar. 25—At least some of labor's story is reaching the U. S. Army! And via an Army paper, too. The Feb. 26 issue of the Mediterranean edition of Stars & Stripes is an example. It has two articles directly concerned with the major part of CIO is playing in the war, United Auto Workers Union is doing and the other an interview with CIO Pres. Philip Murray.

The Detroit piece tells of that city's great production record and declares that "the striking and stimulating feature of Detroit is the marked singlemindedness of purpose in the war effort."

The same issue of the paper contained a two-column interview with Pres. Murray, who told the story of labor's wartime hardships and production achievements. Murray, declaring that the strike situation at home has not been as serious as many soldiers seem to think, pointed to production records and asked that labor be judged by its accomplishments.

Murray pointed out that every work stoppage that lasts for even a few hours is splashed over the nation's daily newspapers as though it were the biggest sensation in the world, while labor's production record is often buried among the inside pages if it even sees the light of day.

He quoted Lt. Gen. Brehon Somervell, chief of the Army Service Forces, on what labor has done. The Army chief said:

"The War Dept. is most grateful for the almost unbelievable production record achieved in 1943 and recognizes this record to have been a major contribution to the success of the armed forces of the United Nations."

The Detroit Dispatch said the growth and influence of the UAW-CIO had been responsible for a "deep and subtle change" in the life of the city.

"Detroiters say it seems like yesterday when the CIO was a word to scare small children and old maids," the paper said. "Today the United Automobile Workers, who claim to have more than 400,000 members among more than 750,000 factory workers, are an accepted and constructive force in the city's life."

'YANK' TELLS TRUTH

Troops Hot for U. S. Soldier Voting Bill

WASHINGTON, Mar. 25—Here's proof that GI Joes are plenty hot about the soldiers' right to vote and that they want to cast their ballots minus the complications that would be inevitable under any "states' rights" system—including that which Congress passed last week.

The black and white evidence is printed in the March 17 issue of YANK, the Army Weekly, in the form of 11 letters. The 11—out of 14 published—deal with the soldier vote issue and every one of them is a plug for a federal soldiers' ballot.

Three typical excerpts set the tune:

NEEDS "PUNCHING"

"I think the soldier vote is an issue that needs some of your punching," writes Lt. Harold Norris, from England. "The denial by Congress of the right to vote is an outright contradiction of the Four Freedoms, the Atlantic Charter, our Constitution or any name our war aims go by. . .

"You're pretty sharp, YANK—can't you see that the representatives of the polltax and 'state's rights' are using that prop wash to deny the soldiers the right to vote in the same way they have denied the vote to others?"

"As a soldier in Australia," writes Sgt. George Kauffman, "I wish to protest the delay and sabotage of the soldiers' voting bill now being knifed in the back by the reactionaries in Congress.

"The only issue involved is: 'Shall a soldier vote in the Presidential election?' The answer is: 'Hell, yes!'

"All other issues, such as 'states' rights,' the stinking polltax and talk about 'no politics in the armed forces' is a smoke screen to block millions of votes. Secret ballots can reach every soldier on every front, so why the delay?"

From S/Sgt. Walter J. Schloss in Iran comes this comment:

"I doubt if 10 soldiers in the Persian Gulf Command were able to vote in the last election and certainly no one I know was able to. We received our applications too late to do anything about it.

"Now I understand that Congress has refused to simplify the voting for servicemen overseas and that it is to be left entirely up to the individual states.

"If that is so it appears to me a crying shame, and it appears to me not too late to do somethong about it. I would be curious to see the list of Congressmen who vote against a bill that makes it easier for us to express our political preferences."

Delay Cut In War Bonus, NMU Asks

New York, Mar. 25 — The Natl. Maritime Union this week asked that an order reducing the war bonus paid to merchant seamen be held up until April 1, and urged that all interested parties—particularly seamen's unions—be heard on the question.

In a wire to the Maritime War Emergency Board, NMU Pres. Joseph Curran said that reduction of the bonus represents a serious threat to the morale of seamen, who have "barely been able to maintain their families with the increased earnings which they have received from the so-called bonus payments for facing hazards."

"Seamen will not understand why they of all war workers, employed in the front line as they are, should be singled out for cuts in earnings at this time," Curran declared.

Congress to Recess Doorbells to Ring!

As The CIO NEWS went to press, Congress is reported set to recess from March 30 to April 15.

This means the Congressmen will be home for two weeks. This is an election year. Congressmen are particularly sensitive to what the home folks want in election years.

Plan now to ring your Congressman's doorbell as soon as he gets home. Invite him down to your union hall, have your Political Action Committee call on him—tell him what the voters want.

Here's a brief list to start off with: Polltax repeal (for senators only); renewal of the Price Control Act without riders, with improvements; full appropriations for vital U. S. war agencies, again without crippling riders; a real Federal voting system for soldiers.

That's only a beginning. You and your Congressman have lots to talk over.

Steel Union's Wage Case

Industry's 'Take' At New High As War Ups Profits

WASHINGTON, Mar. 25—The steel industry's woeful expression that it is "unable" to meet the modest wage demands of the United Steelworkers of America is as false as the front of a phoney Hollywood movie set. For hiding behind rejection of the 17-cents-an-hour wage increase request are war profits that have zoomed almost 350 percent, total asets of over six billion dollars, undistributed profits of nearly a billion, and one of the highest "wage" scales paid to American corporation executives.

In short, the steel industry is lousy with profits and doesn't want to give up a penny of them if it can help it. The industry is in the strongest financial position in its history, said the USA this week in its wage brief filed with the Natl. War Labor Board.

"The net profits before taxes of the steel industry during the war have increased 244.5 percent over the peacetime period of 1936-39," the USA pointed out.

244% PROFIT INCREASE

"For the three war years, 1940, 1941 and 1942, profits before taxes averaged $752,198,000 a year, an increase of 244.5 percent."

The 1942 profit showed an amazing increase of 344.8 percent over the 1936-39 average!

And in 1942, the steel industry had total assets of $6,030,996,000, undistributed profits of $994,035,000, and reserves of $257,939,000!

"The steel industry's total assets have increased over one billion dollars during the war (not including the increase in 1943 over 1942)," the USA reported. "Its undistributed profits have mounted by over one-third of a billion dollars during the war; and its reserves have increased during the war by 161 million dollars."

FAT FROM WAR

And while the industry was growing fat from war contracts, the boys on the top were handing themselves "cushy" salaries that make the earnings of the steelworkers look like peanuts.

Take Eugene Grace, head of Bethlehem Steel. He "earned" $271,000 in 1939, and trotted upstairs to a mere $527,000 as compensation for his "services" during 1942—an increase of 94 percent!

The work performed by R. J. Wysor for the Republic Steel Corp. was so "important" that his salary was boosted from a mere $99,000 in 1939 to $196,000 in 1942—an increase of 98 percent!

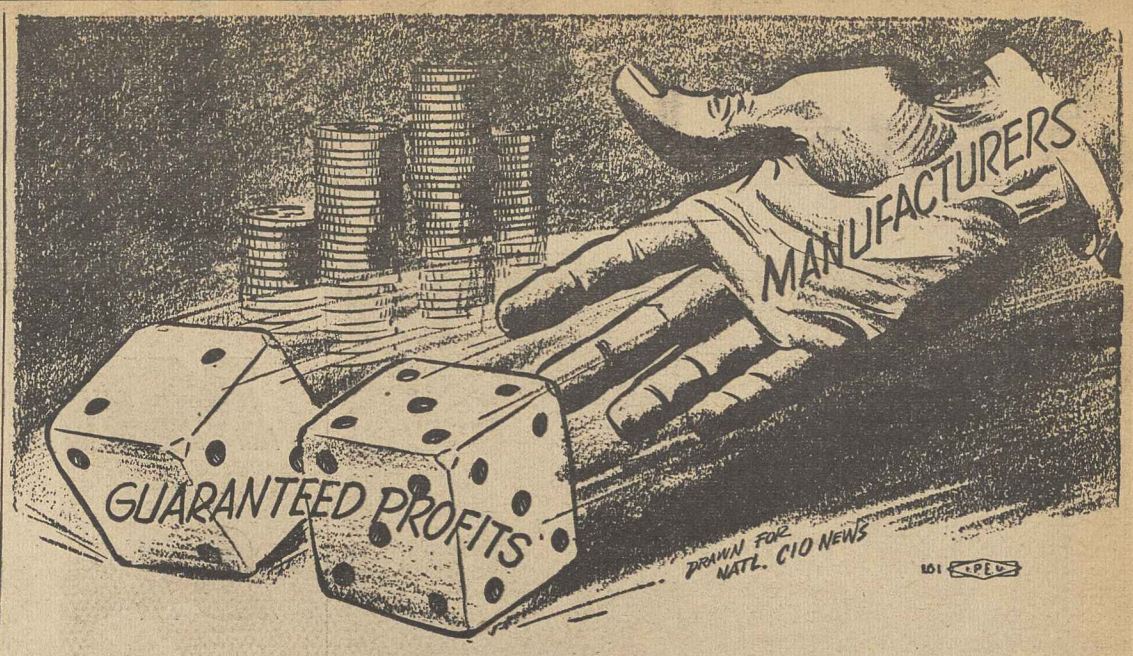
All this adds up to confirmation of the union's position, which is that:

"An industry, like steel, with more than one and one-third billion dollars in resources, earning more than three-quarters of a billion dollars a year in profits before taxes, and with large portions of federal taxes refundable can surely meet the union's requested wage adjustment of less than a quarter of a billion dollars and the other requests of the union which amount to approximately 104 million dollars."

Home Repairs

Washington — Approximately $3,000,000,000 worth of home repairing and modernization will be done in the first 112 months after war limitations on critical materials have been lifted, field offices of the Federal Housing Administration estimate.

Home repair and maintenance should be among the most pressing needs of America in the first postwar year, Commissioner Abner H. Ferguson said, and should be a major factor in easing the country's transition to peace economy.



Steel Firms Guaranteed Gravy in Tax Return Plot

WASHINGTON, Mar. 25—In case you thought recent tax bills were bad enough when they hit small incomes, spared the rich and left excess profits untouched—take another close look through the United Steelworkers War Labor Board brief and you'll that's only part of the story.

The USA-CIO brief, submitted to a WLB panel this week by Pres. Murray, has uncovered one of the most gigantic steals in U. S. tax history, engineered for the benefit of corporations by Congress.

Under hitherto unpublicized provisions of the tax laws, the corporations are guaranteed "normal" profits for two years after the war even if they lose money.

THEY CAN'T LOSE

It sounds paradoxical, but that's the way it is. Even if a steel company goes down to 50 percent or less of its capacity, or below the "break-even" point, it gets its gravy just the same, in the form of tax refunds. In other words, the corporations just can't lose—no matter how much they run in the red.

Here's how it works, according to the USA-CIO findings. Under the tax law, the companies get a 10 percent postwar refund of the excess profits taxes they owe after 1941. The brief says:

"Each corporation has an excess profits credit which is the amount regarded as the normal profits of the corporation, estimated on the basis of pre-war earnings (1936-39) or a stated percentage of statutory invested capital.

"Each steel company is guaranteed that if its profits fall below its excess profits credit, it will get a net refund from the Treasury of 41 cents for every dollar of its unused credit.

"In addition, each steel company if it suffers a net operating loss is guaranteed a net refund of 81 cents for every dollar of loss plus 41 percent of its excess profits credit.

"This procedure can be followed for two years, and the potential refunds can equal every dollar of Federal income and excess profits taxes paid by the steel companies during the last two war years.

"If their losses should exceed the total amount paid as income and excess profits taxes in the last two war years, the excess loss can be carried forward in the form of tax savings for two years."

To repeat, the steel companies (and other corporations) just can't lose—no matter how they cut down their operations or how little steel they make.

GUARANTEES TO WORKERS?

This revelation, the USA-CIO brief says, is a compelling argument for the annual wage demand. The companies are guaranteed their profits, come hell or high-water—why not some sort of guaranteed income to workers who may be laid off after or even before the war ends?

Bringing it down to individual steel firms, this system, neatly described as "carry-back and carry-forward," could net U.S. Steel a $49,200,000 spoonful of taxpayers' gravy, provided it ran at 50 per cent of capacity; $55,451,000 if it went down to 40 percent.

Bethlehem could get $13,335,000 for half time operation, $17,588,000 for 40 percent; Republic, $5,137,000 for 50 percent of capacity, $11,616,000 for 40 percent.

The entire steel industry, operating at the break-even point, could get a total of $122,153,000 out of the taxpayers' pockets—an amount almost equal to its net earnings in the peacetime period of 1936-39.

To put it bluntly, the steel companies (and others) can operate at half capacity, laying off half their workers, and still come out on top. The tax bill, of course, has no such provision for the workers—and that's one of the reasons why USA-CIO is asking for an annual guaranteed wage.

American Workers Make A Deadline

Washington—The story of how American workers producing for the Navy Department came to the rescue of hard-pressed Allied troops in Italy has been disclosed by the Navy Department. It was through the efforts of these workers and men of the Navy that French warships were kept in action bombarding German forces in the area.

The French ships were bombarding German lines in support of Allied ground troops when it was discovered that the ships were running out of ammunition. No shells to fit their guns were available on that side of the Atlantic.

A quick check, however, showed that American six-inch shells, with slight adjustment, could replace the French projectiles.

An emergency radio call was put through to Washington. Navy Department units snapped into action. Labor was called upon to deliver a rush job on the adjustments—and did.

The American workers delivered the goods on time. The critically needed cargo—a number of tons of American Naval shells—was flown from the United States to the battle scene in 34 hours by Naval Air Transport Service.

The French ships' guns continued to spew American shells into German machine gun nests and artillery positions on the Italian coast with no interruption in the bombardment which otherwise would have stopped.

CIO Radio Men Win Marine Victory

Washington, Mar. 25—A substantial job victory that also reduces the hazards of life at sea was won this week by the CIO American Communications Assn.

The ACA was instrumental in securing a ruling from the War Shipping Administration providing that certain ships carrying 250 persons or less among crew and passengers must employ three civilian radio operators for round-the-clock service, instead of depending as in the past on part-time service from an "automatic alarm." Ships carrying more than 250 personnel have had to employ at least three operators regularly.

The new regulation affects ships of 13.5-knot or greater speed, and vessels in trans-Atlantic or trans-Pacific service.

Corp. Gains Jump 400% Food Costs Skyrocket

WASHINGTON, Mar. 25—Corporations that squeezed out of the government fantastic war profits, more than 400 per cent above peacetime averages, are directly responsible for inflated prices, the United Steelworkers of America reported this week in its wage brief to the Natl. War Labor Board.

"The direct relationship between corporate profiteering and the inflationary development in the rising cost of living is best seen in the record of the food corporations," the USA declared. On the basis of official U. S. Government reports, the USA stated:

"Wholesale food grocers realized twice as much on every dollar of sales in 1942 as in 1939. Sales were up 43 percent, but profits before income taxes rose over 200 per cent.

"Between 1939 and 1942, seven out of every 10 wholesalers more than doubled their profits before taxes and four of these seven reported at least a 200 percent rise. For about three out of 10, the increase over 1939 was at least 300 percent and for half of these, profits rose 500 percent or more."

Profiteering by food corporations was described by the USA as representing "the sorriest chapter of the war program" in that the hike in food prices hits hardest those people least able to meet the rising cost of living—those in the lower brackets who must spend the largest proportion of their total income for necessities of life, with food looming largest in budget requirements.

REALLY PIKERS

Food profiteers, however, are really pikers when compared with their corporate brethren in other fields where virtual highway robbery is looked upon as respectable—if legal.

The USA reported that 1943 net corporate profits before taxes were 406 percent above the peacetime average of 1936-39 inclusive. For the peacetime era the annual average net profits before taxes were 4,064 million dollars and in 1943 the figure had jumped to 22,600 million dollars!

"For 1944," the USA stated, "it is estimated that corporations will enjoy net profits, before taxes, of 24,500 million dollars, or 448 percent of the peacetime annual average."

NET PROFITS UP 200%

The USA estimated that for 1944 the net profits after taxes will be nearly 200 percent greater than they were for the 1936-39 period.

Neither so-called price control nor the widely heralded renegotiation of war contracts has materially reduced this golden flow of profits to American industrialists.

From April 28, 1942, until August 31, 1943, the total sum recovered through renegotiation of contracts, according to the War Dept., was only $1,399,900,000. Directives of President Roosevelt to refuse price increases to prevent extortionate profits have not been carried out, the USA reported.

The shameful record of profiteering, written with the blood of American fighting men, was best described by the Temporary Natl. Economic Committee of the U. S. Senate, in its Monograph No. 6, "Economic Power and Political Pressures," which said:

"In the 1940 national defense crisis, business displayed much the same attitude that it had shown 23 years earlier. Business would help the Government and the people, but the basis of payment therefor would have to be fixed before the wheels would begin to turn.

"Profits, taxes, loans and so forth appeared more important to business than getting guns, tanks, airplane motors into production. . . .

Speaking bluntly, the Government and the public are 'over a barrel' when it comes to dealing with business in times of war or other crisis. Business refuses to work, except on terms it dictates. It controls the natural resources, the liquid assets, the strategic position in the country's economic structure and its technical equipment and knowledge of processes.

"The experience of hte World War, now apparently being repeated, indicates that business will use this control only if it is 'paid properly.' In effect, this is blackmail, not too fully disguised."

Murray Opens Steel Case, Asks 17c an Hour Raise

Points to Need Of Bridging Gap In Prices, Pay

WASHINGTON, Mar. 25—To a crowded audience in Washington's National Museum auditorium, Philip Murray, president of CIO and of the United Steelworkers of America, today began a slow and careful exposition of the demands of more than 500,000 steelworkers for a wage that will enable them and their families to close a little of the gap that now stretches between their paychecks and their living costs.

The beginning, with the USA-CIO brief to be read by David J. McDonald and further expounded by Lee Pressman, represented weeks of struggle against both employer stalling and the disruptive tactics of AFL officials.

The steelworkers' demands, Murray said, are based on the need to restore the balance in our war economy that should have come out of a national stabilization policy, but was sabotaged by Congressional refusal to control prices, enact a realistic tax program, or hold profits in line.

CONGRESS AT FAULT

"Congress has rejected the seven-point program," he said. "It has done more—it has broken price control. Profits have been guaranteed to the corporations for two years after the war. Prices at parity rates have been guaranteed to the farmers. The workers have been guaranteed nothing."

Murray laid heavy emphasis on the cost of living, citing the joint CIO-AFL study that shows prices have gone up 43.5%, not the 23.4% claimed by the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Dramatic proof of the higher figure, Murray pointed out, is contained in a study made by another government agency—the Bureau of Agricultural Economics—which showed that living costs of farm families have gone up 42.6 per cent. This figure, he explained, is comparable to the CIO-AFL study, since proper weighting was given to the differences in consumption of goods and services between farmers and workers.

He put equal stress on the profits picture, showing that the steel companies—and for that matter, all corporations—can well afford to pay wage increases out of the inflated profits they have been making since the war period began.

At the same time, he pointed out, the workers have had their straight time wage rates frozen under the Little Steel formula—which was never the intention behind the Economic Stabilization Act of 1942 or any of the programs advanced since then to hold the war economy in line.

As Pres. Murray, Secretary-Treasurer McDonald and General Counsel Pressman began the formal presentation of the Steelworkers' case to the special War Labor Board panel, the entire nation watched to see how the first test of a realistic economic policy would result.

As Pres. Murray has explained, the whole wage future of the CIO and of all labor hinges on the outcome of this case, involving the most basic war industry and a huge section of the nation's war workers.

The USA-CIO hopes to complete presentation of its case to the panel by March 29 or 30. After that, the steel companies have their inning. On completion of all testimony, the panel makes its recommendations to the entire War Labor Board.

The first round of the USA-CIO's case was over when the presentation began, for the union had to fight even to get its case heard. The second stage is now under way.

OPENS FOR STEEL: USA-CIO President Philip Murray opening the presentation of the United Steelworkers case for a 17-cent wage increase before the special panel of the War Labor Board in Washington this week.

Pay Raise Aids US Stabilization

WASHINGTON, Mar. 25—Wage raises for the nation's steelworkers are needed to make the economic stabilization policy a reality, the USA-CIO said here this week in outlining its case for a 17-cent increase to a special panel of the War Labor Board.

"The union supports completely the policy of economic stabilization," the Steelworkers' brief says. "The union submits that its wage request is not only consistent with but must be granted in order to establish effective economic stabilization."

This has not been achieved, the brief adds, surveying the history of various programs and proposals through the past two years, with emphasis on those from President Roosevelt.

Thus, the brief shows, the original seven-point program of President Roosevelt, put out in April, 1942, has been ignored and actually sabotaged by Congress.

PRICES RUN WILD

Profits have been left to run wild, price control has not been enforced, taxes have been laid on the workers and have spared the wealthy and the big corporations, and the cost of living has jumped up 43.5 per cent since 1941—more than 28 per cent above the 15 per cent wage raise fixed by the Little Steel formula.

"The economic events since April, 1942, reveal the most shocking injustices perpetrated on American workers. Wage stabilization, as one point of the program, was immediately put into effect by the National War Labor Board.

"By executive order and the administrative policies of the Board, wage stabilization was studiously transformed into a national wage freeze. The original authority of the Board, which permitted wage adjustments to eliminate inequalities or inequities, or to aid in the prosecution of the war, was whittled into oblivion."

WAR ECONOMY SABOTAGED

Sabotage of the war economy program is the direct cause of the skyrocketing in the cost of living, the brief explains. Profiteering, black markets and inflation are the result.

"This rise has destroyed the peacetime standards of the workers which were the basis of the Little Steel formula. In order to provide the American working population with sufficient funds to purchase the necessities to maintain the basis of health and efficiency required for maximum production, there must be a revision of the Little Steel formula.

"The American worker is not seeking any special privilege or furthering any selfish end. The need for revising the national wage policy runs to the interest of the nation and not to the interest of any single group."

'44 Politics Will Affect Peace, Lamb Warns

Camden, N. J., March 25—Political activity by the people this year will in large part determine the future of this nation after the war is won, Robert K. Lamb, legislative representative of the CIO United Steelworkers of America, warned members of the CIO Marine & Shipbuilding Local 1 in a speech here last week.

"In 1944 we shall decide whether we are going forward or backwards—forward to an expanding economy or backwards to an economy of scarcity," Lamb said. "This country will need to show the same courage and determination about mobilizing for the postwar period that it has shown in mobilizing for war."

Lamb said that the war period has proved without doubt that America has sufficient capacity to produce the goods needed for a comfortable living for all, and declared that the stabilization plans and other methods of control that have made war production a success must be used in peacetime to guarantee a decent standard of living.

Need a Doctor? Here's How To Get One!

Washington, Mar. 25—Scores of war boom and rural communities that are suffering from a lack of adequate medical service can look toward a beacon light of hope shining from the U. S. Public Health Service.

Under recently passed legislation, the Service will assist residents of such communities to obtain needed doctors.

Applications for physicians may be made either by private or public groups, and must be accompanied by $300 to help pay for the cost. The application must be approved by the State Health Dept.

If the U. S. Public Health Service accepts the application, it will attempt to secure a physician (who may be named by the applicants if they can find a qualified man available) and will pay the cost of transportation for the doctor and his family as well as guaranteeing him up to $250 a month in salary for the first three months.

Ban Initiation Fees for GIs

New York, Mar. 25—Returning veterans who obtain employment in the clothing industry within the jurisdiction of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union need not pay any initiation fee to the organization, a policy statement of the Executive Board said this week. The policy is subject to ACW convention approval, which is virtually certain, according to ACW Pres. Sidney Hillman.

ACW members in the services who return to their jobs will do so in good standing, for their dues payments have been waived for the duration, Hillman pointed out.

Women's Jobs In Steel Mills Limited

Washington—Though women are now working in most of the country's steel mills their number is limited and their work is chiefly restricted to lighter and least skilled jobs, the Women's Bureau of the Department of Labor states in a report on "Women in Steel" based on a survey of 41 steel mills.

The Women's Bureau pointed out that the more closely a job is associated with handling of basic raw materials, the less suitable it is for women.

The laboratories and maintenance, service and clerical divisions of the mills offer the best opportunities for women both now and post-war, the Bureau has concluded.

Sabotage Less Than In World War I

Springfield, Ohio — Sabotage, which was quite common in the first World War, has been held to a minimum in this war, Rear Admiral Howard L. Steel Union's Wage Case

Living Costs Jumped 43%; Not 23.4% Govt. Claims

WASHINGTON, Mar. 18 — Data assembled by the CIO-AFL Cost of Living Committee showing that the cost of living has risen at least 43.5 per cent during the last two years, instead of the 23.4 per cent given in the index of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, is cited in the brief submitted by the CIO United Steelworkers of America to a War Labor Board panel to strengthen the union's arguments for a 17-cent hourly wage increase.

Quoting from the report, the USA-CIO brief states that the failure of the index to reflect all the wartime increase in the cost of living is the result of several factors:

1. The government's price control efforts and subsidy programs have been concentrated upon certain important food items in workers' budgets while other foods that are also important parts of their budgets which have risen twice as fast, have not been considered.

2. Disappearance of cheaper consumption items and shift toward higher priced lines is not taken into account sufficiently.

3. Effect of a marked quality deterioration is almost completely neglected by the BLS.

4. The index is based on rereturns from only 34 of the largest cities, (56 in the case of food), while no consideration is given to war congestion and other factors in centers outside the large cities.

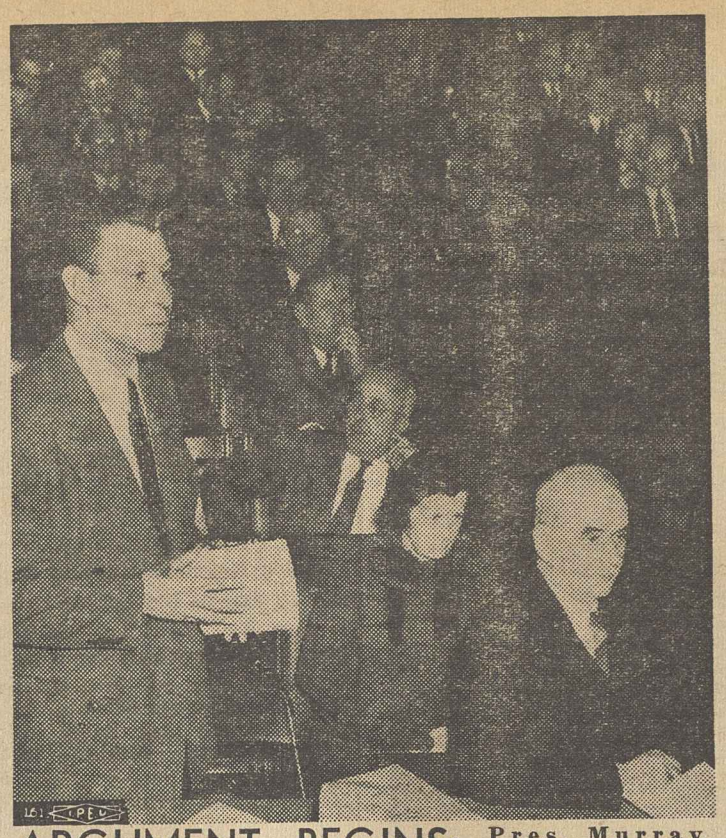
The CIO-AFL report, says the brief, "discloses a sinister effort to hide from the American public the actual facts pertaining to the rise in the cost of living.

"The failure of the Bureau of Labor Statistics to warn the people regarding the deficiencies of its index of important items of cost in the workers budgets, and the concentration by the OPA with rigid price control on the food items contained in the Bureau's index while neglecting equal treatment for the food items which are not covered by the index, can only be described as a most deceitful practice."

Maintaining that this report demonstrates conclusively that the cost of living has risen by at least 43.5 per cent from January 1941 to December 1943, the steel union brief declares:

"Economic stabilization was predicated upon the maintenance of relationship between wage rates and cost of living as of Jan. 1, 1941. The actual cost of living has risen by at least 43.5 per cent since that date.

"Clearly there can be no justification—there can be no possible excuse offered to the wage earners—for failure to raise their wage rates to meet this extraordinary rise in the cost of living."



ARGUMENT BEGINS: Pres. Murray, seated, and Lee Pressman, USA-CIO General Counsel, open the argument on the steel union's case before the War Labor Board in Washington. The union's brief is being heard by a six-man panel of the WLB.

Profiteering; Not Pay Hikes, Forces Living Cost Zoom

WASHINGTON, Mar. 25—Profiteering, and not "high wages," is the cause of the huge rise in living costs and contains the real threat of inflation, the USA-CIO, in presenting its War Labor Board case, pointed out here this week.

"A wage increase that is met out of excessive profits can in no sense be called inflationary," the brief says. "If steel prices do not rise, then the prices of the products fabricated with steel will not rise. Hence, there will not be the impetus for a general inflationary wave of new price rises."

Tearing down the "inflationary gap" theory, used as an argument for wage freezing, the Steelworkers point out:

"In the first place, the initial premise of the theory is false. The war inflation was not precipitated by wage increases. It was set off by the drive of industry and business for superprofits at the time that the defense program got under way in June, 1940. Businessmen demanded that they be 'paid properly' before agreeing to accept government contracts.

"As a result of this blackmail, inflationary price increases took place in 1941, and at the commodity and wholesale level were not checked until about the middle of 1942. The bulk of these increases occurred before workers received wage adjustments under the Little Steel formula.

"A sharp price inflation had already taken place in the U. S. before the workers in 1942 began pressing for wage adjustments to keep their pay envelopes in line with rising living costs even as measured by the inadequate index of the Bureau of Labor Statistics."

PRODUCTION COSTS DOWN

As further proof, the Steelworkers' brief cites the fact that full capacity operation of industry brought production costs per unit away down, even as far back as 1941, and the further fact that wage increases at that time were paid for out of these decreased output costs, which meant bigger profits.

This is supported by evidence from Leon Henderson, then head of OPA, and A. F. Hinrichs, head of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, both of whom testified before Congress committees on this point.

But since the Little Steel formula, and the Economic Stabilization Act of October 2, 1942, wages have been frozen. As the Steelworkers say:

"The result has been that the workers' percentage share of the national income has decreased. . . . Far from having caused the rise in living costs subsequent to the adoption of the Little Steel formula, the workers have suffered from the reduction in the purchasing power of their pay envelopes."

"GAP" A FALLACY

The "inflationary gap" fallacy is finally disproved in the USA-CIO brief by citing from eminent economists of such respectable outfits as the National City Bank, the American Economic Review, and the N. Y. Stock Exchange. This is how the Natl. City Bank blew the "gap" theory out of existence in a statement by one of its vice-chairmen:

"Inflation is not a direct product of excess money; it is a product of human behavior. Money does not become wild by itself. It could be dangerous only when used wildly by the people who have it; and the significant thing that is happening now is that with some conspicuous exceptions, the financial behavior of the great bulk of our people has thus far been characterized by common sense."

And, as the Steelworkers' brief sums up: "The wage demand of the steelworkers will not aggravate the inflationary gap to the exploding point, because the so-called gap is an abstraction that disregards the basic facts of the war economy."

On the contrary, the "orgy of profiteering makes for inflation, since every new price increase means more profit for industry. . . . Consequently, the threat of new inflationary price increases will remain as long as profiteering is not curbed by effective price and tax control."

UE Musical Plugs Unity

Lynn, Mass., Mar. 25—A 100 per cent war workers' production, a two-act musical comedy, "Viva Manana"—written, produced and presented by the activities committee of Local 201, United Electrical Radio Machine Workers, will have its premiere the first week in May here.

Nearly a year's work has gone into the production, which developed into such an entertaining musical dealing with such a vital topic, the cementing of American friendship with Latin America, that negotiations have started with the national CIO for a possible tour of the principal cities of the United States and Canada.

The dialogue, music and lyrics all were written by members of Local 201.

Steel Profits Soar, But Pay Of Workers Sags

WASHINGTON, March 25—Profits in steel are soaring to unlimited heights, but the rate of pay of the workers who make war's basic material No. 1 needed to beat America's deadly enemies, has been nailed down securely.

How this has been brought about under the government's stabilization program and rigid application of the Little Steel formula although other points in the program were not enforced, is explained in the brief submitted this week to the War Labor Board by the CIO United Steelworkers of America.

The position of steel labor, in comparison to other industries, was lowered considerably during the process of stabilizing wage rates, the union charges. Comparing the present position of the nation's steel workers with workers in the durable goods industries as a whole, the union's brief quotes figures to show that average hourly earnings in steel have declined by 6.7 cents from January 1941 to December 1943.

Straight-time average hourly earnings have fallen relatively 7.1 cents and average weekly earnings by $2.11. In relation to all manufacturing industries, average hourly earnings of steel workers have declined 3½ cents and straight-time average hourly earnings, 4.4 cents, while average weekly earnings remained fairly constant.

This meant that "on the basis of straight-time average hourly earnings," states the brief, "the steel industry which was in third place has gone to ninth place."

Drop to 9th Place

On the basis of average hourly earnings the steel workers fell from fourth to ninth place, while on the basis of average weekly earnings, they dropped from 14th to 16th place.

Two general wage increases totaling 15½ cents an hour have been given to steel workers since January 1, 1941:

1. In April 1941, a 10 cents increase was obtained through collective bargaining.

2. In February 1942, a 5½ cents raise was granted in the famous "Little Steel" decision.

Average hourly earnings, as of January 1, 1941, were 86.9 cents and average straight time hourly earnings were 85.2 cents, while average weekly hours worked were 38.7.

In December 1943, average hourly earnings were $1.146, but the average weekly hours were 45.3.

Taking out the overtime payments from the average hourly earnings, the brief states that straight time average hourly earnings in the steel industry, according to figures computed by the Bureau of Labor Statitics, were $1.067.

"In other words," declares the brief, "the general hourly wage increases that have been granted in the industry between January 1, 1941 and December 1943, when added to the average straight time hourly earnings of January 1941, make a total of $1.007 per hour, whereas the straight time average hourly earnings in December 1943 were $1.067.

Analysis of Formula

"This difference of six cents is accounted for primarily through increases that may have been obtained by individual employes by reason of incentive or bonus payments for increased production."

Important in the union's argument on the stabilization of steel wage rates is the analysis of the original intent of the Little Steel formula and the way it was applied.

The original Little Steel decision, the brief points out, was based upon the objective of maintaining the peacetime standard of wage earnings of January 1941, by allowing a general increase up to 15 per cent to workers who had not received this increase, to meet the "alleged rise in the cost of living that had occurred between January 1941 and May 1942."

Determining factors in computing the rise in wages since Jan. 1, 1941 were to be (1) straight time average hourly wage earnings and (2) the general wage increase. Here is the process of computation under the Little Steel formula, as stated in the union's brief:

"The straight time average hourly earnings for the appropriate groups of employes as of Jan. 1, 1941 are first determined. The employes involved are entitled to a general wage increase up to 15 per cent of such straight time average hourly earnings less the general wage increases that had been accorded them since Jan. 1941.

WLB Sits on Lid

"The formula eliminates from the computation the increases in average hourly earnings resulting from overtime or through the operation of incentive or bonus systems or those increases given to less than 10 per cent of the employes in the appropriate unit for the elimination of inequalities, upgrading, individual reclassification, or merit increases.

"All attempts to inject increased earnings resulting from any of these factors have been consistently rejected by the Natl. War Labor Board."

Chairman William H. Davis of the War Labor Board, in a letter to Senator Robert F. Wagner, chairman of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee on Dec. 15, 1943, explained this point, states the brief, when he wrote that "the purpose of Congress was, wisely, to stabilize the price of labor, not total earnings. The Congress knew that to freeze the earnings of labor would have been to freeze production instead of letting it rise to the highest level in our history."

The reasoning underlying the policy of the WLB in the "Little Steel" decision was sound, provided that the presumption on which it was based were effective.

"On the basis of this assumption," states the union brief, "the Board held that where the workers extended their hours of work and thereby received larger earnings, such increased earnings could not properly be included in determining whether the peacetime standards as of Jan. 1, 1941, were being maintained."

The same analysis hold true for increased earnings resulting from incentive or bonus payments for increased production, the brief declares, and for elimination of inequalities and upgrading of jobs.

A moratorium on the adjustment of wage rate inequalities, however, was agreed upon between the union and the various companies, between the date of the Little Steel decision and February 1943, pending a joint undertaking between the union and the companies to work out some general formula.

When no agreement could be reached on such a formula, the moratorium was terminated in February 1943. In addition to the moratorium, the steel companies generally refused to make any individual wage adjustments to remedy inequalities, upgrading or similar wage standard improvements.

Steel Union's Wage Case

Annual Wage Won't Break Steel Industry

WASHINGTON, Mar. 25—A guaranteed annual wage in the steel industry is not only socially desirable but is economically possible without straining the coffers of the steel magnates who are in the strongest financial position of their history, the United Steelworkers of America reported this week in its brief to the Natl. War Labor Board supporting requests for a 17-cents-an-hour increase and other contract improvements.

Pointing out that the steel companies are now operating at 95 to 98 percent of capacity on a work week averaging 45.3 hours, the USA said that the industry could actually reduce its operations to 75 percent, go on a 40-hour week, and fully utilize all of its present employes.

"In other words," said the USA in supporting its annual wage demand, "the industry would have to go below 75 percent if it were on a 40-hour work week before it would have to lay off any of its present employes and incur an obligation under the guaranteed wage."

Citing lean years of employment in steel, interspersed with comparatively short periods of "prosperity," the USA said:

FREEDOM FROM WANT

"Economic security through full employment thereby creating freedom from want and freedom from fear can and must be accomplished for this basic industry.

"This objective is not attained through the pitiful unemployment compensation payments. Steelworkers do not want unemployment and then be paid a small percentage of their regular earnings during such a period of unemployment.

They want employment — full employment — and to be in a position to produce and receive their full earnings for so producing."

The USA reported that the steel industry is in a peculiarly fortunate position regarding the annual wage in that it is possible to plan much of the production far in advance.

"Though steel operations prior to the war have fluctuated widely from period to period, and on a seasonal basis, this is not necessarily inherent in the steel industry," the USA declared. "It can largely be corrected through the proper planning of steel production on a yearly basis, as demonstrated by the experience of the war.

DEMAND FOR STEEL

"The postwar demand for steel products for the domestic and foreign markets will provide operations for the steel industry at a relatively high level, which will make it eminently practical for the steel industry to provide for the guaranteed wage in the face of (1) refundable federal taxes, (2) and reduced operating costs due to the elimination of overtime."

Declaring that the war is being fought in order that new freedoms shall be created for the people, the USA said:

"One of the most basic freedoms involved is that of the right of an individual, ready and able to work, to have a job and a decent wage. The firm protection of this right through such an annual guarantee as requested by the union for the steel industry is the greatest assurance for the continuance of our free and democratic institutions."

Bonus for Armed Forces Provided By Steel Plan

WASHINGTON, Mar. 25—A plan to set up a fund for some 125,000 steelworkers now in the armed forces proposed by the United Steelworkers some weeks ago, is outlined in the brief submitted this week by the union to the War Labor Board.

The union's proposal calls for the formation of a fund built up by contributions of $20 from each worker in the industry to be taken out of any increases granted by the WLB, with the companies giving an additional $20 for each of their employes.

On the basis of an estimated 503,000 wage earners and 85,000 salaried employes in the steel industry, the cost of the industry would be $11,762,000. A similar amount contributed by the employes would mean a fund of more than $23,000,000 set aside for returning servicemen and women when they are honorably discharged.

In addition to this proposal, the brief points to other measures it has sponsored for the benefit of those defending the country, such as legislation for mustering-out pay, already obtained, and amendments to the social security law to guarantee protection to men and women on the basis of their service in the armed forces.

Give Labor Same Break as Farmers—USA

WASHINGTON, Mar. 25—In the program set up to keep the cost of living under control, the reins have been held much more lightly over the farmers than the workers, says the United Steelworkers' brief submitted this week to the War Labor Board.

"The differences between the legislative and administrative policies applicable to farm prices as against wages mark a very grievous discrimination against labor," the union brief charges.

The farm parity principle, on which the farm price control program is based, states the union, provides that prices of farm products should increase in proportion to prices paid by farmers. On this basis the farm parity principle is related to current prices paid by the farmer, taking into account all wartime increases.

Two main forces have resulted in an overall increase of 21 per cent in farm prices between Sept. 15, 1942 and Jan. 15, 1944, according to Dept. of Agriculture figures. These factors are:

As the index of prices paid by farmers shows an increase, the farmers automatically are entitled to an increase in the prices of the things which they sell.

2. The War Food Administration and the Dept. of Agriculture have not been applying the stabilization law of Oct. 1942 as rigily as has the War Labor Board in the administration of the wage policy.

The index of prices paid by farmers, the brief maintains, "is reasonably computed and reflects the increased cost of farm living and operation brought about by the war."

In this connection, the brief points out that the prices for the farm index which are collected by the Dept of Agriculture and are independent of the prices collected by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, show a 42.6 per cent increase in the farm cost of living between Jan. 1941 and Dec. 1943.

This is close to the 43.5 per cent reported by the CIO-AFL Cost of Living Committee, the brief points out, and is in contrast with the 23.4 per cent increase put out by the BLS.

"In addition," states the brief, "it should be appreciated that prices paid by farmers for commodities used in living probably increase somewhat less than prices paid by wage earners since farmers are less affected by black market prices in congested war centers and can obtain a considerable volume of local products at reasonable prices.

British Wages Not Frozen —Cases Get Speedy Action

WASHINGTON, Mar. 25—Differences in the way Great Britain and the United States have handled the question of wages in wartime are discussed in the brief of the United Steelworkers of America made public this week, after submission to the War Labor Board special steel panel.

The realistic approach of the British in meeting their wartime economic problems makes America's way seem like an "Alice in Wonderland policy," says the brief.

Wages in England are controlled not by a rigid Little Steel formula clamped down on pay rates, but by a generalized statement of policy stressing collective bargaining, set forth in a Government White Paper.

COOPERATION

This calls "upon management and labor to consider together all possible means of maintaining wage stabilization as part of the general economic stabilization program," explains the brief. It relies, quotes the brief from the White Paper, on the "traditional and well-tried practice of the principal industries to regulate wages through their joint voluntary machinery for wage negotiation."

Chief difference between the British approach and ours is the method used in disposing of disputes. In England the Natl. Arbitration Tribunal was set up under the "Conditions of Employment and National Arbitration Order of July 1940" to settle disputes referred to it when "the established negotiations machinery in any industry" fails to get a settlement.

A feature of this tribunal, states the brief, "is the speed with which it hands down its decisions." A Ministry of Labor press release of April 1943,quoted in the brief stated:

QUICK ACTION

"No case takes longer than a month for settlement and some take even less. The tribunal normally devotes one day to the hearing of the parties to the dispute and renders its decision within a few days of the hearing."

According to the Ministry of Labor index, cost of living in Great Britain rose 29 per cent between January 1939 and January 1943, while wage rates, including agricultural workers' wages, rose 33 per cent, and earnings rose 65 per cent.

The larger increase shown in earnings is due to increased overtime and incentive pay, and to the transfer of workers from lower paid civilian industries to war industries.

Wage increases "apparently are not feared as adding to any inflationary dangers," declares the brief, "but rather are justified on the ground that they are essential to maintain the morale and productive efficiency of the British workers."

Say Race Hate Cancer Threat To Democracy

Chicago, Mar. 25—Labor, along with the Government, Negroes and Jews, are among the groups unhappy people blame their own troubles on in times of stress, says a pamphlet on the "A B C's of Scapegoating" issued by the Central YMCA College here. The pamphlet pointed out that scapegoating is a threat to democracy.

"In times of war our deprivations are multiplied many times; our loved ones are away, there is less food, there are increased taxes, there are limits placed on our pleasurable activities and on our leisure.

"There is no direct action we may take to do away with these deprivations; therefore we respond to our frustrations by scapegoating many groups: the Government, the Negroes, the Jews, Labor," the pamphlet says.

"Scapegoating is a cancer in the social organism. Radical methods for its eradication must be found, but equally important is the healthful conditioning of our minds to resist its gaining root."

Labor's Case For Fair Wages And A Stable Economy

Labor's case for revision of the Little Steel formula got its first full-dress hearing last week, when Pres. Philip Murray presented the arguments of the United Steelworkers of America for a 17c wage adjustment to a panel of the National War Labor Board.

With a certain appropriateness, the hearings were held in the auditorium of the National Museum. For the wage-freeze formula is by now so far unrelated to the present conditions of our wartime economy that it is a museum piece.

Its dry bones should be stored away with those of the museum's extinct animals.

Murray pointed out that the Little Steel formula was admittedly based on the assumption that living costs would also be stabilized at the level of Sept. 15, 1942, and that the other six points of the President's seven-point program would also be carried out.

Instead of that, living costs have risen 43.5% since Jan. 1, 1941, while the Little Steel formula limits wage increases to 15% over the level at that date.

Labor's figures on living costs have been challenged by the Bureau of Labor Statistics. But the Steelworkers' brief points out that they are fully confirmed by another government agency, the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, which estimates the increase in farmers' living costs at approximately the same percentage as labor has done.

Pres. Murray's brief includes the most comprehensive study yet made of the glaring discriminations against wage-earners as compared with other sections of our population.

Through case studies of a thousand or more steelworkers, he shows that the average steelworker's family is actually going into the hole, despite longer working hours and greatly increased productivity.

Labor's percentage of the national income has also decreased, as compared with other groups.

Corporate profits, on the other hand, have risen to fabulous heights, even after increased wartime taxes. This profiteering is the chief cause of present inflationary increases in living costs, and Congress has refused to check it by fair taxation.

Congress has enacted tax legislation to relieve the greedy at the expense of the needy. More than this, it has guaranteed a high level of profits for two years after the war, through tax refunds to any company whose profits fall below their pre-war level.

Farm proprietors, through the parity system, also are granted a certain guarantee of assured income for two years after the war, thus leaving labor the only substantial section of the population that can count on no degree of economic security.

The Steelworkers' demand for a guaranteed annual wage is one method proposed by Pres. Murray to remedy somewhat this gross discrimination against America's wage-earners.

The CIO brief gives ample proof that labor's wage demands are in no sense inflationary. They can easily be met out of high profits, without increasing prices.

Inflation can and must be checked by rigid price control, food subsidies, rationing, adequate taxation of profits and higher incomes and other steps outlined in Pres. Roosevelt's seven-point program.

In seeking revision of the Little Steel formula to adjust wages to increased living costs, the CIO is not trying to upset the economic stabilization so necessary for a healthy wartime economy.

On the contrary, it is trying to bring about the balance and stability envisaged in the President's anti-inflation program, and to make effective the spirit of the stabilization legislation requiring prices as well as wages to be stabilized at the Sept. 15, 1942, level.

This balance was completely upset, when Congress allowed prices to rise far out of range of frozen wages.

In order to restore this balance and to achieve some degree of stability, either prices must be rolled back to the Sept. 15 level—which has not be done—or wages must be adjusted upward. There is no escaping this logic.

The Steelworkers' case is not their case alone. It is the case of all labor and the whole American people—the case for an efficient, productive and balanced wartime economy.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

DID YOU ever hear of the "carry-back carry-forward"? No, it has nothing to do with jive. But it's certainly smooth.

It's a tidbit the profiteers have been keeping all to themselves. They don't think it nice to talk about such things in public. That's one reason the CIO United Steelworkers had so much trouble in getting a public hearing on their wage case.

Not to keep you in suspense too long, the "carry-back carry-forward" is a system under which corporations are guaranteed good and regular profits until two years after the war, no matter what happens. They just can't lose.

Congress has generously guaranteed them profits that are at least equal to, and may exceed, their profits for the years 1936-39. If a company's profits drop below this level, it may secure refunds from the U. S. Treasury up to the total amount it paid in income and excess profits taxes during the last two war years. That's the carry-back angle.

If a company's losses should exceed what it paid in these taxes, then the excess loss can be carried forward in the form of tax savings for two years.

For instance, the average annual net profits after taxes of U. S. Steel were $44,732,000 from 1936 to 1939. If the company breaks even in 1944, which means operating at less than 50% of capacity, it will receive a nice little check of $49,200,000 from the U. S. government—and still more, if its earnings drop lower.

If after the war the company should curtail its operations and lay off half its workers, Uncle Sam will see that it is still guaranteed "normal" profits for two years, so no-coupon-clippers may go hungry, but only the workers.

★ ★ ★

This is one of many startling and little publicized facts revealed in the brief submitted by the United Steelworkers to the War Labor Board panel.

In this brief, Pres. Philip Murray presents not only the steelworkers' case for a 17c wage adjustment, but also the case of all labor for revision of the so-called Little Steel formula.

The outcome of this first test of the wage-freeze formula concerns every worker in the United States. Upon it depends the restoration of some stability to our wartime economy, so badly unbalanced now by frozen wages, on the one hand, and sky-high living costs and profits, on the other.

★ ★ ★

(1) The CIO has been the staunchest supporter of economic stabilization, as outlined in the President's seven-point program. When wage rates were stabilized at the level of Sept. 15, 1942, the WLB assumed living costs would also be stabilized under this program; and the President himself asserted wage earners would be entitled to higher wages if this were not done.

But Congress blocked enactment of the tax, price control, and other points of the seven-point program. And the later attempt to roll back prices was also prevented.

(2) As a result, living costs have gone up 43½% since Jan. 1, 1941, while the Little Steel formula has limited wage increases to 15%.

(3) Corporate profits meanwhile have increased 449% before taxes, over pre-war levels, and as much as 198% after taxes; and Congress has prevented any adequate taxation of war profits. Such profiteering, particularly excessive in the food industries, has been the chief cause of inflation.

(4) Through the farm parity system, farmers are protected against increased living costs, which for them are estimated by the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture to be up 42.6%. This leaves labor the only substantial group without any government guarantees such as are enjoyed by industry and farmers.

(5) Labor has suffered a reduction in its share of the national income during the war. The corporations' share has risen 302%. The farm-owners' share has risen 179%. But labor's share has risen only 72%.

(6) Labor's wage demands are not inflationary. The steel wage increase, for instance, can easily be paid out of excessive profits without any increase in the price of the product.

The idea that increased purchasing power for low-paid wage-earners will cause inflation, because of shortage of consumers' good (the "inflationary gap" theory) is fallacious. It does not take into account increased savings and the fact that wage earners do not have excess purchasing power.

Pretty Petty Stuff

The maneuvering which delayed, and came near denying, a public hearing before the War Labor Board for the CIO United Steelworkers reflects little credit on the employer and AFL representatives.

It was perhaps understandable that the employers should do everything possible to block a hearing that would expose their extortionate profits and other special privileges, and prove labor's case for revision of the Little Steel formula.

But what excuse was there for the blocking tactics of the AFL leaders?

They simply did not want the CIO to get the credit. Yet they had no case of their own like the Steelworkers' which had gone through all stages of WLB procedure and could furnish a real test of the Little Steel formula.

The CIO was not so petty. It supported an AFL petition simply asking in general terms for revision of the formula. But when this was voted down, the AFL tried to stop the Steelworkers from being heard.

It only agreed finally to a hearing when an extra panel was also voted to let it do some general talking.

Steel Union's Wage Case

You Can't Eat Fiction And Get Fat

WASHINGTON, March 25—Employer press fantasies that picture workers as receiving an increased share of the national income simply do not bear up under scientific investigation, Pres. Murray of the United Steelworkers reported this week in the union's brief to the Natl. War Labor Board in connection with requests for a 17 cents an hour increase.

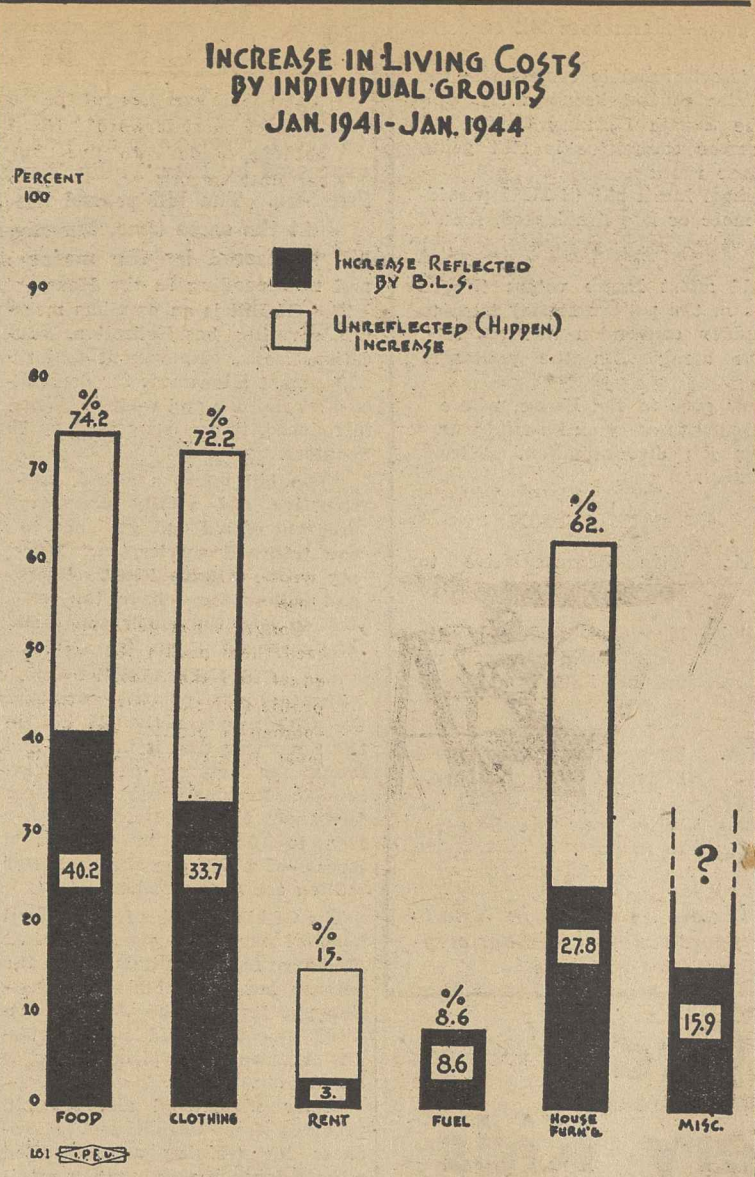
Pointing out that the principle of economic stabilization is based on the theory that the principal economic groups in the nation would continue to receive approximately the same share of the national income that they had received before the war, the USA cited the following percentages for the major groups to prove that labor's share has taken a decided drop:

1939 Group	Percentage of National Income
Corporations	8%
Farmers	5.9%
Labor	65.7%
Last quarter of 1943
Corporations	13%
Farmers	7.1%
Labor	59.3%

From 1939 to 1943, the USA reported, corporations had the largest percentage income increase, 302 percent before federal taxes—from 5.8 billion dollars in 1939 to 23.3 billion dollars in 1943.

"The second largest percentage increase went to farmers (agricultural proprieters) whose income before taxes rose 179 percent in this period, or from 4.3 billion dollars in 1939 to 12 billion dollars in 1943," the USA stated.

"Of the three principal groups in our national economy, labor has fared the worst. Labor's income, before taxes, from the standpoint of the individual average civilian worker, rose only 72 percent in this period, or from an average annual compensation of $1,372 in 1939 to $2,360 in 1943."



WHY A WAGE RAISE: Chart from CIO-AFL Cost of Living report, shows what has happened to your cost of living since January, 1941.

The USA pointed out that the relative proportion of the national income for each group after payment of taxes does not vary materially from the proportion before taxes, inasmuch as "the burden that recent tax measures have placed upon individual wage earners or salary employes and farmers is equal, if not in excess, to the tax burden that has been placed upon corporations."

Steelworkers Go Into Debt On Low Wages

WASHINGTON, Mar. 25—In a war boom period when corporate profits are shooting for the stratosphere, Joe Average Steelworker is literally going into debt because of the rising cost of living and because of the fact that the Natl. War Labor Board hasn't so far seen fit to grant him the increased wages he needed to keep pace with the rise.

This startling fact—proved in a comprehensive survey of steelworkers chosen at random—was presented to the WLB this week by Pres. Murray of the United Steelworkers, in his brief supporting demands for a 17 cents an hour wage increase and other gains.

Pointing out that the average steelworker is attempting to cooperate wholeheartedly in the government war bond purchase program, the USA said that probably the most revealing feature of the study it conducted of family expenditures is the information regarding the net savings of the workers.

"The average weekly income of the steelworker's family, according to the expenditure sample which covered September through November, 1943, was $56.04. The total average weekly expenditure was $58.57.

"The average family purchased bonds of $4.71 per week; paid 58 cents on a previous debt, and otherwise saved 62 cents, or a total of $5.91. The total average weekly expenditures and savings was $64.48.

"The difference between this total expenditure and total earnings had to be made up through redeemed bonds of $1.14, the spending of previous savings of $3.45, borrowing money of 88 cents, increased indebtedness at stores of $1.33, and small balancing difference.

"In other words," and the union bold-faced the remark," "the steelworkers during the period indicated, with the highest weekly hours enjoyed, and increased weekly earnings, are going into debt!"

Significant also are the facts that while the average straight time hourly earnings for the steel industry were $1.04, 63 per cent of the workers have straight time hourly earnings of $1.05 or less, and 32 per cent have straight time hourly earnings of 90 cents or less.

Sample of what such low standards mean to Joe Average Steelworker and his family is indicated by the housing conditions that many of the industry's employes are forced to endure.

Of the families surveyed by the union, 31.6 per cent did not have inside bathing facilities and 16 per cent of the families lacked running water inside their homes.

Declaring that no one could say that the average steelworker enjoys luxurious housing conditions, nor gorges himself on food, nor dresses like a Park Avenue playboy, the report cited that the steelworker's family spends only 61 cents per person for food, that the steelworker buys only two pairs of shoes a year beside his work shoes, and that he has to make a suit last 10 years.

WORKS HARDER FOR LESS

"The steelworker finds that he is working harder and longer producing more steel in the interest of winning the war," the USA said. "True he earns more money for working such longer hours, but his cost of living has gone up. He has additional wartime problems. His work clothing gets used up much faster because he is working longer and because of the poorer quality of the work clothes.

"He finds he wants to eat more meat because he is working harder, but he discovers that he is probably having less food because the smaller quantity requires much more money.

"There are a lot of taxes now that he never had before. He must pay more transportation expenses. His repair work on his house costs him more money because of the increased cost of materials. He also finds that he can't save any money but rather is going into debt."

Brand Tax Bill As 'Sabotage'

WASHINGTON, Mar. 25—A big share of the blame for the sabotage of economic stabilization lies at the door of the present tax bill, which Congress passed over the President's veto and the warnings of labor, the USA-CIO says in its brief before the War Labor Board presented here this week.

This tax bill, and the ones before it, which "protected the vast accumulation of profits and preserved many special privileges and benefits, reflect a deliberate sabotage of the national economic stabilization policy," the brief points out.

These two profits figures, cited in the brief, show in a nutshell how seriously the tax program has failed to help mobilize the country's resources for war. In peacetime (1936-39) profits after taxes were $3.324 billion, in 1943, $9.150 billion, in 1944, $9.900 billion. In other words, profits after taxes have increased three times over peacetime figures.

A CONTRAST

By way of contrast, the brief shows how taxes have increased on the workers and other low income groups—an increase that is the direct result of Congress' refusal to touch inflated profits and incomes.

Take a fairly well paid steelworker, making $50 a week including his overtime. In 1944, this worker must pay a total Federal tax of $188.33 a year, or $3.62 a week. In 1941, this worker paid less than $30 a year in taxes.

These are his Federal taxes. On top of that, he pays state and local taxes, which have gone up heavily on the low income groups as well. Way back in 1942, before there was a "Victory Tax," before the unearned income credit was dropped in the Federal tax, before family and personal exemptions were lowered, a taxpayer in the $2,000—$3,000 class paid out a total of 17.5 per cent of his income Federal, state and local taxes.

At the same time, Congress has completely ignored all the recommendations President Roosevelt made, in his seven point program, in the five point message of this year, and in repeated tax messages, including the veto message.

Thus, Congress repealed FDR's order limiting individual incomes to $25,000 a year, after taxes. Joint mandatory returns, which would prevent wealthy couples from evading taxes, have not been required. Tax exempt bonds still stand. The 75 per cent Ruml plan, passed by Congress, gives the rich a huge tax windfall.

All of these evasions, refusals and failures to do the job that a realistic tax program could do add up to new burdens on the workers, the USA-CIO brief points out, saying:

"The Congressional tax policies which we have analyzed undoubtedly have tended to injure the morale of the people on the domestic front. While wage cuts have been imposed upon the low income groups, industrial profits have soared and the war millionaires have multiplied."

USA-CIO Asks Dismissal Pay, Sick Leave, Maintenance

WASHINGTON, Mar. 25—The request for a 17-cents-an-hour wage increase put forward by the United Steelworkers in the union's brief before the Natl. War Labor Board is accompanied by several other proposals designed to bring substantial benefits to more than half a million workers at nominal cost to the steel companies. Among items asked for by the USA are:

1. LIBERALIZED VACATIONS

One week for continuous service ranging from a year to three years and two weeks for more than three years, instead of the present one week for three years to 15 years service, and two weeks after 15 years.

2. DISMISSAL PAY

Four weeks' pay for all workers with from one to three years continuous service and eight weeks' pay for all employes with more than three years service to be provided when plants or portions of plants are permanently closed down. The union pointed out that the steel companies make handsome provisions for the security of top flight executives — Republic Steel, for instance, paid in 1940 $50,000 for a retirement annuity contract for Tom Girdler.

3. SICK LEAVE

Seven days sick leave a year for workers with from one to three years continuous service and 14 days sick leave for those with more than three years service. The USA said that sick leave helps the workers to secure medical aid, helps control the spread of illness and protects the workers' families against harsh fluctuations in income.

4. SHIFT DIFFERENTIAL

Allowances of five cents an hour for employes on the afternoon shift and 10 cents an hour for those on the night shift, on the basis that such differentials are justified by the strain caused by odd hours of work and are common practice in other industries.

5. SIX HOLIDAYS

The Union asks that Thanksgiving Day, Jan. 1, July 4, Labor Day, Christmas and Memorial Days be considered holidays, with all employes who are required to work on those days being paid time and a half.

6. WAGE DIFFERENTIALS

The union asks that all geographic wage differentials be eliminated on the basis that the steel industry is capable of paying the same rate throughout the nation and that the cost of living over the country is practically the same.

7. EQUAL PAY

The USA asks equal pay for equal work on new jobs and the elimination of inequalities now existing.

8. SIMPLIFICATION OF RATES

For mechanical and maintenance occupations, the USA asks for a fixed number of classifications—in no case exceeding three, instead of the many that now prevail—and the promotion of workers to higher rates when they perform higher types of work.

9. MAINTENANCE OF MEMBERSHIP AND CHECKOFF

A minor adjustment is requested to adjust the check-off provisions of contracts with some companies without the present red tape so that dues may be regularly collected within the limits of the USA constitution, which sets a maximum rate of $1.50 a month.

10. LEARNERS' PAY

To avoid inequities, all learners should be paid the minimum wage equal to that paid common labor.

11. HEALTH INSURANCE

The USA asks the companies to institute and maintain uniform group insurance plans, under joint union-management operation, and providing:

(a) Life, accidental death and dismemberment insurance in a face amount equal to 75 percent of average annual earnings, with a minimum coverage of $1,500.

(b) Disability insurance with benefits of 75 percent of weekly average earnings payable for 13 weeks for each disability.

(c) Hospitalization and surgical benefits covering workers and dependents for 21 days at $6 per day each disability, hospital facilities to the extent of $50 and surgical costs to the extent of $150.

Provision shall be made for continued insurance of employes during periods of layoff unless employment is secured elsewhere.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

The Senate has passed the "GI bill" (S 1767) providing hospital care, loans, employment, education, readjustment allowances, etc., for veterans this week. CIO supported this bill, will also support it in the House.

By this week, President Roosevelt will have vetoed, signed or let the "soldier's vote" bill go by without signature. If he vetoes, urge your Congressmen and Senators to sustain. If the bill becomes law, remember that the issue isn't necessarily dead. A good Federal vote bill can still be revived.

Polltax repeal is scheduled to come up in the Senate April 1. Price control hearings are continuing before the Senate Banking Committee, and the Smith smear committee is still going through its sabotage routine.

The Wagner school lunch bill (S 1721) providing $80,000,000 is more or less deadlocked, should be pushed.

BULLETIN: The Senate this week carried out the polltaxers' threat to kill the Fair Employment Practices Committee by passing the Russell (polltaxer, Ga.) amendment to the deficiency appropriations bill.

This amendment puts all U. S. agencies set up by FDR under Congressional scrutiny, was admittedly aimed by Russell at the FEPC. Republican Senators in a last minute realization of how this would affect Negro voters (Negro citizens don't vote in the polltax states) tried to stop it. Their sudden conversion was too late, since they'd gone along with the polltaxers before.

The issue now goes to the House, where FEPC can be rescued to carry on its vital war work of ending job discrimination. Wire your Representative.

Senate Can Save Kids' Lunches

Washington, Mar. 25 — Repeating last week's House action to deny good meals to war workers' kids, the House Appropriations Committee this week voted to kill a school lunch program that would cost all of $50,000,000.

The action came in a committee vote to eliminate a section of the U. S. Agriculture Dept. appropriation providing continuance of the program that has given six million children one hot, nourishing meal a day and had helped solve part of the child care problem that faces scores of thousands of war working parents.

House Committee action is not final, however, since a bill (S1721) sponsored by Sen. Wagner, (D., N. Y.), is now before the Senate Agriculture Committee to provide $80,000,000 for the same project to be administered by the War Food Administration.

Rep. Bolton (R., O.) who comes from Cleveland, one of the chief war production centers of the U. S., pointed out that the school lunch program would make it possible for thousands of mothers in war jobs to feel confident that their children were getting at least one balanced, nutritious meal a day.

Senator Wagner's bill is backed by leading educators and by teachers' organizations from New York and other war centers. Last year, the school lunch program was saved only by agreement between the House and Senate that an "enabling act" would be passed this year.

This makes the Wagner bill a legislative must, since the program last year was attached to the Agriculture Dept. appropriation, and the House has served notice that it will not allow this item in this year's Department funds.

Survey Predicts Postwar House Boom

New York (FP)—America's postwar housing demand will probably exceed 1,000,000 units per year for the first 10 years, bringing a vista of employment and production in home construction and related industries "in excess of anything accomplished in the past."

This prediction highlighted findings in a major survey of the entire field of American housing, its problems and prospects, conducted by the 20th Century Fund. Research was directed by Miles L. Colean, architect.

'Point of Order' Hits Nursery Kids

WASHINGTON, Mar. 25—Just because a Republican Congressman made a point of order, thousands of war workers' kids may be denied nursery schools in war centers, scores of clinics may close, and dozens of similar war service projects may fold up.

The point of order was made by Rep. Taber, (R., N.Y.) during House action on the Lanham Act, which provides funds for such projects. It enforced a limit of $40,000,000 that can be spent for "operations" under the act, "Operations" includes every expenditure of a sustained nature—such as nursery schools.

The original request for Lanham Act funds, made by Pres. Roosevelt and supported by the CIO, was for $150,000,000, with no crippling limits. The House cut this to $127,000,000, and has sent it on to the Senate.

UP IN SENATE

Early action is set in the Senate, probably for this week now the "GI bill" for veterans has passed. The CIO and the Auxiliaries are urging Senators to restore the full appropriation and kick out the shackling rider.

As an indication of what the rider—familiar obstructionist trick in Congress—would mean, the Wayne Co. (Mich.) CIO Council reports through its secretary, Mort Furay, that it already is faced with the closing down of nursery schools that care for 3,500 kids of parents in war jobs.

If it sticks in the Senate, it means that these kids' parents and thousands like them will have to quit producing for the invasion. The bill is now in a subcommittee of the Senate Appropriations Committee. Write your Senators today.

CIO Aids 'GI Bill' In Senate Vote

WASHINGTON, Mar. 25—Full CIO support for the "GI Bill" (S 1767), measure to aid war veterans now before Congress, was expressed by Pres. Philip Murray in a letter this week to U. S. Senators. The bill passed the Senater later in the week.

At the same time, Murray supported the mustering-out pay bill sponsored by the major standard veterans organizations, and now pending in the House.

The GI Bill is an omnibus measure covering hospitalization, education, loans, employment and readjustment allowances for demobilized servicemen and women. When introduced, it was sponsored by 79 Senators.

"The bill offers a sound, constructive and vitally necessary program of aid and guidance to our returned servicemen," Murray wrote. "Demobilized soldiers and sailors must have the protection and the opportunities it offers them."

CIO INITIATIVE

Murray also pointed out that the CIO supports the GI bill in the same way that it initiated and fought for increased pay for servicemen, for increased allowances for their dependents, and other aids to the men in the armed forces—of which one and a quarter million are CIO members.

The GI bill provides for increased hospital facilities, guards against discharge from hospitals before the veteran has had all his compensation put through the various technical processes, and gives veterans organizations a place on review boards, etc.

Under educational aid, the bill provides free tuition and allowances for training at accredited schools for one year, with a maximum of three years for qualified veterans. The program is to be supervised by the Veterans Administration and a board including representatives from the War Dept., the Federal Security Adminstration, the Office of Education, and six educational leaders.

Loans up to $1,000 are provided for buying homes, farms and business properties, under safeguards as to price, etc.

Jobs for veterans are to be regulated through the U. S. Employment Service, plus a Veterans Service Board, and a veterans' employment representative to help on registration, advise on available jobs, keep an eye on working conditions, etc.

The final section of the bill deals with readjustment allowances to help the veterans back to civilian life through social security payments.

JOBLESS AID

Under this section, a veteran would be entitled to eight weeks of unemployment compensation for each month that he was in the armed services, up to a maximum of 52 weeks compensation. This is fixed at $15.00 a week, plus $5.00 for one dependent, $8.00 for two, and $10.00 for three or more.

A veteran will not get this compensation if he leaves suitable work voluntarily, fails to apply for such work, or if his unemployment if due to a stoppage in which he participates. This is one of the bad features of the bill, which apparently puts a premium on refusing to go along with other workers on a strike.

The mustering out bill, sponsored by the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the Disabled American Veterans and other organizations, provides for mustering out pay of $3.00 a day for home service, $4.00 for foreign service, plus $500 if wounded. It has a minimum of $100, a maximum of $3,500 for home service and $4,500 for foreign service, to be paid in non-negotiable, interesting bearing bonds.

Housing Plan Backed by UAW

Detroit, Mar. 25—A long-range housing program advocated by the CIO's biggest union, the United Automobile Workers, is set forth in a pamphlet "Memorandum on Postwar Urban Housing," just issued here by the UAW-CIO Postwar Planning Committee.

UAW Pres. R. J. Thomas explains in the foreword that failure to meet adequately the housing problems of urban dwellers has brought severe suffering upon the majorty of the union's own membership.

An intelligent attack on housing problems requires that it be based on four general principles, the pamphlet declares: A social point of view, a large scale attack on all opposing factors, conservation of our natural resources and maintenance of full employment.

"We may not know what the postwar world will be like, but we do know that idle men, idle money, idle machines and lack of planning are extravagances that our country can no longer afford," concludes the pamphlet.

Wanted—Cheaper Clothing

Washington, March 25 — The nation's housewives want clothing rationed and the return of the cheaper lines, especially children's clothes, a survey made by the OPA's "official housewife," Mrs. Philip L. Crowlie, shows.

Women are pretty indignant about the fact that the swanky shops are crammed with fancy evening gowns, while you can't find a $1.98 house dress or a cheap pair of kid's pants anywhere, she said.

Quality deterioration, which means hidden price increases, is also making them angry, she added, saying that she would report her findings to higher-ups in OPA and that she hoped they would take action.

QUALITY CHISELLING

Mrs. Crowlie's discoveries bear out what the CIO, and the CIO Women's Auxiliaries, have been saying for months. Quality chiselling and disappearance of cheap work clothes and other inexpensive stuff have accounted for much of the 43.5 per cent rise in living costs since January, 1941.

This was elaborately detailed in the cost of living report prepared by CIO and submitted as the labor report to the President's Committee on the Cost of Living. Maybe Mrs. Crowlie's grass roots trip will help to bring some remedy to a situation that hits workers' families hard.

Farm-Labor Unity In Wisconsin

Madison, Wis., Mar. 25—Marking the first gigantic step toward urban-rural unity against reaction and a Congress bent on dividing these two great forces, 400 labor and farm representatives lined up here behind a win-the-war, pro-Roosevelt administration program.

Organizations with a total membership approaching 400,000 were present for the 2-day Wisconsin Farmer-Labor Cooperative Conference, March 18-19. Heading up the delegations were representatives of the Farmers Equity Union, the AFL, the CIO, the Midland Cooperative, the Central Cooperative Wholesale, Farmers Union Cooperative Exchange and the railroad brotherhoods.

Included in the program formulated at the unprecedented unity meeting were demands for reenactment of OPA, AAA and Rural Electrification Administration; a realistic tax program; veto of the states rights soldier vote bill; and maintenance of full production after the war.

BITTNER SPEAKS

Attacking the Big Four farm block groups, Asst. Pres. Van A. Bittner of United Steelworkers, speaking for the CIO, declared there is "only one farm organization in America that is fighting for the small farmer." The program of the Farmers Equity Union would be the farm program of the CIO, he added.

K. W. Hones, president of the Wisconsin branch of the Natl. Farmers Union and permanent chairman of the conference, brought applause when he said: "Those opposed to any one group represented here are opposed to all." Other major speakers were: Pres. George Haberman of the Wisconsin Federation of Labor; NFU Pres. W. T. Evjue, editor of the liberal Madison Capital Times.

Floor discussion revealed strong sentiment for "holding the line." In an hour-long discussion on the economic stabilization act, delegates began by proposing reenactment for five years, then "the duration and six months," and finally agreed on indefinite reenactment to provide for all the contingencies of the war and postwar period.

The meeting, which saw only one dissenting vote cast on the adopted policy statement, was marked by the utmost harmony and democracy. Loudest applause greeted one CIO leader's statement: "There is not one basic policy in the labor movement that is in conflict with the interests of farmers."

A continuations committee, with every attending group included, was appointed. In answer to one newspaper's charge that the several anti-administration farm organizations were not invited, provision was made for representation of any farm, labor or consumer group willing to meet and democratically discuss problems of war and peace.

The several speakers and farm and labor leaders interview by the reporter expressed the unanimous hope that the Madison conference would "provide a pattern of unity for such nonpartisan political action in the other 47 states." Judging from two full days of such constructive harmony, it no doubt will.

UE Urges Program To Speed War; Seeks Aid to Vets

NEW YORK, March 25—Full support for a program aimed at tightening the war mobilization machinery and planning the orderly transition to a peacetime economy, with special attention paid to the welfare of veterans, was voiced this week by the General Executive Board of the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, at a quarterly meeting here.

Noting that the union has 130,000 members in the armed forces, the Board said that Congress must be prevailed upon to pass adequate legislation such as the "Omnibus" bill now under consideration, which will provide for the needs of returning veterans and will "see that the human side of demobilization is not forgotten."

The union urged affiliation of veterans with regular veterans' organizations, and voted to set up a special Servicemen's and Veterans' Committee to carry out a program, including immediately the right of soldiers to vote, as well as:

1. Close cooperation with all established veterans' organizations and all other groups in support of legislation providing for needs of veterans.

2. Guaranteeing veterans the right to education, training, free hospitalization and medical treatment.

3. Return of veterans to former jobs, if wanted.

4. A three-month paid furlough for all veterans on discharge.

The UE hailed CIO Pres. Philip Murray's "splendid leadership" in connection with his proposals on the Baruch-Hancock report for war and postwar planning. The UE said of the report:

"It presents a constructive approach for tightening the war mobilization machine and planning the orderly transition to the period following victory. It lays the basis that will make it possible for all the elements of our society to work closely together in the present conduct of the war and to make possible the kind of unity that will be needed in the postwar world.

"President Roosevelt has recognized this and his acceptance of the report paves the way for labor and industry in conjunction with government to lay the foundation now for postwar collaboration in order to meet most effectively the grave problems of readjustment with the least possible dislocation and thus maintain unity within our country."

Murray Asks Probe Of Bearing Wages

WASHINGTON, March 25—The War Labor Board should set up a panel to deal with bad wages and working conditions that are driving workers out of the anti-friction bearing industry and endangering war production, CIO Pres. Philip Murray said here this week.

Murray's suggestion, made to the War and Navy Depts., the WPB, ers, followed a report of the three-union CIO conference on the crit-union CIO conferences on the critical situation in the industry held a week or so ago.

This conference, held by representatives of USA-CIO, UAW-CIO and the UE, also suggested a study of faulty production scheduling, failure of management to cooperate with labor, and other causes for current shortages in some types of bearings.

Anti-friction bearings are vital parts of every kind of war equipment that moves—including planes, tanks, ships, trucks, etc.

Out for Blood

San Francisco, Mar. 25—Latest claimant to the union blood donor championship is Basile T. Gaboury, a member of Local 10, Intl. Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union (CIO). Gaboury has a date with his Red Cross blood bank on April 7 to give his 17th pint. And what he's doing is contagious.

His entire longshore gang is donating, too, because Gaboury says he's "out for blood any way I can get it" and reports he has recruited over 4,000 donors since last July.

War Dept. Making Grave Error in News Policy— CIO-AFL

WASHINGTON, March 25—The CIO and AFL, in a joint statement today declared the War Dept. was making "a grave mistake" in seeking to evade its responsibility for keeping servicemen fully and accurately informed on American labor's record on the home front.

The labor organizations hit back at the War Department for a press release which misrepresented the attitude expressed by CIO and AFL representatives in a recent conference with Undersecretary Robert Patterson.

Declaring the War Department's statement was "full of evasions and half-truths," they expressed strong resentment at its implications that labor had asked the army to "police all American publications or to withhold from soldiers publications which they want to read."

"No such request was made, directly or indirectly," the labor bodies asserted. "On the contrary, we asked only that servicemen be kept more fully and accurately informed than is the case at present.

TROOPS MINUS NEWS

"Organized labor believes the full story should be told to the troops. We are convinced they are not getting the full story now, that they are hearing only one side of the case, and that they are therefore misinformed. In our opinion, such misinformation injures morale."

The CIO-AFL statement also denied labor had made any suggestion that the War Department "slant or sugar-coat" the news in service publications, and asserted the soldiers' right to hear about such strikes as may occur. But it added:

"Labor's complaint was that in the news the soldiers have been receiving, stories about strikes have been over-emphasized out of all proportion, and that the constructive achievements of the war production program and labor's contribution thereto have been for the most part subordinated."

VISIT TO PATTERSON

The labor visit to Undersecretary Patterson was the outgrowth of action taken at the last meeting of the CIO executive board, at which Pres. Murray appointed a committee to investigate the question of anti-labor propaganda reaching servicemen.

The committee includes Len DeCaux, chairman, L. S. Buckmaster, Joseph Curran, Milton Murray, Samuel Wolchok and Irving Abramson.

This committee made a thorough investigation of the main sources of information for servicemen. It found that, whereas an effort is made by the War Department to report news objectively through the Army News Service, such news comes from press services usually biased against labor and does not give a full and fair picture of labor's wartime record.

The committee found that army publications and radio stations also obtain news from many other sources besides the Army News Service; and that anti-labor publications such as the Reader's Digest and the Chicago Tribune have every facility for reaching the troops, while labor papers have difficulty in reaching them.

LABOR'S POSITION

The CIO committee therefore sought a meeting with Undersecretary Patterson, in which it was joined by AFL representatives. The labor spokesmen told him that positive steps should be taken by the War Department to see that servicemen are not victimized and demoralized by one-sided anti-labor propaganda but are also allowed to hear the full truth about labor.

Among the labor suggestions were:

Better facilities for getting labor publications into camp libraries and directly to servicemen. Many anti-labor publications are now distributed free by the War Department to the troops.

A broadening of the scope of army orientation courses, so servicemen may hear both sides on labor and other domestic issues, as is done in the British and Australian armies.

Appointment of staff members on army news and radio services who are experts on labor questions and can give a more rounded and intelligent coverage of these matters.

More attention, through feature articles and radio broadcasts, to material which will give a more complete and accurate presentation of labor's efforts on the home front.

Besides making such representations to the War Department, the CIO committee on information for servicemen is promoting a program for greater effort by CIO unions to get labor's message to the men and women in the armed forces.

Annual Wage In Steel Aid to U. S. Democracy—CIO

WASHINGTON, March 25—The War Labor Board in the steel case "has a great responsibility and a great opportunity for constructive contribution to advancing economic democracy in this country," according to the current issue of Economic Outlook, monthly publication of the CIO, released this week.

Two fundamental questions which deeply concern every American will be affected by the board's decision, the Outlook says:

"What kind of life will industry afford its workers after the war? Will victory over fascism be accompanied by strengthening of democratic, orderly, collective bargaining practices, or will huge corporations attempt to crush unions and thus precipitate a showdown fight imperiling democracy?"

The steel companies "in 1938 managed to break even financially when operating at only 40 per cent of capacity," it adds. "If the industry again operates at break-even levels, its labor force will be cut substantially, with less than five days' work a week."

A minimum annual wage guarantee is the practical common-sense approach to the problems of adequate levels of living and full employment, the Outlook declares.

"If wages must be paid every week, management will figure out a way to provide regular work," and perhaps "get together with labor and other groups to work out a broad program for insuring high production levels."

The total of $10 billion of corporate profits after taxes represent "one-tenth of total wage and salary payments in 1943, so that corporations received 10 cents of clear profit for every $1 paid employes," the Outlook states.

In manufacturing alone, "actual profits for every employe . . . may be estimated conservatively at $1,000," the Outlook adds.

Hillman Blasts Unity Splitters In Labor Party

NEW YORK, March 25—The Dubinsky-Rose forces in the "Old Guard" of the American Labor Party are lined up with "our enemies, Martin Dies, Westbrook Pegler and the rest whom they supply with manufactured ammunition to sharpen the attack on labor and all progressive," Sidney Hillman charged here in a pre-primary rally this week.

Hillman's accusation came after the "Old Guard" had flatly turned down the latest proposal for unity within the ALP, made by Mayor LaGuardia and endorsed by Hillman as chairman of the CIO Political Action Committee. The primary fight ends March 28, when the party members vote to oust the disruptive Dubinsky-Rose forces from the party's state apparatus.

Commenting on LaGuardia's proposal, which called for agreement on the basic issue of re-nominating FDR for a fourth term, Hillman said:

"The slate of the Committee for a United Labor Party has from its inception been pledged to Franklin D. Roosevelt as the presidential candidate of the ALP for 1944.

"The Mayor's statement finally scotches what has always been a false issue in this campaign—the so-called Communist control of the ALP.

"It has always been the position of the CULP that the selection of the leaership on the basis proposed by the Mayor—'a wholesome cross-section of the rank and file of the ALP'—provides a final guarantee against control by any clique or caucus—Communist, socialist or otherwise.

"The CULP fully subscribes to the Mayor's statement that the real issues which face labor and all progressives in 1944 are the final and complete defeat of a secure and abundant life for our people, with full employment and security for all."

Textile Board Acts On Rayon Output

NEW YORK, March 25—Establishment of a 48-hour week in the cotton-rayon weaving industry was urged on the War Manpower Commission this week by the Natl. Executive Council of the CIO Textile Workers Union.

The Council pointed out that government studies have indi-cated that there will be a deficit of not less than two billion yards of cloth in 1944 and that the cotton-rayon weaving industry now needs between 50,000 and 100,000 more workers.

Acting at a quarterly meeting, the Council qualified its request by declaring that it is convinced that "low wages are the basic cause of the manpower shortage and lagging production that harass the industry and until wages are raised, no satisfactory solution of these problems can be reached."

OTHER ACTIONS

In other actions, the Council:

Assailed opponents of a federal soldiers' voting bill for their "political cowardice and lack of devotion to the democratic ideal"; hailed President Roosevelt for his veto of the "aid for the greedy, not the needy" tax bill; asked speedy reenactment of the Price Control Act, with the inclusion of provisions for grade labelling; and unanimously agreed that any member of the union who was in good standing when he entered the armed forces shall return to his job with full seniority rights and without payment of any fees.

The Council also labelled the Baruch-Hancock plan for industrial reconversion as "a pattern for a return to 'business as usual' and a denial of the principles of a militant democracy for which we believe this war is being fought."

Deploring the plan as "one which fails in almost every respect to meet the social and economic needs of the common people of the United States," the Council said that it "is a blueprint for another return to 'normalcy' and on its face is merely another drive by free enterprisers to 'get the government out of business' and the country back into the disastrous groove of cartels and monopolies."

UAW Takes Deep South Plane Vote

Atlanta, Mar. 25—One of the largest election victories in the aircraft industry and the most substantial organizing success in the deep South was chalked up by the CIO United Auto Workers Union this week at the Bell Aircraft plant at nearby Marieta. The score was:

UAW-CIO	51.6%
AFL Machinists	44.3%
Neither	3.6%

The election campaign reached a fever pitch when the AFL and the official Atlanta AFL paper began to stir up racial hatred, according to UAW-CIO Aircraft Director Richard T. Frankensteen and Regional Director Thomas J. Starling.

The UAW-CIO countered this publicity by pointing out that such vicious tactics were the earmarks of Nazi and Japanese propaganda.

The union recently won an election at another Bell plant, at Burlington, Vt., and shortly will seek a national contract covering all Bell plants in the nation, the UAW-CIO said.

Seabee Hails Unions

Washington, March 25—A 28-year-old husband of a CIO member came back from 23 months in the South Pacific this week to tell the world that the Seabees he's serving with are the best darned outfit in the world and are doing a swell job right along with their combat brothers—with a lot of them seeing some pretty rough going in the process.

The Seabee, home, for a one-month furlough, is John Pappas, storekeeper second class, who used to work as a Washington insurance underwriter. He's married to Priscilla "Cookie" Wagner, daughter of Martin Wagner, who heads CIO'S Gas, Coke & Chemical Union.

Pappas isn't a union man, but a lot of the boys he served with are, and he has all the respect in a world for them, he said in interview with the CIO NEWS.

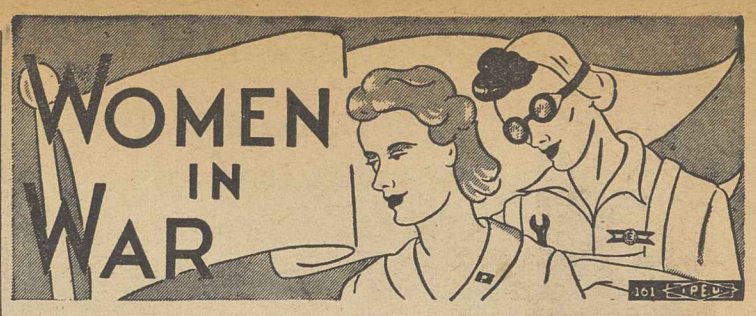
Bronzed and looking healthy, but with a decided disinclination to eat the proper amount of food, young Pappas was enthusiastic about the work being done by the Seabees, who have one motto—"Can Do."

"They've seen the boys slug it out for 72 hours straight getting ships unloaded so the lads at the front wouldn't have to do without the vital stuff they needed to stand an even chance with the Japs. They've seen the Seabees go in right along with them on some pretty tough landings, and at Salerno even preceeding most of the troops to help establish the beachhead."

Pappas is going back to the South Pacific shortly anxious to do his part to get the war over with successfully as fast as possible. He's proud of the Seabees and plenty glad to be serving with them again.

1200 Rubber Workers Get Pay Boost

Washington, Mar. 18—Some 1,200 workers of U. S. Rubber Co., Misawaka, Ind., represented by the CIO United Rubber Workers, were granted a 3-cent an hour increase by the War Labor Board to compensate them for greater productivity. The increase was negotiated between the union and recommended by a WLB arbitrator.



Fake 'Mothers' Aid Nazi Child Killers

By ELEANOR FOWLER

Within the last week two pro-fascist organizations of American "mothers" have been exposed in the press.

The United Mothers, with Cleveland offices, specializes in stirring up hatred of Negroes, Jews and union members, and are ardent supporters of Gerald L. K. Smith. They shout "traitor" at meetings when President Roosevelt's name is mentioned and attack our ally England as plotting for "the eventual take-over of our nation as a recovered colony.'

The Mothers Mobilize for America, with headquarters in Chicago, are organized to impede the war effort. They discourage the buying of bonds, for instance, saying that it only furnishes money to "rain destruction on helpless women and little children."

I wish that every woman who has been deluded by the people who run these outfits could read an article called "The Breath of a Child" by Ilya Ehrenberg, one of the great writers of our Soviet ally. Here is part of it:

"I see a ditch filled with children's corpses. I see ashes. I see the faces of mothers twisted with anguish, and all the woe of our land. And my thoughts turn to that ruffain, tall or squat, popeyed, stupid and soulless, who marched hundreds of miles only to trample the life out of an infant in some out-of-the-way Russian village.

"Near Tripolye, on the road to Obukhov, there is a ravine. Snow clings to a signboard on which is written: 'Here, July 1, 1943, German butchers tortured to death and shot 700 persons—old men, women, mothers and children. Among them was Maria Bilykh with her five children and 65-year-old mother, and Dunya Gerbakha with her two sons.' Dunya Gorbakha was carried away the night before. She begged to be allowed to say farewell to her children. The Germans laughed in reply. Then they brought her two sons to her. Volodya was seven, Kolya two. The Germans shot the children. Dunya Gorbakha did not utter a cry. She strode firmly to her death.

"I did not know her, but I can see her, loving and gentle and with a proud heart.

"Maria Bilykh's husband was far away from Tripolye. He was in the army. Maria was arrested in the daytime. That night there was a knocking at the cottage door. It was opened by Fedora, Maria's older sister. 'Dress the children,' she was told. 'But you see they are asleep,' Fedora objected. 'Where are you going to take them?' 'To their mother,' she was told.

"Fedora brought out little blouses of the finest linen and dressed the drowsy children. Velodya, who was 11, carried little two-year-old Fedya in his arms. They were followed by Tanyusha and Ganulya. Mikelka was stubborn. 'I don't want to go. I want to sleep,' he cried. He was dragged along by the belt.

"Fedya asked Velodya, 'Where are we going?' 'To Mama.' 'And where's Mama?' Velodya said nothing. They were brought to a bluff overlooking the Dneiper. There they were cast alive into a ravine. And now, when the grave was opened, Velodya was found clasping little Fedya in his arms.

"A letter arrived from Anton Bilykh. 'Greetings to you my dear fellow-villagers. Write and tell me how my wife Maria and the children are.'

"Who can forget those children in their little white blouses up there on the bluff? Who can forget the tragedy of Tripolye and the grief of our friend Anton Bilykh? Seven hundred persons slaughtered! But can figures tell of suffering? Why, each one of them had his life, his love, his home."

How can an American woman support any organization which helps barbarians like these? She has no right to call herself a mother. It is out of our ignorance that such groups are born. Our job is to see that every woman in America knows the crimes Hitler's armies are responsible for.

Steps to Victory In Your Backyard

(concluded from Mar. 20 CIO NEWS)

6. Place the flats in a sunny window. Cover the flats with ordinary window glass to keep in the moisture and the heat.

7. As soon as the sprouts appear you can remove the glass. Water the plants only when the soil seems dry on top. Don't just sprinkle the soil with water—that ruins the plants because the roots will turn upwards to get the moisture. Be sure you water the plants thoroughly so the water goes all the way through the soil.

Be sure you water the plants thoroughly so the water goes all the way through the soil.

TRANSPLANTING ADVICE

8. When the plants have two sets of leaves, its advisable to transplant them into other flats or flower pots to give more room to grow sturdier roots. When you are ready to do this, water the plants and cut out as much of the soil around each plant as you can without harming the roots. After you set the plants in their new place, press the soil firmly around the roots and water again. Keep them out of the sun for a day or two.

Cabbage plants will be ready for the outdoor planting in six weeks and tomato plants in eight weeks.

9. About one week before you are ready to plant your seedlings outdoors, set the flats outside every day during the daytime so they can get used to the outdoors. We call this hardening the plants. The first day, take the plants outdoors for about two hours during the warmest part of the day. Each day after that leave them out a little longer. Be sure to take them in every night.

10. When you're ready to put the plants in the ground for good, be sure to cut out as much soil as you can around the roots of the plants. Keep the soil around the roots moist while transplanting.

DON'T CROWD ROOTS

Make the holes in your garden large enough to set the plants in without crowding the roots. Form the soil tightly around the plants when they are in place. Water well right after transplanting and repeat the watering for a day or two afterwards.

Wait for a cloudy day to do your transplanting and do it in the late afternoon.

If the sun comes out bright and strong the next day, shade the plants with newspaper if you wish to keep the water from evaporating through the leaves too quickly before the roots have a chance to take hold firmly.

Keep watered well and keep the soil loose along the rows to keep the weeds out and you'll be well on your way toward a victorious victory garden.

British Arms Workers Hail CIO; Pledge Increased Invasion Production

LONDON, March 25 (ALN)—The national conference of British shop stewards, held under the auspices of the Engineering and Allied Trades Shop Stewards' National Council, unanimously pledged "to increase production for the coming invasion of Europe from the west" and expressed "readiness to bear arms ourselves in the final offensive against Hitlerism."

Two thousand delegates from 400 war plants were present, representing more than a million workers in Britain's aircraft, tank, gun, munitions and shipbuilding industries.

GREET CIO

Messages of greeting from CIO Pres. Murray and from other CIO leaders were loudly applauded, and in reply the conference said: "Strengthening the links between British and American workers is vital for victory over the forces of reaction in the war and in the peace to follow. We look forward eagerly to the world trade union meeting in London in June, which will help still further to unite the workers of the whole world."

CIO heads who sent greetings to the conference included President Philip Murray, in his capacity as president of the United Steelworkers; R. J. Thomas, Julius Emspak, John Green, Reid Robinson and Grant Oakes.

Expressing the close ties between the production and fighting fronts, the conference sent "fraternal greetings to the men and women of the British and Allied armed forces, whose actions on land, sea and in the air are leading to the opening of a second front and a united offensive against Hitlerite Germany." The delegates pledged to support the campaign of the British Trades Union Congress for higher service pay and dependency allowances.

Asserting that "a strong and virile trade union movement is the firm foundation upon which working class and democratic forces must rely for winning the war and the peace," the conference stated in its main resolution, proposed by National Council Secretary Ken White:

"We appeal to all organizations catering to engineering (metal trades) workers to conduct a most intensive campaign aimed at achieving 100 per cent trade unionism and revitalizing the entire life of unions. This will establish the closest unity between factories and the fighting forces, the surest guarantee for victory."

URGE EQUAL PAY

Demanding that the government take prompt action to cure the inequities which are acting as a brake on production, the conference sharply condemned evasion of the Essential Work Order by certain employers, attacks on piece rates, low wages of women and youth, refusal of trade union recognition and victimization of shop stewards.

It urged the government to take labor into its confidence by conducting a campaign to explain the needs of the war effort, so that production changes necessary for the coming offensive will be understood and responded to by the workers.

The conference also pressed for extension and intensification of the present training methods, so that a greater number of women and youth can replace skilled workers called into the services.

It insisted that questions of the alteration of prevailing piece work rates be raised only through agreed practice and procedure; that women workers should receive the established basic minimums; that the present claims of metal trades workers for a 10 shilling increase ($2.00) on the basic weekly rates be granted in full, and that metal trades unions "make immediate efforts to speed up negotiating machinery with employers."

In a strong speech demanding a square deal for women, Violet Coulthard of Hawker Aircraft declared: "Women must get the rate for the job. No woman should get less than the full laborer's rate."

British Ask India Freedom

London, Mar. 25 (ALN)—Warning that India is facing a famine disaster "worse even than that of last year," the national conference of the India League, held here this week demanded immediate independence for India and the removal from the government of Col. Leopold S. Amery, secretary of state for India, "as essential to the solution of India's problem."

The conference, attended by 150 delegates from 113 labor and other organizations with a total membership of more than 2,000,000, called upon the government to send adequate food, grain and medical supplies to India without delay.

CHARGE HOARDING

Challenging the contention of British officials that the famine is caused by hoarding on the part of peasants and by inefficiency of the native Bengal administration, the conference charged that the hoarding is in fact done by large combines and landlords who have the protection of British officials.

The conference further demanded release of all labor and political prisoners in India, and protested the employment of Indian women in coal mines, where they are paid sixpence (10 cents) a day. The delegates stood in silent tribute to the wife of Mahatma Gandhi, who died recently in prison, afterwards resolving that "conditions whereby India's foremost leaders are subjected to such degradations must be brought to an end by the will of the British people."

Chinese Unions To Attend Conference

By ISRAEL EPSTEIN

CHUNGKING, March 25 (ALN) — Interviewed by Allied Labor News this week, Chu Hseuh-fan, president of the government-sponsored Chinese Association of Labor, stated that the Association has accepted the invitation of the British Trades Union Congress to attend the world labor conference opening in London June 5.

Since the Association claimed a membership of 594,283 workers (204,101 industrial) in June 1943, it will be entitled to four delegates. The delegates have not yet been chosen, but Chu himself, who has been named labor delegate to the International Labor Office conference in Philadelphia next month, will most probably attend the London conference as well.

"Chinese workers are glad to accept the TUC invitation, and we hope that all the free trade union movements of the Allies will attend in order that we may have solidarity among the United Nations, strengthen their war efforts and hasten the winning of the war," Chu said. "We hope that the decisions of the conference will carry weight as representing the universal opinion of the world's workers.

"We agree with the points proposed for discussion: furtherance of the war effort, attitude of trade unions to the post-war peace, labor participation in the peace conference and post-war reconstruction.

"In particular, we firmly demand that workers' delegates sit at the peace conference, because the workers will have made their full contribution to the winning of the war, and only workers have the thoroughgoing desire to help workers in countries now occupied by the enemy to rebuild their free trade union movements after these countries have been liberated.

LIVING STANDARDS

"With regard to the Far East and Asiatic countries generally, we think the main problem is to raise the living standards of the workers," Chu continued. "Conditions all over the world cannot improve while oriental labor is depressed. The improvement of eastern standards must take place before workers' standards anywhere are secure. If I attend the conference, I intend to initiate discussion on this point." Chu said that he agreed with the TUC that the conference should be purely exploratory and consultative, with no decision binding on any country that has not ratified it.

Commenting on the TUC's decision to invite all representative organizations, however different in structure and ideology, despite "the risks involved," Chu said: "I think that the Soviet trade union movement should participate and am glad that it has been invited."

In reply to a question about the status of unions in the Chinese Communist area in the north, Chu said that the Chinese Association of Labor's executive council of 31 includes one Communist representative, and that he regards these unions as affiliated to the Association, a report of their progress being made at each annual CAL convention.

(The leading trade union groups in North China, according to a report to Allied Labor News from China in July 1943, are the General Labor Union of the Shensi-Kansu-Ninghsia Border Region, with headquarters in Yenan, and the North China Federation of Trade Unions, comprising guerrilla unions operating mainly behind the Japanese lines. The London Times, in two articles from a correspondent in North China published Nov. 10 and 11, 1943, estimated that workers' and peasants' unions, youth and women's organizations in that area have a membership of more than 10,500,000.)

Brazil Workers In Govt. Controlled Unions

MEXICO CITY, March 25 (ALN)—Brazil is the largest nation in Latin America and is the second in size only to Canada in the Western Hemisphere. Only 3,000,000 of her 45,000,000 people, however, engage in industry, compared with 9,000,000 in agriculture. The proportion of industrial workers is rising with the recent establishment of coffee-plastics, steel and oil industries and the expansion of shipbuilding. Brazil is also developing her vast mineral wealth in manganese, monazite, iron and steel.

Of the total of Brazilian industrial workers, 55,000 are in water transport, 172,000 in railroads and 210,000 in other transports. Mine workers form the next largest group. The average wage prescribed by Brazilian law is 60 cents (U. S.) a day, adhered to in Rio de Janeiro and Sao Paulo to some extent. Of a typical day's wage, 60 per cent goes for food and 20 per cent for rent. In the cities, 31 per cent of industrial workers are women and 12 per cent under 18 years of age.

There are 327,000 members in Brazil's labor associations, excluding professional associations.

Under government decree 2,381 labor unions may form as many as eight national federations by trade, but may in no case form a national general federation of labor.

Trade federations are permitted "if the President deems such federation favorable to the national interests." Article 53 of the corporate constitution forbids state employes to organize, including railway workers and merchant marine seamen. Article 58 forbids organization of farm or ranch workers.

National labor associations are controlled by the Comiscao Tecnica de Orientaco Sindical, which has four members named by and responsible to Labor Minister Dr. Alexandre Marcondes Filho. Its duties are "to develop harmony between labor unions and the employers union" (the syndical system being used for both employers and labor), "to orientate union life in accord with governmental aims, to furnish courses of study for union members and to collaborate with unions in all ways."

Each worker must give one day's pay a year to the officially recognized union in his trade, whether he is a member or not, according to Decree 2377. Of this sum, 20 per cent went to the union and the remainder to the Labor Ministry until Decree 4298, issued May 14, 1942, set up a "Union Social Fund."

Now 20 per cent goes to the union, 20 per cent to the fund and the rest to the Labor Ministry. Union meetings may be held if a police permit is obtained five days beforehand. If more than 10 per cent attend, a police representative must be present.

All union executives in Brazil must be native born. Names, ages, marriage status, trade, nationality and addresses of all union members must be furnished the authorized representative of the Labor Ministry. Union elections are held under the chairmanship of this representative "if deemed necessary." The employer automatically deducts union dues.

Union budgets must be approved by the Labor Ministry. Violation of laws governing unions is punishable by fines of from 100 to 5,000 cruzeiros ($5.20 to $260), suspension of executives or withdrawal of the union's operating license. A license costs 200 cruzeiros ($10.40).

CIO Woman Puts All In War Bonds

East Pittsburgh, Pa., Mar. 25—A record of support for the war just about 100 per cent perfect is that of Mrs. Anna Rossetti, CIO member working in the Westinghouse Electric & Mfg. Co. plant here, who has signed up to have all of her pay go into War Bonds.

She belongs to Local 601, United Electric, Radio & Machine Workers, and has worked at the plant for three years.

Mrs. Rossetti's husband Ralph, who is also a CIO member formerly employed at the same plant, is now in military service. She has a brother who is a paratrooper, and her husband's brother is in the Marines.

WLB Upholds USA-CIO

Washington—The WLB has reaffirmed a decision of the Sixth Regional Board in Chicago granting a standard voluntary maintenance of membership provision to the United Steelworkers of America, CIO, in its contract with the Western Foundry Co.

Political Action Meet Planned For Far West

LOS ANGELES, Mar. 25—A broad, CIO-sponsored conference on postwar plans for full employment and full production in the West, was sketched by chairman Sidney Hillman of the CIO Political Action Committee in conferences here with press and CIO union representatives during a swift inspection tour of progress in the political field.

Hillman told newspapermen that within four weeks CIO may announce dates and details of such a people's parley which would bring together groups from all sections of the far west's population—farmers, consumers, businessmen, manufacturers, cooperators—to discuss in a practical way economic problems affecting common people of the far west and the political emergency facing them today.

The proposed conference would parallel, with western emphasis, the highly successful national conference, recently held in New York and participated in by representatives of agriculture, small business, labor, etc.

Hillman highlighted the urgency of people's political action task in 1944 by declaring it the key to the kind of peace that will follow victory. Unless there is effective planning for full employment in the postwar period, he warned, we will be back in the old morass of depression and unemployment, though victorious. But if this postwar slump comes, it would be worse than anything previous—with 15,000,000 jobless nationally and 1,000,000 laid off here in California, "unless you plan in some way to prevent it."

REGISTER TO VOTE

He reiterated the urgency of all-out voters' registration by direct contact with all eligibles in shops, factories, neighborhoods, and made crystal clear his committee's determination to get really representative votes in 1944, contrasting with 1942 when only one-third of the potential electorate voted.

The CIO political organization will work with or beside all organizations and groups who back acceptable candidates, regardless of party labels, Hillman said, citing examples showing that in some sections of the country the CIO's political support is going to Republican candidates, in others to Democratic candidates.

"We cross party lines all the time in seeking out and supporting the best candidates throughout the country," he said.

Emphatically he expressed his committee's continuing opposition to third party building.

"We believe we can best operate within the two party system, picking candidates who will stand for real issues at this critical time."

Paramount among these issues as Hillman enumerated them are two:

1. After winning the war to achieve the kind of peace that gives assurance of lasting. Isolationism versus cooperation between the United Nations constitutes an issue squarely before the American people.

"There's no question that thet decision of the majority of Americans will be for International cooperation. We want this issue put squarely before the American people without confusion. Isolationism means only preparation for another world catastrophe."

2. After victory, what will happen to working millions engaged in war production and to our whole industrial structure? "We must plan for full employment, full production."

Hillman indicated no economic program would meet requirements of CIO political action unless it provided for production yielding national income of 130 to 150 billion dollars annually.

CIO Anti-Bias Unit Maps 7-Point Drive

CHICAGO, Mar. 25—Definite policies for the handling of specific cases of discrimination against individual workers were enunciated here this week at a meeting of the National CIO Committee to Abolish Racial Discrimination. The committee also drew up a seven-point program for the guidance of state councils that are setting up committees in various areas throughout the country.

Other action taken by the committee included plans to ask each state Council to appoint a liaison officer to serve as liaison for both the Council and the National Committee. The committee voted its endorsement of the Dawson-Scanlon bill, now pending in Congress, which calls for the establishment of the Fair Employment Practice Committee as a permanent federal agency to stamp out discriminatory practices now and in the postwar era as well.

AWARD TO EIGHT

One significant action taken by the committee was the voting of awards to eight persons who have been outstanding in their efforts to stamp out discrimination of all sorts.

"This issuance of awards is not a mere gesture of goodwill," said Chairman James B. Carey. "These awards will be issued with extreme caution because they are in effect official commendations by the national CIO."

Those named to receive the awards were Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, R. J. Thomas, CIO president and president of the UAW; Irving Abramson, chairman of the National CIO War Relief Committee; Jack Kroll, president of the Ohio CIO Council; Lester B. Granger, executive secretary of the National Urban League, and the Most Rev. Frances J. Haas, Catholic bishop of Grand Rapids, Mich., and former head of FEPC.

Committee members present at the meeting were Chairman Carey, Willard S. Townsend, president of the UTSEA and committee secretary; Jim Leary, secretary of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers; Morris Muster, president of the United Furniture Workers; Harry Read, American Newspaper Guild; Walter Hardin, United Automobile Workers, and Boyd Wilson, United Steelworkers. Committee Director George L. P. Weaver announced that Ferdinand Smith, secretary of the National Maritime Union, had been prevented by important union business from attending the meeting.

The seven-point program outlining the functions of state committees was as follows:

1. To form anti-discrimination committees in each city and county Industrial Union Council and local Union.

2. To hold conferences in different areas of the state to discuss the most pressing problems, and to formulate a program of action therefrom.

3. To distribute materials bearing on the subject to various anti-discrimination committees and other interested groups and individuals in their state.

4. To be at the service of all city and county councils and local unions in their state.

5. To co-ordinate committee programs in their state.

6. To co-operate with other responsible community groups and people whose programs are consistent with the CIO.

7. To develop projects for local and county committees that will lead towards better racial relations in our unions and the community.

Step 1 Establish a Registration Committee in Your Plant.

Step 2 Secure Complete Membership Lists with Correct Addresses.

Step 3 Type, Mimeograph or Print Three File Cards for Each Member. (Your local Poltical Action Committee may furnish you with these cards.) These cards should give:

Name .....
Address .....
Ward ..... Precinct ..... Local .....
Registered ..... Not Registered .....
Remarks .....

Many plants have used their shop stewards as the Registration Committee. Some plants decided to use other workers who are not already burdened. Use your judgment. But keep in mind that to carry the registration drive to the work on the job, registration representatives should function in every department on every shift in the plant.

Your list of the workers in your plant will become the basis of all operations in this drive. It is, therefore, most important that the list should be complete and correct.

Step 4 Check Your Set of Cards Against Registration Rolls at Election Board.

Step 5 Keep one card in your local union registration committee file. Send two copies to the county, city or other Labor Action Committee for the community in which the member lives.

Step 6 Distribute the non-registered cards to members of your plant committee for action.

Step 7 Contact each non-registered worker by personal interview.

Step 8 Make registration convenient.

Step 9 Change-of-address cards in permanent registration areas.

Step 10 Make registration popular.

Step 11 Let us know what you are doing.

The job is yours — The time is growing short.

There is no time to lose.

Get your Registration Committee under way.

Stay behind it as if your life depended on it.

Our lives depend on the outcome of the 1944 elections. Don't ever forget that!

Let us all prove that whatever Labor undertakes — Labor does well.

No relaxing until the job is done!

One word about New residents

Some county election officials sell registration lists. Others distribute them upon request. In some places, rolls can be checked only at the election office where they are kept. As soon as your file is complete, check all cards against the registration rolls, because you cannot always rely on a voter's statement that he is registered. Sometimes he may think he is—when, in fact, he isn't. Separate the non-registered cards from the others.

The job of the community Political Action Committee will be to create a master file broken down by wards and precincts as a basis for community political organization. One set of your cards will go into that master file. The other set will be needed for the canvassers. (Our next pamphlet will describe the organization of wards and precincts.)

Call a meeting of your plant Registration Committee. Decide how to divide up the task of reaching the non-registered workers. Decide whether you want to mimeograph a slip to be handed to the non-registered workers which would inform them that they are not registered and tell them exactly how they can get registered.

Contact each non-registered worker and tell him how, when, where and why he should register. Follow up the contact and find out whether he has registered. Upon his registration, note the information on his card. After all the non-registered workers have been canvassed, forward the names of the non-registered voters to the city, county, or other Political Action Committee.

Some unions have obtained registration booths in their plants or at local union meetings. Some union members have been deputized as registrars. Other unions have held special meetings at which registration was the main item of business. Where registration is required at some central point such as the County Clerk's office, some unions have organized automobile parties to provide group transportation to the registration place.

In some States they provide for permanent registration, but require the filing of change-of-address cards. If you are in such a state, obtain a supply of these cards from the election commissioners, distribute them in your shop and take care of delivering the signed cards to the proper authorities.

Popularize the idea of registration in your shop in every possible way. Prepare posters. Prepare local leaflets. Make registration a part of the regular order of business of each shop and local meeting. Wear "I Have Registered" buttons and ask others who do not wear them whether they have registered as yet, and if not, ask them not to delay it.

Report to the Regional Political Action Committee Director the progress of your drive. If you have any ideas to help the drive in other plants, send them to him. If you get any ideas which you think we should try nationally, write directly to the National Office. We need your good ideas.

Steel Wage Fight Leads Struggle for All Labor

Pay Demands' Aim Is Stabilized War Economy

(See Current Story—Page 3; Supplement—Center Pages)

WASHINGTON, Apr. 1—A six-man panel of the Natl. War Labor Board heard Pres. Philip Murray of CIO and the United Steelworkers of America speak for all labor this week as Murray wound up the USA's case for a 17 cents an hour wage increase to help the USA's three quarters of a million members meet the rising cost of living.

In language no one could misunderstand and summoning irrefutable facts to back up his case, Murray proved that the 15 per cent increase granted the steelworkers under the Little Steel Formula is unquestionably inadequate to meet the 43.5 per cent rise in the cost of living.

Murray told of corporation profits ranging to the fantastic figure of 406 per cent, of steel company executives "earning" $527,000 a year, and of steelworkers who are forced to go into debt because they are so poorly paid.

Polltax Repeal On Deck Apr. 17!

Washington, Apr. 1—The polltax repeal bill (HR 7) will come up in the Senate for debate and a vote Apr. 17, the day Congress gets back from the Easter recess.

This committment was made to the Natl. Committee to Abolish the Polltax by Sen. Mead (D., N. Y.), who said he had an agreement from majority leader Sen. Barkley (D., Ky.) to bring it up them.

The bill will pass if 65 Senators will vote for cloture, which would end debate and kill a filibuster. While your Senators are at home for the recess, tell them what to do—no matter how many times you've told them before.

4-Star 'E' Awards To Union Plants

Washington, Apr. 1—22 CIO and 15 AFL firms were among 75 plants, arsenals and shipyards that have so far been awarded the 4-Star Army-Navy E, the War Production Board announced this week. The 4-Star award is the highest yet made to any war plant.

LEARNING TO WORK again after being wounded in battle is Pfc. Eugene Carbonetti, a member of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers, whose life was saved by blood plasma after he was machine gunned in Italy. He is shown above, at Walter Reed Hospital in Washington, D. C., with Mrs. Helen Bishop, Red Cross recreational worker, assisting him in developing coordination of muscles he will need to use when he goes back to his civilian job.

Waive Initiation Fees for Soldiers— Murray to Unions

WASHINGTON, Apr. 1—Waiver of union initiation fees for members of the armed forces returning to employment in shops under contract with CIO unions was urged this week by CIO Pres. Philip Murray. Meanwhile at least five CIO unions have already taken steps in line with Pres. Murray's recommendation—the United Automobile Workers-CIO, United Electrical, Radio & Mabuilding, United Furniture Workers and the Amalgamated Clothing Workers—with action expected from others in the immediate future.

Murray, in a letter to all CIO unions, said:

UNION PROTECTION

"The CIO and its affiliated unions have consistently endeavored to take all possible steps in the interest and for the protection of the men and women in the armed forces. With this objective we have fought to protect the cumulative seniority rights of men and women who leave any of the plants which we have covered with collective bargaining agreements so that upon their honorable discharge from the services they can return on the basis of such seniority.

"In addition, our unions have exonerated all of their members who have left for the armed forces from the payment of dues while in the service. This means that they have been kept in good standing in their respective unions.

"An increasing number of men and women are being currently released from the services and are being re-employed.

"I believe it is extremely important that they should be afforded the opportunity of becoming members of the CIO unions without the need of paying any initiation fees.

"This would simply be an extension of the protection which the CIO and its membership seek to offer to the service men and women. Many of the CIO unions have already put this policy into effect.

"I most earnestly urge that this matter be taken up by each international union and the proposal be adopted through your appropriate tribunal."

Daily Press Lies To Servicemen, GI Paper Says

WASHINGTON, Apr. 1—Most of the big daily newspapers have been lying about labor to fighting men overseas and the boys are plenty sore about it, according to John Lord, in his column, "Exclusive," published in the March 1 issue of the Midpacifican, the Army newspaper in Hawaii.

Headlining his piece, "You Can't Find These Facts in Most Newspaper," Lord wrote:

"It is now possible to prove that most of the big daily newspapers have been lying to fighting men overseas for many months.

"Front-page stories, feature stories, cartoons, and editorials have given us to understand that our brothers, fathers, sisters, mothers, aunts, uncles, and friends back in the States have been sabotaging the 'Battle of Production' with wide-spread strikes.

"IT ISN'T SO"

"We thought it was so, and raised plenty of hell about it.

"But it isn't so.

"While our leaders have been begging for 'unity' almost daily in newspaper stories . . . newspapers have been sabotaging that powerful war-winning force by driving wedges of lies between us and our folks back home.

"Here's the proof:

"The recently released annual report (1943) of the US Dept. of Labor says,

" 'The no-strike pledge of labor leaders . . . was kept at a rate of better than 99 per cent during the year; the ratio of man-days lost through strikes to time worked was 8/100th of 1 per cent. That is a good record in any field of human relations.'

"The folks back home worked 10,000 hours for every eight hours they lost!"

CIO Plan Aids Vets Get Jobs

New York, April 1—A plan to provide jobs for rehabilitated servicemen has been formulated by Local 134, United Rubber Workers Union and the L. E. Waterman Co. here.

The plan provides for hiring such workers in the grinding and fitting departments, with the company to start a school to train veterans. They will be paid a guaranteed minimum wage while training. Those who make a success of their jobs within 12 weeks will be placed on piece work rates.

96% for CIO, Phooey For Martin Dies

Ft. Worth, Tex., Apr. 1—Deep in the heart of Martin Dies' Congressional District, the workers are better than 96 per cent for CIO!

Proof this week was the NLRB vote of B. F. Goodrich Rubber employes at nearby Port Neches—290 for the CIO Workers Intl. Union to only 9 against, according to William B. Taylor, national director of the Oil Workers Organizing Campaign.

CIO Mine, Mill Wage Victory Shows up Lewis

WASHINGTON, Apr. 1—The U. S. Supreme Court decision validating portal-to-portal pay for the CIO Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers is "a great victory for underground miners who have fought for many years" to win pay for travel time, CIO Pres. Philip Murray said this week.

Reviewing the efforts of the CIO and the MM&SW to win this decision, as contrasted with the John L. Lewis refusal four years to go along with CIO's legal efforts, Murray said:

"In 1940, the CIO and the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers initiated proceedings under the Wage and Hour law in order to compel employers of iron ore miners to pay for all working time underground, including travel time.

GREAT VICTORY

"The U. S. Supreme Court, in a suit involving the CIO Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, has sustained the decisions of the courts below which approved the claim of the iron ore miners.

"This decision reflects a great victory for underground miners who have fought for many years to establish the principle of payment for underground work, including travel time."

Pay for travel time, which involves frequently as much as an hour and a half a day between the pithead and the working face of a mine, has long been a major demand of union miners.

Back in 1940, the CIO Union headed by Pres. Reid. Robinson, started its suit under the Wage Hour Act. Through United Mine Workers attorneys, John L. Lewis refused to go along with the CIO on the legal process. Instead, Lewis "saved" the issue as part of his strike buildup last year.

As a result, the CIO miners today have travel time pay sewed up in a decision of the highest court in the land. Without fanfare, without work stoppages, the CIO has won the point.

The case was handled for the CIO by Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel.

CIO-AFL Peace Pact Sets up Machinery to Ban 'Beefs' in N. Y.

NEW YORK, Apr. 1—Establishment of a joint CIO-AFL Committee and supporting machinery for voluntary and speedy settlement of disputes or any frictions between New York City affiliates of the CIO and AFL was announced this week at the office of Mayor LaGuardia.

Hailed as "the greatest contribution to the nation's war effort since promulgation of labor's no-strike pledge," an agreement establishing the Joint AFL-CIO Industry Relations Committee for New York was signed by officers of the CIO Greater New York Industrial Union Council and the AFL Building and Construction Trades Council of Greater New York, with Mayor LaGuardia participating as official witness.

The agreement, following pronounced policies of both national organizations of the CIO and AFL, decries rivalries and frictions between unions which might interfere with labor's united support of the war effort and charges to the joint AFL-CIO Committee the responsibility of resolving "through mediation and other voluntary means disputes submitted for its action.

Howard McSpedon, president of the AFL Building and Construction Trades Council, and Saul Mills, secretary of the New York CIO Council, co-chairmen of the Joint AFL-CIO Committee, issued the following joint statement:

"There is no issue or dispute within the ranks of organized labor which can be permitted to stand in the way of labor making its utmost contribution to our nation's war effort.

"We look upon this agreement, between the local unions affiliated with the Building and Construction Trades Council of the AFL and the Greater New York Industrial Union Council of the CIO, as the first step toward greater cooperation and unity between the main labor organizations in this City.

"We hope and trust that what we are accomplishing here shall make it possible for New York labor not only to fulfill its current war obligations, but to lay the foundation for the greater responsibilities ahead—the building of a durable peace with guarantees of full employment and security for our returning war veterans and our home front soldiers of production."

A clause in the agreement provides that the Joint AFL-CIO Committee "does not have nor shall it assume any authority to determine or define the jurisdiction of any union." This is designed to avoid having the Committee bogged down with issues which can be settled only by national and international unions, and avoids any possibility of interference with the constitutional provisions of national unions.

Only those disputes or matters submitted "voluntarily" can be taken up by the Committee.

Signing the agreement were:

For CIO: Joseph Curran, Ernest Rudloff, Saul Mills, Pete Mosele and James McLeish.

For AFL: Howard McSpedon, John Brennan, Martin T. Lacey, Edward Carlough and Tim Spillane.

NMU Political Pamphlet Tells Score

New York, Apr. 1—A rank and file political action campaign and the running of a political machine can't be compared, says a pamphlet called "Take the Helm," issued here this week by the National Maritime Union.

The 32-page illustrated booklet written for merchant seamen by NMU Pres. Joseph Curran explains how to be active politically both aboard ship and in port, and lists the members of a number of important Senate and House Committees by states with the suggestion that union members write to them frequently to ask them where they stand.

"Remember these office-holders are public servants," says the pamphlet. "They are supposed to listen to the voice of the people—your voice."

Copies of the pamphlet may be obtained from the Natl. Maritime Union office, 346 W. 17th St., New York City.

Servicemen's Canteen

Brooklyn, N. Y., Apr. 1—A servicemen's canteen has been organized here by Local 21, United Federal Workers. The canteen is open every Saturday night, serving beer and sandwiches to members of the armed forces and providing recreation for them, at 5318 4th Ave.

Demand Monty-Ward Obey WLB

Chicago, Apr. 1—Immediate action to force Montgomery-Ward, big mail order house, to comply with an order of the War Labor Board to extend a CIO contract covering the firm's Chicago properties was demanded here this week by a committee of prominent citizens in the Chicago area.

In a statement backing the CIO United Retail, Wholesale & Warehouse Workers Union, which is asking the WLB to slap down Montgomery-Ward for its defiance of an order issued last January, the Committee said:

"Failure of the Board to enforce its order now threatens to bring about a complete breakdown in industrial relations in this instance . . . The success of the WLB, indeed its very existence is dependent upon an acceptance of its decisions by the parties concerned.

"If an employer is permitted to defy the legally constituted authority of the Board, certainly compliance will not be forthcoming from other recalcitrants."

At a hearing held this week in Washington, the company's labor relations manager told the WLB that the company would not obey the order because it was awaiting decision on a case now before the Federal District Court asking that the Board's directive be declared illegal and that the WLB be enjoined from taking steps to enforce it.

We Could Forget 'Em All, Too!

Newark, N. J., Apr. 1—State CIO forces here are mobilizing to defeat a proposal to amend the U. S. constitution to limit Federal taxes to 25 per cent of gross income. In a letter to all N. J. Assemblymen, Irving Abramson, state CIO president, branded it as a device to relieve the wealthy of their proper share of the cost of the war.

The proposed amendment is being sponsored by Frank E. Gannett's "Committee to Save the Constitution," which has been described as a pro-fascist outfit in John Ray Carlson's best-selling "Under Cover."

If passed as an amendent to the U. S. Consitution, it would mean that the low income groups would have to make up the loss in revenue—obviously by a sales tax.

Murray Welcomes U.S. Visit Of Australian Premier

WASHINGTON, Apr. 1—The CIO "most heartily" welcomes the visit of Australian Prime Minister John Curtin to the U. S., Pres. Murray said this week in a cable to the Australian press.

"We are sure his visit will help bind closer together the workers as well as all the people of both countries in our common victory effort," Murray said.

Premier Curtin is head of the Australian labor government that was returned in an election a few months ago. Every Australian soldier and sailor voted in the election, even those in foxholes.

Under Australian voting laws, soldiers and sailors receive a simple, short and uniform Federal ballot regardless of where they are serving. Balloting is done under supervision of a specially designated officer and a "scrutineer" who watches to see that the ballot is secret.

The Australians in the armed forces voted overwhelmingly for the labor candidates in the election last year.

USA-CIO Wage Case Proves Steel Formula Wrong—Murray

Unity Slate In ALP Win

New York, Apr. 1—A smashing victory for the forces of Sidney Hillman, the CIO Political Action Committee, and the Committee for a United Labor Party, marked the primary election contests in the ALP in New York state March 28.

Wresting complete control of the party away from the present "inept, narrow clique leadership" despite an anti-Hillman, anti-CIO smear campaign unequalled in local or state politics, the United Labor Committee forces won 61 out of 62 counties in the state, lost only one assembly district in Brooklyn, and won all eight assembly districts in the Bronx. Sixty-five out of 68 assembly districts were won by the Committee.

In one of the largest outpourings of ALP voters in a primary contest, the rank-and-file, by their votes, completely repudiated the fake "communist" issue injected by the Rose-Dubinsky-Alfange-Counts clique, which was the sole "argument" of the defeated group.

Hillman, Chairman of the CIO Political Action Committee, hailed the state-wide victory of insurgent forces within the ALP "as a complete vindication of our bid for democratic representation in the party leadership." The victory of the progressive forces now paves the way for unified labor and liberal action in New York state for the crucial 1944 national elections and beyond.

"The real issue before the ALP voters," Hillman declared after the election, "was simply to break the monopolistic grip of the party by the Rose-Alfange-Dubinsky-Counts group. They never represented the majority of the ALP rank-and-file and the results of the primaries demonstrate that fact once and for all.

"The vote shatters the fiction carefully developed by the party leadership that, if they were defeated, it would be as a result of a 'communist' vote. No one will believe the nonsense that such a great section of the ALP electorate, which voted them out of office today, is communist.

"Now that the primary contest is over, I renew my offer, in the spirit of Mayor LaGuardia's proposals, which we promptly accepted, to meet with the Rose-Dubinsky-Counts group, to draw up a slate for the state executive committee, and to expand and democratize the party in our common interests in the national elections of 1944 and beyond."

Oklahoma OK as FDR Forces Win

Washington, Apr. 1—The much advertised "test election" in Oklahoma was won this week by an FDR supporter, Democrat W. G. Stigler, over the stiffest anti-Administration opposition yet put up.

The vote, which put the Democrat in by approximately 4,000, was carefully built up by Republicans and by practically all the daily papers as a decisive preview of the 1944 election.

The campaign was fought almost wholly around the voters' attitude toward FDR. Sen. Alben Barkley, (D., Ky.) was one of the Administration big guns that spoke for Stigler.

PANEL: This is the six-man special panel of the War Labor Board that started hearing the United Steelworkers case in Washington this week. The panel represents management, the public and labor. From left: for industry, Hugh Morrow, Edwin D. Bransome, both presidents of steel firms; for the public, N. P. Feinsinger, panel chairman David L. Cole; for labor, John Despol, San Francisco, and Stephen Levitzky, Pittsburgh. The last two are Intl. Representatives of USA-CIO.

Smear-Punk Dies a Liar, Says Hillman

With this simple and direct statement, Sidney Hillman, chairman of the CIO Political Action Committee, this week brushed aside the polltax smear artist's latest attempt to red-bait the CIO and the millions of patriotic Americans now busy at war jobs and at win-the-war political work.

"Dies' effort to divide and weaken the progressive forces and divert their attention from the real issues to false and phony issues is bound to fail," Hillman added.

"His methods may have had some success in the past, but they won't work today. The best proof that Dies can no longer mislead the people is written in the results of the ALP election in New York."

(By an unhappy choice of release date on Dies' part, his "report" on the Political Action Committee came out the same day that N. Y. American Labor Party voters crushed a red-baiting, splitting attempt by forces led by ILG Pres. David Dubinsky to destroy the ALP by the red herring method.)

ALP VOTE DISOWNS DIES

ALP voters, Hillman pointed out, showed that the "hysterical cry of 'communism'" doesn't bring the reflex that Dies and his followers have banked on for years to stop progressive trade union and political action.

"Voters in other states will give the same answer to Dies in November," Hillman said. "That is what he fears. That is why he uses his committee to spread lies, disunity, and hatred throughout the nation in a desperate effort to protect the political hides of himself and his allies."

MURRAY STATEMENT

From Washington, CIO Pres. Murray called on Congress to discontinue the disruptive activities of Mr. Dies' committee."

Answering Dies' charge that CIO political action was directed against Congress as such, Murray said: "Any danger at the present time to that institution stems only from the irresponsible activities of the group symbolized by Mr. Dies himself.

"At this grave moment in the history of our nation when all the people should be united—this individual concentrates on falsehoods and smearing to disrupt and sow the seeds of dissension."

There's nothing more to add to a story on the latest Dies Committee "report." Even the daily newspapers played it down—way down—except, of course, the Hearst-Patterson-McCormick anti-American newspaper alliance.

The Washington Post, for example, put the story on page 7B of the second section, opposite the society page—an insult to the Capital's "best families."

Living Costs Are Zooming Far Beyond Pay

WASHINGTON, Apr. 1—The steelworkers' wage case demonstrates "the obvious, glaring deficiencies in both the operation of the Oct. 2 Stabilization Act and the administration of the so-called Little Steel formula," USA-CIO Pres. Philip Murray said this week in winding up the union's brief before the WLB steel panel.

Following Murray's concluding speech, the panel adjourned until April 18, when the 90-odd companies involved will start presenting their demands and their attempted rebuttal of the union's case.

"We have proved," Murray said, "that living costs have gone far beyond the amounts estimated by the BLS, and have sought through the processes of impartial investigations, to ascertain for your benefit all of the pertinent facts relevant to that phase of the situation.

"We contend, and justifiably so, that the wage rates now existent in the steel industry are wholly inadequate to meet the needs of the workers employed in this great basic industry."

Earlier in the week's hearings, the panel heard USA-CIO Sec.-Treas. David J. McDonald finish the reading of the 166 page brief, and heard argument from him and from Lee Pressman, USA-CIO general counsel.

Murray's final speech to the panel, in summing up organized labor's case for revision of Little Steel, pointed out that the union was seeking only to make economic stabilization a reality.

"The development of the 1942 law gave substantial commitments to the people of the U. S. that there would be effective price control, effective control of profits and realistic, equitable tax laws," he said.

"These commitments have not been carried out. Only wages have been stabilized. Price control has been lax. The tax laws have helped the rich and the corporations at the expense of the workers and the nation as a whole.

"American corporate interests, as a result of the carry-back provisions of our present tax laws, have without question a lien upon the Federal Treasury, a lien upon the taxpayers of the U. S., a lien upon our country, a lien amounting to billions of dollars. . . ."

According to Murray, this "carry-back and carry-forward" trick in the tax laws guarantees corporation profits upon "one and one-half times their peacetime profits, although their operations may be reduced to a negligible factor."

This taxpayers' money, handed out by the hundreds of millions to the wealthiest corporations in America, could be used against labor and against the nation, he warned.

"I do not know to what extent the great steel industry is going to go into its public campaign against the steelworkers in these present proceedings. I do not know how much money they intend spending.

"They may use it in national advertising . . . But I should like to warn them that if this money is going to be used for these dire purposes, the people of the U. S. will get to know something about it."

In concluding his speech, Murray reiterated previous statements on the no-strike pledge, in which he said all too frequently the companies tried to provoke stoppages in order to turn public opinion against the union. At a result, he pointed out, a great deal of the union's time and personnel was being spent on smoothing out critical situations brought about by company provocation.

"It is now possible to prove that most of the big daily newspapers have been lying to fighting men overseas for many months."—Midpacifican, Army Newspaper in Hawaii

CIO Fights For Fighting Men

There are many signs these days that American servicemen are becoming fed up with the diet of anti-labor lies which is dished out to them by so much of the press.

The Servicemen's Edition of The CIO NEWS has received countless letters from men in the armed forces expressing indignation at the way the anti-labor propagandists have tried to play them for suckers.

The same thought is also expressed in many letters and articles by servicemen appearing in Army papers.

Whenever labor gets a chance to tell its side of the story, the servicemen have little difficulty in determining who their real friends are.

They scorn the slimy propagandists who are trying to "drive a wedge of lies" between them and their folks back home, as one Army writer expresses it; and they realize that American labor is winning the battle of production and plugging for their interests in every way it can.

Two recent statements of CIO Pres. Philip Murray illustrate some of the practical ways in which labor is going to bat for our fighting men.

In one of these he throws the whole weight of the CIO behind the "GI Bill" to provide jobs and educational opportunities for veterans, and loans to reestablish them in business and on farms, as well as behind the mustering-out pay bill of the veterans' organizations.

In the other statement, Murray scotches the anti-labor lie that unions will interfere with the re-employment of veterans.

He points out that CIO contracts protect the seniority rights of men and women who enter the armed forces from the plants covered; and that CIO unions exonerate service members from dues payments and keep them in good standing until they return.

Murray also points out that many CIO unions provide that servicemen who have not been members before may join the union on their return to civilian life without having to pay any initiation fees.

He urges every CIO union which has not already done so to place this policy into effect.

The CIO knows our fighting men are fighting for us, and it will fight for them right down the line—through all-out production, through union action, through political action, and in every other way that will help to speed their victorious return and to give them the post-war security and opportunity to which they are entitled.

Labor's Case

The CIO United Steelworkers are carrying the ball for all of labor in their vitally important wage case before the National War Labor Board.

The great volume of evidence accumulated by the union for this case presents for the first time a comprehensive picture of current wages, living costs, taxes and their effect on the health of our economy.

Every worker, and every American for that matter, should study this evidence. Every labor organization should see that it gets the widest publicity and should back up the Steelworkers to the limit.

For a victory for the Steelworkers will be a victory for all labor, and for our country.

Dies Lies

Every progressive democratic movement has been "red-baited" by its reactionary opposition, including the American Revolution, the Roosevelt New Deal and the great upsurge of CIO industrial organization.

The quantity of smears and slanders is usually in direct proportion to the significance and importance of the movement concerned.

It is therefore a tribute to the importance of the CIO Political Action Committee that it should immediately draw the fire of Martin Dies and his kind.

But Dies underestimates the intelligence of the American public if he thinks it will swallow such a concoction of ancient and discredited smears as he has dished out.

So far as we can gauge the general reaction to his attack on the CIO Political Action Committee, it is a series of bored yawns, a few titters at the obvious absurdity of most of his "evidence," and some loud boos from the more serious-minded.

The American Labor Party voters in New York State gave the most appropriate answer, with their overwhelming majority for united labor political action, as advocated by the CIO, and their complete repudiation of the faction which imitated Dies' tactics.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

THERE'S NOTHING so sensational as the truth. But it's hard to get some people to believe it.

Writers of popular fiction know the public is so accustomed to certain patterns for plots that if their stories are too close to real life they will actually seem "unreal" or "unfamiliar."

Newspaper propaganda similarly has created an unreal world of ideas which has become more familiar to millions of people than the real world.

In this unreal world, war workers are supposed to be enjoying huge wages and living on the fat of the land. Unions are pictured as selfish and grasping, while business groans under the weight of terrific taxes.

When the facts are brought out which do not fit into this pattern, most of the press dismisses them as "propaganda."

The most sensational story of the year is to be found in the studies and reports submitted by Pres. Philip Murray to the War Labor Board in connection with the 17c wage increase demand of the CIO United Steelworkers.

But the facts revealed are in such glaring contrast to current newspaper propaganda that most editors act like the man who saw a giraffe for the first time and insisted "there isn't such an animal."

Conscious of its responsibility to labor and the nation, in presenting a case which will test the nation's whole wartime wage policy, the United Steelworkers' union began months ago to make the most careful and thorough studies of the real facts about wages, living costs, profits, taxes etc.

The CIO had long questioned the cost of living figures of the Bureau of Labor Statistics. When the President's cost of living committee was set up, it joined with the AFL in making the first really down-to-earth study on this subject—which showed living costs to be nearly twice as high as the BLS claimed.

But parallel with this CIO-AFL study, the United Steelworkers also conducted a most comprehensive study of its own into the actual wages and living expenses of 1,000 typical steelworkers.

The complete results of this research have now been submitted to the board. They reveal that one-third of the families covered do not have bathrooms, and 16% lack even running water in their homes.

The average steelworker's family, with present wages, has a low standard of living which allows for only 61c per person per day for food, cannot buy adequate clothing, has insufficient money for proper medical care and little or none for recreation and amusement.

Although he is working longer hours than ever before, with increased weekly earnings, the average steelworker finds living costs so much higher that he can barely keep the wolf from the door and is actually going into debt.

In addition to the above-mentioned studies, the United Steelworkers prepared a 166-page brief chock-full of startling facts never before assembled on profits, taxes and other aspects of our wartime economy.

In contrast to the low living standards of war workers with frozen wages, it found that corporate profits even after taxes have risen to record heights; that tremendous reserves and undistributed profits are being salted away; that taxes have hardly made a dent in war profiteering; and that corporation executives are enjoying enormous salaries.

Among the many sensational revelations in Pres. Murray's brief is the fact that corporation profits are guaranteed by Congress for two years after the war, through a system of tax refunds from the public treasury to offset possible losses.

★ ★ ★

These three studies—the CIO-AFL cost of living report, the study of steelworkers' incomes and expenditures, and the United Steelworkers' brief for the WLB panel—present the most complete and accurate picture yet prepared of wartime economic conditions.

It is not a pretty picture. It is a picture of a lopsided economy, in which unrestrained profiteering threatens increasing inflation, while the health and efficiency of millions of war workers suffer from frozen wages and sky-high living costs.

But it is not a hopeless picture. For Pres. Murray points out the obvious means of correcting each rotten condition which he exposes.

To bring wages and living costs into balance, the Little Steel formula must be revised. To give workers some of the security enjoyed by corporations and farm-proprietors, a guaranteed annual wage is suggested.

To check profiteering and inflation, there must be adequate taxation of high war profits and the strictest price control.

CIO Wins For Miners

If the coal miners are finally assured the portal-to-portal pay principle, they may thank the CIO—the movement which they helped found but which their president now so loudly abuses.

Long before John L. Lewis started to bluster and belly-ache on this subject, the CIO and the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers Union went quietly and constructively to work to establish the portal-to-portal principle for iron ore miners.

The CIO's case, carried from court to court, has now finally been sustained by the U. S. Supreme Court.

This decision "reflects a great and epochal victory for underground miners," CIO Pres. Murray points out. It assures the iron ore miners pay for previously unpaid time spent traveling underground.

We hope the coal miners too will benefit from this CIO victory.

Profits Soar— Wages Sag

Wages Frozen While Cost Of Living Soars

Back of the Steelworkers' demands for a 17 cent wage increase, and back of the whole CIO drive to bring wages in line with inflated living costs, lies a story of failure.

Not failure on the part of the workers, who've carried out their war commitments faithfully, but failure on the part of Congress—failure and deliberate refusal to act.

Back in April, '42, FDR proposed a seven-point program with a long name —"national economic policy." The program centered around price control, rationing, fair and adequate taxes, especially on profits, and wage stabilization.

CIO BACKED STABILIZATION

The program was designed to be a single, organic whole. As FDR said, "no single step would be adequate by itself . . . only an all-embracing program will suffice."

The CIO supported and welcomed the program, with FDR's statement in mind. Congress was warm to only one point—wage stabilization—and frigid to all the others.

Frigid is scarcely the word, because Congress proceeded not only to ignore the other points, but actually to wreck them.

Price control was hamstrung by slashing OPA appropriations and by putting crippling riders into the the Price Control Act. Taxes were taken off the rich and the big corporations and were put on the poor and the wage earners. A determined effort was made to jack food prices sky-high. Profits were not only let alone; they were underwritten and guaranteed for two years after the war, even if corporations "lose" money.

Meantime, living costs have run wild. Since January, '41, they've gone up 43.5 per cent on the average—on food alone, 74.2 per cent.

Labor States Its Case To the Nation

Many sensational facts about low wages, high living costs, guaranteed profits—and other injustices and special privileges which are throwing our war economy out of gear—are brought out for the first time in the voluminous evidence submitted to the War Labor Board by Pres. Philip Murray in support of the United Steelworkers' wage demands.

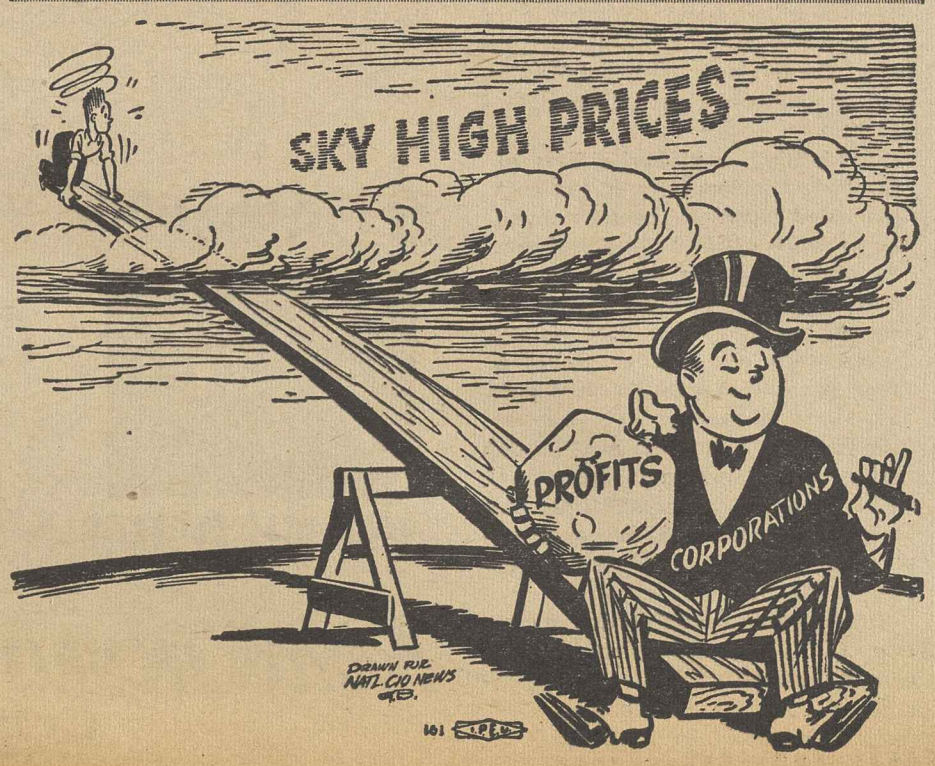
The evidence, like the case itself, goes far beyond the immediate confines of the steel industry.

For this is the first big test of labor's demand for revision of the Little Steel formula—to de-frost wages and bring them into balance with increased living costs.

It is the spearhead of labor's drive for a stable war economy, in which wages, prices and profits will be brought into a more efficient relationship, and inflation will be checked by strict price control, rationing, fair taxation and the other measures advocated in Pres. Roosevelt's seven-point program.

The CIO NEWS has therefore prepared this Special Supplement to present in easily readable and graphic fashion some of the main points brought out in this all-important case.

They concern every wage-earner and every other American who wants our economy to function with justice and maximum efficiency to speed the day of victory.



Spike Theory That Pay Hikes Cause Inflation

Back in '41, certain people were worrying about wage increases and how to stop them.

Simply denying a wage increase isn't enough; you have to have a reason for it, preferably one with a fancy theory attached.

So these people—economists, most of them—came up with the theory of the "inflationary gap" and why it must be closed by denying wage raises.

According to this theory, wage increases mean workers will buy more things. That's bad, the "gappers" say, because there aren't so many things to buy. Consequently, you have the inflationary gap between individual incomes and goods to buy, thus paving the way for inflation.

The theory is strictly bunk. In the first place, whatever inflation we have was set off not by paychecks but by profiteering, especially in '41, before the Little Steel formula was worked out.

In the second place (and this is the National City Bank, not a labor union, speaking): "Inflation is not a direct product of excess money; it is a product of human behavior. Money does not become wild by itself.

"It could be dangerous only when used wildly by the people who have it; and the significant thing that is happening now is that with some conspicuous exceptions, the financial behavior of the great bulk of our people has thus far been characterized by common sense."

Lack of control on profiteering makes for inflation, not wages. And as the CIO points out in seeking wage increases to help workers keep a little closer to the inflated cost of living:

"The wage demand of the steelworkers will not aggravate the "inflationary gap' . . . because the so-called gap is an abstraction that disregards the basic facts of the war economy."

War Profits 406% Above Peace Rate

One of the most shocking stories of the war that the daily press is keeping quietly buried on the inside pages—if it's published at all—is the exposure of the lush profits that American corporations are enjoying from the blood bath that is necessary for the extermination of fascism.

The brutal truth is that the corporations, which use up tons of newsprint to tell the story of their "patriotism," are profiting from the war to the tune of 406% higher profits, before taxes, than their pre-war average. And their profits are nearly 200% higher after they have ungraciously contributed part of their share toward the government's expense of wiping Hitler off the earth.

The seemingly fantastic tale is told in cold, irrefutable figures by Pres. Murray of the CIO United Steelworkers in his brief presented to the Natl. War Labor Board in support of the union's request for a 17 per cent increase in wages to meet the rise in the cost of living. This has shot upward 43.5 per cent—nearly 30 per cent more than the maximum of wage increases allowed under the so-called Little Steel formula.

3 BILLIONS IN PEACE

According to the USA-CIO, corporate profits before taxes in the 1936-39 peacetime average period totaled $4,464,000,000—enough money to provide a minimum living (at $2,500 a year) for 1,785,000 workers' families!

Steel Industry Reaps Lush Harvest from War

The public dampening of the steel industry's crying towel is strictly phoney, according to the CIO United Steelworkers of America. The poor-house cries of the steel magnates that the modest wage demands of the steelworkers will force an increase in steel prices are pure bunk, for the industry is in the lushest profit period of its history. Here's the score as listed in the USA-CIO's brief before the Natl. War Labor Board in support of the union's request for a 17-cents-an-hour raise:

1. Steel war profits have boomed to almost 350 per cent of the peacetime average.

2. The steel industry has total assets of over six billion dollars.

3. It has undistributed profits of nearly one billion.

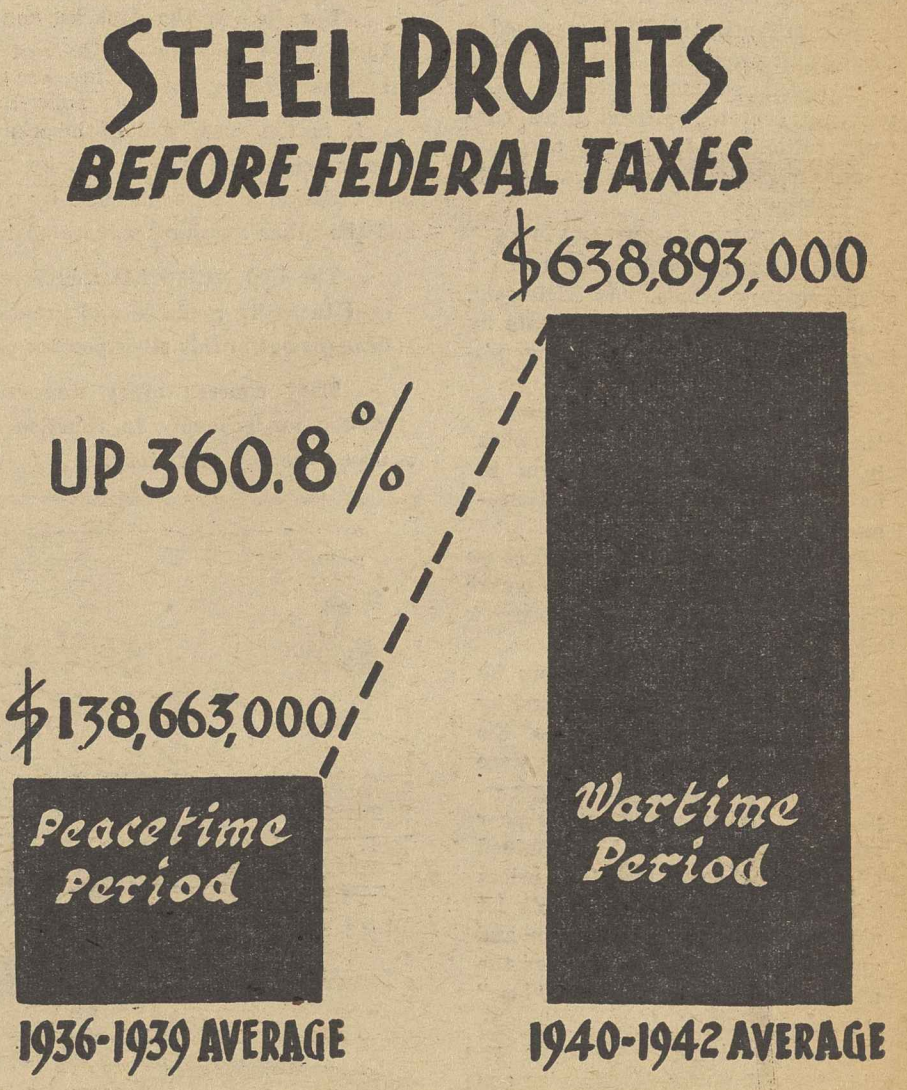
4. It has one of the highest "wage" scales paid to corporation executives by any industry.

"The steel industry's total assets have increased over one billion dollars during the war (not including the increase in 1943 over 1942)," the USA-CIO reported. "Its undistributed profits have mounted by over one-third of a billion dollars during the war; and its reserves have increased during the war by 161 million dollars."

Some of the industry's salaries are fabulous—Eugene Grace paid himself $527,000 in 1942 for his services as head of Bethlehem Steel, and R. J. Wysor knocked down a tidy $196,000 for his work as president of Republic Steel in 1942.

The picture is plain, according to the USA-CIO.

"An industry, like steel," the USA-CIO brief said, "with more than one and one-third billion dollars in resources, earning more than three-quarters of a billion dollars a year in profits before taxes, and with large portions of federal taxes refundable can surely meet the union's requested wage adjustment of less than a quarter of a billion dollars and the other requests of the union, which amount to approximately 104 million dollars."



Steelworkers In Debt, Prices Up 43.5 Pct.

Suppose some swanky dame or some war profiteer, or even your next door neighbor, who ought to know better, got you in a corner some night and began razzing you about the demands of the CIO United Steelworkers of America for a 17c hourly pay increase to meet the rise in the cost of living. Could you answer them?

If they began spouting crazy stories and unreliable figures from the anti-labor press about steel and other war workers getting such high wages that they don't know what to do with their money, and are tossing it around like hay, or packing it away in savings big enough to choke a horse, would you just squirm and flounder around in some general denial or could you tell them the facts?

If not, you'll find the study made by the CIO steel union showing what pay the average steel worker gets and how the money is spent, an invaluable source of concise answers to idle tales about high wages. The study was presented to the War Labor Board in its brief on the demand for a 17c wage increase.

The cost of living study made by the labor members of the President's Cost of Living Committee showed that prices had risen 43.5 per cent during the past two years, instead of the 23.4 per cent reported by the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics. Are workers making enough under the restrictions of the Little Steel formula limiting increases to 15 per cent to meet this increase in the cost of living?

RESEARCH JOB

The union's research department undertook the job of finding out at first hand. Instead of gathering up a lot of figures compiled from government reports and juggling them around, as is too often the case, the union researchers made a careful study based on the actual experiences of 589 out of 1,000 families of USA-CIO members selected by the most approved statistical methods.

This unusual union survey, based on the actual experiences of the housewives who have to make the weekly pay envelope stretch far enough to cover all the family needs, revealed quite a number of little-known facts and some conclusions entirely opposite to common notions.

1. Instead of the high wages commonly believed to be paid steel workers, their total average pay during the year ending Nov. 30, 1943, was $2,584.68, or an average of only $$49.71 a week.

2. Steel workers stick to their jobs in the industry. One out of every three has worked at his present place of employment for 15 or more years, and three out of every four were in the industry before Pearl Harbor.

3. More than a third of the weekly pay, or $18.51 out of $49.71, goes for food. This is equivalent to 61c a day per person.

4. Next highest item was housing, which takes 25.8 per cent of total income. Although they spend more than a fourth of their income on a place to live, housing conditions generally are poor. Many steel workers are forced to live in crowded districts near the mills or in small unimproved farmhouses on the outskirts of town.

Steelworkers are home buyers. Four out of 10, or 40.6 per cent, are now paying for or own their own homes. These families spend an average of $31.20 a month for payments and repairs. The other six rent their homes, paying an average monthly rental of $21.99.

5. Clothing, next major item of the budget, amounts to 16 per cent of current expenses. The union found no evidence of the "silk shirt" era. A good proportion of the 16 per cent went for necessities such as special work clothes and safety shoes, with one coat or jacket a year at an average of $13.30. A suit must last 10 years.

6. With food, clothing and housing taking up 77.3 per cent of the total, less taxes and insurance, 22.7 per cent is left for such necessities as transportation (5.1%) and medical expense (4.8%).

Tobacco and alcohol (4%), recreation (3.2%), contributions (2.4%), care of person (2.2%) and miscellaneous (1%) absorb the rest.

Cost of Living Up Twice What U. S. Estimates

Here's what CIO Pres. Philip Murray said about the Bureau of Labor Statistics and its index that claims the cost of living is up only 23.4 per cent, not the 43.5 that labor's study showed:

"The report of the labor members (of the President's Committee on the Cost of Living) reveals that the BLS Index is seriously deficient in that it does not reflect the actual rise in the cost of living.

"The report discloses a sinister effort to hide from the American public the actual facts pertaining to the rise in the cost of living.

"The failure of the BLS to warn the people regarding the deficiencies of its Index, the deliberate omission from the Index of important items of cost in the workers' budgets, and the concentration by the OPA with rigid price control on the food items in the Index while neglecting equal treatment for the food items which are not covered by the Index, can only be described as a most deceitful practice."

Congress Wrecks Tax Program, War Economy

Sabotage of the tax program by Congress is one of the main reasons why we don't have a stable war economy—and why workers have to have wage increases to put their paychecks within reach of the cost of living.

The current tax bill, like the ones before it during the whole of the war period, not only protects the rich and the profiteering corporations, but actually takes an extra bite out of every worker's pay envelope.

In 1941, a worker making $50 a week—and that's a high wage—paid about $30 a year in taxes. In 1944, the same worker, making $50 a week including overtime, has to pay a total of $188.33 a year in Federal taxes alone.

BIG SHOTS GET OFF EASY

That's a wage cut, plain enough. But what about the big boys, the wealthy couples and the corporations making billions in profits?

The current tax bill, like the ones before it since 1939, goes lightly on them.

In passing this bill, Congress ignored FDR's request for a $25,000 after-taxes limit on individual incomes. It refused to increase excess profits taxes. It allowed corporations to make fantastic deductions for "depletions"—which means, for instance, that the more oil an oil corporation sells, the lower its taxes.

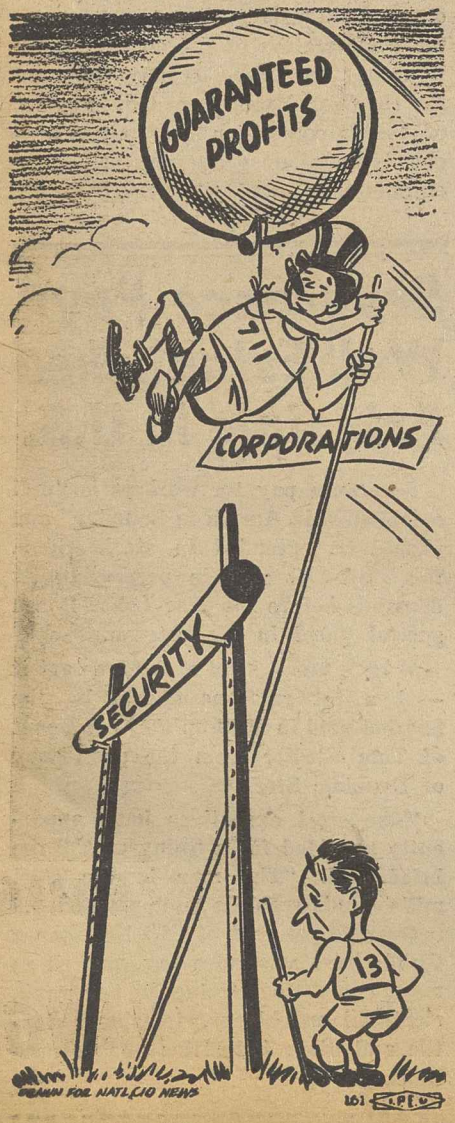
Tax exempt bonds still stand. Wealthy couples can still dodge taxes by sending in separate returns. On top of all, there's the Ruml plan, a windfall of 75 per cent of the '42 income taxes of the rich.

That's why the tax bill completely fails to make any contribution to a stable war economy. When you spare the rich and go light on corporation profits, there can be only one result—heavier taxes on the workers and the low income people generally. That's exactly what has happened. As the Steelworkers' wage case brief pointed out:

"The Congressional tax policies we have analyzed undoubtedly have tended to injure the morale of the people on the domestic front.

"While wage cuts have been imposed upon the low income groups, industrial profits have soared and war millionaires have multiplied."

To help do the job that Congress refused to do in its tax policies, the unions now have to ask for wage increases.



Tax Laws Guarantee Corp. Profits After War

How would you like to get a guaranteed income for two years after the war even if you don't work and therefore don't make any money on your own?

It's easy. All you have to do is be a corporation and come under certain sections of the tax laws passed since 1939.

In these tax laws, Congress has fixed it so that corporations simply can't lose money, no matter how much they fail to make. Here's how it works:

Each corporation gets an "excess profits credit" based on pre-war (1936-39) earnings. If its profits after the war fall below its excess profits credit (i.e., 1936-39 earnings) it gets a refund of 41 cents on every dollar of unused credit from the Treasury.

"In addition," as pointed out by the wage brief of the CIO United Steelworkers, "each steel company (and others too), if it suffers a net operating loss, is guaranteed a net refund of 81 cents for dollar of loss plus 41 per cent of its excess profits credit.

"This procedure can be followed for two years, and the potential refunds can equal every dollar of Federal income and excess profits taxes paid by the steel companies (and others) during the last two war years."

This process, which is just about the neatest trick of the war, is called "carry-back and carry-forward."

It's described fully in a report to clients by Prentice-Hall, Inc., which is a big New York firm that advises rich investors and corporations. Nothing much was said about it in debate on the 1944 tax bill, or in all the war revenue bills that went before.

But Prentice-Hall, alert to protect its clients, told them this in a January, 1944 bulletin:

"Write your Congressman that expansion plans you are contemplating depend on carry-back and carry-forward. Remind him you are relying on their continuation."

The tax bill was finally passed, over FDR's veto, in the last week of February. "Carry-back and carry-forward" were safely tucked into the long and complicated measure.

Too bad "carry-back and carry-forward" applies only to corporations. If it applied to workers, maybe a lot of people wouldn't be worrying about what might happen to them if they should be laid off.

When workers don't earn money, they go hungry, and so do their kids. But under the tax laws Congress has been handing us since the war, when corporations don't earn money—they stay fat.

CORPORATION INCOME GROWS LABOR INCOME DROPS

National income dollars illustrate a chart presented to a Natl. War Labor Board panel by the CIO United Steelworkers Union in its brief seeking a 17c wage increase. Despite the vast increase in the number of workers employed since the war, labor's cut of the national "pie" has decreased. (Federated Pictures).

War Profits Up

The profits after taxes were almost as much—$3,324,000.000.

Here are the Steelworkers' figures for the war boom years, on the basis of percentage increases over the 1936-39 average, with 1944 profits estimated to reach the highest peak ever recorded by American corporations:

Profits Before Taxes		Profits After Taxes
64%	1940	44%
223%	1941	119%
352%	1942	154%
406%	1943	175%
449%	1944	198%

The USA-CIO charged that the direct relationship between corporate profiteering and the inflationary rise in the cost of living is best illustrated among food firms. The price of food on a nationwide basis has gone up 74.2 per cent. Wholesale grocers realized twice as much on every dollar of sales in 1942 as in 1939. Sales were up 43 per cent but profits before income taxes rose over 200 per cent!

PUBLIC 'OVER A BARREL'

The situation was put even more embarrassingly by the Temporary Natl. Economic Committee of the U. S. Senate, which said:

"Speaking bluntly, the government and the public are 'over a barrel' when it comes to dealing with business in times of war or other crisis. Business refuses to work except on terms which it dictates. It controls the natural resources, the liquid assets, the strategic position in the country's economic structure, and its technical equipment and knowledge of processes.

"The experience of the World War, now apparently being repeated, indicates that business will use this control only if it is 'paid properly.' In effect, this is blackmail not too fully disguised."

Prices Up 43%

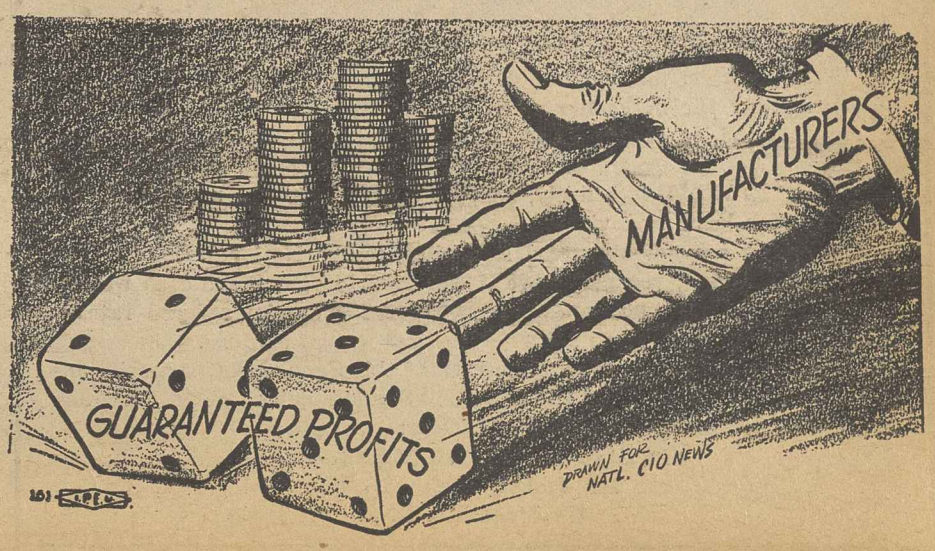
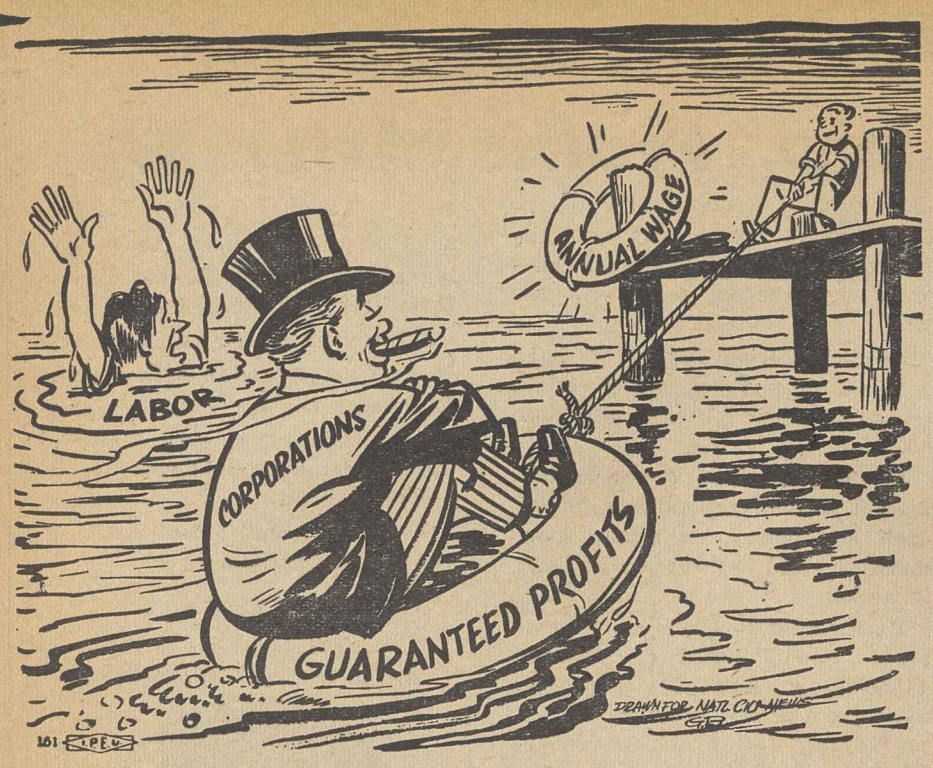
7. In the red: Balancing the average wage against the average expenditure, the union survey found that the steel worker was short 79c a week of having enough to cover his expenses.

Contrary to popular belief, steel workers' families are not now able to save money to provide a reserve for postwar emergencies.

"Instead they are going into debt to the extent of $.79 a week in spite of the bonds being purchased and small bank savings," states the report. "Every effort is being made not to redeem bonds, but when necessary steelworkers instead borrow money, spend other previous savings, or increase the amount owed at stores."

They are forced to redeem about 24 per cent of the bonds they purchase.





Annual Steel Wage Would Aid Entire Nation—USA-CIO

As steel goes, so goes the nation. When the industry is sick—operating at less than half of capacity—the rest of the country is in the dumps. Hence the demand of the CIO United Steelworkers of America for a guaranteed annual wage is immediately of concern not only to the three quarters of a million workers directly involved but to the rest of the nation as well.

The USA-CIO put the case this way in the union's brief before the Natl. War Labor Board:

"It is axiomatic that where workers are assured full employment and economic security they then furnish the backbone for the mass purchasing power so essential for the continued turning of the wheels of industry.

"The production of steel depends entirely on the wheels of industry turning, which in turn depends upon both the purchasing power of the people at home and the demand of foreign markets.

"If the steelworkers as a group are guaranteed an annual wage, thereby assuring continuity of their full employment, they have the security which permits them to go out and purchase their automobiles, their refrigerators, and the thousand and one other articles which require steel.

"This very demand is what creates the demand in the industries that in turn require steel. Nothing could create greater security for the steel industry itself than the security established for the steelworkers themselves."

Is an annual wage in steel economically possible? An emphatic YES is the answer of the USA-CIO.

Pointing out that steel firms are now operating at 95 to 98 per cent of capacity on a work week averaging 45.3 hours, the USA-CIO said that the industry could actually reduce its operations to 75 per cent, go on a 40-hour week, and fully utilize all of its present employes.

"In other words," said the union, "the industry would have to go below 75 per cent if it were on a 40-hour work week before it would have to lay off any of its present employes and incur an obligation under the guaranteed wage."

The USA-CIO cited the fact that a high degree of skill is needed by most of the workers in the industry, yet despite this the workers are forced to struggle through many months on a starvation basis when the industry is operating at 20 to 30 per cent capacity.

"There is therefore the imperative social need to assure the steelworkers that the prince and pauper era is at an end," the USA-CIO said. "Economic security through full employment thereby creating freedom from want and freedom from fear can and must be accomplished for this basic industry."

Production Same All Over the Nation

Given the same technological conditions, the average steelworker produces substantially the same, no matter what section of the country he is in, states the USA-CIO brief prepared for the War Labor Board, in support of USA's contention that pay differentials based on geography should be eliminated.

wages have been frozen to a 15 per cent limit over that date. Even the Bureau of Labor Statistics, whose figures understate the truth by about 50 per cent, is beyond the 15 per cent formula (BLS says costs have risen 23.4 per cent since '41).

But the Little Steel formula has stood since it was first applied to the CIO Steelworkers in July, '42. Since then, it has been used as a straitjacket on all wage cases before the War Labor Board.

That's why Philip Murray said to the WLB in opening the steel case on which all CIO wage cases depend:

"The economic events since April, 1942, reveal the most shocking injustices perpetrated on American workers. . . . In order to provide the American working population with sufficient funds to purchase the necessities to maintain the basis of health and efficiency required for maximum production, there must be a revision of the Little Steel formula."

CONGRESSIONAL SABOTAGE

Two years of Congressional sabotage of the war economy program lie behind us. During those two years, CIO has accepted wage stabilization, has constantly demanded that the rest of the program be put into effect.

To make the program work, to make economic stabilization a reality, the CIO is demanding a wage increase, with the Steelworkers leading the demand. As the USA-CIO brief to the War Labor Board pointed out:

"The American worker is not seeking any special privilege or furthering any selfish end.

"The need for revising the national wage policy runs to the interest of the nation and not to the interest of any single group."

Labor's Share of Natl. Income Drops 6 Percent

Labor's share of the national income as compared to that received by corporations and by farmers has taken a substantial drop of almost 7 per cent, the CIO United Steelworkers of America pointed out in its wage case before the Natl. War Labor Board.

Here are the comparative figures:

1939
Corporations	8.0%
Farmers	5.9%
Labor	65.7%
Last Quarter of 1943
Corporations	13.0%
Farmers	7.1%
Labor	59.3%

Equal Pay is Justice

"Wage earners throughout the steel industry are entitled to enjoy the same pay for performing the same work. That is economic justice," states the CIO Steelworkers' brief to the WLB. "There is no better time to accomplish this end than during the period of wage stabilization."

The USA-CIO pointed out that the figures are even more meaningful if the fact is considered that the number of workers has increased while there has been a slight decline in the number of corporations and agricultural proprietors.

"In the cases of corporations and farmers a percentage increase in aggregate incomes accurately reflects the percentage increase in the average incomes of individual corporations and farmers, but this is not true in the case of labor," the USA-CIO declared.

"There can be no justification for the continuance of governmental policies which result in labor's percentage share of the national income being steadily reduced," the USA-CIO said.

"Certainly economic stabilization is not to be interpreted in practice as requiring the deterioration of labor's relationship with the other major groups in our national life. To the contrary, economic stabilization, for which labor has been the foremost supporter, demands that our present unrealistic and unnecessarily harsh wage policy be revised in order to permit labor to restore its position, and that on such basis effective measures be initiated which are contemplated under economic stabilization to maintain the relationship between labor and the other groups."

Severance Pay Well Established Principle In U.S.

Severance pay for workers is "well established in American industry" and should be extended to steelworkers, the USA-CIO said in presenting its demands before the War Labor Board special panel in Washington.

What's more, steel executives get it—at a fat rate—as shown by the $50,000 paid in 1940 on the retirement of Tom Girdler from the presidency of Republic Steel.

"The steel executives have apparently provided for a 'rainy day,'" the brief said. "The men in the steel mills simply seek the same protection."

Over 95 per cent of CIO Newspaper Guilds have severance pay, as well as many contracts covering the telegraph, electrical machinery, telephone, textile and other industries and occupations.

Easter Greetings!

Your Congressman's Home; Don't Forget to Ring His Bell!

Here's Score On What To Tell Him

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, Apr. 1—Congress is home for a two-week Easter recess, which ends April 13.

This is the first time Congress has gone home to the voters since the first of the year. It gives us a chance to sit down and talk with our Congressmen in the most effective possible way—on the voters' home ground.

Letters, wires and delegations to Washington are effective while Congress is in session. The best way of all to reach your Representatives and Senators is while they're face to face with you.

To help you make the best of your Congressman's time during the Easter recess, The CIO NEWS lists the most important issues below with brief descriptive material.

Price Control

The Price Control Act must be renewed by June 30. The CIO, President Roosevelt and everybody who wants to hold food prices even at present levels knows that the Act must be renewed, on time and without changes that would weaken price control.

At the same time, the profiteers are working to cripple enforcement, slash OPA funds, amend the Act to throw all OPA policies and orders into endless litigation, kill subsidies that hold food prices in line, and generally wreck price control.

WARNS OF WAGE FREEZE

Writing to all CIO unions on the eve of the recess, Pres. Murray cited these threats to stability and added a grave warning on the danger of Congressional attempts to write the Little Steel 15 per cent wage freeze into law.

"Wage stabilization, initiated in the Little Steel decision, was intended to restore the purchasing power of the hourly wage rates as of Jan., 1941," he wrote. "When the WLB made its decision, retroactive to May, 1942, it found that there was a 15 per cent differential between wages and prices.

"Thereafter, Congress amended the Price Control Act Oct. 2, 1942, providing that wages and prices should be stabilized on the basis of levels which existed on Sept. 15, 1942. . . . I do not have to tell you that prices continued to rise, largely as a result of the pressure of the inflation block in Congress."

DOUBLE THREAT

The threat to stability therefore is a double one, Murray wrote, first through cripping amendments to the Act and second "by writing the arbitrary 15 per cent figure of the WLB into the law or by providing adjustment of wages and prices from this point on and ignoring the serious inequity that no exists.

"Both such threats must be effectively opposed. . . . In any representation to Congress and government agencies and other public officials, these overall requirements of economic stabilization must be continally related."

SEVEN "DON'TS"

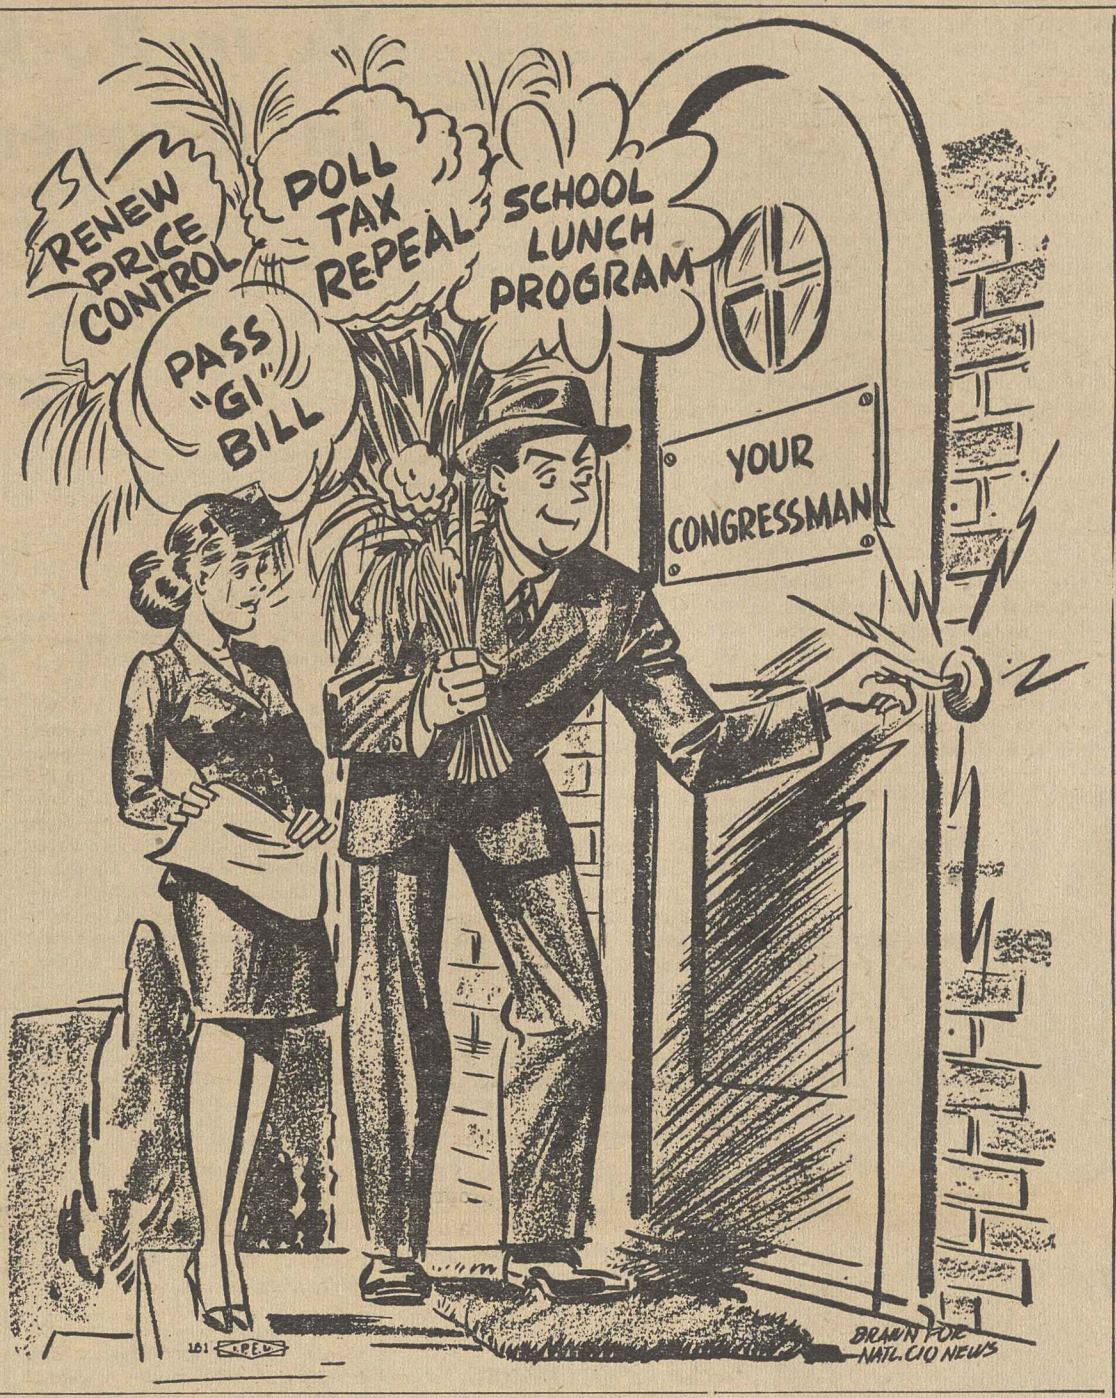
(1) End all use of subsidies to hold down food prices; (2) place all OPA orders, policies and regulations under individual court review, thus tying up enforcement in endless legal knots; (3) set up a Board of Review over the OPA Administrator, to block actions to enforce price control.

(4) Re-define "parity" (i. e., the prices farmers get for their produce, supposed to correspond with what the farmer pays for the goods he uses) to include "labor costs" in parity basis. This would raise food prices at the source, would benefit only large commercial farmers, since labor cost is negligible on smaller family farms.

(5) Raise milk and oil prices by Congressional action, milk by 1.5 cents immediately, more later; (6) transfer food pricing to the War Food Administrator, thus ending OPA's principal function and putting prices well beyond any chance of consumer influence; (7) the most brazen of all—a plan to remove the phrase "to eliminate profiteering" from the Act itself.

Action: Tell your Senators and Representatives you want the Act renewed on time, without any of the weakeningfi amendments



NOTE: Keep Your Eye On Congress is omitted this week. This page covers the material that is needed for legislative action during the Easter Recess. Keep Your Eye On Congress will resume next week.

Polltax Repeal (HR 7)

Sen. Mead (D., N. Y.) has made an agreement with Senate majority leader Barkley (D., Ky.) to bring up HR 7 on the Senate floor April 17.

This gives us a chance to finish the job we did last summer, when we got HR 7 reported out of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Action: Tell your Senators to vote for cloture to end the expected filibuster, to accept no amendments, to pass HR 7 as quickly as possible. Sixty-five votes (a two-thirds majority) are needed for cloture.

Wagner Act

The Frey amendment, sponsored by AFL craft officials, is still on the books. It legalizes company unions by forbidding the NLRB to open a case where a contract, no matter how secured, is in existence. AFL craft officials are busy as beavers lining up Congress support to keep the rider, also to slash NLRB funds to practically zero.

Action: CIO has called for repeal of the Frey rider. We should insist also on full funds for enforcement as war measure that aids peaceful labor relations, helps war production.

Soldiers' Vote

President Roosevelt will either veto, sign or let pass without signature the so-called "states' rights" bill that effectively disfranchises servicemen and women. This bill junks the simple, uniform Federal plan of Green-Lucas bill in favor of complicated, clumsy state ballots that few soldiers will get, fewer be able to use.

Action: If the President vetoes the bill, urge support for veto, repassage of Green-Lucas Federal ballot measure. Talk to your Senators and Representatives on this bill, make it plain that you regard it as a test issue.

'GI' Bill (S 1767)

This has passed the Senate, with CIO support. It provides hospitalization, education, rehabilitation, etc., for demobilized veterans.

Action: Urge your Representative to vote for it when it comes to House.

Fair Employment

March 23 the Senate passed the Russell (polltaxer, Ga.) rider to a deficiency appropriation bill aimed directly at the Fair Employment Practice Committee. Ostensibly to prohibit use of Executive funds for U. S. agencies not specifically authorized by Congress, it is admittedly aimed at FEPC and the task of ending discrimination in war jobs.

Action: The House has a Bureau request for $585,000 for FEPC, and also has a series of bills to make FEPC permanent (HR 3896, 4004, 4405, 1732). House passage of the $585,000 fund would be tacit authorization of FEPC, would meet the Russell rider. Passage of the bills (three are identical) would clinch it.

Action: Tell your Representative to vote down Russell rider, pass $585,000 fund, urge hearings on the four bills and final passage.

School Lunches

The Senate has two bills (S 1820 and S 1721) to provide Federal funds for hot lunches for school kids. The program helps war production by enabling mothers to work confident that their children will get a good, hot mid-day meal. It helps America by helping build strong, well-fed children as future citizens.

The House threw out the program last week in March. Senate Agriculture Committee now has the two bills, one (S 1721) by Sen. Wagner (D., N. Y.), the other by Sen. Russell (polltaxer, Ga.—his state has 300,000 kids on the program).

Action: Tell your Senators to work for early hearings and passage of either one of these measures. Tell your Representative how shocked you are at the House action in cutting off the program.

Remember—Register To Vote!

Political action and legislative action are two sides of the same coin.

Together, they spell success with Congress, which means a progressive home front economic and social setup to support the fighting fronts.

When you call on your Senators and your Representative this Easter recess, tell them what the voters want and tell them what the voters are doing for the '44 election.

Tell them about your CIO Political Action register-to-vote drive. Tell them that you and your friends are keeping up with their records in Washington. This is the duty of a good American citizen and voter.

Above all, make sure you have something to show them.

The most telling point you can make right now is the point of getting yourself, your friends and neighbors out to REGISTER TO VOTE.

Show Your Congressman

Win War Bills for Home Front Help Beat Axis

We can win with Congress—but only if we work at it and only if we work in a positive way.

When your Congressman comes home this Easter, tell him what the voters want and what the voters think about what he's been doing. Look up his record; make sure of your facts; be firm and also courteous. You gain nothing by wrangling with him; you lose when your facts are missing or wrong.

We don't need to be discouraged by the record of Congress over the past few months—despite the bad tax bill, the bad soldiers' vote bill, despite the labor-baiting and FDR-baiting that has gone on.

Remember, Congress has passed the so-called purely "war measures"— war appropriations, Fulbright foreign policy resolution, United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Act, the "GI Bill" (passed by the Senate) and others.

Our job is to make it clear that price control renewal, fair taxes, a workable soldiers' vote bill, a Federal school lunch program, revised Social Security, repeal of the Frey rider against the Natl. Labor Relations Act, etc., are just as much war measures as funds for the Army and Navy.

Such measures mobilize all our nation in the common struggle of the home front and the fighting front against the enemy. They back up our boys just like money for planes and tanks.

Put this central point over with your Congressman and we'll win on every issue that we put our backs into.

YOUR HEALTH IN WARTIME

No Ill Effects In Blood Donations

Civilians have few opportunities to contribute more directly and effectively to the war effort than through donation of blood to the armed services.

A much larger proportion of fighting men are being restored to health and even active service in this war than in the last. One of the chief reasons is the availability of large quantities of blood substitutes such as blood plasma or serum albumin.

Plasma is the fluid portion of the blood after the red and white blood cells have been removed. Serum albumin is a portion of the plasma, and is better than plasma because it requires less space for transportation storage.

NO MATCHING NEEDED

With plasma and serum albumin, it is not necessary to match the blood of donor and recipient, as it was in former methods of transfusion. Therefore, large quantities of blood substitutes can be collected, dried, and kept ready for use when and where needed. It is simply necessary to put the dried plasma or serum albumin back into liquid form and inject it into the injured soldier.

Death is avoided through restoration of fluid volume in the system, for it is the fluid (blood) that carries the oxygen without which the vital organs cannot function.

If you have not already given blood at one of the Red Cross blood donor centers, you will be surprised at how simple and easy it is. When you arrive, you are given a routine examination to make sure that you have no ailment or condition that would make donation unwise. A pint of blood is then withdrawn from a vein in your arm after a local anaesthetic has been applied to make the process altogether painless. Discomfort is about the same as that involved in getting a haircut and less than that of a permanent wave. A ten-minute rest, a cup of coffee on the house, and you are ready to go back to work.

NO ILL EFFECTS

After giving a pint of blood, the normal blood content of your body is restored within 24 hours. Several weeks may elapse before the red blood cell count is back to normal, but the reduction in the count is so small that no ill effect is noticeable. A person in good health can give a pint of blood every eight weeks without any ill effects.

A carefully controlled study of 100 male professional blood donors in New York over a period of years provides some interesting information on the frequency with which donations can safely be made. These donors gave from 16 to 101 times each during periods varying from four to 14 years.

They were required to rest one week between transfusions for each one-fifth pint of blood given. None of the donors showed any significant failure to replenish their red-cell count after the rest period, and over a period of years little change was noted from the original red-cell count.

Recently experiments have been made in returning to the donor his red blood cells after they are separated from the blood in the plasma-making process. These experiments indicate that when red cells are replaced it may be possible for a donor to give blood as frequently as once a week.

There is no evidence that blood donation, according to the rules applied by the Red Cross, in any way increases the donor's susceptibility to colds or other types of infection.

Blood donated to the armed forces is also available for use in case of civilian disasters. An instance of such use was the Coconut Grove night club fire in Boston, when quick availability of plasma reserves saved the lives of a number of persons who were severely burned.

SEGREGATION UNSCIENTIFIC

One unfortunate aspect of the blood donor campaign is the policy of segregating the blood of Negroes. A statement issued by the American Association of Physical Anthropologists says:

"There is no evidence that the blood of Negroes differs in any significant respect from that of white persons. The successful transfusion with whole blood from white persons to Negroes and vice versa can be accomplished quite as readily as between members of the same race . . .

"In the form of dried serum or plasma in which the blood currently collected is being stored even differences in blood group between donor and recipient are of no significance."

Your Pocketbook's In Danger!

By ELEANOR FOWLER

Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

Have you sat down to think just what the fight for the renewal of the stabilization act means to you? It's high time.

Maybe you haven't been too impressed with the way price control has worked so far. We've all had a lot of gripes. But with all its defects, let's remember that it's saved American consumers some eight billion dollars.

During the last war sugar went to 27 cents a pound, eggs were more than 90 cents a dozen, butter sold for 78 cents a pound. And that will happen again if the enemies of price control have their way. They're out to cut the heart out of the whole price control program.

They're going to fight again to prohibit the use of subsidies to keep food prices down. They're going to try to put in the bill a section requiring OPA to raise the price of milk and the price of oil. They're going to try to kill the community flat pricing program, so there can't be any more ceiling price lists for us to check when we do our shopping. They're going to try make it possible for every landlord to raise rents by claiming the freeze date worked a "hardship" on him.

Our Senators and Congressmen are home now, most of them, seeing to their political fences. It's our job to see them while they're home and to talk to them about the importance of strong price control.

DON'T BE FOOLED

Dn't let them fool you. They'll all say, "Of course I'm for price control." What you must find out is will they vote to allow the government to continue to use subsidies to hold prices level. If they won't, they're not for price control.

We want no weakening amendments to the stabilization act. That's the main point you should make in discussing this issue. We do want the act strengthened by repeal of section 2 (j) which prevents OPA from tying prices to quality.

Instead we want the act to direct OPA to tie price ceilings to quality standards and grades as much as possible, and to require grades to be marked on labels so consumers can know what they're getting. We all know from our own experience that price ceilings on many items don't mean too much if the quality gets constantly lower.

APPROPRIATION FIGHT

Aside form weakening the act by amendments, the enemies of price control will try to strangle OPA by cutting the appropriation. We want our Congressmen to fight for the full appropriation OPA is asking for. It's especially important to double the enforcement staff and to permit OPA to make test purchases in order to prove violations of their regulations in court.

Have a good discussion with your Congressman if possible. If he agrees with your stand, urge him to fight for it in Washington. Ask him to appear before the Banking and Currency Committee, which will hold hearings on the stabilization act, to speak on the floor of the House and to talk to his colleagues personally.

Remember that what women think on these issues will influence their representatives in Washington. Our CIO Political Action Committee estimates that 60% of our voters this year will be women. Use your personal shopping experience and your own household budget to show your Congressman how badly strong price control is needed by the women in his district.

UAW to Hold Natl. War Veterans' Meet

DETROIT, Apr. 1—A national conference of war veterans who are members of the CIO United Auto Workers Union will be held in Washington, April 6 and 7, UAW Pres. R. J. Thomas said this week.

"The UAW-CIO is asking its own members who are veterans of both World Wars to write out in specific detail the union's program for re-employment and rehabilitation of veterans returning from World War II," Thomas declared.

Under-Secretary of War Robert Patterson and General Lewis B. Hershey, National Selective Service director, will address the conference Thursday evening, April 6. The only non-veterans who will speak will be Thomas, who will open the meetings, and CIO Pres. Philip Murray who will speak with Patterson and Hershey.

Approximately 150 delegates, all of them war veterans and UAW-CIO members, are expected to attend. They are being selected by the various regions of the UAW in numbers proportionate to the membership in each region.

Union officials believe they will be divided about evenly between veterans of World War I and World War. II.

Thomas, in announcing the meeting, said:

"The re-employment and rehabilitation of the soldiers fighting this war is the most important single item in any post-war plan. How that problem is handled will determine whether our soldiers are being kidded about fighting a war for real democracy or whether we really mean it.

"We in the UAW-CIO believe that the people best equipped to write out in detail a veteran's program for our union are the union members who are themselves veterans of one of the two World Wars. They know from experience the needs and problems of returning soldiers."

Some of the problems the conference will consider include:

Disabled veterans' pensions, employment and seniority; provisions for dependents of disabled men and of men killed in service; provisions for soldiers suffering mentally from service experiences; creation of an agency to handle veterans' employment and re-employment; creation in the UAW-CIO War Policy Division of a veterans' department headed by a veteran to assist employment and re-employment of veterans through enforcement of seniority regulations in contracts and in the Selective Service law.

Also: mustering out pay; education and vocational training for veterans; unemployment compensation social security credits; and the relative responsibilities of government, industry and labor in guaranteeing full employment and full production in the post-war period.

As of April 1, Walter Harris has been assigned as CIO regional director in Chicago with offices at 205 W. Wacker Drive. The post he formerly held, i.e., director of the organizing campaign for the Gas, Coke and Chemical Workers, will be taken over by the president of that organization, Martin Wagner.

CANADA ROUNDUP

Win Equal Pay For Equal Work Award

OTTAWA, April 1—Equal pay for equal work was approved unanimously by the National War Labor Board this week for the first time in a decision affecting the Welland Chemical Co., whose employes were represented by United Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers (CIO).

In the order on equal pay for equal work, the Board said it had not been set forth by Order-in-Council and it was time the policy should be enunciated. Equality of pay should be based on efficiency, the Board stated, and support of the principle did not necessitate a general revision of pay to all female workers but only to those on jobs similar to those held by men.

Other significant Canadian labor news included the signing of the first contract between International Nickel Co., Sudbury, producer of most of the world's supply of nickel, and Local 598 of the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers Union.

This agreement covers the largest number of employes, 10,500, in any MM&SW contract on the continent. The signing of the contract opens a new era for this erstwhile company town after a period of 25 years in which organizers had been beaten up, their union hall wrecked and civil rights wantonly disregarded.

Canada now has a 10-man National Labor Relations Board headed by two judges, on which are four labor representatives, including A. R. Mosher, president of the Canadian Congress of Labour (CIO). The other representatives are from the AFL, railway brotherhoids and Catholic syndicates, as well as four employers.

Canada's wage control order has been modified as a result of organized pressure by the CCL and other unions. A previous provision that workers had to prove that wage adjustments would not result in the price of the product being increased, has been withdrawn.

The national board dealing with wage policies will continue with three members instead of a proposed six on which labor would only have one representative. Workers taking part in illegal strikes against the order will not be imprisoned and the penalty is reduced.

Paraguay Fascist, Labor Exiles Say

MONTEVIDEO, April 1 (ALN)—Consolidating its control over the government of Paraguay, the pro-fascist Frente de Guerra this week executed a coup d'etat by removing Foreign Minister Luis Argana and two other cabinet members.

Although Paraguayan labor exiles here insist that Argana cannot be considered democratic, they indicate that, for a time at least, he was willing "to play ball" with the United States, "if only for material advantages."

The Paraguayan labor exiles here declare that the coup not only marks the open control of their country by fascists, but also strengthens the Paraguayan government's ties with the Argentine "Colonel's Lodge" and extends the Argentine-block in South America. They urge both the United States and Brazil immediately to suspend shipments of lend-lease supplies.

Made up of majors and colonels of Paraguay's principal army base, Campo Grande, the Frente de Guerra was organized by the Nazi embassy in Asuncion shortly before Paraguay broke relations with the Axis. It seized partial control of the government in December, 1942, by arresting all pro-democratic army officers. Since then it has led Paraguay's official anti-labor policy and has been in virtual control of all internal affairs through its control of the Interior Ministry.

Contact with Argentine fascists is maintained by one of the Frente de Guerra founders, Marcos Fuster, a former police official in Asuncion and now attached to Paraguay's embassy in Buenos Aires. Although another Frente de Guerra leader, Police Chief Mushito Villasboa, was removed from his post ten days ago, the coup is believed to have been planned by Fuster and Frente de Guerra head Col. Benitez Vera, commander of the first cavalry division.

British Ask 40-Hr. Week After War

London, Apr. 1 (ALN)—A 40-hour week as a general standard for post-war industry was recommended by the general council of the British Trades Union Congress, meeting here this week. The council has proposed to its affiliated bodies that they request the introduction of a bill in Parliament "to enact a 40-hour week without a reduction in earnings."

This recommendation is in line with the TUC decision to formulate without delay constructive policies on all aspects of post-war problems, for which purpose a special meeting of the general council has been called on April 5.

The general council also welcomed the government's White Paper setting forth proposals for the establishment of a national health service. The council has decided to participate in joint discussions regarding amendments to these proposals with a committee composed of Labor party and Cooperative Congress representatives.

Hails Women's War Work

WASHINGTON, April 1. — The stress of war has doubled the number of women employed in manufacturing industries and they're doing a first class job of meeting their new responsibilities, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins said this week in a speech at Howard University here.

Miss Perkins said that 2.3 million women factory workers were employed in 1939 and that the number as of October, 1943, was 4.5 million—a rise from one-fourth of the total manufacturing wage earners to one-third.

American women are doing hard, dirty and dangerous jobs essential to victory, ranging from running giant cranes and crating live ammunition to driving 10-wheel Army trucks, Miss Perkins pointed out.

CIO Cannery Wins 'A' Award

Camden, N.J., Apr. 1—"Back the invasion with food production" was the keynote of the meeting of over 5,000 Campbell Soup workers and management representatives who crowded into the flag-bedecked warehouse here today to receive the A-Award for outstanding achievement in food production, at a ceremony in which the government, the CIO Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers of America and the company all played a part.

Italian Unions Ask Aid

London, April 1 (ALN)—An appeal to labor in Britain, America and the Soviet Union "to help us reach a speedy solution of our problems" was sent by the constitutional convention of the General Confederation of Labor of Italy, meeting in Naples, it was learned here this week.

The convention, attended by delegates from the labor federations of Bari and Naples, voted to merge the two groups into a single confederation embracing all the workers of liberated Italy "regardless of their political affiliations."

UNITED NATIONS APPEAL

The GCL's message, addressed to the British Trades Union Congress, CIO, AFL, Railroad Brotherhoods, International Transport Workers Federation, and All-Union Council of Soviet Trade Unions, stated:

"In order to strengthen our war effort and achieve our immediate aims, we need a government which truly represents the people, a democratic government free from all fascist ties.

We know that it is up to us to take all possible steps in order to liberate ourselves from our enemies. But you can help us reach a speedy solution of our problems not only by increasing production in your respective countries—as you are already doing—but also through your strength, your public opinion and, finally, through your governments."

DEMOCRATIC PROGRAM

The convention drew up the following program, which was submitted to the Allied Control Commission and included in the message to United Nations labor:

"1. Continuation of the war against fascism, against the oppressors of liberty and the men of reaction, until victory is won.

"2. Realization of true democracy in the field of labor, agriculture, industry and the professions.

"3. Direct participation of workers in the war effort on the battlefields and in the factories.

"4. Living conditions which will permit us and our families to work efficiently.

"5. A speedy re-opening of our industries.

"6. Direct participation of the workers in production planning through shop committees and labor-management committees.

"7. Democratic distribution of machines, raw materials and fertilizers for the improvement of industrial and agricultural production.

"8. Elimination of the black market and the setting up of cooperative stores, regulated by Allied and Italian officials."

The executive committee of the GCL, elected by the convention, includes: Giacomo Schirone, Action party (headed by Count Sforza); Eugenio Laricchiata, Socialist party; Raffaele Pastore, Communist party; Vito Popolizio, Liberal party; Giacinto Genio, Christian-Democratic party.

The new GCL includes the former Catholic, Socialist and Communist trade unions. Before suppressed by Mussolini in 1927, the General Confederation of Labor had 2,500,000 members and the Catholic Confederation of Workers, 1,800,000.

Key To Political Victory Plenty Of Hard Plugging

Farm Equipment Workers Do Real Job For 1944

With the 1944 presidential election right around the corner, CIO political activity is the number one job of the moment. What CIO unions are doing now to register their members, and what's done in the future to see that those members get out to vote, will play a major part in determining results in many crucial areas. From the hub of the nation—gusty, lusty, wind-swept Chicago—comes an encouraging report on what one union's doing to help win in '44.

CHICAGO, Apr. 1—A bang-up job is being done on political activity by the CIO United Farm Equipment Workers Union. Political action committees are functioning in every local, the breakdown of local membership into wards and precincts is virtually completed, and thousands of workers have been registered as a result of the union's activity, the National Executive Board of the Union disclosed this week.

The board received congratulations on "the splendid work begun" from Raymond S. McKeough, regional director of the CIO Political Action campaign, headed by Sidney Hillman. McKeough warmly commended "the officers and members of the UFEMWA on the intelligent effort put forth in the interest of securing the registration of their members, preliminary to the casting of their ballots in the coming and very important presidential and congressional election."

Women Important

"I commend you especially," McKeough said, "on your recognition of the important part the women of this nation will play in deciding who will guide our nation's destinies, as is evidenced by the effort expended in securing the registration of the women members of UFEMWA families, their friends and neighbors."

The report of UFEMWA Political Action Director Seymour Siporin explained how these results were achieved.

The campaign was launched last November. Conferences of local executive board members were held in each district of the union The political action campaign was explained, the organizational steps were outlined, and printed folders and other materials were distributed.

The two principal pieces of campaign material were the folders, "Make 1944 the Victory Year" and "Is It Worth a Buck, Brother?" The former gave a general explanation of the political action drive. The latter explained what benefits a member would receive from contributing to a political action fund.

Stewards' Meetings

City-wide stewards' meetings followed the district conferences. The stewards, meeting monthly, received instructions on their basic role in the campaign.

Registration forms and duplicate forms were printed. Through the political action committees in the locals, these cards were given to stewards for workers in their department to fill out. The card asked whether the worker was registered, whether his wife and other members of his household were registered, his ward and precinct, whether or not he was a citizen, etc.

Where workers indicated they were not registered, the local undertook to get them to a registration place, making every effort to include other unregistered relatives, particularly wives. A special letter was addressed to unregistered wives of workers, explaining the campaign.

Checked Lists

Where a worker indicated that he was registered, his name was checked with the official registration lists to insure that his impression of his status was correct. Where the official records indicated the worker was not registered, his card was routed back to his steward for action.

The cards were copied in duplicate by the local unions, arranged by ward and precinct, and forwarded to geographical political action groups as a complete file of Farm Equipment membership in their political subdivision. This breakdown is practically complete in all districts of the union.

In Chicago, where registration is cancelled if a change of address is not reported, the union has circulated change-of-address cards in the shops, and has preserved the voting rights of almost a thousand workers through that means alone.

The political action directors of all UFEMWA locals in a given city are formed into a city-wide political action council, which supervises the drive in locals in that area.

While the registration level of men in the Farm Equipment plants was found to be generally good, the registration survey revealed that as low as 35 and 40 percent were registered in some plants.

Registration of wives and of women in the shop was found to be universally poor. Special attention has therefore been paid to women, and emphasis has been put on a "family approach" in registration.

Through the registration forms every worker in Farm Equipment shops has been approached on political action.

Rank & File Action

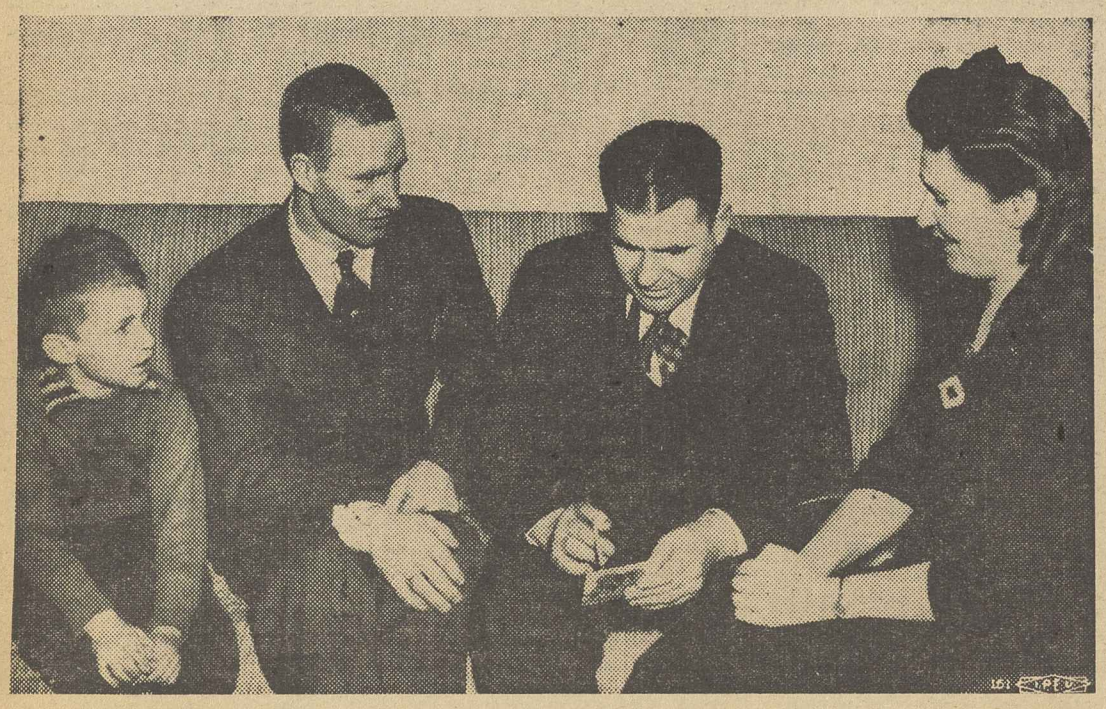
UFEMWA Pres. Grant Oakes summarized the political action drive as follows:

"The political action drive in our union is well under way. The decisions of the meeting Chairman Hillman held with his regional directors in Chicago are virtually carried out in our union. In preparation for the spring primaries, we have succeeded in registering some thousands of workers who would otherwise be without a vote.

"We found that great numbers of the workers asked why the CIO engaged in political action. The only way to answer that question was to get the campaign down to the membership. This we accomplished through the District conferences, the city-wide stewards' meetings, and the joint political action council.

"We shall soon complete the breakdown of our membership and their assignment to the various wards and precincts. We are now engaged in designating key men to mobilize our membership for support of the ward and precinct committees. I think we may say that we have laid the groundwork for the fullest participation of our membership in the decisive elections of 1944."

PLANS FOR ACTION are drawn by CIO Farm Equipment Workers Local 119 at LaPorte, Ind. The committee above is outlining a registration drive, using the cards distributed by the union's national office to check the registration standing of each worker.



HOME VISITS are a feature of the drive to enroll every member of the Farm Equipment Union as a voter. Aircraft Pact Sets Up Umpire System

Kansas City, Kan., April 1— Said to be the first such pact in the aircraft industry, a contract signed this week between the CIO United Auto Workers and the local and Dallas, Tex., plants of the North American Aviation Co. provides for selection of a permanent umpire to act as the final authority in settling grievances. The clause was contained in renewal of a contract between the union and the company, with wage demands being sent to the War Labor Board for approval.

Political Action...Or Breadlines

CHICAGO, April 1.—Nearly 200 prominent CIO leaders this week heard Chairman Sidney Hillman of CIO's Political Action Committee, warn that unless we elect a Congress in 1944 that is sympathetic to the interests of the people we can expect 15 million unemployed when the war is over.

The meeting, to hear Hillman who was stopping over briefly on his way East from the West Coast, was called by Raymond S. McKeough, regional CIO political action director, and Sam Levin, president of the Illinois State CIO Council.

Hillman told the CIO leaders that it is not enough to elect a chief executive favorable to the people, if Congress will sabotage his program.

"We must build up a drive for Congress," he said. "We can do the job in 1944 to elect the proper representatives in Congress, and by 1948 we can retire every reactionary in Congress. We can do it if the 5 million members of the CIO really get behind the movement."

McKeough, who called on CIO members to become conscious of their power for service to the common man, said:

"Our people are today manning the front lines of production on the home front in this, the people's war. We dare do no less in the field of political action to make sure ours is a people's peace."

CIO Marine Club Praised

Washington, April. 1—A cable from John G. Winant, ambassador to Great Britain, praising the CIO for contributing funds for a seamen's club was received this week by CIO Pres. Philip Murray. The cable said:

"The CIO should take great pride in the club which your funds have made possible for United Nations' seamen at Cardiff, and which I opened on March 25.

"It was a pleasure to be there and to see its fine facilities, and I assure you that this gesture to your fellow workers will be used and appreciated."

CIO Steel Union Cracks Weirton Dictatorship

By FRED d'AVILA

WEIRTON, W. Va., Apr. 8—An organizing struggle written in blood and the vicious opposition of an industrial dictator who worships philosophies that were held by the defunct America First Committee combined this week to prove beyond question that bosses can't fight labor and fight Hitler too.

Dictator in the plot is Ernest T. Weir, bad man of the steel industry and chairman of the board of the Natl. Steel Corp., who was quoted by a Congressman in 1933 as saying that "it may be necessary to shoot a few strikers."

Weir's philosophy dominates this little steel town, sandwiched tightly between the hills of West Virginia and the Ohio River, for Weir is head of Weirton Steel, the only subsidiary of Natl. Steel that has not yet been organized by the CIO United Steelworkers of America.

TEAR GAS, MURDERS

Weirton lives on steel, with more than 12,000 of its 30,000 population dependent on King Ernie for a living.

The struggle for a decent break in life that these workers have led is written in tear gas, clubbings and even murders. The violent opposition of Boss Weir to organization of his workers has led to the formation of a tight little dictatorship that carries on in the worst traditions of Nazi terrorism.

That terror was challenged this week—successfully—by the CIO Steel union. Weir's bluff was called, but only at the expense of cracked heads and arrests of USA-CIO organizers by Weir-dominated police officials.

The story of the USA-CIO's struggle was told by Orval Kincaid, field representative in the campaign that has been carried on by the union since 1936 to bring industrial democracy to Weirton employes.

2,000 WORKERS FIRED

The latest chapter begins with the dismissal of 2,000 union members during January and February in a typical Weir move to crush the latest organizing drive. The president of the USA-CIO local, the entire executive board and many shop stewards were ruthlessly fired.

First challenge to the attack was the obvious move of filing discrimination cases with the Natl. Labor Relations Board, but

U.S. OK's Political Action

NEW YORK, Apr. 8—The complete legal OK on CIO Political Action by Attorney-General Biddle "gives the lie" to polltaxers and other reactionaries who hoped to stop labor in its 1944 tracks, Sidney Hillman, chairman of the CIO Political Action Committee, said today.

Biddle's ruling followed charges by Rep. Howard Smith, (polltaxer, Va.) some weeks ago in which he demanded prosecution of CIO Pres. Murray on the alleged ground of violation of the Smith-Connally Act.

"Exoneration by Mr. Biddle and the FBI gives the lie to anti-labor elements who thought to impede the lawful efforts of the CIO Political Action Committee to call for registration of voters and to place the issues before the electorate so that they may participate intelligently in the affairs of the nation," Hillman said.

AIDED FBI

Biddle's ruling was based on a thorough examination of the PAC by the FBI, Hillman pointed out, in which the committee cooperated fully.

A later demand by Rep. Martin Dies, (polltaxer, Tex.) for PAC files and lists of personnel was bluntly refused by Hillman, who said then that the Dies probe was simply a "smear job."

Hit Star Chamber Methods of Dies

Newark, N. J., Apr. 8—The New Jersey CIO Council this week demanded an opportunity to submit to the Dies Committee "positive evidence" that its chairman, Representative Martin Dies of Texas, has used the committee "through star chamber methods, in a campaign to destroy the CIO."

ACA Parley Backs Steel Demands, Urges Fourth Term

By LAWRENCE KAMMET

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Apr. 8—Full support for the wage demands of the CIO United Steelworkers and endorsement of President Roosevelt for a fourth term featured the 7th national convention of the CIO American Communications Assn., which wound up a five-day session here this week.

The convention heard high praise for the ACA's contribution toward the war from top Army officials, and in another demonstration of unity between the armed forces and labor paid a two-day visit en masse to a nearby Army camp to see how the Signal Corps is training its personnel. It was believed to be the first such excursion of any trade union convention.

The endorsement of President Roosevelt was unanimous, and was hailed by a tumultuous demonstration from the more than 150 delegates.

Speaking on behalf of the resolution, ACA Pres. Joseph P. Selly pointed out that unless President Roosevelt is given unmistakable evidence of overwhelming support by the people which will assure his re-election without diverting his energies from war problems, there is a grave danger that he may decline to run.

The War Department assigned two officers to attend sessions, Col. S. P. Fink, commanding officer at Camp Crowder, Missouri, and Col. Robert W. Reed, public relations officer of the Seventh Service Command, Omaha.

Speaking officially for the War Dept., Colonel Fink paid special tribute to the union for its achievements in helping to gear the communications industry to wartime efficiency. He cited the deeds of members of the union, more than 6,000 of whom are serving in the armed forces and as radio officers in the Merchant Marine. He said:

"Any bottlenecks in the transmission of messages affecting the assembly of the millions of items needed for the invasion, (speaking of Sicily), would have made it impossible to perfect the preparations. But there were no bottlenecks. Back at home the national communications members of the war team, that's us, you and me, the Signal Corps and the ACA, had done its job fast and well. The operation went off without a hitch."

The convention received greetings from many prominent public figures, Army and Navy officials and labor leaders including special messages from CIO President Philip Murray, Sidney Hillman, Joseph Curran and others.

President Roosevelt also sent greetings as follows:

"Please extend my greetings to the delegates attending the 7th national convention of the American Communications Association, CIO, and my best wishes for a successful and constructive meeting. American workers have been doing a magnificent job in producing the weapons and materials needed by our fighting men all over the world. They will continue to do so and thus help to bring the war to a quicker and victorious end."

The first item of business passed by the convention was a special resolution urging support of the wage demands of the United Steel Workers of America for a realistic wage policy which would bridge the gap between wage levels and the rising cost of living.

The resolution was adopted in reply to a message from President Murray who, in a telegraphed greeting said he was unable to attend the convention because of the current wage fight to revise the "Little Steel" formula.

Among the resolutions adopted by the convention were: special tribute to the leadership of President Murray; CIO's anti-discrimination pledge; resolutions on manpower, the war effort, for a domestic economic policy in line with President Roosevelt's program; a pledge to support the CIO Political Action Campaign Committee; a resolution condemning deportation proceedings against Harry Bridges; and many others touching upon every phase of American political and economic affairs.

Textile Pay Scrapes Bottom, Slows War

By E. M. SCHOFFSTALL

ATLANTA, Ga.—Southern cotton-rayon textile mill workers' wages are grossly substandard and must be raised in order to bring them up to an American level and to aid in the prosecution of the war, the CIO Textile Workers Union told a special War Labor Board panel when hearings on the union's wage demands opened here this week.

Basing demands squarely on the substandard argument, the TWUA is asking a general wage increase of not less than 10 cents an hour, a minimum wage of 60 cents an hour, minimum rates in all job classifications, a guaranteed daily minimum wage, a third shift differential and vacations with pay.

TWUA Pres. Emil Rieve served notice on the mill owners that the 60-cent minimum is merely a stopgap and that the union "will be back for more."

In order to establish beyond contradiction the substandard living conditions of the 600,000 workers in the cotton-rayon weaving industry, the TWUA made a scientific analysis of living conditions in five typical textile communities — New Bedford, Mass.; Lewiston, Me.; West Warwick, R. I.; Henderson, N. C., and High Point, N. C.

The survey indicated a conservative increase of 33 per cent in the living costs of cotton-rayon workers between January 1, 1941, and the present, as compared with 23.1 per cent increase for moderate income groups reported by the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics.

In a pricing survey in the five textile communities, TWUA used a budget devised by the WPA for relief workers in 1935. The budget is cheap, monotonous, and if followed over a long period of time would be harmful to health and morale. It is NOT a budget, which yields an American standard of living, but provides merely an emergency livelihood for the family of an unskilled manual worker, his wife, a son, 13, and a daughter 8.

This family lives on the cheapest food in the least desirable house. There is no household assistance of any kind. The budget provides no haircuts, no beauty parlor treatments for the mother and daughter. They have no automobile, buy no newspapers, go to the movies once a month. There is no allowance for recreation. Life insurance costs them 40c a week. The family contributes 5c a week to churches and charitable institutions.

Their clothing, too, indicates their emergency level of living. The head of the family must make an overcoat last six years, a winter suit 2½ years, a summer suit 5 years, a sweater 4 years, a work shirt three years.

The family lives in a house that has a kitchen, a bathroom or toilet, one bed-room for each two persons.

At this level of living, the TWUA survey showed, the weekly living cost in the five textile towns surveyed was $29.33.

That the average cotton-rayon textile worker cannot afford to live even at this relief level is proved by U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics figures which show that the average cotton-rayon textile worker makes 57 cents an hour. If he works a 40-hour week, he earns $22.80, before taxes.

The results of the union's survey thus prove beyond any doubt that cotton-rayon textile workers' living conditions are substandard, William Pollock, general secretary of the TWU, told the panel.

The issue is pressing because of lagging supplies of textile fabrics, estimated at four billion yards by the end of 1944. Workers are leaving the cotton-rayon textile industry by the thousands and the manpower problem is acute. Between 50,000 and 100,000 workers are needed right now.

The owners of the mills can well afford to pay the increases, the union pointed out. The mills are more profitable now than they ever have been in the history of the industry. Total profits of all cotton-rayon textile mills in 1941 were $212,000,000 in 1941, $427,000,000 in 1942, both figures before taxes. Profits in 53 specific companies, as revealed by war contract renegotiations, rose from 4.1% in 1936-1939 to 13.9% in 1942.

Book Shows CIO Unions Give Negroes Square Deal

By HAROLD J. RUTTENBERG

Research Director, United Steelworkers of America

(A review of the book "Organized Labor and the Negro" by Herbert R. Northrup. Harper & Brothers, New York, 1944, $350.)

In contrast to the practice of many AFL unions which discriminate against Negro workers by giving them second-class memberships (which the AFL condones), Mr. Northrup in his challenging book finds that "the CIO and its constituent unions have sedulously adhered to (their) nondiscrimination policy in organizing Negroes" and "the national officers of the CIO unions have, by and large, a consistent record of practicing what they preach in regard to the treatment of Negroes."

Thirty-one labor unions discriminate against Negro workers by rule or practice. Not a single one is a CIO affiliate. Twenty of the offending unions are AFL affiliates, and 11 are unaffiliated unions. Of the latter 11, all but two are in the railroad industry. These are the conclusions of Mr. Northrup's exhaustive study, which is the Number One book on the relationships of the labor movement and Negro workers.

This book contains an able study of the position and problems of Negro workers in nine major industries. CIO members and leaders in all industries should place this book on their "must" reading list.

2 BASIC REASONS

It is not surprising that an impartial study of Negro and white workers as union members should find the CIO with an effective policy of equality for all workers regardless of race, color, creed, or nationality. This is due to two basic reasons.

1. The leaders of CIO are men with a passion for equal treatment for all American workers; they are dedicated to a social philosophy designed to elevate the position of American working people through the cooperation of all workers.

2. Industrial unions have a very definite self-interest in cementing the most friendly relations between Negro and White workers; their future, no less than that of Negro workers, depends upon the solid organization into one union of all workers in the basic industries. Cleavages among workers because of color or any other reason are serious threats to the continued growth of industrial unions.

Negro workers who may have just cause for doubting the sincerity of individual white union leaders should bear in mind that it is as necessary for them to champion the cause of Negro workers as it is necessary for the latter to champion the cause of industrial unions. There is a tie between industrial unions and the Negro people which is stronger than sentiment: it is the tie of hard, cold everyday economic conditions.

CIO In Drive Against Price Control Threat

WASHINGTON, Apr. 8—CIO's campaign for renewal and strengthening of the Price Control Act will move into the Congressional hearing stage this week, with Pres. Murray leading off in testimony before the Senate Banking and Currency Committee April 18.

Following Murray, UAW Pres. R. J. Thomas, UE Pres. Albert J. Fitzgerald, CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey, CIO Auxiliary Pres. Faye Stephenson and others will testify. In addition, rank and file CIO members and housewives will come in to tell the Senators just what it's like to live under the present cost of living and warn them of what it could be like with any slackening of price control.

The Congressmen, Senators and Representatives both, have been hearing during the Easter recess from the voters back home, who have been armed with facts in circular letters from Pres. Murray, Legislative Director Nathan Cowan and the CIO Legislative Dept.

In his circular letter of March 31, Murray warned of the possibility that certain elements in Congress might try to write the Little Steel formula into the price control laws.

This means the possibility of a double play—first through crippling amendments to the Act itself and second by writing the wage freeze into the law and "ignoring the serious inequity that now exists."

Following Murray's letter, "CIO Price Control Bulletin No. 1" was sent out by the National Office calling for five main points in the renewal; 1) continue price and rent controls; 2) clamp down on prices and stop profiteering; 3) punish the chisellers and cheaters who sell us bottom quality at top prices; 4) tighten up on rent control and extend it; 5) enforce the regulations."

In an earlier circular dated March 27, Pres. Murray stressed the "utmost urgency" for mobilization of all CIO members and "every wage earning family," including the housewives, in a drive for effective price control.

"Gigantic pressures are being brought to bear on Congress to emasculate price control at the expense of all consumers—workers in industry and trade, working farmers, and wives and dependents of soldiers at the front," Murray warned.

With this circular, Murray sent out a report of the OPA Labor Advistory Committee, which has CIO, AFL and Railroad union representatives on it, which calls for strengthening of the Act on five main angles:

(1) Definitely stated dollars and cents price ceilings; (2) prices tied to quality, through grade labelling; (3) price reductions to eliminate excessive profits; (4) publicity for profits, and (5) tightenting and extension of rent control.

A political struggle of the utmost importance to every working man and his family is rapidly shaping up over the price control issue. The profits-plus-inflation agents in Congress and the food monopolists who manipulate them are lined up on one side, working for the day when they can shoot hell out of price control.

You Can't Eat Statistics And Still Produce Steel

PITTSBURGH, Apr. 8—This is the story of a CIO steelworker, one of those more than half million nameless guys who are just a bunch of statistics in the minds of corporation executives, who see them as so many neat figures on the wrong side of a profit sheet.

This steelworker is one of the hundreds interviewed by the CIO United Steelworkers of America in an effort to discover at first hand just what kind of a life the union's members are leading in a period of rapidly rising prices and relatively frozen wages.

In support of its case for a 17 cents an hour wage increase before the Natl. War Labor Board, the Steel union found that Joe Steelworker collectively is going in the red to the extent of 79 cents a week on the princely wages paid by the profit-swollen steel magnates.

What about Joe Steelworker in person? Here's the story of one Joe, who's got to remain nameless for publication purposes, but who is identified in the files of the Steelworkers Union as a 55-year old wharf man, employed at the coke plant of the Natl. Tube Co., at Lorain, Ohio.

Joe Steel—we'll call him—has a wife and four children, ranging in age from 14 to 18, and all of them dependent on the $51.71 a week he earned on the average in the three-month period between last Sept. 1 and Nov. 30.

Joe earns a guaranteed rate of 83½ cents an hour, and with incentive pay added to this, his total pay is $1.02½ an hour. All told, he made $672.24 in the three-month period.

FIGURES TELL STORY

Joe can't speak English very well—his real name is Polish—so he needs the union to tell the War Labor Board about his case. Joe's figures, collected by trained investigators, speak louder for him than any other single factor, however.

The astonishing fact about the figures is that they show that while Joe earned $672.24 during the three-month period, it cost him $706.74 to live—in other words he went in the hole to the extent of $34.50! Here's what he spent:

For taxes and household operation	$ 46.98.
For food	394.03.
For clothing	60.79.
For medical expenses	15.47.
For personal care and recreation	33.04.
For transportation	14.40.
For gifts, contributions and association dues	22.00.
For tobacco and alcohol	12.00.
For insurance	51.13.
For war bonds and other savings	26.90.
For taxes	30.00.

Just how tightly this budget must be watched is indicated by two items—one, the fact that the family is in need of dental attention but hasn't been able to afford it, and two, that the food budget was stretched by keeping 20 chickens and by assiduous cultivation of a garden that yielded a bumper crop for the family's larder.

Joe Steel and his family have a tough time to get along on his wages, and all the figures that the Bureau of Labor Statistics and the steel companies trot out to prove that the Steel family is living in luxury aren't going to be at all convincing either to Joe or to more than half a million other guys who are riding in the same boat.

35% Pay Hike Asked by Stock Exchange Head

NEW YORK, Apr. 8—When it comes to asking for "wage" increases, the labor movement is really on the piker side. It should take a lesson from the N.Y. Stock Exchange, which this week asked the Treasury Dept. to boost the salary of Pres. Emil Schram from $48,000 to $65,000 a year.

Note to the Natl. War Labor Board: This is an increase of better than 35 per cent—more than twice what the CIO United Steelworkers are asking.

Plan N. England Steel Drive

Boston, Apr. 8—The CIO United Steelworkers of America wound up its first eastern Massachusetts organizing conference here this week, with 150 delegates who attended pledged to intensify organizing work in the area.

The delegates, from 21 local unions, formed plans for a drive that is aimed at enrollment of approximately 25,000 potential USA-CIO members working in small steel plants in the eastern Massachusetts and southern New Hampshire area.

Menu for Breakfast BLS Statisticians

PATTERSON, N. J., Apr. 8—The Bureau of Labor Statistics, which said that the cost of food has gone up only 40.2 percent from 1941 to 1943, should be offered these figures for breakfast!

The figures—compiled by the New Jersey CIO Council— show that the cost of feeding a family has risen 27 per cent in 1944 over 1943, and that the increase over 1942 is a cool 50 per cent.

The figures were obtained by a survey of housewives in Patterson, Newark, New Brunswick, Trenton and Camden. They listed what they actually had to spend in order to supply a week's meals for their families. They found that what this amounted to threw completely out of kilter the time-honored statistical practice of allotting one-third of a worker's wage to food.

Price Control

In presenting labor's case for revision of the Little Steel formula, CIO Pres. Philip Murray has emphasized that stabilization of our wartime economy is the chief aim.

"Price control and the current wage demands of CIO unions are two parts of the same problem," he says.

Labor seeks to bring about a stable relationship between wages and prices, as called for by the Price Control Act of October, 1942.

To bring this about, wages must be adjusted to the increased living costs since that time and prices must be more strictly controlled than in the past.

The people who are really trying to rock the boat are those who would freeze unbalanced wages and at the same time weaken present price controls.

With the present price control law about to expire on June 30, they are pushing crippling amendments to make price control ineffective after that date.

That is why the CIO has launched its present campaign to strengthen the price control law. You can help by impressing on your representatives in Congress the necessity for keeping living costs down, adjusting wages to prices, and thus stabilizing our economy.

The Right to Vote

"The right of the citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude."

The above is not a quote from a CIO resolution, though it expresses CIO sentiments. It happens to be the wording of the 15th amendment to the U. C. Constitution.

The 14th amendment to the Constitution also has broad provisions protecting the citizenship rights of all Americans against infringement by any state.

In spite of this, some 10 million Americans, both Negro and white, are notoriously denied their basic right of citizenship, the right to vote, in a number of southern states.

The U. S. Supreme Court has finally cracked down on one of the methods whereby Negroes are denied the vote. It has decided that it is a violation of the Constitution for the Democratic party of Texas to bar Negroes from voting in primaries.

The dominant position of the Democratic party in most of the southern states makes the primaries the only occasion when a citizen can cast an effective vote.

The Supreme Court decision is therefore an important step toward guaranteeing their constitutional rights to many American who have been denied them.

But another step is also necessary, and immediately possible, to bring the right to vote to all the disfranchised Americans in the polltax states.

That is Senate passage of the polltax repeal bill (HR 7), which has already been passed by the House. This bill is due to be brought to the floor of the Senate in the week of April 17.

The chief barrier to passage is a filibuster by the polltax Senators, though a deal to shelve the bill after one cloture vote is also possible.

It takes a two-thirds vote for cloture to end a filibuster. So it is immediately important to make sure your Senators will vote for cloture.

Besides asking them to vote cloture, urge them also to oppose all amendments and to work for quick passage of HR 7.

AFL Wants To Be Alone

The reasons given by Pres. Murray for withdrawing the CIO's application for representation at the Philadelphia Conference of the International Labor Organization present an illuminating contrast with the attitude taken by the AFL leadership.

The CIO is clearly entitled to equal representation with the AFL at this conference. But the AFL has persistently and stubbornly opposed CIO participation. It responded to Pres. Roosevelt's suggestion that the CIO be granted representation by threatening not to participate if this happened.

If the CIO had continued to insist on its rights, the President would have been placed in the difficult and embarrassing position of having to choose between the two labor movements at a time when other far more important responsibilities rest heavily on him.

In any event, the results could not have been conducive to labor unity, nationally and internationally, and would have accentuated the friction which the CIO seeks to reduce.

The CIO therefore did the generous thing by withdrawing its application. Unlike the AFL, it showed that it would not allow petty considerations of prestige to interfere with support for our Commander-in-Chief and with national and United Nations unity.

Though absent from the ILO conference, the CIO will of course be represented at the more inclusive and significant world labor conference in London. And it has no objection to the AFL also participating, if it should so decide.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

THIS COLUMN has always been kind to misunderstood AFL leaders.

We know that brainless bluster, pigheadedness, emotional tantrums and apparently aimless malice are often symptoms of some psychological maladjustment.

We can appreciate the inferiority complex that must develop in those who vainly seek to compete with such a vigorous and modern movement as the CIO.

Under such circumstances, the kindest thing is to ignore, as we have done, the more peculiar manifestations of this condition.

★ ★ ★

Most of the aging hierarchy of the AFL executive council is as much out of step with its own rank and file as it is with the times.

The scurrilous abuse of the CIO, the disruptive attacks on labor unity, the kowtowing to reaction that mark so many statements issued in the name of "the AFL" represent that movement about as much as Hitler represents the American people.

Such statements are not even representative of the AFL top leadership. They result simply from a few high-placed and hidebound tories or isolationists throwing their weight about in the top councils.

★ ★ ★

But the chief reason the CIO refrains from replying in kind to the abuse hurled at it from such AFL quarters, is that it is genuinely committed to united labor action for winning this war.

The membership of the AFL and most of its leaders are equally devoted to this patriotic purpose.

So there are countless activities, both local and national, in which the two main bodies of labor can and do cooperate wholeheartedly.

The CIO prefers to emphasize this cooperation, which leads naturally and logically to greater and greater labor unity.

It does not wish to enter into any mudslinging contest with even the most reactionary AFL leaders, lest this interfere with such cooperation and antagonize honest AFL elements who may unthinkingly identify themselves with them.

★ ★ ★

The average AFL member is no different from his CIO brother. He is a patriotic worker who wants all labor to work together to strengthen genuine unions, to preserve social legislation, to keep down living costs and adjust wages to them, to elect progressive candidates to public office, and to promote world labor unity for victory and peace.

What must such a worker think of the Frey amendment to the Natl. Labor Relations Act, which gave company unions a new lease of life, and which has been used against AFL as well as CIO unions?

Does he agree with AFL leader Frey who put it on the books to undermine the Wagner act, or with the CIO which demands its repeal?

Or what must the average AFL member think of those leaders, speaking in his name, who for petty factional reasons tried to block a War Labor Board hearing on the one fully prepared case (that of the United Steelworkers) for revision of the Little Steel wage-freeze formula?

★ ★ ★

AFL members have as much at stake as have those of the CIO in changing the present anti-labor Congress—which can only be done by united labor political action.

We need not ask what AFL members think of Pres. Green's action in forbidding joint political action with the CIO. They are already giving their answer by increasing their joint activities with the CIO and railroad Brotherhoods in countless localities.

As for AFL support for the unspeakable Martin Dies and his un-American, anti-labor, anti-New Deal committee, it is evident only in the AFL official clipsheet, which seeks to out-do Dies in Hitleristic red-baiting.

The AFL membership for the most part, and notably in Dies' own bailiwick, has nothing but contempt for polltaxer Dies and everything he stands for.

★ ★ ★

Finally, we should like to see a poll of the AFL membership on the issue of uniting world labor to win the war, and a people's peace.

It would overwhelmingly repudiate the dog-in-the-manger AFL leaders who refused to participate in the Intl. Labor Organization Conference unless the CIO was denied similar representation.

It would also repudiate the same leaders' refusal to join with the CIO, the Railroad Brotherhoods and the labor movements of the other United Nations in the all-inclusive world labor conference called by the British Trades Union Congress.

UAW Program Asks Security Guarantees

Heroes of Pearl Harbor, Guadalcanal, Tunisia and Sicily joined hands with veterans of World War I as the CIO United Auto Workers, largest labor union in the country, moved swiftly this week to mobilize its membership behind a program which would safeguard the interests of soldiers now and in the postwar period.

Speaking at Washington, D. C., to a two-day conference of more than 125 representative members of the union—all veterans of World War I and World War II—UAW-CIO Pres. R. J. Thomas stated that one of the "paramount objectives of the UAW-CIO is to achieve full employment and rehabilitation of veterans of World War II."

Here's How to Vote in '44 Elections

Here's what you have to do to vote under the service ballot bill as passed by Congress. It isn't easy, but if you follow these War Department instructions, you can be reasonably sure your ballot will count in the November, 1944, election.

These instructions are based on the soldiers' vote bill as passed by Congress. Right now, President Roosevelt and the CIO are plugging for an amendment that will give you a Federal ballot if you don't get your state ballot in time for the election. In the meantime, this is what you have to do:

1. Apply to your CO for a postcard which you will use as an application to secure an absentee ballot from your state. These postcards are being sent to all camps by the War Dept. and are yours for the asking.

2. Fill in the necessary information on the postcard. Be sure you print your name and serial number and complete military address on the card.

3. Take it to a commissioned officer or to your sergeant and have him attest your signature.

4. Mail card (no postage is required) to the Secretary of State at the State Capitol of your state.

5. On receipt of the absentee ballot, fill out immediately in accordance with the instructions on the ballot, sign it, and have it attested to by an officer or your sergeant. Then mail as directed.

Your CO has the responsibility of giving you full and complete information on voting by members of the armed forces. If there is something you want to know about your rights under the law, ask him.

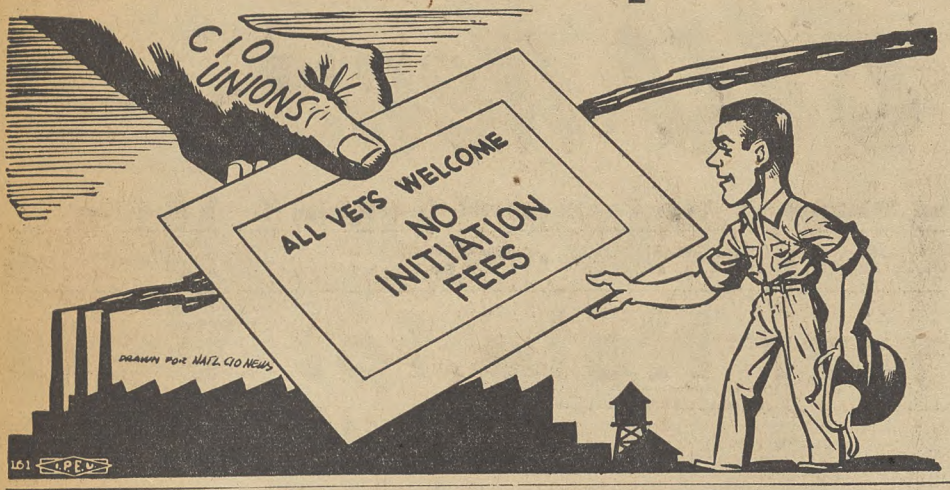
Wartime Strikes Out—Murray

Wartime strikes are inexcusable under any circumstances, CIO Pres. Philip Murray this week told a capacity crowd gathered to witness the dedication of the United Steelworkers new headquarters in Gary, Ind.

MURRAY

In a speech strongly reaffirming the CIO's no-strike pledge, Murray said: "If I thought that any of you were going to participate in wildcat strikes or slowdowns, I couldn't be your leader any longer. I'm not going to lead anyone who would obstruct the war effort and thereby cost even a single soldier's life."

CIO Unions Open Doors to Vets



LOOKING AHEAD

By LEN DE CAUX

AMONG many things servicemen and labor have in common are false friends in Congress who say they love you as they squeeze your throat.

Rep. John Rankin, for instance, makes much claim to be the soldiers' friend. But he led the fight to deny servicemen the right to vote through a federal ballot.

He also opposed unemployment benefits for ex-servicemen in the "GI bill," and provisions that would protect them from having to scab.

Rankin fights labor right down the line, the while he protests his love for the working man.

So let's glance at the issues and the line-up in Congress, and disregard the baloney.

★ ★ ★

Maybe you don't worry so much about taxes, while you're in the army. But you should.

A combination of polltax Democrats and tory Republicans over-rode Pres. Roosevelt's veto and passed a tax bill which he labeled "relief for the greedy and not for the needy."

By refusing to raise necessary war taxes now from war profiteers, as labor demanded, Congress is passing on a burden of debt which ex-servicemen will have to pay in one fashion or another after the war.

★ ★ ★

The price of chow may not worry you so much, while you're in the army. But it does worry your home folks now and will plague you after the war.

The same combination that passed the "feed-the-greedy" tax bill also opposes food subsidies and the strict price control demanded by labor.

If it has its way, the cost of food and everything else will sky-rocket—and this inflation will cut in half the value of your savings, your bonus and your post-war earnings.

★ ★ ★

The soldiers' vote is another issue that found the same combination of polltax Democrats and tory Republicans lined up on one side—against the soldiers' right to vote—and labor, the administration and all true friends of the servicemen lined up on the other.

In fact, there is hardly an issue before Congress that does not illustrate the identical interests of labor and servicemen, and the fact that labor's enemies are also trying to knife the serviceman.

"Guess he can't stomach the local newspapers, Sir."

Ban Initiation Fees For Servicemen

THE CONSTITUTION of the United Automobile Workers, the CIO's biggest union with 1,200,000 members, provides that discharged servicemen shall be admitted to the union without payment of initiation fees, UAW Pres. R. J. Thomas said this week.

The union also gives members who are in the armed forces the right to vote in union elections, and provides that servicemen shall continue in good standing without payment of dues.

A suggestion that union initiation fees be waived for servicemen returning from the armed forces to work in shops under contract with CIO unions was made recently by CIO Pres. Philip Murray.

A quick response was given by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' General Executive Board which voted to waive initiation fees for returned veterans, subject to approval of the Amalgamated convention next May in Chicago, as well as by the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, Marine and Shipbuilding Workers and United Furniture Workers.

The Clothing Workers union pointed out that it was among the first American unions to waive dues payments of members in the armed services.

Plan to Aid Vets

in the deliberations, the conference approved an extensive program for the educational and vocational training of veterans to be administered by an Administrator of Servicemen's Education and Training appointed by President Roosevelt, to be given for a period of four years entirely at government expense.

FINANCIAL AID

The conference proposed that during the educational and training period a veteran would receive an allowance of $80 per month plus $25 a month for a wife and $15 for each child.

All veterans whether disabled or not would be eligible, thus providing for the elimination of the 10 per cent disability which a veteran now has to have before he can secure very limited educational and vocational training.

To make sure that all the problems of veterans would be adequately handled when they returned, the conference proposed the immdiate establishment in the UAW-CIO a Veterans Dept. to be headed by a UAW-CIO veteran.

UE No-Strike Pledge Kept 100%

Army Paper Hails Union Record

NO ACCOMPLISHMENT is considered with greater pride by members of the CIO United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America than the words of a recent editorial in "Stars and Stripes," GI newspaper in the ETO,

This is the third of a series of articles about CIO unions and the part they are playing to help win the war. The articles are published to acquaint servicemen and women with CIO's policy of backing to the limit the all-out production of the weapons needed for victory over the Axis.

which said in regard to UE-CIO workers:

"Topping their long list of achievements was a record of no strikes since Pearl Harbor, for the electrical workers had given their solemn pledge to produce the war goods you would need without interruption, and they have kept their pledge."

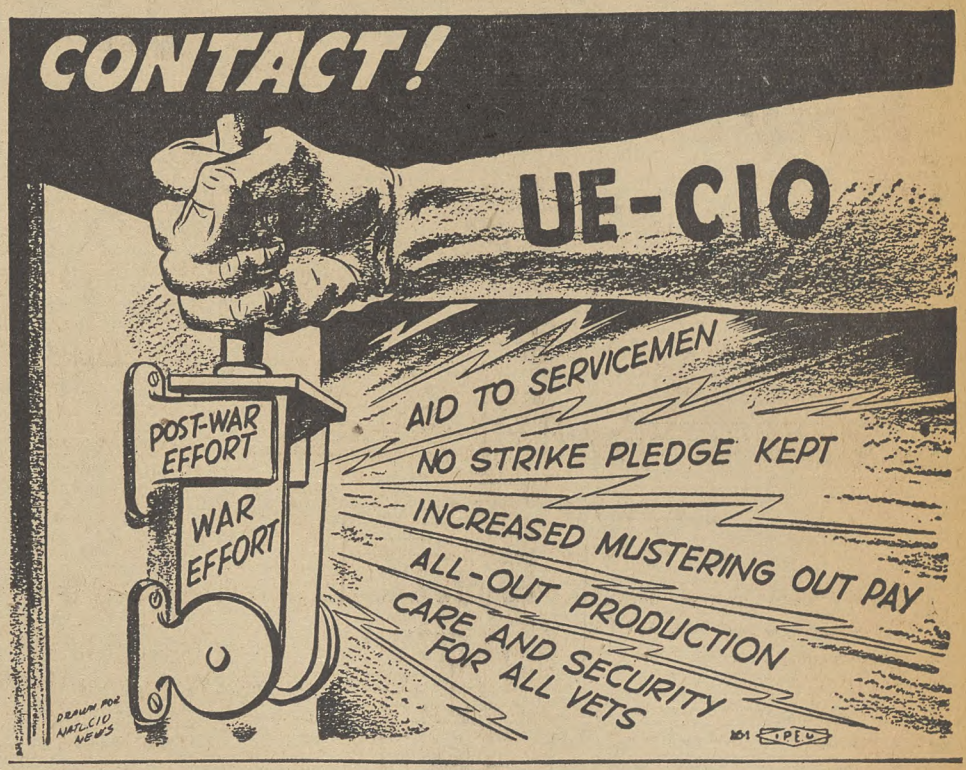
DRIVE TO AID VETS

The UE-CIO, representing 683,000 workers in war industry, has launched a campaign, together with the entire CIO, to follow up victory in the war with a program at home to provide jobs, care and security for all veterans.

The GI "Bill of Rights," legislation to put into law guarantees of aid to veterans, is endorsed by the UE-CIO. Local UE unions are encouraged to set up "trade union posts," affiliated with established veterans organizations, so that the returning Servicemen and women will have the strength which comes through organization.

In addition, the UE-CIO is on record for increases in mustering-out payments to veterans, for a raise in the base pay to enlisted men, and for increased allotments to the dependents of Servicemen. Nor does the UE content itself with just going on record. Together with the CIO, the union is carrying on a militant and constant legislative and political campaign to guarantee the rights of Servicemen.

This campaign reached a high point in the campaign to win the Servicemen the right to vote when the UE-CIO circulated 6,000 soldier-vote posters and 175,000 soldier-vote petition forms containing space for 3,500,000 signatures of kinfolk of men and women in uniform.



WAIVE INITIATION FEES

At a recent meeting of the UE General Executive Board, it was unanimously voted that the Board be ready to consider, on its merits, any application filed by a local union asking for the right to waive initiation fees for returning Servicemen.

The UE-CIO has 153,000 of its members in the Armed Forces of our country. The members that remain at home are producing one-fifth of all war material manufactured in our country by such industrial giants as General Electric, Westinghouse, etc.

It is such activity as this that prompted Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson to say of the UE-CIO: "As we turn towards the tougher struggle ahead, it is gratifying to note the excellent record made by your union in observance of its no-strike pledge."

The Locals are using their organizations to support such campaigns as the United War Fund and the Red Cross. Local 301 in Schenectady alone has contributed 6,255 pints of blood to the blood donor drive in the last six months. An average of $17 a month is invested in war bonds by UE members. Their bond purchases add up to the sum of $120,000,000.

Ask Better GI Vote Bill

The service vote bill, around which developed one of the toughest Congressional fights in recent history, became law when President Roosevelt let it go by without veto or signature.

Congress has a chance, however, to make good on promises to give service personnel an effective means of voting by passing an amendment offered on the President's suggestion by Sens. Green and Lucas, co-authors of the original Federal ballot plan.

Under this amendment, soldiers and sailors will get a Federal ballot if they fail to receive their state ballot on time, without prior authorization by their state. This will save endless red tape and will then put the issue of counting the ballot squarely up to the state authorities. CIO is supporting this measure, as it supported the original Federal voting plan.

When the bill first came to him, the President said he would base his judgment on whether or not it allowed more service men to vote than the old 1942 law. After a telegraph survey of the 48 state governors, he said that the key to this is "the extent to which the states cooperate to make the measure as effective as its provisions permit."

However, many state governors answered that they did not expect to take any steps to make certain that their residents in the Remember for November!

Here's Record on SNAFUed GI Vote Bill

This is the final voting record of U. S. Represenatives and Senators on the Servicemen's vote bill.

The unions, and especially the CIO, tried very hard to get Congress to pass a much better bill, based on the plan of sending a simple uniform Federal ballot to each person in the armed forces and merchant marine and having a guaranteed count in the states back home.

Congress rejected this, and instead passed a so-called "states' rights" bill. Under a somewhat similar law, only 28,000 service votes were cast in 1942.

The unions are carefully studying the voting record below with an eye on the November, 1944, elections.

"W" indicates a wrong vote, for the "states' rights" bill and against a Federal ballot system. "R" indicates a vote against the "states' rights" bill. "NV" indicates not voting. "Paired" indicates that the Congressman had an agreement with another Congressman on the other side of the issue not to vote. Under a system called "general pairing," some Congressmen listed themselves simply as "paired"—thereby avoiding the necessity of stating their positions. Asterisks indicate polltax states.

Know Your Enemies—Chicago 'Trib' Peddles Fascist Poison

By LOUIS OGULL

COL. ROBERT R. McCORMICK'S Chicago Tribune is the most treacherous single newspaper in America. Its services to the Axis cause and close adherence to the fascist line could scarcely be improved upon by Herr Goebbels himself.

This Frankenstein of American journalism is selling America short by promoting disunity and discontent at home and slandering our fighting allies abroad.

In peacetime we might laugh off McCormick's deliberate knifing of Roosevelt, Russia, Great Britain and organized labor. In wartime his violent blasts disrupt morale, impede victory and threaten a true people's peace. His publication of an overseas edition for servicemen brings his policies even more into the national spotlight.

This brief review of McCormick and his medium of malevolence is designed to show what they stand for in order that we may be on guard against their poison.

BACKGROUND IMPORTANT

The CIO NEWS believes it is important to know something of the background of the Tribune and its millionaire master in order to be prepared for new floods of defeatist propaganda.

The Chicago Tribune is a recognized power in politics. It helps mold the opinions of some 5,000,000 readers in 12 midwestern states. Proof of its power is seen in the election of Tribune-backed Congressmen who ape its defeatist and isolationist line.

What is the Tribune's approach to the war? The facts speak for themselves.

RAN SECRET REPORT

Three days before Pearl Harbor the Tribune published the screaming headline: "F. D. R.'s WAR PLANS!" McCormick that day disclosed to our enemies a confidential Army-Navy report, and angled it to give the impression that FDR was seeking a war with Germany. The Tokyo press gloatingly reprinted the report. A week later Hitler quoted from it in declaring war on America.

McCormick's betrayal was publicly branded the next day by Secretary of War Stimson, who asked: "What do you think of the patriotism of a man or a newspaper that would take those confidential studies and make them public to the enemies of this country?"

McCormick is a firm believer in America First and to hell with the rest of the world. That's why subversive, anti-Semitic, pro-fascist elements like the K. K. K. and Harry A. Jung's American Vigilant Intelligence Federation, located in the Tribune building, could depend on his help and support.

Since it was founded on June 10, 1847, The Tribune has fought the trade unions. From the days of the Knights of Labor to the AFL and CIO, it has abused and slandered labor. It favored strychnine or arsenic for the unemployed in 1877.

The Tribune's most malicious anti-labor lies have been leveled at CIO merchant seamen. Ignoring official Navy denials and the findings of a Congressional Committee, this Sixth Coumn sheet had a field day last year smearing America's heroic merchant men in the National Maritime Union. It was the notorious Guadalcanal lie which charged that NMU seamen had refused to unload a ship on Sunday because of "union rules."

The Tribune has just succeeded in quashing one libel suit brought by the NMU as a result of its Guadalcanal smear. Another suit is pending. Secy. of the Navy Knox sympathized with the NMU in a letter expressing "emphatic disapproval" of the McCormick device of quoting an "unnamed naval officer" to palm off his bias against merchant seamen.

For reasons neither organized labor nor the American people can fathom, McCormick is permitted to dish out a daily diet of disruption and defeatism that gives aid and comfort to the enemy. It doesn't make sense, but the Tribune, far from being indicted, has been allowed to promote its bogus patriotism in overseas editions for servicemen.

Our perplexity about this is shared by Australian novelist Leslie Haylen, who has just warned the Canberra government against McCormick's efforts to publish a tabloid for servicemen in Australia. Haylen asserts:

"His particular type of journalism is designed to blast relations between our two great countries. You can imagine the effect his writings would have among troops in the front line."

'GI' Bill Backed 100% By CIO

Senate Passed It, Rankin Is Sitting on It

CIO has swung its full weight behind the "GI Bill" to aid veterans and the new mustering out pay bill. A letter from CIO Pres. Philip Murray to all Senators and Congressmen asks them to work and vote for both measures.

Following Murray's letter, the "GI bill" passed the Senate, and House action is expected soon—or rather was expected until Rep. John E. Rankin, (D., Miss.) stood up in the House to oppose it.

The GI bill provides for increased hospital facilities for demobilized service men and women, guards against discharge before the veteran has had his compensation put through all the various processes, and gives veterans' organizations a place on review boards.

FREE TUITION

In addition, it provides free tuition and allowances at accredited schools for one year, plus a maximum of three years for qualified veterans. It grants loans up to $1,000 for buying homes, farms and businesses. It puts employment under the U. S. Employment Service and a Veterans' Service Board. In case a veteran is unemployed, he gets eight weeks compensation for each month of service, up to a maximum of 52 weeks.

The mustering-out bill provides $3 a day pay for home service, $4 for foreign service, plus $500 if wounded. Minimum payment is $100, maximum $3,500 for home service and $4,500 for foreign service, to be paid in non-negotiable, interest bearing bonds.

The opposition of Rankin is based on his objection to the 52 weeks unemployment pay, which he thinks "might encourage unemployment."

GI Vote Bill

armed forces get a state ballot or that it would be counted when it is returned.

Accordingly, the President asked the U. S. Congress to amend the present bill along the lines of the Green-Lucas amendment.

"No State or Federal red tape should take from our young folk in the service their right to vote," he said.

There Are Tall Ones and Short Ones in All Colors

Truth About Race—

(In the interest of truth and with the firm belief that the facts should be made available to servicemen as well as civilians, The CIO NEWS herewith prints the second of a series of articles—excerpts from the pamphlet, "The Races of Mankind." The pamphlet was written by Dr. Gene Weltfish and Prof. Ruth Benedict. It was approved by competent authorities as scientifically accurate, but was denied to servicemen and women who are overseas after Representative Andrew J. May, of Kentucky, objected to it because it did not agree with his particular brand of racial philosophy.)

For ages men have spoken of "blood relations" as if different peoples had different blood. Some people have shouted that if we got into our veins the blood of someone with a different head shape, eye color, hair texture, or skin color, we should get some of that person's physical and mental characteristics.

Modern science has revealed this to be pure superstition. All human blood is the same, whether it is the blood of an Eskimo or a Frenchman, of the "purest" German "Aryan" or an African pygmy—except for one medically important difference.

Gradually investigators learned that there are four types of blood, called O, A, B, and AB, and that although blood typed O can be mixed successfully with the other three, none of these can be mixed with one another without clumping.

TYPES IN ALL RACES

Today doctors do not "type" blood for transfusion at all. The red and white cells or corpuscles are removed, and the remainder is the same whatever race it comes from. The Blood Bank calls it plasma. It is dried and kept indefinitely. When needed for emergency transfusions, it is mixed with water and can save the life of any man or woman in the world.

In the world today the darkest people are in West Africa, the lightest people in northwest Europe, while in southeast Asia are men with yellowish-tan skins. Most people in the world, however, are not of these extremes, but are in-betweens. These in-betweens probably have the skin shades that were once most common, the white, yellow, and dark brown or black being extreme varieties.

Recently scientists found that skin color is determined by two special chemicals. One of these, carotene, gives a yellow tinge; the other, melanin, contributes the brown. These colors, along with the pinkish tinge that comes when the blood vessels show through, give various shades to the human skin.

People of browner complexions simply have more melanin in their skin, people of yellowish color more carotene. It is not an all-or-nothing difference; it is a difference in proportion. Your skin color is due to the amount of these chemicals present in the skin.

Aryans, Jews, Italians are not races. Aryans are people who speak Indo-European, "Aryan" languages. Hitler uses the term in many ways—sometimes for blond Europeans, including the Scandinavians; sometimes for Germans, whether blond or brunet; sometimes for all who agree with him politically, including the Japanese.

STRICTLY GI

We can't print all the letters we get, but we want a lot more anyway. The only way people who hold down the home front can learn what service men and women want is from you GIs personally. Shoot us your opinions—and don't spare those pencils!

* * *

Wants Right to Vote

"There are certain Congressmen and Senators who think it's all right for us to go overseas and fight, but don't like the idea of us voting for the men we think should sign the peace," writes Chas. W. Sweyko, BM1/c, overseas with the Navy.

"If a man is old enough to fight in this war, he should be able to vote. Why all this hollering they are doing to prevent these kids from voting? I can understand why they are afraid—it means that there will be a lot of new faces in Congress."

Just What He Needed

Here's what some readers of the CIO News Servicemen's Edition think about the paper and what it may do:

"The CIO News for Servicemen is what I've been hoping for to combat the poison put out in most our commercial press. Congratulations and wishing it all the success in the world."—Henry Splett, merchant seamen and Nat'l. Maritime Union member.

* * *

"This paper is a vital instrument of information for our service men and women, who find themselves handicapped for the lack of authentic factual data regarding the activities and progress being made by their unions in their absence," writes Bea Zivin, a Spar, from Long Beach, Calif.

"We in service need information badly so that we can present factual arguments to our present associates who have been so tremendously influenced by the propaganda propounded by the daily papers and other sources of information which are determinedly attempting to create disunity and distrust between various groups such as servicemen against workers, Negroes against whites, and men against women, causing the all-out united effort for winning the war to flounder and be hesitatingly pressed."

* * *

Helps Win Arguments

"If every union man in service will read the Servicemen's CIO News," writes L. A. Galeazzi, MM2/c, USNR, from the Naval Hospital at Oakland, Calif., "he will have many talking points when he gets into an argument."

* * *

"My husband is on overseas duty with the U. S. Army, and I would like him to receive the CIO's Servicemen's Edition. I know that he is vitally interested in trade unionism, and particularly the role the CIO plays in bettering the conditions of the workers and also naturally, the CIO's efforts towards winning the war and the peace to follow."—Mrs. Harry D. Levine, New York.

A sign in a San Francisco shop reads, "I'd rather have 100 Japanese customers than one American." Yep, you guessed it—it was an undertaking establishment.

Just to Keep The Record Straight

THIS STORY is just to keep the record straight about those $200 a week war jobs, silk shirt and champaigne buying sprees that are dreamed up by some guys more interested in fantasy than in fact.

The straight dope on the kind of life led by production line Joes in the nation's war plants was dusted off for public inspection this month by Pres. Philip Murray, of CIO and CIO's United Steelworkers of America.

In support of its request for a 17 cents increase, the USA-CIO presented this picture:

1. The cost of living has gone up 43 per cent since Jan., '41.

2. Wages have gone up only 15 per cent at best; the average is lower.

3. Profits in steel have gone up 306.8 per cent since 1939—overall industrial profits more than 200 per cent after taxes.

The union not only made a thorough study showing that average living costs are up 43.5 per cent (food 74.2 per cent), but also did a case study on some 600 steelworkers' families. Here's what was found:

The average steelworker made $49.71 a week in '43, overtime and all. He had to spend $50.50 a week to keep himself and his family, pay taxes, buy bonds, pay off debts, etc. This put him 79 cents a week in the red.

The corporations not only are making staggering profiits now, but the tax laws guarantee that they can't lose money for two years after the war.

"Oh, boy! I ought to get Pfc. for this!"

Keep Your Eye On Congress

Congress is back this week (April 13) from the Easter recess, filled, no doubt, with urgent messages from the people back home outlining the program they want enacted on Capitol Hill.

Just in case some of the Congressmen may not remember the broad outlines of this program, here's a reminder of the issues they're coming back to:

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Price Control Act.	Renewal of Price Control Act, due June 30.	CIO testimony begins April 18 in Senate Banking Committee, (Sen. Wagner, D., N.Y., chm.)	Urge Senators and Representative to renew act on time without crippling riders, with needed changes.
Polltax repeal (HR 7)	Brings 10,000,000 Americans into democracy.	Senate debate set for April 17.	Keep urging your Senators to vote cloture to gag filibuster and pass bill.
Soldiers vote bill amendment, (S 1828)	Will carry out FDR's plan to let servicemen get Federal ballot if their State ballot doesn't reach them, without prior State authorization. Will greatly increase soldier's chance to vote.	Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections, (Green, D., R.I., chm.) Introduced by Sens. Green and Lucas, (D., R. I. and Ill.), authors of original Federal ballot plan.	Wire your Senators to support. Start lining up House support too.
"GI" bill, (S 1767)	Provides hospitalization, education, rehabilitation etc., for veterans.	Passed by Senate with CIO support. Rankin (polltaxer, Miss.) now threatening to hold it up. Rankin is chairman of the House Veterans Committee, can block hearings.	Urge your Representative to demand hearings, talk with members of Veterans Committee.
Wagner Act, (Frey rider)	Frey rider on NLRB appropriation bill legalizes company unions by freezing all contracts, no matter how arrived at.	House Appropriations Committee (Rep. Cannon, D., Mo., chmn.) to start hearings soon. AFL officials demanding renewal of rider, deep cuts in NLRB funds.	Wire Appropriations Committee members, your own Representative to block Frey rider, grant full funds.
Fair Employment (FEPC appropriation, continuance bills).	Russell (polltaxer, Ga.) rider on Senate appropriation aimed at throttling FEPC, ending fight against job discrimination.	House Appropriations Committee has $585,000 fund request; Labor and Judiciary Committees have four bills (HR 3896, 4004, 4405, 1732) to make FEPC permanent, thus voiding Russell rider.	Urge your Representative to work and vote for funds and continuation bills, three of which are identical.
School lunches, (S 1820, S 1721)	Hot, nourishing meals for kids; helps war production by enabling mothers to take war jobs.	Senate Agriculture Committee has both bills, (Smith, polltaxer, S. C., chm.) House threw out program before Easter.	Urge your Senators to work for hearings; tell your Representative how shocked you are at House action.

High Court Ban On Jim Crow Hailed By CIO

NEW YORK, Apr. 8—The U. S. Supreme Court's action in outlawing the bar against Negroes voting in state primaries must be followed up by repeal of the polltax, coming up April 17 in the Senate, chairman Sidney Hillman of the CIO Political Action Committee said here this week.

Hillman's comment came on the Court ruling that held the "white primary" unconstitutional. The decision, he said, means "a new and vigorous political life in the South."

"New impetus has been given to the fight against the polltax and for the removal of all racial and economic restrictions on the free use of the ballot," he said. "On April 17 the Senate will have the opportunity to advance this decision through enactment of HR 7."

JUSTICE REED

He also pointed out that Negro citizens had to wait until the issue could be brought before "a court composed predominantly of liberal jurists" appointed by President Roosevelt. The case has been heard three times before, only to be denied each time.

SETS BACK RACE HATE

Loud yells from the polltaxers and the diehard "white supremacy" men in Congress greeted the decision, who saw it as a setback to the recent sharp rise in racial hatred promoted by such men as Sens. Smith and Russell and Reps. Rankin and Dies—to name only four of the most rabid.

Immediately following the verdict, which was sought by the Natl. Association for the Advancement of Colored People, legal steps were taken to see that the Supreme Court order is obeyed, including a request to the U. S. Justice Dept. for aid in enforcement.

The key to political emancipation of not only the Negro citizen but of all residents of polltax states remains in the passage of HR 7, the polltax repeal bill. Senate debate has been promised for April 17.

The polltaxers, led by Bilbo of Mississippi, will become even more frantic in their efforts to kill the repeal bill by talking it to death. This filibuster can be broken by voting cloture—end of debate—which takes a two thirds majority, or 64 of the 96 Senators.

Let your Senator know again and again that you expect him to vote for cloture and to pass the long overdue repeal bill.

AFL Aim—Fasten Frey Leech Again On Wagner Act

WASHINGTON, Apr. 8—Quietly, but also effectively, craft leaders of the AFL are working on Congress to give company unionism another year's legal lease on life.

The job is being handled chiefly by "Colonel" John P. Frey, head of the AFL Metal Trades Dept., and is leading up to pretty thorough sabotage of the Wagner Act and the Natl. Labor Relations Board that administers it.

The main aim is to get the Frey rider fastened to an NLRB deficiency appropriation bill now before Congress (HR 4346). They also want to slash NLRB appropriations to the bone.

The Frey rider, tacked on to a similar bill last year, prohibits the NLRB from acting in a situation where a labor-management contract exists, no matter how the contract was arrived at.

This means that collusive, back-door contracts between companies and company unions, whether or not they're disguised with an AFL label, can't be upset—no matter how much they violate the Wagner Act. Frey has already profited by the rider, in the Kaiser shipyard and Basic Magnesium cases.

Hostility to the NLRB and the Wagner Act was shown also by Senator McCarran (D., Nev.) in hearings before an Appropriations sub-Committee last month. A long memo from Frey, repeating stale charges that the NLRB is "biased" in favor of the CIO, was also made part of the testimony.

Hearings will start soon before the House Appropriations Committee (Rep. Cannon, D., Mo., chmn.) Wire your Congressman now to urge him to work and vote against the Frey amendment and for full NLRB funds.

Canteen 'Sells' CIO

Washington, Apr. 8 — The CIO Servicemen's Canteen here is a big success with civilians as well as GIs. The canteen's policy of welcoming all Servicemen created such a favorable impression amony Navy Yard employes here that the CIO United Federal Workers signed up 55 new members on the strength of it, the union reported.

USA Wins in Montana

Provo, Utah, Apr. 8 — The CIO United Steelworkers this week reported progress in the State of Montana, with two Labor Board election victories won at the Beal Pipe & Tank Corp. and the Eaton Metal Products Co.

Price Control Conference

Washington, Apr. 8 — Lining up with the fight for effective price control, 10 leading members of the Congressional Committee to Protect the Consumer have called a consumers' conference to meet here April 19 and 20 with delegates from labor, consumers, farmers, women groups and the like invited to attend.

The Congressional Committee, headed by Rep. Scanlon (D., Pa.), has also asked 100 Congressmen to endorse the meeting—but not to make speeches. A similar conference last year was attended by more than 350 delegates who met in the Caucus Room of the Old House Office Bldg.

The 10 signers of the conference call were Reps. Scanlon, McMurray (D., Wis.), Rowan (D., Ill.), Sullivan (D., Nev.), Burdick (R., N.D.), Forand (D., R.I.), Dingell (D., Mich.), Hoch (D., Pa.), Ford (D., Cal.) and Wolverton (R., N.J.).

'GI Bill' Is Fought By Polltax Leader

WASHINGTON, Apr. 8—The "GI bill" (S 1767), omnibus measure to aid returned veterans that passed the Senate with CIO support just before the recess, got a jolt this week from a Congressman whose loudest claim is that he's the best friend of the serviceman in the House.

The Congressman was John Rankin (polltaxer, Miss.), who said that he objects to the unemployment insurance features of the bill and to a clause that protects a veteran's right to join with other workers in a work stoppage.

The unemployment compensation clause guarantees a returned veteran up to 52 weeks of benefits at $15 a week, plus extras for dependents. This, said Rankin, "might encourage unemployment"—apparently on the theory that a veteran would rather be idle on $15 a week than work for three times that amount.

The work stoppage angle also bothered Rankin, who indicated that he looks forward to lots of strike-breaking when the boys get home.

Rankin was the author of the phoney "states' rights" soldier vote bill that FDR and the CIO denounced as "a fraud" and was the chief leader in the flat refusal of the House polltaxers and Republicans to compromise on the measure.

As Chairman of the House Veterans Committee, Rankin can stall hearings on the GI Bill, but only if active protest fails to come through. In addition, a strong protest on this issue will help when the Green-Lucas amendment to aid service voting comes over from the Senate to the House. If enough protest develops, Rankin can be helped toward political oblivion.

Service Vote Change Will Cut Red Tape

WASHINGTON, Apr. 8—Congressmen coming back from the Easter recess have a good chance to repair some of the damage to the soldiers' right to vote which was done in the so-called "states' right" bill passed last month.

The chance lies in an amendment (S 1828) to the bill put in by Sens. Green (D., R.I.) and Lucas (D., Ill.), authors of the original bill providing for a simple, uniform Federal ballot plan that was sidetracked in favor of the phoney "states' rights" measure.

The amendment follows the lines suggested by FDR in his message passing the bill back to Congress without vetoing it. In the message, FDR said:

CUTS RED TAPE

"I further appeal to the Congress to amend the present bill, S 1285, so as to authorize all service men and women, who have not received their State ballots by an appropriate date, whether or not they have formally applied for them, to use the Federal ballot without prior express authorization by the States."

The amendment cuts through red tape that otherwise will prevent almost all servicemen and women from voting in November. Under the bill as it stands, servicemen are limited to a state ballot unless they go through a mass of red tape, including an oath that they haven't received the state ballot, and then only if they're serving outside the U. S.

The Green-Lucas amendment has been sent to the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections, of which Green is chairman. Wire your Senators urging them to take this chance to redeem Congress' failure to give the servicemen the vote in the bill that has just become law—and start working on your Representative at the same time.

UE Plugs Equal Rights For Women

New York, Apr. 8—Equal pay for women workers and a program to involve them in union and political action were keynotes of a "Statement on Women" adopted at a recent Executive Board meeting of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, CIO.

"We must guard the fundamental right of women to remain in industry if they so choose," the Board said. "We must encourage them to come forward into leadership, train them and teach them in an understanding of our production and union problems.

"They must be encouraged to participate in all phases of leadership and activity. This will be done if this union continues to make progress in its program to eliminate all differentials between men's and women's rates.

"The problem of full employment for women cannot be separated from the problem of full employment and security for all people.

"We therefore call on the women members of this union to participate more aggressively and completely in the political action program of this organization which points the way to achievement of better life for all people and to a measure of security for which this war is being fought."

Get on Political Action Beam—Murray, Hillman

NEW YORK, Apr. 8—Everything the CIO has done and hopes to do in the future depends on electing a progressive government in 1944, CIO Pres. Philip Murray and Political Action Chairman Sidney Hillman said this week in writing to all CIO affiliates, regional directors and officials.

"Your organizing program, your program for collective bargaining contracts, your education and recreation program all largely depend on your political program," they said.

"This is true because much of the success of all your union programs depends on the success of united CIO political action and the election of a liberal, progressive government in the U. S. It's as simple as that."

Warning that the job is far from easy, Murray and Hillman reminded their readers that we would have to "overcome outmoded attitudes about political action within the labor movement itself. We are going to have to develop new, politically conscious attitudes among the leadership and the rank and file of labor.

"And this must be accomplished in the short time between now and November 7. It is going to take all of us, using every bit of time and energy possible, to do the job."

Asking them to get a "feeling of urgency" about political action, the two leaders said: "The prospects of our tomorrows hang in the balance. We can have full employment or unemployment.

ALTERNATIVES

"We can have an end of war based on international collaboration or we can sow the seeds of new war by returning to the anarchy of isolation. We can have a government based on enlightened and progressive domestic policies or we can have a reactionary government which will grind labor beneath its heel.

"Which of these alternatives becomes a reality depends on what we in the CIO do in political action. Political action must be the life and breath of the CIO until election day."

As a first and continuing job, Murray and Hillman stressed the need to get every possible voter registered in time to vote in November. "You must push registration to the very limit because without votes we are helpless. Remember that a light vote is always a reactionary vote," they warned.

Murray Hails Auxiliary Aid To Servicemen

Washington, Apr. 8—The CIO joined this week with its national Auxiliary Congress for calling for observance of April 16 to 23 as Blue Star Mothers Week.

"The Congress of Industrial Organizations takes pride in joining with our Women's Auxiliaries to honor the mothers and wives of our servicemen and merchant seamen in this Blue Star Mothers Week," President Philip Murray said in a letter to the officers of the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries.

"I am delighted to note the activities of our Auxiliaries in mobilizing women to back up our fighting men in every way possible, and I know that nobody feels the need for this more intimately than do their own womenfolk.

"This Blue Star Mothers Week presents a fine opportunity to give practical expression to the affection and loyalty we feel for our sons and brothers in the armed forces and all the other American boys who are so valiantly fighting for victory over the Axis.

CIO unions and auxiliaries throughout the country are planning ceremonies during Blue Star Mothers Week in honor of the women in the families of our servicemen.

Says War Brings Australia, States Closer

Washington, Apr. 8 — Fraternal greetings from Australian union wives to their auxiliary sisters in the United States were received this week by the CIO Congress of Women's Auxiliaries.

"We are looking forward to exchanging correspondence and contact," Mrs. Pearl Hickey of Sidney, Australia, Secretary of the Australian Railways Union Women's Auxiliary, wrote in answer to greetings sent by the CIO auxiliaries.

"We feel that the war will bring the people of American and Australia in closer contact and sympathy," Mrs. Hickey wrote. "Your servicemen's uniforms are a familiar sight on our buses, trains, trams and ferries. Let us all hope that in the future this bond will be strengthened for the purpose of building a better world."

Mothers Honored For Aid to Fighters

By ELEANOR FOWLER

Sec.-Treas., CIO Women's Auxiliaries

April 16 to 23 is our CIO Blue Star Mothers Week. This is the third year in which CIO auxiliaries have joined with their unions in setting aside one week in which to pay special tribute to the wives and mothers of our fighting men and merchant seamen.

All over the country, luncheons and teas, meetings and receptions will be held for this special purpose. Some of these occasions, like the big meeting planned by the National Maritime Auxiliary in New York, will be dedicated primarily to honoring gold star women whose sons and husbands have lost their lives delivering the implements of war to our armed forces and our allies.

All of us, as we participate in this year's Blue Star Mothers Week observances will feel more keenly than ever the tremendous responsibilities which the war has brought to the women who remain at home.

To a large extent it is up to us to speed the Victory so that our men will soon come home, and to insure, through our active participation in the political life of our country, that they come home to the kind of America they are fighting for.

How can we most effectively do that? By mobilizing support for our Commander-in-Chief and his win-the-war policies. Let's look at the record and let's see to it that every Blue Star wife and mother knows that record.

THE RECORD

The President called on Congress to adopt a uniform federal ballot which would enable all our servicemen to take part in the 1944 elections. Instead Congress adopted a law so cumbersome and so complicated that the chances are most of our fighting men will not be able to vote.

The President asked Congress to adopt a tax bill which would raise at least ten billion more dollars to meet our war needs. Congress instead passed a bill which increased the burden on low income families, relieved the wealthy and netted the Treasury less than two billion dollars. And when the President vetoed that bill because it gave "relief not to the needy but to the greedy," Congress passed it again, over his veto.

The President has asked Congress repeatedly to authorize subsidy payments to hold prices stable, to prevent inflation, to assure the health of our people and their ability to produce. Congress has refused—and only by twice vetoing bills to ban subsidy payments has the President saved us from a rapid rise in living costs.

KEEP THIS IN MIND

Let's keep all this constantly in mind as we celebrate Blue Star Mothers Week in this election year of 1944.

We will be sending greetings to the women of the United Nations from our Blue Star Mothers meetings. We will be sending greetings to the boys whose wives and mothers we are honoring. And in those greetings we will be pledging to do all in our power to speed the victory and insure a lasting peace after the war.

We mean those pledges from the bottom of our hearts, and one of the main ways in which we will make good on them is to get behind our Commander-in-Chief and see to it that the men and women we send to Congress in November will get behind him, too.

Protection of Health Challenge to Labor

By WALTER CLARKE, M.D.

(As a public service, The CIO NEWS herewith presents the first of a series of articles on a health problem that is of vital concern to the American people. The articles, by Dr. Walter Clarke, executive director of the American Social Hygiene Assn., deal with venereal disease, which medical men say is among the greatest cripplers of the striking power of our armed forces and of the productive power of the nation's workers. The Association is a national voluntary health agency that is working closely with the Army and Navy in the wartime campaign to combat the spread of venereal disease.)

Protection of the industrial worker's health is a challenge which organized labor is taking up as part of its all-out drive for victory.

The importance of the fight and the scope of the struggle for better health are summarized in the statement of a leading health officer who said that "even in peacetime, industrial disability takes 400 million days off the production line. . . . At least 20 per cent is preventable now. If we could save only 10 per cent we should have the extra labor available to build 16,470 combat tanks."

The record shows that the venereal diseases — syphilis and gonorrhea—are among the greatest cripplers of the striking power of our armed forces, and, if the truth were known, of the productive powers of working people. Serious in peace, these diseases in wartime are a number one health problem.

One of the purposes of these articles is to give information that will help you protect your health. Later in the series, suggestions will be made for action that can be taken by your trade union to support measures needed to control VD.

FACTS IN THE CASE

1. There is reason to believe that if all conditions due to syphilis were reported as such it would be found a leading cause of death in the United States.

2. Four million people in the United States have syphilis—1 in every 30. More than 500,000 people contract the disease yearly.

3. Syphilis is a catching disease. It spreads from one person to another by body contact, mainly during sex relations.

4. Gonorrhea strikes at least 8 times as many people as syphilis.

5. Syphilis, if untreated, may result in insanity, blindness, and other serious disorders.

6. It is a cause of stillbirths, and is the reason for the deaths of many infants in the first weeks of life.

CALL TO ACTION

This, in brief, is a statement of the problem. It will prove useful if it acts as a stimulus to organized action against this killer—syphilis—and this crippler—gonorrhea—which stalk the land and strike down our people, often in the prime of their lives.

For the plain truth is that the danger of venereal infection can be avoided. The surest way to avoid infection is to avoid exposure to infection. VD can be cured. We have reliable medical weapons at hand for the treatment and cure of these diseases. Organized labor can play a big part in seeing to it that these weapons are put to use, and that these infections are wiped out.

Asks Aircraft Commission

Washington, Apr. 8 — The immediate establishment of an aircraft commission which would have nationwide jurisdiction over all wage problems in the airframe, aircraft engine and airplane parts industries was urged this week by Richard T. Frankensteen, Vice-President and national director of the Aircraft Division, CIO United Auto Workers Union.

In a letter to Chairman William Davis, of the Natl. War Labor Board, Frankensteen said that the need for equitable stabilization of aircraft wages throughout the nation on an "equal pay for equal work" basis requires the establishment of such a commission.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

The U. S. Supreme Court has written the last chapter on the portal-to-portal pay in the case started by the CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, with the backing of the CIO. The CIO through its efforts helped obtain this not only for the copper miners, but made it possible for the coal miners to obtain a similar ruling.

Martin Dies is again on the rampage with his foul and unwarranted attacks. Texas workers gave him a good answer by coming through with an overwhelming victory for CIO at the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Co., Port Neches, Texas, voting 290 for the OWOC-CIO, 9 against. Mr. Dies squawks loudly when attacked yet he is using a government tribunal to attack many other loyal citizens throughout the nation without giving a hearing of any kind and in many instances his attacks are found to be false.

Dir. Wm. B. Taylor, OWOC, reports the following additional Corp. refinery, Lovell, Wyoming; Atlantic Refining Co., E. Texas, victories: a bargaining agency has been established at Yale Oil Production Dept.: 65% for CIO; Lone Star Gas Co., Fox Plant, Healdton, Oklahoma, Compressor Station: 100% for CIO; Snowden McSweeney Oil Co., Bridgeport, Illinois: 80% for CIO.

C. H. Gillman, CIO Reg. Dir., reports: Union Point Mfg. Co., Union Point, Ga.; 306 for CIO Textile Workers Union, 120 against. This work was under the direction of R. C. Thomas, TWUA State Dir., who reports the following additional victory: Exposition Cotton Mills, Atlanta, Ga., 481 for CIO, 451 aganst.

Another Textile Victory

The Textile Workers Union scored another victory when the 2100 production and maintenance workers of the Johnson & Johnson Co., New Brunswick, N. J., chose CIO as their collective bargaining agency, by a vote of 999 for CIO, 810 for Independent, and 49 for no union.

Pres. S. H. Dalrymple, CIO United Rubber Workers, reports two election victories: Swan Rubber Co., Bucyrus, Ohio: CIO 148, against 91; Hannibal Missouri: URWA Local 198, 513, District 50, 116. Rep. House was in charge of the campaign at Bucyrus, Ohio.

Frank Carmichael, CIO Reg. Dir., Boston, reports: Hollingsworth Vose Co., Walpole, Mass.: CIO 149, no union 2. CIO Rep. John Collins conducted this drive.

Ewald Sander, CIO Reg. Dir., N. J., reports: Mutual Chemical Corp., Jersey City, check of card showed 170 for CIO out of 185. Reps. Elliot and Mullica of UGCWA were in charge. Aviation Packaging Co., Newark Airport, N. J.: UAW-CIO 388, no union 294. UAW Reps. Dominick Ammirator and Alexander Richland were in charge.

George Craig, Reg. Dir., Philadelphia, reports following victories: William Sellers Co., Phil: UERMWA-CIO 342, against 135. General Electric Co., Phil. & Darby, Pa.: UERMWA-CIO 32, against 7. N. American Refractories Co., Womelsdorf, Pa.: USA-CIO 85, against 35.

Soviet Unions' Council Head Studied U. S. Steel Mills

MOSCOW, Apr. 8 (ALN)—Vasili Kuznetzov, who was elected chairman of the All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions at its 12th plenary session here last week, considers his trip to the U. S. in 1931 as an important landmark in his career. Traveling on a research assignment for the Peoples' Commissariat of Heavy Industry, Kuznetzov studied the iron and steel industry directly at American mills. He also worked at the Carnegie Institute in Pittsburgh, receiving his master's degree there. Today he is president of the Iron and Steel workers Union, one of the largest in the USSR.

OF PEASANT FAMILY

Born into a peasant family in the Gorky region on February 13, 1901, Kuznetzov lived in the village with his father till he finished elementary school. With the advent of the Soviets he was given an opportunity to continue his education. After graduating from technical school, he was called up for service in the Red Army.

Later he continued his studies in the Leningrad Polytechnical Institute, at the same time being employed first as an ordinary worker and later as foreman at the Krasny Gvozdilshchik plant. In 1926 he was graduated from the Leningrad Institute and received his metallurgical engineer's degree.

Upon his return from the U. S. in 1931, Kuznetzov plunged into research as head of the laboratory at the Electrostal plant. Although he devoted a good deal of his time to research, Kuznetzov escaped being the dry and abstract scientist, remaining a man of action.

ACTIVE IN UNION

All through his career he has been active in public affairs and the trade union movement. At the plants where he worked, he was head of the engineers' and technicians' section of the union and took part in the work of the factory trade union committee.

Simultaneously with his post on the State Planning Commission, he presided over the steel founders' section of the All-Union Scientific Engineering and Technical Society of Metallurgists, sponsored by his trade union. In 1943, Kuznetzov was elected chairman of the central committee of his union.

For valuable innovations in the iron and steel industry, Kuznetzov has been decorated with four orders by the Soviet government. In 1941 he received the Stalin prize for developing and introducing the production of new types of steel.

A devoted husband and affectionate father, Kuznetzov has three children—15-year-old Era and 19-year-old Valery study at school, while Lena is barely four years old. His wife, Zoya Igumnova, is a history teacher on the staff of the Moscow State University, one of Russia's oldest universities.

Sees British Labor Government As Postwar Possibility

LONDON, Apr. 8 (ALN)—A labor government in Britain is a "practicability" soon after the end of the war, Morgan Phillips, newly-appointed national secretary of the Labor party, declared this week in an exclusive interview with Allied Labor News. Commenting on the "tremendous drift toward the left taking place in Britain today," Phillips asserted:

"The Labor party can provide the effective leadership necessary. The contribution our labor ministers have made in the present government reveals without doubt that we are practically equipped for power."

Phillips, who formerly headed the Labor party's research department, succeeds J. S. Middleton as national secretary when the latter retires in June. He also revealed that the three main wings of the British labor movement—the Trades Union Congress, the Labor party and the Cooperative movement—are holding joint consultations on postwar policy. Hailing the increased cooperation among the three bodies, Philips said: "There is very little disagreement on the main problems."

Increasing dissatisfaction with the domestic policies of the cabinet may lead the Labor party to demand partial suspension of the present electoral truce, under which the major political parties agree to replace a retiring member of Parliament with a member of the same party.

The Labor party's national organizer, George Shephard, is expected to discuss with the Conservative party resumption of electoral contests in local constituencies. The Labor party, however, would continue to support the Churchill government, agreeing to back only win-the-war candidates.

Forecasting an even more vitalized labor movement in the coming period and refuting reports of apathy in local constituencies, Phillips stated: "The Labor party on the whole is very healthy and active today, especially when it is considered how many of the members are putting in long hours in factories, civilian defense and home guard duty."

British Unionists To Italy

London, Apr. 8 (ALN)—The general council of the Trades Union Congress this week appointed Will Lawther, president of the Miners' Federation of Great Britain, and Harry Harrison, chief industrial officer of the National Union of General and Municipal Workers, as TUC delegates to Italy for the purpose of meeting Italian trade unionists and discussing future policy.

It will be the first time that British unionists will have officially visited Italy since Mussolini seized power in 1922.

Detroit USO To Issue 'Race' Books

Detroit, April 8 — Metropolitan Detroit USO, one of the largest in the country, this week served public notice on the national USO that Detroit would exercise its own autonomy and follow its own policies in interracial relationships. It rejected the policy of the national body in banning distribution of the pamphlet "Races of Mankind" to servicemen and women in war centers.

"We will distribute as many of the pamphlets as we can possibly obtain," announced the Rev. Raymond Clancy, vice chairman of the local USO executive committee and chairman of public relations.

"We see nothing in the pamphlet except an excellent treastise on race relationships," continued Father Clancy. "We will be glad to receive the pamphlets in quantities for distribution in all our centers."

F. Lee Johnston, director of USO Field Operations for Michigan, announced that the same policy and cooperation in distributing the pamphlet would prevail throughout Michigan.

Despite the turndown by the national USO board, Irving Abramson, chairman of the Natl. CIO War Relief Committee, announced that the CIO would embark on a large scale distribution of the pamphlet in question.

Father Clancy pointed out that the executive committee of the Greater Detroit USO decided to distribute the pamphlet before the national board ruled it out.

"When that action was taken a special meeting of our executive committee was called, and we reaffirmed unanimously the decision to distribute the pamphlet," he said.

CIO Drops Request For Delegate To ILO Parley

Washington, Apr. 8—In a move to relieve President Roosevelt of any possible extra burdens created by AFL stubbornness, CIO Pres. Murray this week wrote FDR withdrawing the CIO request for a delegate at the April 20 conference of the Intl. Labor Organization in Philadelphia.

Murray had originally asked the President to get AFL leaders' consent to a CIO representative, which was necessary since the government appoints all delegates to ILO meetings from the "dominant" organization in the country.

Pres. Roosevelt's request, which he passed on to the AFL, was flatly turned down by them in order to continue their monopoly on delegates to ILO meetings, though it had been broken once before in a meeting in Cuba.

"I am aware of the tremendous responsibility devolving upon you as President and Commander-in-Chief of our armed forces," Murray wrote, "and under those circumstances no citizen interested in the welfare of his country or the successful prosecution of the war should consciously do anything to create division or add to the confusion which already exists by thrusting upon you additional difficulties calculated to create internal discontent.

"I am therefore taking the liberty to ask that our formal representations made both to you and to the Secretary of the Department of Labor for representation at the coming ILO convention be withdrawn without prejudice to our justifiable claim for equal representation in the councils of the ILO, and with the understanding that the delegates representing the American Federation of Labor at the ILO meeting will in no wise speak for or represent the point of view of the Congress of Industrial Organizations."

The AFL's refusal to consider a CIO delegate to the ILO meeting is in line with their equally stubborn refusal to have anything to do with the world labor conference in London June 5, to which they were invited along with CIO by Sir Walter Citrine, head of the British Trades Union Council.

Name Australian Delegates to London

Sydney, Apr. 8 (ALN)—The Australian Council of Trade Unions, which has over 800,000 members, this week accepted the invitation of the British Trades Union Congress to send delegates to the world labor conference in London next June.

So far only two of the ACTU's allotted five delegates have been named. It is believed likely, however, that the ACTU general council will comply with the demands of leaders of mass production industry unions to send a full delegation.

Mexican Delegates

Mexico City, Apr. 8 (ALN)—The Confederation of Mexican Workers this week named a delegation of five union leaders, headed by CTM secretary Fidel Velazquez, to attend the world labor conference called by the British Trades Union Congress for London this June. The action followed receipt of a message from TUC general secretary Sir Walter Citrine urging immediate notification of the names of the delegates. Other delegates include sugar, textile, oil and federal district labor leaders.

USA-CIO Wins 8c Pay Hike

Washington, Apr. 8—An eight-cent general pay increase covering about 1,700 workers at the Sheffield Steel Corp., Houston, Tex., represented by the CIO United Steelworkers of America, was affirmed this week by the War Labor Board.

UAW Lays Plans To Aid War Vets

WASHINGTON, Apr. 8—Heroes of Pearl Harbor, Guadalcanal, Tunisia and Sicily joined hands with veterans of World War I as the CIO United Auto Workers, largest labor union in the country, moved swiftly this week to mobilize its membership behind a program which would safeguard the interests of soldiers now and in the postwar period.

Speaking to a two-day conference of more than 125 representative members of the union— all veterans of World War I and World War II—R. J. Thomas, UAW-CIO president, and director of its war policy division, stated that one of the "paramount objectives of the UAW-CIO is to achieve full employment and rehabilitation of veterans of World War II."

VOCATIONAL, EDUCATIONAL PROGRAM

With only veteran-delegates taking part in the deliberations, the conference approved an extensive program for the educational and vocational training of veterans to be administered by an administrator of servicemen's education and training appointed by the President, to be given for a period of four years entirely at government expense.

The conference proposed that during the educational and training period a veteran would receive an allowance of $80 per month plus $25 a month for a wife and $15 for each child. All veterans whether disabled or not are to be eligible, thus providing for the elimination of the 10% disability which a veteran now has to have before he can secure very limited educational and vocational training.

To make sure that all the problems of veterans would be adequately handled when they returned, the conference proposed the immediate establishment in the UAW-CIO of a veterans dept. to be headed by a UAW-CIO veteran. The functions of such a department and its head would be:

1. To use all the facilities of the union to expedite the re-employment and rehabilitation of veterans who are or who may become members of the UAW-CIO; to coordinate the work of local unions in this respect; to police the strict enforcement of seniority protection clauses in contracts and in the Selective Service Law.

2. To help process the claims of veterans or their dependents for pensions, disability claims, death benefits, mustering-out pay, education and vocational training opportunities.

3. To work closely with the legislative department on a continuing campaign of legislation for increased benefits to veterans.

Throughout the conference the veterans stressed the fact that organized labor and members of the armed forces have common problems and common aims which require mutual cooperation if they are to be successfully solved.

Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson and General Lewis B. Hershey, Director of Selective Service, spoke at one of the sessions and outlined some of the problems of the returning veterans.

Rankin Gets Swastika From UAW

Washington, April 8—A dramatic incident occurred at the conference of UAW-CIO veterans when former gunner's mate Wendell Hardie, now a member of Local 719, delivered an impassioned attack on Representative John E. Rankin, poll-tax Congressman and leader in the fight against a Federal Vote Bill for soldiers.

Holding up a 10-inch Nazi swastika, Hardie proposed that a committee from the conference visit Rankin and present him with the swastika "as a token of their contempt for his leadership in depriving United States servicemen of the right to vote in 1944." The conference adopted the recommendation with cheers.

Hardie, wearing the Purple Heart and the Presidential Unit Citation for heroism in sea action against the Japanese, and a committee of 11 then proceeded to Rankin's office, but not surprisingly he was "out."

APPROPRIATE: Nazi swastika presented as a token of contempt by UAW-CIO vets to Rep. John E. Rankin, who led the fight against the Soldier's Vote Bill. The committee making the presentation was headed by Wendell Hardie shown above, former gunner's mate and a delegate to the UAW vets conference. Hardie is wearing the Purple Heart and the Presidential Unit Citation which he and his buddies won for gallantry in sea action against the Japs.

GI Joe Gets Frank; Letter A 'Must'

WASHINGTON, Apr. 8—This is a story all you guys and gals working in the nation's war plants ought to take to heart—and plenty! It concerns a GI Joe named Pvt. R. Friedman, who wrote a mighty frank letter to IN FACT about the union's duties toward Servicemen.

"The trade unions are always speaking about how many members have gone into the armed forces, yet many unions forget the boys completely," Pvt. Friedman wrote.

"The result," he continued, "is that the union boys, besieged by the anti-labor commercial press, begin to lose their strong union sympathies, and may even develop anti-union tendencies.

"A mild form of this process goes like this: "Well, your local was OK but most unions are run by racketeers." The soldier knows about his own local, and it is a good one, but knows nothing about others, and may take the word of the commercial press for it.

"I want to make clear that in America there is a battle going on for the mind of the American soldier. It is being waged by our native fascists who want the soldiers to come back on pogroms against Jews, lynching against Negroes, destruction of the unions.

"The arch-conservatives simply want the boys to return to the status quo and defend it to the death, even if their stake in the status quo is no more than an applestand.

"There are, however, those who want this war against fascism to be a step toward an economic democracy; in plain language, a job for every man and woman; full employment without any hitch. Naturally, therefore, the chief blast of the reactionary forces is against labor unions. . . .

MUCH TO DO

"There is much that the unions can do. And so little they are doing. Of 50 union men in my battery, only one gets as much as a paper from his local.

"Now is the time for the unions to get into this war for the support of the men in uniform."

Phoney Christian American Assn. in MidWest Drive

DETROIT, Apr. 8—The termite campaign of the Christian American Assn. against labor unions, hitherto largely confined to the less industrialized states, has made its entrance in the realm of Michigan political action. Trade associations with headquarters in Michigan cities have received the anti-union literature of the organization from its national headquarters at Houston, Tex.

One piece of literature was a mimeo sheet addressed "to organizations and individuals in states where the constitution can be amended by referendum petitions and majority vote."

It calls attention to the fact that anti-union constitutional amendments can be initiated for referendum vote by getting signatures equal to 10% of the total vote for governor in the previous election.

The proposed anti-labor amendment is euphoniously styled the right-to-work amendment, already enacted in several southern states and coming before the voters in Florida Nov. 3. Text of the amendment reads:

Pamphlet on Youth

Washington, Apr. 8—A pamphlet on community responsibility to youth has been issued by the Federal Security Agency under the title of "Citizens of Tomorrow." "The more war disrupts our lives," says FSA Administrator Paul V. McNutt in a foreword," the more responsibility we have to those upon whom its burden falls most heavily."

In wartime especially, 'teen-age boys and girls "may find themselves stranded in a kind of home-front No-Man's land," he declared.

CIO Steel Union Cracks Weirton

the union sought speedier action, remembering that Weir dragged out previous cases for seven years, to establish an unbroken record for stalling that has not even been nearly matched by other American industrialists.

Second challenge was the attempted distribution at company gates of union leaflets calling on the workers to exercise their democratic right to join a union of their own choosing and to desert a company-dominated "independent" organization that exists solely for the suppression of their standards.

"We sent three organizers up to the gates, Feb. 17," Kincaid related, "but they were there only a few moments when they were attacked and viciously beaten by more than 200 thugs that Weir keeps on his payroll—the hatchet gang, we call them. There wasn't a single arrest."

On Feb. 21 the county sheriff, controlled by Weir, served notice on the union that it could distribute no more handbills at the gates, despite the fact that it was his duty to offer needed protection for anyone seeking to exercise the constitutional right of freedom of the press.

March 17 the USA-CIO disregarded the sheriff's orders and again distributed handbills. This time five USA-CIO organizers were beaten by 400 thugs.

The sheriff teamed up with a justice of the peace to forbid not only the distribution of handbills but also the constitutional right of freedom of assembly.

Last Thursday the union once again challenged Dictator Weir, sending five groups of five men each, group by group, to the gates. Group by group, Weir's cops arrested them.

This week, Governor M. M. Neely cracked down on Ernie Weir, issuing a proclamation forbidding Weirton officials from depriving Weirton workers of their constitutional rights.

The USA-CIO went back to the gates with its leaflets, unmolested, and Kincaid said that 90 per cent of the Weirton workers are accepting them. The fear complex that has dominated their lives is beginning to break under the consistent campaign of the union for protection and extension of their liberties.

What of the 2,000 workers who've been fired? Hundreds have left town for other jobs, Kincaid said, after they saw Boss Weir hiring other workers to replace them. Almost 2,000 new workers have been hired, according to Kincaid, who pointed out that this turnover doesn't add up to efficient operation of a highly complicated steel plant that needs experienced employes.

But turnovers and inefficiency don't worry Ernie Weir—so long as they go hand in hand with helping to defeat a union. As Kincaid put it: "Ernie isn't worrying about the war against Hitler. The only war he's worrying about is the one against the USA-CIO."

If Dies Reads Post His Ears Are Red

WASHINGTON, Apr. 8—Congressman Martin Dies' attack on the CIO Political Action Committee was branded this week by the conservative Washington POST as a subversive attempt to weaken American democracy.

The POST, which has been noted for its influence on Congress, described the Dies Committee smear report as presenting "only the most minor variations on an old and shopworn theme."

The POST pointed out that Dies is up for election this year and that the CIO has taken a leading role in seeing that workers pay their Texas polltaxes and register so that they can vote against him. It is not strange, the POST explained, that Dies would like to discredit the Political Action Committee.

"It is strange that Congress should permit him to use public funds for such a purpose," the POST declared. "The allegation that the activities of the Political Action Committee are un-American is ridiculous on the face of it.

"Men and women have been banding together in organizations to effectuate their political preferences since the earliest days of this Republic. There could be no 'government of the people' if they failed to do so.

"American democracy is founded upon political action of this kind. Congress treads on dangerous ground indeed when it allows members to use its high authority for the subversion of this process."

Murray Flays U.S. Living Cost Figures as Phoney

Sharp criticism of U. S. Government cost of living figures, and facts to back up his stand, were voiced this week by CIO Pres. Philip Murray in letters to top federal officials. Murray declared that economic stabilization has not been achieved and said that workers are bearing the burden of battle while wartime corporation profits have zoomed better than 400 per cent over their peacetime average.

An Open Letter To the Natl. War Labor Board

By FRED d'AVILA

WASHINGTON, April 15—This is an open letter to the members of the Natl. War Labor Board, dictated by the hope that the mountain of statistics which confronts the WLB's Steel Panel will not completely overshadow the human elements involved.

The basis of the letter is a visit to Baltimore, war-busy boom town, gray and grimy from the smoke of Bethlehem Steel.

I talked for nearly five hours to five members of the CIO United Steelworkers of America who live in Baltimore and who've worked individually a minimum of three and a maximum of 17 years, sweating out their lives so that Eugene Grace could skim off fabulous Bethlehem profits and a salary that topped half a million dollars in 1942.

Can't Afford Oranges

I am sorry that all you WLB members couldn't come along to hear the stories that the five workers had to tell, for if you had you would realize that the 17 cents an hour increase and the annual wage and the other gains that the union is asking are measured not in dollars and cents but in real warm, human terms.

You'd discover that the "princely" wages paid by Eugene Grace fail to provide a family with enough money so that it can afford to buy oranges for the kids —they cost six to seven cents apiece now.

You'd see the houses some of the steel workers are forced to live in—like one I visited with an outdoor toilet directly back of the kitchen. You'd hold your noses, you WLB members, because the wall that separates that latrine from the kitchen stove is literally decomposing and stinks. But the house is the best that the family can afford, and the landlord won't fix the wall, and the City Health Dept. isn't interested enough to force him to.

You'd hear of hard-pressed fathers dropping extra pennies in tin cans so they wouldn't have to borrow to give their families a "decent" Christmas — pennies that Eugene Grace wouldn't deign to pick up from the floor of a swanky bar where the type of people he hobnobs with spend more in an evening than a steelworker makes in a 60-hour week.

You'd learn of medical and dental care that steelworkers' kids should have — only their parents can't afford it.

You'd hear of steelworkers buying coal by the peck — at exorbitant prices — because they haven't been able to save enough money to lay out the $13.50 it costs for a ton.

If you want to check on these items personally, you should talk to the same fellows I did — USA-CIO Director Albert Atallah and Field Representative Ferd Bindel will be glad to round them up for you, or you can call on them at home. Here are their names and addresses:

Robert Briggs, 4507 Eastern Ave.

John House, 1239 E. Lexington St.

John Klauzenberg, 435 N. Milton Ave.

Bernard Spriggs, 1641 Elsworth St.

Charles E. Valentine, 19 S. Kresson St.

Let's take a look at the kind of a life led by Spriggs, a 41-year-old Negro, his wife, and their six kids, ranging in age from 7 to 18 and all living at home, along with a 77-year-old father-in-law. They're jammed into six small rooms with a depressing air of unhealthy antiquity — clean as energetic Mrs. Spriggs can keep them with the plaster falling down and big rat holes gnawed in the floor.

12 Hours a Day

Spriggs is a furnace man, third helper on the open hearth. He works four days a week, 12 hours a day, to earn a gross income of $2,400 a year—cut down, he estimates, to about $1,800 after all the taxes and social security deductions are taken out.

What 17 cents an hour more would mean to Spriggs is best shown by telling what he has to do without on the 94 cents an hour he averages now.

Take food. The family can't afford even the cheapest cuts for all nine members at once. The portions have to go to the hardest working members — Spriggs and his wife—and maybe the youngest kids who need plenty of protein to grow into sound, healthy adults. The family spends a maximum of $12 a week for all its food.

Work Clothes High

Take glasses. The family cut out even the few movies it used to go to (the only form of recreation

PICKETS FOR PROGRESS: Some of the UAW-CIO workers who participated in "picket lines" organized by Fisher Body Local 45 at Cleveland to guarantee that all 6,000 members would become registered voters. Similar "picket lines" and leaflet distributions were staged at the gates of other plants.

COOL IN CLEVELAND

Machine Politicians Shiver as CIO Does Registration Job

By TED COX

CLEVELAND, April 15—A list of cold, dull statistics struck a note of terror in the minds of anti-labor politicians this week.

The figures simply recorded the wind-up of a two-month campaign by the united labor movement of this city to get a maximum number of citizens registered before the May 9 primary elections.

The "register-to-vote" campaign was organized by Labor's Joint Committee for Political Action which is made up of official representatives from the CIO, AFL and Railroad Brotherhoods of Cleveland.

The unions pointed out that most workers found it virtually impossible to register during the regular hours of 8:30 a. m. to 4:30 p. m. They demanded that Election Board officials keep offices open until 8:30 p. m. on six specified nights and guaranteed they would bring enough union men and women down to justify the extra expense. Election Board official resisted. They were skeptical. Finally they agreed.

The politicians are examining all of the statistics, but here are just a few that record the result. During the first three months of the last presidential year—1940—a total of 8,053 registered to vote. This was normal for a pre-primary presidential election year. During the first three months of this presidential year, a total of more than 25,000 registered—in spite of the fact that tens of thousands of citizens are away in the armed forces.

REGISTRATIONS JUMP

Before the labor movement opened its registration campaign, the election board was taking in an average of about 200 registrations a day. This average was maintained through January and part of February. Then the campaign took on momentum and finally in March the average jumped to 400.

Then came two weeks of concentration to bring workers down in the evenings of Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. The first night registration brought out more than 500 additional voters in four evening hours, raising the total from the 400-a-day average to more than 1000 for the day and evening periods. On one special registration day, instead of the 200 to 400 average, the registration topped the 4,000 mark.

Even the professional politicians on the election board credit labor with having brought out most of the voters. Political action committees in the local unions checked registration lists and then talked to those who were inelegibile to vote. They held shop meetings and they made registration a Number 1 point on the agenda of the local union meetings.

VISIT WORKERS' HOMES

Where ward clubs were set up, members visited workers at their homes and obtained promises to register. Every CIO plant was covered with leaflets pointing out the importance of registration and one night 30 men and women, mostly members of the National Maritime Union, circulated through the downtown shopping district, distributing leaflets and urging people to go to the election board and register to vote for the primaries. A total of 116,000 leaflets were distributed.

Labor registered at least 15,000 of the 25,000 new voters. Thousands of other union men and women were already registered. On the basis of the last state elections, it is indicated that 14,000 votes will nominate and elect a state representative. Labor's Joint Committee for Political Action has endorsed eight union-member candidates for the state legislature on the Democratic ticket and expects to nominate all eight.

A similar campaign will be organized on a much larger scale in preparation for the general elections this fall, according to Jack Gill, former vice-president of the International Typographical Workers union, and now executive director of Labor's Joint Committee for Political Action in Cleveland.

Push Political Drive In New Orleans

New Orleans, La., Apr. 15—Nearly 300 representatives from 22 CIO unions this week attended a convention called by the Political Action Committee of Orleans Parish to plan a strong political drive in the crucial months ahead.

Resolutions were passed endorsing a fourth term for Pres. Roosevelt, condemning senators and representatives who voted for the Smith-Connally anti-labor law and against the soldier vote bill, denouncing Martin Dies for his smear attacks, and labelling the Christian Americans as "un-Christian and un-American."

CIO Man Elected Mayor

Highland Park Mich. Apr. 15 — Newly elected mayor of this Detroit suburb where Henry Ford built his first big plant is Norman Patterson member of the CIO American Newspaper Guild in Detroit.

Patterson who is a copyreader on the Detroit Free Press has been city commissioner of Highland Park for seven years.

Named City Commissioner

Flint, Mich., Apr. 15—Clarence McKay, president of the United Automobile Workers' Skilled Trades Council, has been named city commissioner of Flint to succeed Mayor Kelly who left for the navy last month. McKay was elected by the remaining eight commissioners. He is a veteran member of Buick Local 599.

CIO Candidates Win

Lansing, Mich., Apr. 15—The CIO slate of delegates to the Democratic convention in Michigan won eight out of 14 delegates in Ingham county (Lansing) and 21 out of 27 in Genesee county (Flint) comprising the sixth congressional district.

The Michigan CIO is grooming one of its members for the Democratic primary July 11 to run against Rep. William W. Blackney, Republican reactionary, in the district this fall.

CIO POLITICAL ACTION COMMITTEE

Hillman, New ALP Head, Hails Unity, Backs 4th Term

NEW YORK, April 15—The overwhelming victory of the united slate in the American Labor Party elections here is a "ringing affirmation of the desire for unity—unity of all the forces within the ALP around the decisive issues that face the nation and the world today," Sidney Hillman, CIO Political Action chairman, said at the party convention which elected him state ALP chairman this week.

At the same time, Hillman called for another term for President Roosevelt, saying: "The ALP has a clear role to play in this all important job. We can be—we must make ourselves—the instrument for mobilizing the labor and progressive forces of the Empire State to draft the President as our candidate and to insure his election in November."

The ALP convention saw some 528 newly elected committeemen present, of a total of 750 elected—more than 600 of which were voted in on the platform of the Committee for a United Labor Party. Referring to the hard-fought primary campaign, Hillman declared:

"The primary contest from which we have just emerged was sharp and bitter. However, the results give no comfort to those whose interest was a factional victory. Last Tuesday the greatest outpouring of voters ever witnessed at a party primary dealt a stinging rebuke to any narrow form of partisanship.

FACTIONALISM REPUDIATED

"They repudiated every stripe of factionalism, whatever its position on the political spectrum. Of course there are still a few who will prefer to nourish old grudges and ancient feuds. The current of history today moves too swiftly and runs too deep to accomodate itself to them. Let them, if they will, sit beside the bank or paddle around in whirlpools. The main stream that bears with it the decisive majority of the people is already passing them by."

Hillman's acceptance speech was sharply critical of the Republicans, pointing out that the Wisconsin primary "serves to dispel any last lingering illusion that control of the Republican party can be wrested from the grip of reaction. The identity of the man who will be named to head the Republican ticket may still be a subject for speculation. But the character of the forces which will name him, dictate his policies and shape his program, now stands fully revealed."

SIDNEY HILLMAN

In addition to electing Hillman chairman, the ALP convention named Hyman Blumberg, Amalgamated Clothing Workers vice-president, as state secretary; Harry Chapman, AFL railroad union executive, as state treasurer, and Benjamin Fielding as state executive secretary.

Eighteen vice presidents were also named, as well as a state committee of 62. Included in the vice-presidents were Professor Robert Lynd, author of "Middletown;" Dorothy Bellanca, ACW vice-president; Dr. William R. Bowie; Professor Harry Overstreet; Charles Kerrigan, UAW; Hugh Thompson, CIO regional director; Jack Rubinstein; Bessie Hillman, and Joseph Curran.

Mrs. Verda Barnes CIO Political Leader

NEW YORK, April 15—The key role that women play in politics was officially recognized this week by the CIO Political Action Committee with the appointment of Mrs. Verda Barnes, former assistant to the director of the War Manpower Commission, as head of PAC's women's division. Three new regional directors also were named.

Mrs. Barnes, who was appointed by PAC Chairman Sidney Hillman, has been active in national politics. In 1939 and 1940 she was national vice-president of the Young Democratic Clubs of America and was assistant director of the youth division of the Natl. Democrtaic Committee.

Appointment of the three new regional directors gives PAC representatives for every state in the nation, with the exception of New York and Texas, where representatives are expected to be appointed shortly. The three new directors are:

Joseph A. Donoghue, of Philadelphia, for Pennsylvania; W. A. Holloway, who resigned as chief clerk in the Missouri State Auditors Dept. to accept the job, for Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma and Arkansas; and Amer Lehman, former chief of the cooperative section of the Farm Security Administration in Denver, for the Rocky Mountain area—Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah and Wyoming.

CIO Political Directors

New York, Apr. 15—A complete list of CIO Political Action Committee regional directors was issued this week by PAC Chairman Sidney Hillman. The list follows:

Joseph Salerno, 73 Tremont St., Boston, Mass. (Maine, N. H., Vt., Conn., R.I., Mass.)

Keep Your Eye On Congress

The big stuff this week and for some weeks to come will be price control renewal and polltax repeal. Pres. Murray will open CIO testimony April 18 on price control before the Senate Banking and Currency Committee. He will be followed by other CIO leaders and rank and file witnesses.

Polltax repeal (HR. 7) is set to come up on the Senate floor April 17. Rumors of a deal whereby cloture will be brushed off in one unsuccessful vote and the bill allowed to die are thicker than the 1,000-odd amendments polltax Senators have boasted they'll offer to choke the bill.

The Green-Lucas amendment (S. 1828) to the soldiers' vote bill needs pushing; hearings in the Senate should start as quickly as possible, now that Congress is back.

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Price Control Act.	Renewal of act due to expire June 30.	CIO testimony led off by Pres. Murray April 18 in Senate Banking Committee (Wagner, D., N. Y., chmn.).	Urge Senators and Representatives to renew act on time without crippling riders, with needed changes.
Polltax repeal (HR. 7).	Brings 10,000,000 Americans into democracy.	Senate debate set for April 17; "deal" on cloture defeat and shelving of bill rumored.	Wire your Senators to be on floor, to vote cloture, block filibuster, pass bill as it stands.
Soldiers vote amendment (S. 1828).	Gives servicemen Federal ballot if state ballot doesn't arrive; by-passes state red tape. Suggested by FDR.	Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections (Green, D., R. I., chmn.). Put in by Sens. Green and Lucas (D., Ill.), co-authors of original Federal ballot plan.	Urge Senators and Representative to support, ask early hearings.
Wagner Act (Frey rider).	Frey rider on NLRB appropriation legalizes company unions by freezing all contracts, no matter how collusive.	House Appropriations sub-Committee (Rep. Hare, polltaxer, S. C., chmn.) to begin hearings about May 1. AFL craft officeholders ("Col." Frey in lead) very active to retain rider, cut NLRB funds.	Wire your Representative to kill rider, support full funds for NLRB.

CIO Big Guns Aim At Price Control Law's Renewal

WASHINGTON, April 15—This week (April 18 and 19) CIO brings up its strongest arguments for renewal of the Price Control Act without hampering amendments and with needed improvements to tighten control policies and enforcement.

Led by CIO Pres. Philip Murray, UAW Pres. R. J. Thomas and UE Pres. Albert J. Fitzgerald, rank and file witnesses from steel mills and other war plants will present evidence to the Senate Banking Committee proving the war workers' case for effective price control to help bridge the gap between pay envelopes and living costs.

Murray will introduce the wife of a steelworker who will tell the Committee the facts of trying to keep abreast of galloping food prices. Fitzgerald will introduce the wife of a union member in the armed forces, who has to live on her allotment, and Thomas's testimony will be mainly on rent control.

Pres. Faye Stephenson of the CIO Womens Auxiliaries will add the housewives' story of increasing difficulties in feeding and clothing a working family.

Meantime, OPA head Chester Bowles made a strong plea for continuing the Act "substantially in its present form." Bowles argued strongly against various proposed amendments, which he said would "make our work of effective price control administratively impossible."

Chief of these is the so-called "hardship" amendment, which will allow unlimited appeals on each individual instance of price setting, so that every grocery store owner, for example, could make an individual appeal against every order.

WARNS OF PROFITEERING

"These 'hardship' amendments, in my opinion, would set off the greatest orgy of wartime profiteering this country has ever seen," Bowles said.

He argued also against by-passing the OPA Emergency Court of Appeals by an amendment throwing all individual orders into the Federal Courts. If this were done, Bowles said, "instead of price control we would soon have price chaos."

Plans also went ahead for the "Fighting 60" conference set for this week by leaders of the Congressional Committee to Protect the Consumer. In an invitation to delegates from white collar, church, labor, veteran, farm and consumer groups, the conference committee said:

"Of course every sane person is patently in favor of wartime control of our economy and against inflation. Nevertheless we have seen numerous threats to these existing controls in the form of emasculating amendments proposed to be written into the law.

"'Price control for the other fellow' is a popular slogan of the special interests groups who are swarming into the capital seeking relief."

NLRB Sets Absentee Voting Policy

Washington, Apr. 15—Difficulties surrounding balloting by members of the armed forces in Natl. Labor Relations Board elections this week influenced the NLRB to rule out absentee service voting, with the qualifying provision that servicemen and women may petition for the right to cast their ballots when they return to their former civilian jobs.

The board said it would entertain new petitions for the investigation of a bargaining agent certification if returning servicemen make up a "substantial percentage of the employes" in a plant where an election has been held in their absence.

The board now allows servicemen who appear in person at the polls to cast their ballots.

WPB Seeks Murray's Aid

Washington, Apr. 15—CIO Pres. Philip Murray was asked this week by Chairman Donald Nelson of the War Production Board to serve with several other prominent representatives of labor, industry and the public on a WPB committee which will offer advice on the problems of reconversion of industry to peacetime output.

Among others invited to serve on the committee, which will be known as the Advisory Committee on Civilian Policy, were: AFL Pres. William Green, Pres. Eric Johnston of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, and Eugene Meyer, publisher of the Washington Post.

CIO Hits Drive To Oust Tugwell

New York, April 15—The current drive to get rid of R. G. Tugwell, governor of Puerto Rico, is part of a conspiracy to destroy the Puerto Rican labor movement and to wipe out the island's social gains, Jacob S. Potofsky, chairman of the CIO Latin American Affairs Committee, charged today.

"This campaign has been initiated and carried forward by some of the most reactionary and anti-Administration forces in Congress," Potofsky said.

"It has among its other objectives the destruction of the Popular Democratic Party and the labor movement of the island, paving the way to the repeal of the social and labor legislation won during the Tugwell administration."

U.S. Living Cost Figures Phoney, Murray Says

WASHINGTON, April 15—In a series of four sharp questions to officials in charge of the U. S. war economy, CIO President Murray this week challenged their report to President Roosevelt which claimed that all was for the best in this best of all possible stabilized worlds.

The questions were asked in a letter to four key men, William H. Davis, War Labor Board; Marvin Jones, War Food Administration; Chester Bowles, OPA, and Fred M. Vinson, Economic Stabilization.

The letter went back into the record to cite statements and quotes from the four men directly contradicting their optimistic report to FDR that the cost of living was being held.

For example, Murray quoted Davis as reporting to Vice-President Wallace last November:

"'As the months fly by and the Board continues to hold wages at the general level of Sept. 15, 1942, we become increasingly conscious of the fact that we are asking one segment of our society to do its part to protect all Americans from the ravages of inflation while at the same time a similar obligation has not been placed as heavily upon the shoulders of some of the other segments of this society.'"

We would appreciate, Murray commented, any explanation as to why that statement "was valid on November, 1943, and yet on April 7, 1944, (the date of the report to FDR) it can be said that the mandate of the law of Oct. 2, 1942, to effectuate overall economic stabilization has been accomplished."

Questioning Jones, Murray cited the Bureau of Agricultural Economics (BAE) report on the cost of living to farmers, which showed it has gone up 42.6 per cent. only a point short of the 43.5 per cent. rise shown in the joint CIO-AFL study made at Davis' request.

FARM PRICES UP

In addition, he cited Agriculture Department reports showing that farm prices have risen 21 per cent. between '42 and '44, again asking how Jones reconciled this with the report to FDR saying "the general level of the cost of living has not been permitted to rise."

Turning to Bowles, Murray asked him to look at food profit figures prepared by OPA showand a 400 per cent hike in the grocery take over 1939, a 500 per cent increase in cannery profits and a 400 per cent hike in the meat packers' rake-off.

Vinson's lesson included reminders on the failure of Congress to enact a realistic tax program, refusal to hold incomes at $25,000 net, failure to roll back living costs, and a general 49 per cent rise in 1944 profits (before taxes) over the 1936-39 average.

"In the face of these facts," Murray asked, "how can you report to the President of the U. S. that the mandate of the October, 1942, law has been put into effect?"

Murray In Natl. Radio Wage Talk

Washington, Apr. 15—CIO Pres. Philip Murray will take labor's wage case to the nation this week in a coast to coast broadcast.

As head of the CIO United Steelworkers, Murray will outline the USA-CIO's position in support of the union's request for a 17 cents an hour increase in a talk over the Columbia Broadcasting System from 10:30 to 10:45 p.m. EWT on Tuesday, April 18.

His talk will be based on extensive arguments that the USA-CIO has presented to the Natl. War Labor Board and on testimony on price control which he is scheduled to present to a Senate Committee this week.

Labor's case for price control and real economic stabilization will also receive an airing on the regular Labor for Victory program, to be heard over NBC Red Network stations at 1:15 p.m. Sunday, April 23.

Tune in to both these broadcasts to get the real low down on CIO's position.

World Labor Looks Ahead

The outlines of labor's aims in this global war begin to emerge with increasing clearness as one studies the proposed agenda for the world labor conference in London submitted by Pres. Philip Murray on behalf of the CIO.

The working people in all the United Nations are the backbone and the driving force behind this struggle against Axis tyranny.

They wholeheartedly support their governments and their armed forces in every step necessary to make victory speedy and complete.

Labor's stake in this conflict is so great that it is clearly entitled to appropriate representation in the conduct of the war, in the formulation of peace aims, and in the post-war reconstruction.

But for labor's voice to be effective, it must plan and organize internationally as well as nationally.

The London conference will furnish the first opportunity for the labor movements of all countries to get together, to compare notes and agree on common objectives, and then to promote these objectives in concerted fashion.

The CIO proposals for this occasion cover immediate action for furthering the United Nations' war effort, peace aims and the post-war reconstruction.

Under the first heading, the CIO calls for increased war production, labor participation in government, combatting Axis-influenced efforts for a negotiated peace, and policies to be adopted in reoccupied territories.

As the United Nations' offensive grows more and more countries will be freed from the Axis aggressors. The CIO considers it of first importance that freedom of speech, press, assembly, religion, political association, and to organize labor unions, be immediately established; and that governments be created which have the full support of the people.

Labor representation in post-war planning and at the peace table is urgently demanded; and the right of all peoples to enjoy the Four Freedoms and opportunity for a decent standard of living is vigorously asserted.

For the post-war reconstruction, the CIO stresses the primary need for a real international trade union movement, including labor in all the United Nations, and other countries after our victory.

The CIO program, brief as it is, encompasses the widest range of proposals for establishing democratic freedom, for eliminating all traces of fascism, for rehabilitating devastated countries, and for promoting a decent standard of living and the opportunity for economic and social progress.

The proposals which the CIO will submit to the London conference do not conflict with the declared aims of the United Nations.

But it is to be hoped that the world labor conference will put into concrete and practical terms the hopes and aspirations of all freedom-loving peoples, generating new enthusiasm for all-out war effort, and combining the efforts of labor in all countries to insure that this people's war is followed by a real people's peace.

Beware of Pickpockets

If you don't see or feel anything, that's not so surprising.

The price pickpockets have finesse. If you don't watch out for them, you won't know a thing until you reach into your pocket and find your money gone.

The press isn't saying much about the 85 amendments prepared to wreck price and rent control. Even their sponsors aren't looking for much publicity on them, and still less are the selfish interests behind them.

They just want to slip over more opportunities for profiteering as quietly as they can.

One device is the so-called "hardship amendment," to permit price increases of various kinds, at a time when the number of firms suffering hardship or losses is at the lowest point in modern history.

These "hardship" amendments, according to OPA Administrator Bowles, "would set off the greatest orgy of wartime profiteering this country has ever seen."

Other amendments would allow constant court challenges of OPA regulations, and split up and weaken its authority to control prices.

Then there is also the threat of an amendment banning food subsidies.

All of these amendments would mean higher living costs and more inflation.

The CIO and some 60 progressive Congressmen who have banded together to save the price control act are leading the fight against all this pocket-picking.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

FOUR courtiers were once asked their opinion of a fat, ugly and disagreeable poodle, the pampered pet of their Queen.

The first, who was blind, spoke up at once. "It has a body graceful as a gazelle," he said.

The second, who was deaf, said: "Its voice is as musical as a nightingale on a quiet night."

The third courtier had lost his sense of smell. "The animal has an odor as fragrant as incense," he remarked.

The fourth, whose sense of feeling was gone, declared: "Its coat is as smooth as finest velvet."

The four courtiers thereupon bowed and withdrew, each congratulating himself on having been tactful without saying anything he knew to be untrue.

★ ★ ★

The above story suggests the only clue we can think of, to explain the claims of four administration officials that the stabilization program has been a success.

Chairman Wm. H. Davis of the War Labor Board knows and has said that frozen wages have put a burden on labor that "has not been placed as heavily upon the shoulders of some of the other segments of this society."

Surely Mr. Davis, who is also chairman of a Presidential committee on the cost of living, could not have been responsible for that part of the joint report which declared that workers' earnings "have not been frittered away by rising prices."

★ ★ ★

War Food Administrator Marvin Jones is familiar with Agriculture Dept. reports which show that farmers' living costs have risen 42.6% since January, 1941.

He also knows that, under the parity formula, prices of farm produce must rise when farm living costs rise, and that they have in fact risen substantially, resulting in much higher food costs for consumers.

Mr. Jones must have been looking the other way when someone dictated the sentence, "the general level of the cost of living has not been permitted to rise."

★ ★ ★

OPA Administrator Chester Bowles must have heard of an OPA report showing that food corporation profits are up to four or five times higher than pre-war —resulting from and causing steep food price increases.

Certainly he should recall his own statement that housewives are paying $1,200,000,000 in higher food prices alone, due to black market operations.

Maybe Mr. Bowles was taking a nap when the part about "decreases in the prices of other items, notably foods," was slipped into the report.

★ ★ ★

Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson was appointed to put into effect the law of Oct. 2, 1942 for stabilizing prices and wages at the level of Sept. 15, 1942, for which profit and price control, food subsidies etc. were necessary.

Mr. Vinson knows that Congress refused to limit high incomes or to tax adequately excessive profits, which are now breaking all records, even after taxes.

He knows that the promise to roll back prices to the level of Sept. 15, 1942 was not kept, due to Congressional opposition to food subsidies.

Did Mr. Vinson suffer a lapse of memory or a stroke of blindness when the declaration was inserted in the report that "the stronger controls provided by the Congressional legislation of October, 1942, have been put into effect"?

★ ★ ★

CIO President Murray has very pointedly called each section of the joint report to the personal attention of the official directly concerned, along the lines indicated above, and asked him how he can square such statements with his own knowledge.

No matter how Vinson, Jones Davis and Bowles may kid themselves, or try to quibble out, they can't kid the public into believing stabilization has been effected, when living costs have risen far beyond frozen wages, profiteering is uncontrolled, and only the wage point of the President's seven-point anti-inflation program has really been placed in effect.

Their misleading report is a disservice to the administration of which they are a part; to Pres. Roosevelt, who has repeatedly asked Congress to make possible real stabilization; and to labor and other public-spirited groups who are campaigning for more effective price control, for balanced adjustment of wages to prices, for fair taxes, and for the other steps necessary for economic stability.

Hail Murray for ILO Stand

Washington, Apr. 15—CIO Pres. Philip Murray's statesmanship in refusing to make an issue of CIO representation at the coming meeting of the Intl. Labor Organization was highly praised this week by the Washington Post.

The Post pointed out that President Roosevelt had asked the AFL to share representation at the ILO meeting with the CIO, and that the CIO is entitled to such representation, but that nevertheless the AFL Executive Council did a dog in the manger act by threatening that it would withdraw from the conference entirely if a CIO representative were named.

The Post said that Murray's withdrawal of CIO's request for representation "has certainly cost him nothing in stature or in public esteem. In his tug of war with Mr. Green he is in the position of the man who suddenly let go, sending his opponent reeling backward in confusion.

"The labor movement in America," the Post continued, "needs more of Mr. Murray's statesman-like impulses, less of Mr. Green's petty insistence on protocol and priority."

Wagner Act Saddle Sore—Frey to Blame

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, Apr. 15—Six years ago, craft leaders of the AFL set out to do "legally" what they couldn't do any other way—crush the CIO by outlawing industrial unionism and wrecking the Wagner Act in the process.

The method then lay in trying to amend the Wagner Act itself, in alliance with the most reactionary elements in big business. The plot was exposed by CIO Pres. Philip Murray and was stopped in its tracks.

Today, "Colonel" John P. Frey, head of the AFL Metal Trades Dept., has detoured his attack via the appropriations route—and so far is meeting with more success.

Last year, Congress passed the "Frey Rider" to the Natl. Labor Relations Board appropriation. The rider prevents the NLRB from opening a case where a contract already exists, no matter how the contract was arrived at.

This means that collusive contracts, signed between management and a stooge "union," whether of the straight company variety or hidden under an AFL label, are sacred and cannot be touched. It is, of course, a violation of the Wagner Act to hold such contracts. Thus Congress, at Frey's bidding, is ordering the NLRB to violate the very act it was set up to administer.

Under protection of this rider, the back-door agreements in the Kaiser West Coast shipyards, the AFL-company union tieup at Basic Magnesium, Inc., in Nevada, and scores of other AFL-employer deals have been made to freeze out genuine industrial organization by the CIO.

Blow at All Labor

Actually, by getting the rider through, Frey and his agents have struck a blow at all labor, AFL as well as CIO, since the rider perpetuates company unionism as long as it stays in the law.

Today, AFL agents are busy on Capitol Hill making sure that the Frey rider goes into the NLRB appropriation again. Hearings before a sub-committee of the House Appropriations Committee, headed by Rep. Hare (polltaxer, S. C.), are set to begin about May 1. Previous hearings before a Senate committee saw Frey and W. O. Hushing, the AFL's principal lobbyist, working hard for renewal of the rider and getting a warm response from men like Sen. McCarran (D., Nev.).

Chances are good that the Frey rider will be fastened to the new NLRB appropriation for another year if CIO members fail to take counter steps with their Congressmen to head it off.

CIO Hits Rider

The CIO nationally is opposed to the rider. CIO legislative people on the hill are working against it. They don't have certain advantages that the AFL people have, however, and they must depend on rank and file protest to Congress to help them.

To begin with, the AFL has made the Frey rider its number one legislative item. In the second place, Frey has a huge slush fund—$67,000—raised from AFL Metal Trades' unions—and ample personnel to go lobbying with.

AFL craft officials have made a deal on the Frey rider. In return for its passage, they're perfectly willing to forgive a vote for the Smith-Connally Act on the part of any Congressman. In fact, they've said so to any number of Representatives and Senators. Anything goes, it seems, when it comes to a question of hurting industrial unionism.

The campaign to get rid of the Frey rider today is much more than a feud between two branches of the labor movement. Getting rid of the rider is a number one war assignment, necessary to continued, maximum war production.

Harms AFL Machinists

It is universally recognized that strong unions have meant top war output. Strong unions are unions free from company domination, free from petty craft jurisdictional squabbles, free to organize on the industrial basis.

The Frey rider injures strong AFL unions just as much as it can injure CIO. The AFL Machinists discovered this last year when they tried to bust a company union with 8,000 people in it in a Western Electric plant at Baltimore, only to be blocked by the Frey rider. Incidentally, the Machinists contributed $5,000 to the slush fund used to put the rider across.

The Frey rider stands today as a threat to stable labor-management relations. It is a direct invitation to the kind of employer—and the kind of AFL office holder—who likes to finagle with company unions, at no matter what cost to stability and morale.

It can be wiped off the books if enough Congressmen and Senators hear from enough voters back home. Don't leave the play to Frey; write your Representative today, tell him to vote against the rider, for the full NLRB appropriation.

Chairman of the House subcommittee is Rep. Hare. Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee is Rep. Cannon (D., Mo.). Address all Representatives at House Office Bldg., all Senators at Senate Office Bldg., Washington, D. C.

Court Kills Peonage Law

Washington, April 15. — The U. S. Supreme Court this week ruled unconstitutional a Florida "peonage" law enacted in 1919 under which a Negro worker, Emanuel Pollack, was sent to jail for 60 days as a penalty for not working off $5 advanced to him by his employer.

In denouncing the law, the court said that a state "may not directly or indirectly command involuntary servitude even if it was voluntarily contracted for."

Reactionary employers had taken frequent advantage of the law to advance a small sum of money to a worker and then force him, under penalty, to remain on a job at low wages and under intolerable working conditions.

High Court Curls Union-Busters

WASHINGTON, April 15—In two recent cases, the U. S. Supreme Court sharply restricted the power of management to bargain with individual workers in a situation where a union had been designated by a majority of the employes as their collective bargaining agency. Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel, hailed the decisions as affording real protection for workers under the National Labor Relations Act.

In the case of the Medo Supply Corp. of New York City, the employer had granted wage increases to a group of union members who were "dissatisfied" with the union. As a result of the employer's action, these men withdrew from the union. The Company thereupon refused to bargain on the ground that the union no longer represented a majority of the workers.

The court found the company guilty of unfair labor practices since "there could be no more obvious way of interfering with. . . rights of employes than by grants of wage increases with the understanding that they would leave the union in return."

Commenting on the Medo case Pressman said:

"The Medo case affords real protection for the right of workers guaranteed by the National Labor Relations Act to join unions of their own choosing free from any interference by the employers.

"This case once and for all establishes the basic principle that when a majority of the workers designate their union as their exclusive bargaining representative the employer cannot evade his responsibility to deal with this union by attempting to seduce, bribe or intimidate the employes away from their union.

"With this principle sustained by the U.S. Supreme Court, employers now know that once a union has been certified as exclusive bargaining representative, that is the sole and only agency with which the employer can deal in collective bargaining to negotiate wages, hours or working conditions.

"The Supreme Court has therefore stricken down another attempt of employers to reinitiate their age-worn vicious system of individual 'yellow-dog' contracts."

The other decision was in the case of J. I. Case Co. of Illinois. The court here held that individual agreements with employes are overruled by the terms of a collective bargaining contract.

In strong language the court condemned individual bargains since "advantages to individuals may prove as disruptive of industrial peace as disadvantages."

Studebaker craftsmen build engines for this latest model Flying Fortress

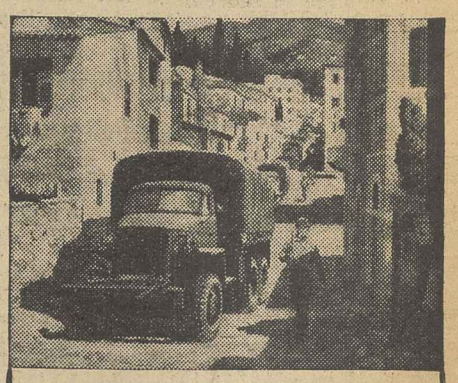
HERE'S the mightiest Boeing Flying Fortress of them all—the brand-new B-17G.

At first glance, it doesn't look much different from the previous Flying Fortress models—until you notice that chin turret under the bombardier's platform with its two 50-caliber machine guns.

Studebaker builds Wright Cyclone engines for this long-range Boeing bomber. And the assignment is a logical recognition of a great engine-building reputation, so brilliantly exemplified for many years in the fine power plants of the famous Studebaker Champion, Commander and President cars.

Studebaker engineers, production experts and craftsmen fully recognize the urgent needs of our armed forces for more and more equipment.

That's why they're sparing no effort on the Wright Cyclone engines they build for the Flying Fortress, the big multiple-drive military trucks and other vital war matériel.



Studebaker builds tens of thousands of big, multiple-drive military trucks— They're serving the United Nations all over the world. Studebaker is now one of the largest manufacturers of heavy duty war trucks.

Polltax Repeal Due To Hit Deck Apr. 17

WASHINGTON, April 15—Amid rumors of "deals" and open boasting of filibusters, Senate debate on the polltax repeal bill (HR 7) was still scheduled to begin April 17 as The CIO NEWS went to press.

Principal "deal" rumor being peddled was to the effect that anti-repeal Senators would try to allow the filibuster to go on some days, take a quick cloture (end of debate) vote that would be lost, and then let the bill die as quietly as possible.

Polltax Senators, led by such men as Bilbo (Miss.), currently under fire here for extreme anti-Negro speeches, Eastland (Miss.) and Bankhead (Ala.) were planning not only to try to talk the bill to death but also to smother it under hundreds of "amendments," each of which would require a roll call vote. This form of filibuster by amendment is designed to wear down both the Senators and the country, particularly in wartime with other important legislation waiting.

Senator James A. Mead (D., N.Y.), is expected to bring the repeal bill on the floor. Senator Robert F. Wagner (D., N.Y.), in a wire to the Natl. Committee to Abolish the Polltax, has pledged his complete support to cloture and to passage of the bill.

There's still time to wire your own two Senators, reiterating the urgency of voting for cloture to end the filibuster and for passage of the bill as it stands, without amendments of any kind.

Murray Outlines CIO Plans for London Parley

WASHINGTON, April 15—Writing under two main headings—war tasks and post war reconstruction—CIO President Philip Murray this week sent a nine point suggested agenda for the London World Labor Conference to Sir Walter Citrine, head of the British Trades Union Congress.

He suggested a preliminary meeting to set up working committee "to facilitate the preparation of the agenda and other organization matters." The letter was in response to a suggestion in Citrine's original invitation last year, which called on participating unions to send in their ideas of what the conference could accomplish.

Principal aim of the war section of Murray's letter, as distinct from the postwar section, was to work out ways for the exchange of war production and mobilization ideas among the United Nations. In addition, he suggested that policies be worked out in the areas to be liberated from the enemy in the "decisive land offensive against the Axis" to help in "mobilizing the support of the liberated people in the war effort."

These policies, he said, should include guarantees of the Four Freedoms, including freedom to organize democratic labor unions, and the "formation of governments which have the support of the people."

Turning to problems of the peace and of the postwar period, Murray urged the rights of all peoples of all countries, large or small, regardless of race, creed or color, to freedom and to economic development "to provide a decent standard of living for the people."

FASCISM MUST DIE

A vital preliminary to this is the complete elimination "of every phase of Nazism, Fascism or Japanese militarism" in liberated and enemy nations, together with an early opportunity for "the people of the occupied countries to determine their own elected officials and government."

After the victory, Murray wrote, world labor must set up a permanent international trade union movement to take in all United Nations labor and, after fascism is wiped out, labor from "all other nations desiring to participate."

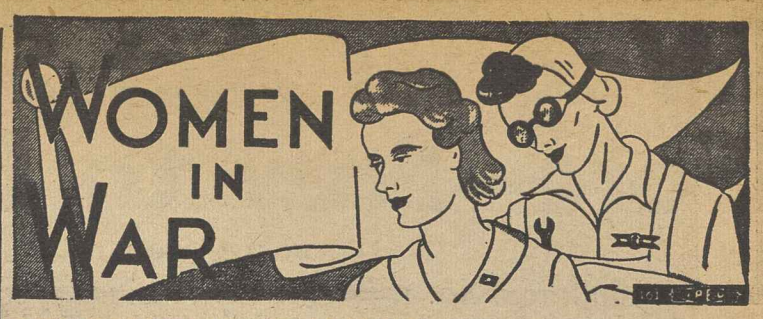
Firm unity among the United Nations is also needed "to assure continuity of peace, equal access to raw materials and international markets, and full encouragement to the development of democratic principles throughout the world," Murray added.

This will require the ending of cartels "seeking to restrict production or the full development of domestic and international trade." Labor, he said, must make certain "that no conditions be permitted to arise which may lay the basis for any wars among the nations."

Economic steps for rehabilitation of the world and for maintaining peace must include adequate social security, jobs at decent wages for all, medical care, housing, education, and the like. International financial aid must be set up to help rebuild Axis occupied and devastated areas and countries.

The London meeting "marks an historic moment," he said in ending his letter to Citrine. "Labor has a grave responsibility to meet the tremendous tasks which lie ahead.

"The welfare and happiness of the people for generations to come may well rest upon the full success of our joint endeavors at the coming conference."



AUXILIARY HEAD URGES

Back Bullets With Ballots to Aid War

By ELEANOR FOWLER

Participation in the CIO political action drive as the most effective way to aid our union men in the armed forces and the merchant marine is stressed by Pres. Faye Stephenson in her greeting to the hundreds of Blue Star Mothers Week affairs being held this week by CIO auxiliaries throughout the country.

"We express during this week the admiration which we all have for the courage and devotion of our gold and blue star wives and mothers," Mrs. Stephenson said. "We pledge to them that we will do all within our power to strengthen our unions and to back the program of our commander-in-chief in order to speed victory in the war and assure full employment in the peace.

"We feel that assisting the CIO Political Action Committee is the most important way in which we can carry out that pledge. We invite all of our blue and gold star wives and mothers to join with us in helping to mobilize the women of America to elect Congressmen and Senators who will give full support to the President's win-the-war program and truly represent the interests of our boys in the armed services and the merchant marine."

Among meetings honoring the contributions made by women will be:

New York Maritime Union Auxiliary; a luncheon at union headquarters, April 16; a luncheon at the CIO Auxiliary Council in Los Angeles, featuring distribution of copies of the CIO NEWS Servicemen's Edition, and speakers on legislation affecting men and women in the armed forces, and services by government agencies to families of servicemen.

Joint meeting of Shipyard Local 1, Camden, N. J., and its Auxiliary to honor wives and mothers of their 8,000 servicemen; movies on black markets and child care to be shown at a meeting of the Woodworkers Auxiliary, Sheridan, Oregon; and presentation of a huge scroll with names of union servicemen on one side and names of wives and mothers on the other by the Chicago Fur Workers Auxiliary.

Part of the program of these meetings and of all of those being held throughout the country will be to join with the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries in paying tribute to the heroism of the women of England, China and the Soviet Union and of our allies overrun by Hitler.

Monty-Ward Case to FDR

Washington, April 15—Two labor-hating companies were today facing Presidential action as the War Labor Board sent a letter to President Roosevelt advising him that Montgomery Ward & Co., Chicago mail order house, and Jenkins Bros. Inc., of Bridgeport, Conn., had refused to comply with board orders.

In the Montgomery Ward case, the company defied the board's directive to extend its contract with the CIO Wholesale, Retail and Dept. Store Employes pending NLRB action on the question of representation. Five thousand employes of the company walked out on strike a few days ago directly as a result of the company's repeated refusals to settle its problems with the union.

In the Jenkins case the board had approved a directive giving the CIO Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers a five cents an hour general wage increase. The company although it has exhausted every means of appeal, still refuses to pay the increase or the retroactive pay amounting to nearly $250,000.

Job Protection For Women Urged

Washington, Apr. 15—Standards banning discrimination against women and providing protection for them in the way of rest periods, maternity leave and other features were recommended in a leaflet issued this week by the U. S. Women's Bureau.

The recommendations, which are the result of a conference of trade union women representatives, are:

That wage and seniority discrimination based on sex be eliminated.

That women be given two 10-minute rest periods in addition to a regular lunch period.

That union contracts specify that pregnanacy shall not be grounds for dismissal, and that if a woman's work is rendered dangerous or difficult by her condition, her employer shall transfer her to other suitable work upon receipt of a doctor's statement.

The Bureau recommended re-employment of women returning from pregnancy leave, at rates formerly paid and at the same jobs, if possible.

WARNING

Hidden VD Germ Is Silent, Deadly Foe

(Second of a series of articles on venereal disease by the Executive Director of the American Social Hygiene Association, a national voluntary health agency closely teamed up with the Army and Navy in the wartime campaign to combat syphilis and gonorrhea and all conditions favoring their spread.)

The syphilis germ often operates like an enemy submarine. It dives beneath the surface of the body, and does its damage while no one suspects it is around.

The reason shyphilis frequently works its harmful effects this way is that its early symptoms are not easily discovered. A hard sore on the parts of the body exposed to infection is usually the first sign. Even without treatment, the sore disappears. But the syphilis germ has not gone away. Later on, a rash appears on the body. That too goes away after a while. But the disease is still present.

Found early and treated thoroughly by qualified doctors, most syphilis can be cured. Untreated syphilis often damages the blood vessels, brain, nerves, liver, eyes or other parts of the body. The results are tragic.

Where does syphilis come from, and what's the treatment for it?

Syphilis is a widespread contagious disease caused by a germ known as spirochete. The germ is carried from person to person. One catches syphilis by getting some of those germs into his or her body. This happens most often through sexual relations with an infected person. Sometimes the disease is caught by kissing someone who has it or possibly in rare instances by contact with articles very recently used by an infectious person.

STANDARD TREATMENT

The standard treatment for syphilis requires one or two injections a week of an arsenical drug and bismuth, given in a series, for a period of a year or 18 months. These injections do not interfere with continuance at work. After 2 or 3 treatments, most patients become non-infectious, and are no longer dangers to their families and close associates provided they remain under treatment.

The danger at this point is that patients will not continue treatments until they are completely cured, or at least permanently non-infectious.

New rapid treatments for syphilis and gonorrhea give promise of much speedier cures. A proportion of early cases of syphilis, it is now believed, can be cured in 15 days or less. But the new rapid treatment methods are not without danger. They require special hospital facilities, which are not now generally available. Only expert physicians with special training can safely guide treatment and tell whether the patient is cured.

NEEDLESS SUFFERING

So much needless suffering, so many wrecked marriages and broken homes, so many disabling illnesses, so many man-days lost to production could be avoided if syphilis and gonorrhea were discovered early and treated. We know how to get rid of these venereal diseases if we think it important enough.

This series of articles is a call to action. Armed with the facts in the case against venereal disease, and fired with a determination to get up in arms against it, organized labor can be one of the major forces in a successful onslaught that will stamp it out.

The fight against VD must be waged on 2 fronts—preventing infection and discovering and treating all those infected. Diphtheria was once a serious epidemic disease. But it has been brought under effective control. The same thing holds true for smallpox, cholera and other contagious diseases. We can—and should—register the same success in the drive against syphilis and gonorrhea.

Pres. Donald Henderson, UCAPAWA, advises that persistent appeals by the union against only a 1-cent increase ordered by the 4th Regional WLB at three Winston-Salem, N. C., leaf tobacco plants employing some 2,000 workers, finally resulted in a new WLRB decision which established a 50-cent minimum, allowing a 5-cent increase instead of the original 1-cent at Export and Winston leaf houses, and a 10-cent increase at Piedmont, where previously only 6 cents had been granted. Increases are retroactive to October 14, 1943. This is a major CIO victory in this area.

Rep. Albert Haywood, Chicago, reports signature of a contract between Safety Socket Screw Co. and Local Industrial Union No. 1364 providing for union shop, up to two weeks' pay for men joining the armed forces and maintenance of full seniority rights upon their return, company-provided life insurance for each employe up to $1,000 and doctor's care and hospitalization.

CIO representatives in Baltimore met with Chairman Sidney Hillman of the Political Action Committee on April 11. Through his capable leadership complete unity was established, all forces pledging to work together for the CIO program. This means much to Baltimore and will enhance organizing activities which have gone on so successfully in the past in that area.

Franco Trick Wins Nitrates for Nazis

MONTEVIDEO, April 15 (ALN)—Franco agents have worked out a new and intricate scheme to insure continuation of Spain's supply of Chilean nitrates, which are transshipped to Germany for use in the manufacture of explosives, it was learned here this week. Under the new plan, made necessary by frequent refusals of Chilean longshoremen to load Spanish ships, Chilean nitrate companies, owned largely by U.S. and British interests, now ship their products to Montevideo in vessels of other nationalities — mainly Peruvian. Hitherto Buenos Aires was the chief transference port.

Here in Montevideo the nitrates are transferred to Spanish ships, which obtain British navicerts guaranteeing safe passage across the Atlantic. The Spanish ship Maria Victoria is due to leave this city soon carrying 7000 tons of Chilean nitrate— part of the projected shipment of 150,000 tons to Spain until July.

VIGILANCE COMMITTEE

These facts were learned from Jose Blanco, secretary of the Maritime Transport Union of Uruguay, whose report to the national congress of the General Workers Union of Uruguay (UGT), just concluded, resulted in the designation of a vigilance committee of Uruguayan longshoremen to prevent further shipments.

The same committee will visit United Nations embassies in this city to urge that immediate steps be taken to prevent the Nazis from receiving additional nitrates. "We wish to prevent the entry through the back door of Spain of these raw materials, at a time when Anglo-American aviators are risking their lives to paralyze the output of German armaments plants," Blanco said.

The UGT pledged support to Chilean longshoremen in their refusal to load Spanish nitrate-carrying ships, declaring that it will fight to end all shipments from Chile and Uruguay to Spain. Chilean longshoremen, who have frequently refused to load Spanish, Portuguese, Peruvian and other vessels, were congratulated for their "refusal to harm the United Nations war effort."

Back British Labor's Ban On Wartime Strikes

London, April 15 (ALN)—After a conference yesterday with Labor Minister Ernest Bevin, leaders of the British Trades Union Congress emphatically endorsed his appeal to wildcat strikers to return to work. "Unauthorized stoppages occuring in the midst of preparations for a concerted Allied attack upon Nazi-fortified Europe already have impeded these important operations," Ebby Edwards and Sir Walter Citrine, chairman and general secretary of the TUC, declared.

"If the strikes continue, they cannot fail to produce a major national disaster and imperil victory of the Allied cause." About 100,000 men have been on strike in Yorkshire coal fields and 30,000 in North Ireland shipyards and aircraft plants.

The government is taking two steps to halt the work stoppages. First, it is preparing an amendment to the Defense Regulations to make striking a criminal offense. The National Arbitration Order, introduced in March 1940, made strikes illegal unless the dispute was submitted to the Minister of Labor for arbitration and not acted upon within three weeks.

Second, the government has raided the offices of the Fourth International and Workers' Militant Movement, Trotskyite organizations accused of fomenting the strikes. Scotland Yard men seized bundles of the Socialist Appeal and other publications which Trotskyites have been handing out to workers at plant gates.

CIO Urges 1,500,000 New Homes

WASHINGTON, April 15 — A broad over-all housing program to meet the shelter needs of the American people for the duration of the war and in the postwar period is offered by the CIO Committee on Housing in a new CIO pamphlet entitled "Good Shelter for Everyone."

Estimating the need for 1,500,000 new homes a year for 10 to 20 years after the war, R. J. Thomas, president of the UAW-CIO and chairman of the CIO Housing Committee, said in a foreword to the pamphlet that at least 500,000 of these homes should be built by government.

"Private builders have failed dismally to provide good homes for low-income and middle-income workers in the past. Private housing should be encouraged to enter any field in which it can operate, but it must not be allowed to block the development of public and cooperative housing where these are necessary or desirable," Thomas said.

After outlining the general program, the organized labor movement and the general public are urged to marshal their forces for the support of the fundamental principles embodied in it.

The pamphlet is available at 10 cents per copy, 100 for $7.00, from the CIO Publicity Department, 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington, D. C.

Plan Times Square CIO Canteen

New York, Apr. 15—Plans for a huge Labor Canteen in the Times Square district, where organized labor would be host to hundreds of service men and women, highlighted the second annual meeting of the Board of Directors of the CIO War Chest held here this week.

Such a Labor Canteen, said Saul Mills, secretary of the Chest, would be "the most effective public relations job organized labor could undertake to combat anti-labor propaganda among the armed forces."

Tentative plans call for a large open-air pavilion for dancing and refreshments, with union women serving as hostesses.

Sec.-Treas. Jacob S. Potofsky, of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, was unanimously elected to take over the job of chairman of the N. Y. CIO War Chest, following a plea by ACW Pres. Sidney Hillman that he be relieved of the responsibility because of the pressure of his duties as chairman of the CIO Political Action Committee. Hillman was elected honorary chairman.

Ex-GIs Get First Crack At OPA Jobs

Washington, April 15—Returned veterans will get first crack at U. S. Office of Price Administration jobs, OPA head Chester Bowles announced this week.

OPA has a total paid staff of 55,600, of whom all but 4,000 are outside Washington. OPA is now hiring about 2,500 new employes a month, chiefly in the field.

Under this policy of veterans' preference, OPA regional offices and local War Price and Rationing Boards (there are 4,500 of these) will ask the Civil Service Commission to place veterans in openings as they come up.

Jobs available are principally clerical, with the local boards. In addition, OPA hires substantial numbers of investigators, who help stamp out black markets, check on price violations, etc.

Frame Weirton Steelworkers On Phoney Charges

New Cumberland, W. Va., Apr. 15 —The last ditch battle of Ernest Weir against unionization of the Weirton Steel Co., at Weirton, W. Va., was taken to the courts this week, with the indictment of 30 members of the CIO United Steelworkers on charges framed by Weir-dominated officials.

Twenty-five of the men were arrested on charges of "unlawful assembly" for distributing leaflets at the gates of the plant. Other charges involved conspiracy and "incitement to riot"—the riot being caused by the attack of several hundred of Weir's hatchet gang on USA-CIO men who were peacefully distributing leaflets in an attempt to organize the plant.

Can Produce Abundance For All—Carey

Washington, April. 15 — A post-war America of full production and full employment is envisaged by the CIO, CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey said in a radio speech on "The People's Stake in War Production" over a national hook-up.

"Full use of war plants and farms employing most of the present labor force, plus returned soldiers, sailors and marines can produce in field and factory the good food, clothing and shelter to make us a nation of secure and healthy citizens," Carey declared.

"At the same time" he said "we can supply huge needed amounts of goods for other countries. Physically we can deliver the goods."

No Law Needed to Make UAW Tell of Finances

Detroit, Apr. 15 — No law was needed to force the United Automobile Workers, lusty young CIO international union of some million members, to make a public accounting of its funds. In a report issued here this week, the union points with pride to a $3,000,000 half-yearly income and hides no secrets behind the plain statement of money received and money spent.

Secretary-Treasurer George Addes' report, which was certified by a public accountant and submitted to the officers and membership of the union, showed that:

Assets as of Dec. 31, 1943, amounted to $1,947,155.01, an increase of $324,582.16 during the preceding six months.

Total income for the period amounted to $3,138,899.46, a monthly average of $523,166.57.

Income of $334,381.83 from initiation and re-admission fees indicated that an average of 55,730 a month joined the union or were re-admitted to membership.

Dues-paying members for the last six months averaged 980,605 a month. Adding the men and women in military service brings the total to around 1,200,000.

Referring to the increase in assets, Addes said that the amount was not so large as he would have liked. "We have always contended that labor organizations during periods of full employment and particularly during such a period as we are now going through, should save at least 20 per cent of their income," he declared.

The report revealed that 48.39 percent of the Union's total income was spent for organizational and servicing activities, 20.8 percent for administrative purposes, and 17.39 percent for other purposes, including cost of publishing the United Auto Worker, official union publication, and per capita tax to the National CIO.

CIO Broadcast Tells Story Of Steelworkers' Plight

NEW YORK, April 15—Marking the second anniversary of Labor for Victory, CIO Sunday radio program presented through the Natl. Broadcasting Company's network, the CIO show this week was devoted to presenting the trouble a typical steelworker family has in keeping up with the cost of living.

The program brought a member of the USA-CIO and his wife to the studio to tell about the facts of living on an average wage of $54.43 a week in the face of inflated food, clothing and shelter costs.

On straight necessities, the steelworker family spent "for food, $18.51. Two kids—they eat a lot. Clothes that set us back $8.33 a week. For rent, $5.84. For coal, and electric lights, and ice, another $3.05," and so on, until the steelworker comes out in the red at the end of the year.

The program pointed up the need for the 17c wage increase now being asked by the USA-CIO in its case before the WLB. Written by Peter Lyon, it closed with a second anniversary message of thanks to NBC from President Murray, who said:

"I want to express the appreciation of our movement to the NBC for the public service it has rendered to labor and to our war effort by making available this weekly program to our soldiers of production."

Quick, Henry, The Flit!

Chicago, Apr. 15—Col. Robert R. McCormick, labor-hating publisher of the Chicago Tribune, this week sought to extend his isolationist sheet into Wisconsin.

Citing the repudiation of Wendell L. Willkie by Republican voters as "evidence" that residents of Milwaukee favor the anti-Willkie and anti-war policies of the Tribune, the Colonel asked the War Production Board to assign him thousands of tons of scarce newsprint so that he could feed his propaganda more directly to Milwaukeeans.

'Prof' Goes To Bat For Labor

Oklahoma City, April 15—A professor in business administration at the University of Oklahoma has gone to bat for labor against a tory newspaper and has done a good job of it.

Virgle Glenn Wilhite, professor of economics has taken the Oklahoma City Times to task for a bitter anti-labor editorial it printed March 6, called "Don't Follow Unionism's Footsteps."

CITES LABOR'S RECORD

Answering the argument that labor has hindered war production and injured public interest by sitdowns, slowdowns, strikes and riots, Prof. Wilhite calls the Times' attention to some things it should know and doesn't:

Union labor has contributed a disproportionately large number of men and women to the armed forces. There are now well over 2,000,000 members of labor unions in the army, navy and other military services.

STRIKES RULED OUT

A large number of youthful service men and women are sons and daughters of union labor fathers.

Labor gave up the right to strike, "the most essential and effective weapon in its fight for a fair share of the jointly produced national income," at the outset of the war.

Labor's no-strike pledge has been kept 99 per cent perfectly.

Virtually all production goals have been attained and surpassed.

Production lost by the holdback of big business amounts to hundreds of times the production lost by strikes since Pearl Harbor.

Detriot, Apr. 15—An FBI investigation of Father Charles E. Coughlin, publisher of the defunct "Social Justice," was requested this week by the Wayne County CIO Council.

WLB OKs Pay Hikes for CIO Shipyards

WASHINGTON, April 15—Some 21,000 workers in three major East Coast shipyards, represented by the CIO Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, will receive pay increases under an order issued this week by the War Labor Board directing certain wage adjustments and reclassifications.

The adjustments are based on a coast-wide review of wages made by the Shipbuilding Commission set up by the WLB. In July 1943 the WLB denied a general wage increase but directed the Commission to review the wage structure with an eye to correcting intra-plant inequities.

Workers affected by the order are employed at the New York Shipbuilding Corp., Camden, N. J.; Maryland Drydock Co., Baltimore, Md., and the Federal Shipbuilding & Drydock Co., Kearney and Port Newark, N. J.

Application of the new wage rates at the N. Y. Shipbuilding Corp. will give a 2-cent an hour average increase to about 10,000 workers, around 34 per cent of the total employed at the yard.

At Federal Ship, some 5,500 workers at Port Newark will get a .033-cent an hour increase and 7,000 at Kearney will receive .037-cent. These workers represent about 32 per cent of the total employed in both yards.

At Maryland Drydock, about 5,000 workers, representing 77 per cent of the total personnel, will receive an average hourly increase of 4½ cents.

Pressman Backs CIO Pay Stand in Radio Forum

WASHINGTON, Apr. 15—Anyone who supports the present wage stabilization policy should in all fairness support the Administration's whole stabilization program, including price and profit control, argued Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel, in a roundtable radio discussion this this week on the wage policy.

The program was one of a series broadcast over the Mutual System by the American Forum of the Air. Chairman of this week's discussion was William H. Davis of the War Labor Board, who explained in his opening remarks what he considered the WLB's basic wage policy to be.

Taking part in the panel discussion in addition to Pressman were Robert Watt of the AFL, Dr. Alvin H. Hansen of Harvard University, and George K. Batt, industry member of the WLB.

Pointing out that "the whole issue of stabilization of wages arose in connection with an attempt to stabilize our entire national economy," Pressman objected to the whole emphasis being placed on the notion "that inflation can only arise from wage increases."

Net profits of corporation in 1943 before taxes, he declared, "were 406 per cent of the peacetime annual average." He said it was estimated that the increase would rise to 444 per cent in 1944.

It was unfair, Pressman argued, to quote profit figures after taxes are deducted and wage figures before taxes are deducted as is commonly done.

An Open Letter To The WLB

that it can afford) to buy five pairs of glasses at $17 a pair for four pairs and $7.50 for the other. One boy who needed glasses badly had to wait a month before he could get them.

Take clothes. The kids get hand-me-downs. Spriggs spends most of his clothes money for work shoes, heavy underwear, fire proof coats and special pants. He buys safety shoes second hand because he can't afford new ones. He uses up two pair of socks every week—at 20 cents a pair. He pays $1.75 for special ray glasses which the company ought to furnish. His safety coats cost him $4 to $5—and he had to buy three of them last year.

Sure Spriggs buys war bonds. But with that kind of a setup, with the money going out for the bare necessities of life just as fast as it comes in, and with sudden emergencies, the war bonds have to go. He's bought 12 of them, but he's had to cash in nine. He doesn't like to do this, because he's a patriotic American who's supporting the war 100 per cent, but a fellow has to live.

Prices Skyrocket

And life is darned difficult . . . with butter that used to sell at 2 pounds for 35 cents now 54 cents a pound . . . with a chuck beef roast up from 17 cents a pound to 35 and sometimes 45 . . . with milk that used to sell six cans for a quarter now three for 25 cents . . . with fresh milk up from 11 to 15 cents a quart . . . with eggs that sold before the war at 18 cents a dozen now costing 45 . . . with potatoes boosted from 15 cents a peck to 75 cents . . . with three cans of peas that used to sell for a total of 25 cents now costing 17 cents a can . . . with children's dresses jumping from 69 cents to $1.98 . . . with kid's shoes up from 98 cents to $2 a pair . . . with dungarees up from $1 to $2.49 . . . with work shirts jumping from 69 cents to $1.49 . . . and with the quality shooting downward. . . .

Life is just about as tough for Charles E. Valentine, only he is white, so he doesn't have to live in a Jim Crow neighborhood where the landlords hold the club of banishment over the tenants and where repairs exist in some kind of a dream world unless the tenant makes them himself.

Overcrowding

Valentine, who is 44 years old, lives with his wife and five of his six children in a six room house, which the landlord this week was selling out from under him. The whole family is going to live in a four room house, that Valentine is buying—that's all the space he could afford. He's paid $200 down and he's going to pay $7 a week for the privilege of cramming his entire family into the two available bed rooms.

Valentine figures he grosses $2,700 a year. The net is much less — and that's what he and his family have to live on. One of his pay stubs looked like this:

Gross	$69.65
Social Security	.70
Sick Relief	2.00
Income Tax	3.20
War Bonds	7.00
Net	56.75

Valentine's a car bracer and loader in the Bethlehem Steel shipping department, where he's worked for 17 years. If he works there eight more years, he can look forward to a minor pension — something like the $22 a month that is paid to a member of the union named Oanie O'Rourke who retired after 40 years service at the age of 65, and something decidedly not like the $24,504 a year paid to C. Austin Buck, Bethlehem Steel vice-president, who retired on pension in 1941.

Lack Security

All the problems that plague the Spriggs family make the lives of the Valentines just as dangerous—and that's no exaggeration. If the head of the house is sick, all he has to depend on for aid is the sick relief that he pays for at $2 a week—only relief doesn't start until Valentine has been sick at least seven days.

He was sick for four months once, and the family had exactly $2.00 a week to spend for food.

"Our insecurity," he said, "is taken out of the lives of our kids. If we had a guaranteed annual wage, this wouldn't happen."

Even when Valentine is well, life is no cinch for the little Valentines, who range in age from one year to 22 — the oldest being in the Army. The five others who are home ought to have at least a quart of milk a day each, to build strong, healthy bones. The family can afford only two quarts—at 15 cents each.

Twenty - two - year - old Charles Richard Valentine, the oldest son, is in the service. His picture hangs over a framed pledge of allegiance to the American flag that decorates a wall of the Valentine living room.

The Valentine's have proved their Americanism by contributing their eldest to the war. They feel — along with half a million other steelworkers — that it is time for the American government to make sure that American workers are guaranteed enough income so that they can enjoy what the nation has so proudly called its "American standard of living."

CIO Charges

CHICAGO, April 22—Sewell L. Avery, chairman of the board of directors of Montgomery, Ward & Co., is on strike against the government and its war-time labor relations agencies. He has arrogantly assumed the role of America's foremost labor baiter and union-buster in the most critical period in the country's history.

That was the picture painted today by officials of Local 20, United Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employes, CIO, now involved in a walkout in Chicago to force Montgomery-Ward to abide by a WLB decision.

The role is not new to Avery. In Armour & Co. and U. S. Gypsum he used the same disruptive and reactionary tactics he has all along practiced at his gigantic mail order house.

Back in 1942, Avery balked at obeying a War Labor Board directive to sign a contract with the CIO Retail & Warehouse Union. He flooded the newspapers with phoney ads, claiming that the Board's maintenance of membership clause was illegal and unpatriotic. He threatened appeal to the court. President Roosevelt twice ordered him to obey the Board's order. Added to this were the strong protests of organized labor and the indignation of an enlightened public opinion.

Avery was forced to retreat. He signed the contract with the maintenance clause in it.

SEWELL AVERY
Accused of Blocking War

Last December the contract expired. The union submitted new proposals and suggested that until an agreement was reached the old contract be renewed. Avery refused. This time he claimed that the union no longer represented a majority of Montgomery-Ward's employes. The well defined pattern of stalling and delay started again.

On January 13, 1944, after a full public hearing, the WLB directed that the contract be extended until the question of representation was determined by the National Labor Relations Board. Pending the determination, the status quo was to be maintained.

In complete disregard of the Board's order, the company refused any extension of the contract, cancelled the voluntary checkoff, abolished the grievance procedure and declined to recognize or deal with the union.

On April 6, following a compliance hearing, a unanimous Board again ordered the company to extend the contract. The following day a spokesman for Avery informed the union of his intention to ignore the second order.

Avery finally succeeded in provoking a strike. Nearly 5,000 Montgomery-Ward workers walked out to compel compliance and bring their case before the bar of public opinion. Organized labor in Chicago, AFL as well as CIO, rallied to the union's support.

CASE SENT TO FDR

On April 14, the War Labor Board sent the case to the President for decisive action to compel the company to cease its violation of the laws of the land.

According to union leaders, Avery is the spearhead of a drive by a small group of reactionary employers who seek to create strife and dissension in the country and thus retard the war effort. His continuous and flagrant violations of the law can only serve to create unrest.

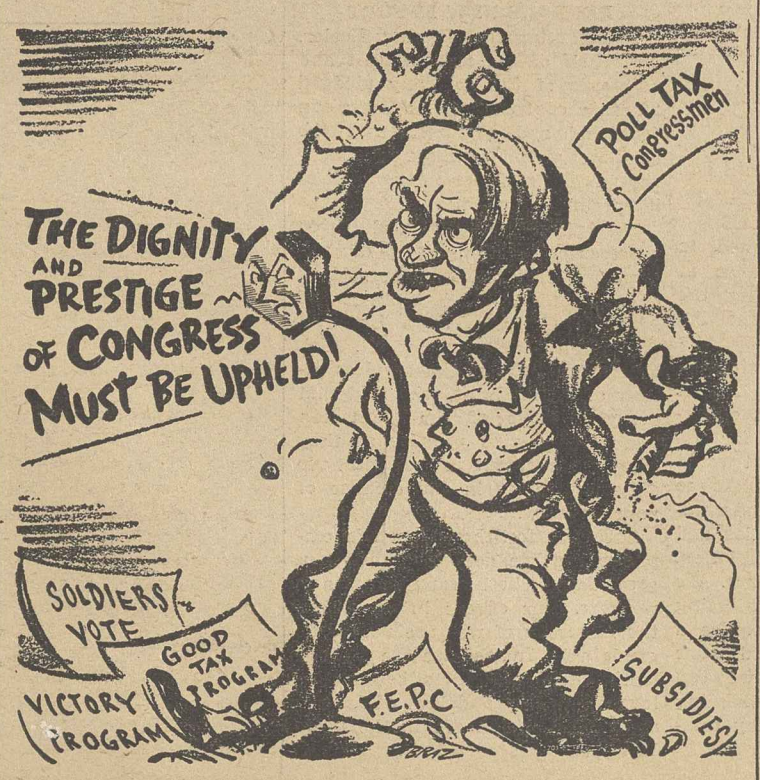
Biggest Cigarette Factory In World Signed by CIO

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C., Apr 22—The biggest cigarette factory in the world is now CIO. A contract signed last week by the R. J. Reynolds firm at long last brings the 12,000 white and Negro workers who make Camel cigarettes a voice in determining their working conditions. It is the first CIO contract in the industry.

In announcing the agreement, the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing & Allied Workers said that its signing marks the end of an era stretching back to World War I when all efforts of Reynolds workers to organize broke against the powerful Reynolds Co., Southern citadel of anti-unionism.



Reminder: Polltax Repeal Bill Coming Up Soon — Write Your Senators Today!

"Every weapon in the anti-CIO arsenal was hauled out to try to stop the Reynolds workers, but they refused to be stopped," said Exec. Vice-Pres. Conrad Espe and Organizing Committee Chairman Frank Hargrove in a statement made after the contract was signed.

They recalled that thinly veiled and sometimes open appeals to race prejudice by anti-union people failed to divide the workers and that efforts to organize the community against the CIO found all but a few Main Street business men unresponsive.

NLRB VICTORY

At an NLRB election held last December, the CIO union won 6822 votes to 3178 for the company union and 301 for neither. In an earlier election, the AFL polled only 135 votes.

Besides seniority and grievance procedure, the contract guarantees job rights of servicemen and merchant seamen, including two weeks' severance pay and vacation pay; calls for bulletin boards, leaves for union work, call-in pay of two hours and the right of private physicians to check on company doctors' say-so on health matters.

'E' Pennant Awarded Free Sewing Machine Co.

AWARD FOR EXCELLENCE IN WAR PRODUCTION

ARMY-NAVY "E" AWARD presented to Free Sewing Machine Co. employees and their families, Thursday, April 6, 1944.

Officials of the Free Sewing Machine company and of the United Steel Workers of America, are shown above with Comm. E. B. Mott, navy bureau of ordnance at Washington, at the conclusion of colorful ceremonies at which the company was awarded the Army-Navy "E" for excellence of production of vitally needed war materials. Left to right are H. J. Kasler, vice president of the company; Warren O. Parker, Beloit, regional organizer for the union; Comm. Mott J. M. Stuchen, secretary of the company, and Richard Barker, president of local 2158, U.S.W.A., CIO. Comm. Mott called for continued high production.

From Rockford Morning Star

Officer Praises Workers At 'E' Flag Presentation

A man who saw action at Pearl Harbor at the outbreak of the war, who participated in the daring raid on Tokio, and who has battled Japs at Midway, at Guadalcanal and throughout the southwest Pacific, in presenting the Army-Navy "E" award to the Free Sewing Machine Company yesterday, credited the men and women on the production lines with making it possible for this country's armed forces to take the offensive in the war against the axis.

In presenting the "E" flag to Jay Kasler, vice president of the company, Comm. E. B. Mott, who was gunnery officer on the aircraft carrier Enterprise when it won a presidential unit citation for action in the Pacific, declared:

"And now, here is your flag. Fly it proudly above your plant until the Stars and Stripes wave in triumph over the ruins of Berlin and the ashes of Tokio."

DESCRIBES STRUGGLES

Comm. Mott, now assigned to the navy bureau of ordnance at Washington, after describing the first year of warfare in the Pacific declared:

"These men who fought through all these tough battles fought against overwhelming odds, enduring great hardship, living for the day when our great new fleet would be ready. That fleet, thanks to millions of American men and women in the shipyards, factories and mines, is now nearing completion. At last the initiative is ours. We have the ball and we are going places. But it will still require a tremendous amount of hard work and hard fighting until we can bring to bear the overwhelming pressure to crush the enemy completely.

"Because of your faithful efforts toward victory, here at the Free Sewing Machine company, the armed forces today are conferring upon you the highest honor for civilians on the production front.

PLEDGES NEW EFFORT

In accepting the "E" flag, Kasler, on behalf of the management and employes of the company pledged "further contributions to American freedom" and promised that the company would continue to produce the materials of war to the limit of its production ability.

"E" pins were awarded three representatives employes of the company, Richard Barker, president of local 2158, Steel Workers of America, C. I. O., Julia Peterson and John Backman by Lt. Col. Frank A. Bush, special services officer of Camp Grant, who said that every employe of the plant can wear "these pins proudly as they represent recognition that you have done your duty in the defense of your country."

Speaking for the company's employes, Barker declared "this is a great day for both management and workers. Our efforts in producing the materials of war are not given grudgingly. Instead we are putting forth our best efforts because of love of country and love of friends and relatives who are in the front lines."

It was a proud moment, but there was no time for fancy words. We cut short the ceremonies, but paused momentarily to thank our friends and to accept this award given in recognition of our war efforts. We have pledged to Uncle Sam . . . our continued and untiring production of essential war supplies until Victory is won!

CIO's drive to renew the Price Control Act without crippling amendments was opened before the Senate Banking and Currency Committee by Pres. Murray this week, followed by other CIO and CIO Auxiliary leaders.

Polltax repeal (HR 7) has received a slight setback with announced postponement of Senate debate until April 24. Original date set was April 17. This was a victory for the polltaxers, which must be met by continued demands for cloture, early passage.

CIO is pushing again for quick passage of the "GI Bill" which is being held up by Rep. Rankin (polltaxer, Miss.) who doesn't like the unemployment compensation features of the bill. Pres. Murray has asked for speedy enactment, no downward changes in security clauses of measure.

Textile Firms in Chips, Can Hike Pay, Says CIO Union

BY E. M. SCHOFFSTALL

ATLANTA, Ga., Apr. 22—Refuting the ancient claim of the southern textile manufacturers that theirs is an "area economy" so sacred that it must not be touched by the right of workers to a decent standard of living, the CIO Textile Workers Union this week moved toward the conclusion of hearings on demands for a better standard of living for the men and women who clothe the fighting forces and the army that mans the home front.

The union late last month concluded its side of the case, being heard by a special War Labor Board panel. It is asking for a general wage increase of not less than 10 cents an hour, a minimum wage of not less than 60 cents an hour, minimum job rates in all classifications, a guaranteed daily minimum wage, a differential wage for third shift workers, and vacations with pay.

In a general statement on behalf of all the mills, Maj. L.P. McClendon laid the general pattern of the employers' proposition. The "area economy" of southern cotton mills must not be disturbed, he said. Any wage rise would induce inflation, he urgued. The WLB is without authority to grant pay raises outside the pattern of the Little Steel Formula, he declared.

Major McClendon even said that there is nothing to the union's contention that the wages of cotton-rayon mill workers are substandard. He denied the validity of the extensive pricing survey which TWUA made in five typical textile towns North and South, but under questioning by Isadore Katz, general counsel for the union, William Pollack, secy. treas., and Solomon Barkin, research director for TWUA, the mills' spokesmen admitted he had not read the 75-page document.

TEXTILE TESTIMONY

TWUA called to the stand witness after witness to prove that living conditions of textile workers are substandard, that many workers are not making even the 47½ cents an hour authorized by the WLB directive of August, 1942, that living conditions in mill villages are substandard, that workers are being stretched-out by variations of the notorious Bedaux system, that other industries with higher pay are siphoning off textile mill workers, and that production had dropped because workers were moving away from textile towns into communities where they could get better pay than the 57c an hour average for southern textiles.

Ore mines, steel mills, munitions plants, shipyards, machine shops, and numerous other industries are drawing textile workers away from cotton-rayon mills and are helping to create the 4-billion-yard deficit that will develop this year unless the wages of textile workers are increased, TWUA witnesses told the panel.

Every mill whose case has been heard thus far has dodged the issue of whether or not the company has piled up huge profits since the war started and thus has evaded TWUA's contention that the mills can abundantly afford to absorb the increased costs that will follow wage increases.

Special W'h'se Paper Tells Story Of Local 65

New York, April 22—A special anniversary issue of New Voices, official paper of Wholesale & Warehouse Workers, Local 65, appeared here this week.

Its contents, centering around the recent all-day convention of Local 65 held here, give an almost complete picture of the union, its machinery, problems, accomplishments and program to help win the war.

ASKS JOBS FOR VETS: Sec. of Interior Harold L. Ickes suggests that American war veterans be given ownership and control of vast government war-developed production plants to keep up high production and full employment. (Federated Pictures.)

CIO Asks Speedy Action on GI Bill

WASHINGTON, Apr. 22—Rep. Rankin's attempt to halt the "GI Bill" met with sharp opposition from CIO Pres. Philip Murray in a wire this week to House Veterans Committee members urging "speedy enactment of this constructive war and postwar measure" without downward changes in the bill's security clauses.

Rankin, Mississippi polltaxer and head of the Veterans Committee, has openly criticized the bill because it provides up to 52 weeks unemployment compensation to demobilized veterans who cannot get jobs. This clause, Rankin said, "might encourage unemployment"—an argument used 10 years ago against passage of the original Social Security Act.

"All objections or proposed downward changes aimed at the bill's security features should be brushed aside," Murray said. "Veterans are entitled to full protection against the dangers of unemployment and other hazards, as well as the utmost possible aid in re-absorption into civilian life."

Murray pointed out that the CIO has more than 1,250,000 members in the armed forces, and that it supports the GI Bill and other measures for aid to all soldiers and veterans. He urged Committee members to work for an early favorable report and quick passage. The GI Bill passed the Senate by a landslide vote.

A clause in the Bill that protects a veteran from having to scab on fellow workers in possible strike situations is also under fire from Rankin, who poses as the serviceman's "best friend."

In addition to social security, the Bill provides educational aid, help in buying homes, farms, etc., and other features designed "to aid in returning veterans of this war to a normal and secure civilian life." It is backed by all the standard veterans organizations.

The American Red Cross purchased more than 2,760,000 pocket-sized books last year for free distribution to servicemen.

Murray Urges

Secure Freedom From Want By Annual Wage

WASHINGTON, Apr. 22—A guaranteed annual wage for steelworkers is "the foundation for freedom from want and freedom from fear," CIO Pres. Philip Murray said in a nation-wide radio speech broadcast over CBS last Tuesday.

"When workers are assured full employment and economic security, they can furnish the backbone for the mass purchasing power so essential for the continued turning of the wheels of industry," Murray declared. "Nothing could create greater security for the industry than the security established for the workers. Nothing could afford greater stability to all segments of our industrial and farm communities than the guaranteed income of industrial workers."

Murray hammered home the point that industry under existing tax laws gets such adequate protection against financial losses as to fully permit it in turn to guarantee annual wages to workers.

He gave as an example the case of one large steel corporation whose average net earnings after taxes for the peace-time era were $44,732,000. As a result of the provisions of the tax law, this same company, even if in 1944 it suffers no losses but just breaks even or operates at less than 50 per cent of capacity, will be entitled to a check from the U. S. government of $49,-200,000.

"The only justification for these provisions of the law is that the guarantee enables companies to continue in operation during the reconversion and postwar period and thereby provide employment," Murray said. "Labor simply requests that industry assure such employment through a guaranteed annual wage."

He further pointed out that the official index of the Dept. of Agriculture reporting the cost of living for farmers showed an increase from January 1941 to December 1943 of 42.6 per cent which is about the same rise in living costs as in the report of the CIO-AFL Cost of Living study.

Under the mandate of the Price Control Law of October 2, 1942, wages and prices were to maintain the same relationship prevailing on September 15, 1942. This mandate has not been obeyed, Murray said.

"The steel workers, along with the other workers of the nation, are requesting that this inequity be eliminated," Murray added. "We therefore seek a wage adjustment—in the case of the steelworkers—of 17 cents per hour as the minimum amount required to compensate these workers for the loss which they have suffered as a result of the rising living costs.

"A revision of our wage policy to permit of such adjustment would bring wages back to their proper relationship with the now prevailing prices. The line when thus restored must be held. This can be done through effective economic stabilization—rigid and vigorous control of prices, overall democratic rationing, limitation of profits—along with continued stabilization of wages."

Take Steel Case to U.S., Murray Asks

Washington, Apr. 22—CIO unions and industrial union councils were urged this week to present the facts about the wage demands of the CIO United Steelworkers of America to CIO members and the public.

The request came in letters from Philip Murray, president of CIO and of the USA, who pointed out the importance of conveying to the public the union's analysis of economic stabilization and the need for revision of the Little Steel Formula, and the practical possibility of obtaining a guaranteed annual wage and other gains such as dismissal pay and group insurance.

A brief outlining the USA-CIO's case was inclosed with the letters.

Meanwhile, the Steelworkers case against is expected to come before the War Labor Board panel that has been hearing it, when the steel company managements present their side of the picture starting Apr. 25. Union rebuttal will follow this.

Bethlehem Yards Get 4c Wage Hike

Washington, Apr. 22—Wage adjustments averaging 4 cents an hour for some 44,000 workers in the eight East coast shipyards of the Shipbuilding Division of Bethlehem Steel have been ordered by the War Labor Board Shipbuilding Commission, the WLB announced here this week.

The CIO Marine & Shipbuilding Workers is the bargaining agency for the workers.

The Commission estimated that some 50 per cent of the total personnel in the eight yards would receive some adjustment as a result of this order.

The new rates, which are retroactive to June 23, 1943, are subject to approval by the Director of Economic Stabilization.

The yards covered by the order are: one in Boston, four in New York harbor and three in Baltimore.

A Guaranteed Annual Wage

We all need to eat 365 days in a year. But how many industrial workers can count on steady pay throughout the year?

The morale of countless war workers is seriously affected by worry over the future, after war orders will have been completed. And our servicemen are doing plenty of worrying too.

What about layoffs, short time, unemployment, and uncertain pay to meet the very certain and steady needs of their families?

Business has taken precautions to assure a steady flow of dividends the year around.

It has set aside huge reserves of undistributed profits for this purpose, and Congress has assured it tax refunds and other benefits which in effect guarantee normal profits for at least two years after the war.

Farmers too have post-war guarantees, through a federal law which assures a minimum return of 90% of parity for two years.

Industrial workers and servicemen who will return to industry are the only substantial group that have no post-war guarantee of security.

That is why the CIO is campaigning to establish the principle of the guaranteed annual wage in industry, which Pres. Philip Murray is advancing as one of the major demands of the United Steelworkers.

The annual wage would give real meaning to the freedom from want and fear for which we are fighting. It would relieve the present discrimination against labor as the only substantial class of people who have no post-war guarantees.

Thanks to enormous war profits and the generosity of Congress, industry has ample funds from which to pay a guaranteed annual wage.

Furthermore, nothing would do more to promote greater economic stability and prosperity than the establishment of such a principle.

It would provide an incentive to every employer to maintain more continuous production. It would give industrial workers steady purchasing power the year around.

This would mean steadier and more assured demand for the products of farm and industry, and greater prosperity for business and professional people in every farming and industrial community.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

There are all sorts of wolves of whom the modern Miss Red Riding Hood should beware, according to reliable authorities among the younger generation.

The big, bad wolf who huffs and puffs gets few dates nowadays, and still less does the wolf who acts like a grandma.

But the modern wolf has quite a range of other disguises and techniques.

He may try to sweep his victim off her feet by his vigor and audacity, or he may snuggle up to her sympathy with sighs and tales of woe.

He may be the strong, silent type or he may tell the story of his life at the drop of an eyelid. He may say he hates women, or he may be a wheedler and flatterer with quite a line.

The wolf-call may be a whistle, a yoo-hoo, a croon or a cry. In fact, there is no limit to the types of approach which may be used, though the objective is always the same.

★ ★ ★

If they want to keep the wolf from their door, Mr. and Mrs. America had better get wise to the many different disguises he may assume—and they might even get some tips on the general subject from their daughter.

These wolves are out to line their stomachs at our expense. But they have a lot of different approaches to this same objective.

The big bad boss wolf doesn't come right out nowadays and say he wants to cut your wages.

He goes to Congress and lobbies against excess profits taxation, for a sales tax and for relaxation of price controls, which is just approaching the same objective by another route.

★ ★ ★

As to the "line" used by these wolves who prowl around our doors, seeking to devour our sustenance, here are some samples:

There is the landlord lobby that complains of the "hardships" of rent control—and asks that it be relaxed a little here or there.

There are the food corporations and the big business "farm bloc," declaring that food subsidies are a hand-out which will destroy American enterprise.

There are the black marketeers who appeal to American "justice" and say there should be limitless rights of court appeal against OPA enforcement.

There are the industrialists, enjoying unprecedented profits, who say the workers are overpaid and that wages should remain frozen while price ceilings are raised.

And there are dozens of other selfish profiteering interests that are lobbying for higher prices for their particular products.

★ ★ ★

The usual line is to attack "bureaucracy," OPA "snoopers" and red tape, "usurpation of power," etc.

The young American who goes into the Army can take it. He is regimented and disciplined. He endures every imaginable hardship. He is ready to give his life for his country.

But the stay-at-home, according to these politicians, is a softy, who can't stand gas rationing and other restrictions necessary to win the war.

So they sidle up to the folks at home, suggesting new gripes they haven't even thought of, and offering to "free" them from "New Deal bureaucracy and regimentation."

But watch out for the wolf gleam in their eyes. If they have their way, the only freedom we'll get will be the freedom to pay higher and higher prices to line the pockets of war profiteers.

★ ★ ★

The huff-and-puff type of politician is also at large. He roars and rants and raves at labor, the Administration and everything else that stands in the way of unlimited profiteering.

But more subtle is the taffy line of the Taft type. They say they sympathize with labor's claims for higher wages, but prices should also be allowed to go up.

Of course, if price control is lifted or relaxed, wages will continue to be left behind by ever-increasing prices.

So labor is wise to all these "lines." It does not want the lid to be lifted on inflation. It asks only that wages be raised to the stable relationship with prices called for by the price control act, and that existing price controls be continued and strengthened.

Clowns with TNT

A lot of funny stories are being printed about the plans of polltax Senators to filibuster against the bill to repeal the polltax.

One of them brags that he has enough historical documents to keep him reading and speaking about 125 hours.

Others think they'll be cuter still with even more meaningless material to take up time.

In the midst of their country's greatest war crisis, when every minute of the time of Congress should be used to back up our fighting men with constructive legislative effort, these Senators propose to perpetrate the most senseless strike in history against their country and against the democracy for which we are fighting.

These Senatorial saboteurs are clowning with TNT. But the rest of the Senate can easily stop their antics by voting cloture.

Democracy is our most powerful weapon for victory. Ask your Senators to preserve the democratic efficiency of Congress by voting cloture, and to strengthen our democracy by speedily adopting the anti-polltax bill without amendments.

Peashooters

American democracy is a little bit too robust to be overthrown by the peashooters and petty plots of folks like Howard Smith and Martin Dies.

Both Congressmen have fired all the ammunition they can at the CIO Political Action Committee.

Dies collected all his pre-war duds to manufacture what he claimed was a big bombshell. But it was just the biggest dud of all.

Smith managed to get an FBI investigation of his charge that the CIO committee was violating the Corrupt Practices Act.

But the Dept. of Justice could only report that the CIO campaign to get out the vote, to encourage workers to exercise their democratic rights, and to promote intelligent political action for progressive purposes, is not prohibited by any federal law.

Smith is demanding more investigations, and Dies will doubtless continue to shoot off his mouth at every opportunity.

But they won't shake the confidence of American working people in their right to vote as they please and to engage in the political activity which is their birthright under our democratic institutions.

Name Murray on Anti-Bias Group

New York, Apr. 22—Revival of the Committee of Catholics for Human Rights with Supreme Court Justice Frank Murphy as honorary chairman and CIO Pres. Philip Murray on the honorary board of directors was announced this week by Professor Emmanuel Chapman, of Fordham University and Hunter College.

Among other CIO leaders serving on the committee are: Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey, Director of Industrial Union Councils John Brophy and Sec.-Treas. George F. Addes of the CIO United Auto Workers.

Dr. Chapman said that the committee, composed of more than 300 outstanding Catholics, was orignally organized in 1939 to combat anti-Semitism, that it suspended activities with the outbreak of war, and that its reorganization was made urgent "by numerous requests from members of the committee who pointed to the resurgence of intolerance at this time."

The Truth About Steel Towns! Depressions Bring Starvation

By FRED d'AVILA

Johnstown, Pa., April 22—This gray, saucer-shaped, isolated little city lives on steel. Most of its 65,000 people earn their living from the steel magnates and die early because of them.

Johnstown is typical of scores of other steel towns that alternately swim in false prosperity and sink in dismal depression. A case history of its people—almost any one of them—is a powerful argument for some system that will guarantee to workers in this vital industry a regularity of employment which will allow them to marry, raise children and properly feed, clothe and house their families.

Johnstown's record of human engineering — with its shabby houses, hungry bellies and industrial autocracy—is in sharp contrast to its boasting about the job that it has done in steel and concrete to control the flood waters of the two rivers whose tortuous "Y" winds through the heart of the city.

"It is now 'flood free Johnstown'," says publicity put out by business interests, which strive hard to make the public forget the 1889 flood of the Stony Creek and Little Conemaugh Rivers that swept nearly a thousand people to their deaths.

It is strange that these same businessmen, who make their living from the steelworkers, are not more concerned about the thousands of Johnstownites who grub for elusive security and die earlier than they should because they cannot find it.

I talked to two of these people, and to their families, whose bread winners' first breath was acrid Johnstown air, who romped on slag from the steel mills, and who have sweated out their lives working for the Frankensteen that knows no humanity, only profits.

Steady Workers

For better than a score of years apiece Sylvester "Becky" Harris and William Bivis have worked within the hills that guard this Western Pennsylvania town, whose glowing ingots and volcanic blast furnaces wink back at the stars that can penetrate the smoke from the mills.

Harris and Bivis are steady workers, like most of Johnstown's people. Both are members of the CIO United Steelworkers of America, and look to the union as their only hope for escape from the combination of circumstances that has tied them to their jobs—come boom times or depression—as surely as would chains made from the steel they manufacture.

Harris works for Bethlehem Steel, employing 13,500 workers, and Bivis works for Carnegie-Illinois, with 1,700 on the payroll. Both firms have contracts with the CIO steel union. Together, they constitute the only major source of employment in the city. When steel production drops, Johnstown drops with it.

Steel His Story

The record of Johnstown is the record of the Harris family, told haltingly by 49-year-old "Becky", staunch unionist, veteran of the 1919 steel strike, and president of USA Local 2633 at Bethlehem's wheel plant here.

Harris, who has light brown hair, hollow cheeks and a rather slight figure for a machinist, said that the ups and downs of the steel industry told the story of his life, that of his wife and the six children they have brought into the world. Harris' father before him worked for steel, two of his brothers are employed by Bethlehem and one in the Army used to be, and the husbands of three of his four sisters are tied to the industry too.

Seventeen continuous years Harris has worked for Bethlehem, and for 18 years he has unwillingly jammed his family into a four-room stucco house rented from the company for $20 a month—"we've been crowded," he said, "but it's the largest we've ever been able to afford."

In 1919 Strike

Harris bounced into the steel industry at the tender age of 17, tangled with the Cossaks (state cops) in the 1919 steel strike that failed because the AFL was committed to a policy of organizing by crafts instead of by industries, and shifted jobs several times in the vicinity before landing in his present one.

He's fourth generation American and his wife is second. A lot of the fellows he works with come from families that are just as well Americanized, and a lot of them are either immigrants or second generation kids of some of the Greeks, Italians, Slavs and natives of the Baltic states who have helped make up Johnstown's heterogenous population.

98% on Relief

The Harris family is in just about the best financial position it's ever been in, with "Becky" making a little more than $50 a week. But as Mrs. Harris said, they can remember the time when $11 a week he used to make would buy as much as the $50 buys now, with prices shooting for the stratosphere.

"Most everyone's working now," Harris said, "but it's easy to remember the time when 98 percent of the town was on relief. It started in 1930. We'd get one day a week, sometimes one and a half, at 63 cents an hour. You can't do much on $6.30 a week, not with a big family.

"In 1930 I was working on the county road project. I needed a pair of shoes, but the relief wouldn't give them to me because I was working one day a week at the mill.

"The stores were closing. It was hard to get credit unless you'd traded a long time at just one place. We lived on beans, potatoes and bread, mostly. We managed to afford a few fresh vegetables, a little fruit.

"Lots of time I came home with only $4.80 a week for pay. The company continued to deduct the $1.50 we had signed up for, for sick relief insurance. We had five children with us then, and my wife's mother came to stay with us. How we managed to feed eight people on what Bethlehem paid me is more than I can figure out.

"There was no point looking elsewhere for work. Everywhere else it was just the same. I couldn't afford to take a week off—we needed even the usual $6.30 too badly—we were that close to starvation.

"It was almost a year before the government gave us some work relief. The company trusted us for coal and rent—and some of the fellows are still paying off some of the depression debts. I owe $300 yet for rent. I'm paying it off at $10 a week.

"Milk for the kids? Don't make me laugh. We couldn't afford it. They were supposed to get a quart a day each, but they never have. We had a hard enough time getting flour for bread. We used to stand a half a day in line in all kinds of weather, sometimes a whole day, and if the place closed too soon, we sometimes used to have to come back the next day.

"To top it all off, the Christmas of 1933 we got a little more work—I made $27 that week—but Bethlehem took off $16 I owed them for coal. Everybody got treated the same way. The whole town was crazy mad about it, but without a union, what could you do?"

Harris said that in 1938 the mill went down again, and he and his family suffered a brief repetition of the 1930-34 crisis.

"I never'll forget it as long as I live, and I know a lot of other fellows won't either," Harris said vehemently. "I don't want to go through that again, and I know they don't either.

"We seem to have just one main goal in life—to get out of one depression just in time to get into another one. We're constantly in debt. Even now, we have to cash in our War Bonds just to get along. And we're supposed to be living in a silk shirt, champagne paradise!"

Harris' story is duplicated in almost every steel home in Johnstown—William Bivis', for instance, being one. Through the cooperation of officials of the CIO Steelworkers—Research Director Harold Ruttenberg, Publicity Director Vincent Sweeney, Regional Director Eugene Maurice, Field Representative Harry Baxendell, and William Buzzard—I visited the Bivis home, at nearby Park Hill, Pa.

No House to Rent

The Bivis family lives on the outskirts of Johnstown because they couldn't find a landlord in town who'd rent them a house for their 10 kids. They managed to borrow enough for a down payment on a gloomy, field stone house, and are laying $25 a week on the line to pay for it—"If they ever cut me from 48 hours a week to 40 I don't know how I'll manage to scrape up enough to continue payments," said Bivis gloomily.

Bivis had been married to his wife, Loretta, for 16 years. The same week they got married—1927 it was—the company dropped him from six days work to four.

Bivis, who's an intense, dark-haired, thin fellow, treasurer of USA Local 1288 and assistant grievance man at the foundry at Carnegie-Illinois Steel, has been a molder for 21 years—all of them worked for the one company. His 65-year-old father has worked for the same firm for 51 years. Together they make the oldest father-son combination in the company.

Bivis told a bitter tale of how his father 10 years ago was the highest paid molder in the firm—$1.27 an hour he made—and of how he was crushed on the job.

Tough Times

"He couldn't mold anymore," Bivis said, "so the management put him to work as a core maker, at 98 cents an hour. No compensation for his injuries either. He just got a job—at less pay."

Young Bivis has seen some plenty tough times in his 37 years. Last year, for instance, when the war boom was supposed to guarantee fabulous incomes to steel workers, he made exactly $2,073.74 gross—less than $2,000 with all the deductions for taxes and War Bonds and social security and sick relief. He had to feed a family at that time of nine kids on this. He has 10 kids now.

The children should get at least a quart of milk a day each. Bivis can afford to buy only three quarts for the whole family.

Bivis, like Harris, knows the insecurity of employment that recurrent depressions bring. Like Harris, his main goal is some sort of guarantee for his family — enough to eat, a place to stay, clothes for the kids and his wife and himself, and a little bit for recreation to enliven their barren lives.

No Relief

He remembers the 1930 depression well—it lasted up to 1936 for a lot of the fellows at Carnegie-Illinois.

"There was no work, and we couldn't get relief," he related as his family sat grimly by, some of the kids—four months to 15 years old—remembering how their bellies were crying for food, some of them anticipating things to come, and some too small yet to understand that they have been born into a world where those who control industry put profits before human lives.

"The Good Fellowship Club at the plant was supposed to take care of us. They did in a way. They gave us one box of food a week that was supposed to contain $2.10 worth of groceries, only lots of times it had less, and some of the stuff was spoiled. Because we got this, we couldn't get on relief.

No Milk for Kids

"Some of the fellows at the mill are still paying the company back for those boxes—at the full rate of $2.10 a box.

"There wasn't any milk in the boxes, and we didn't have any money to buy any for the four kids we had then. I managed to get a quart a day from a friend of mine in the Red Cross, but if I hadn't known him we wouldn't have got any.

"Right now, if I didn't get some help from my father, we'd be in a bad way, and if our department drops down to 40 hours a week instead of 48 we're working now, I don't know how I can continue to pay for this house."

The Bivis and Harris cases are typical, according to the CIO Steelworkers and to H. G. Andrews, editor of the Observer, who's seen this community grow under the paternalistic rule of the old individually owned steel companies into the hard boiled town it is, under domination by absentee owners who care nothing about the welfare of the workers, and are interested solely in profits.

$58 a Year!

The grim picture would not be complete without mentioning the fact that in some years the income of steelworkers has been as little as $58 a year—seemingly a fantastically low figure until one considers that sometimes employment is spotted one or two days a month throughout a year.

Both Bivis and Harris pointed out that the demoralizing and health-wracking effects of depression after depression could be eliminated if only the steelworkers were guaranteed some sort of annual wage.

"We don't expect to get rich on the job," they said, "but we do feel that we have the right to demand a decent standard of living, and that includes security for our kids so that they will be able to grow up into healthy Americans, willing and able to contribute their share to the welfare of the country as a whole as well as to themselves and their families."

Steel Town—U.S.A.—may be boom town for barkeeps but not for most workers in the basic steel industry. High prices make life difficult, and poignant memories of the 1930 depression cause thousands to worry about their postwar future. To guarantee that future, the CIO United Steelworkers of America has proposed the payment of an annual wage in the steel industry. The adjoining article shows the need for it.

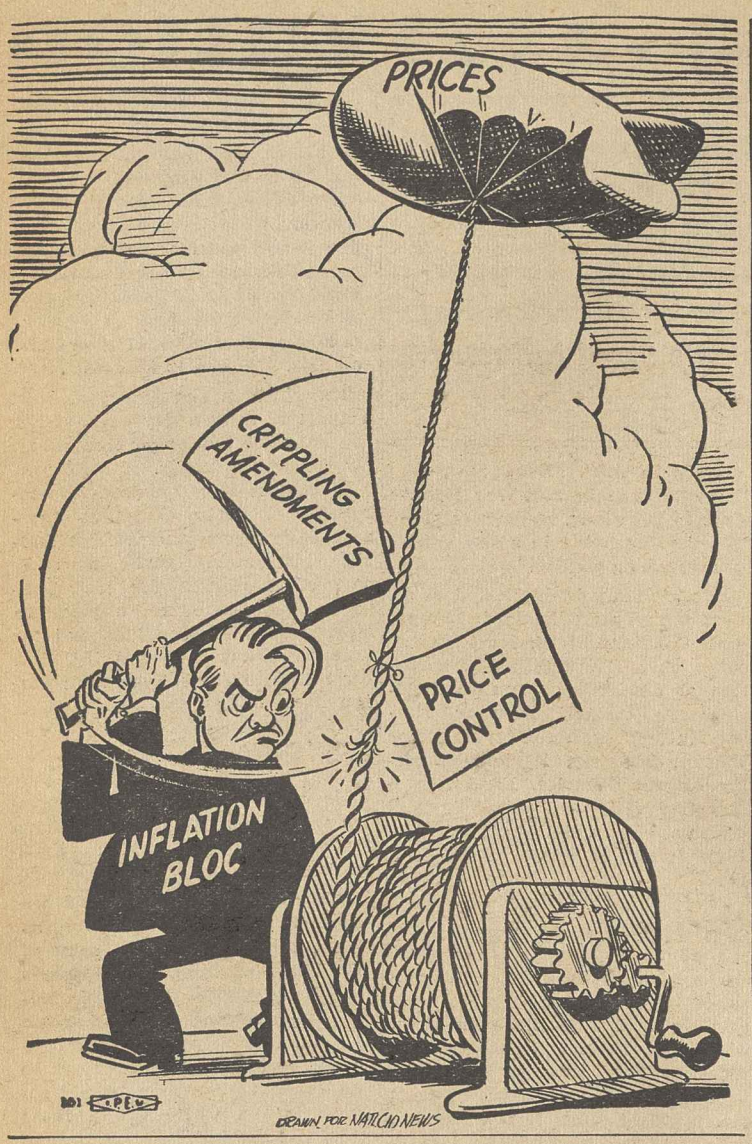
CIO Spearheads Price Control



Consumer Profits Soar, Says Carey

WASHINGTON, April 22 — Manufacturers of consumers goods—the things you and your wife buy every day—are collecting three times the profits before taxes that they used to rake in before the war, James B. Carey, secretary-treasurer of the CIO, told the Senate Banking Committee this week.

Carey, who followed CIO President Murray on the witness table to ask for extension of the Price Control Act which expires June 30, revealed also that retailers of consumer goods have increased their profit take 2.5 times and wholesalers four times.

In a strong plea for re-enactment of the law without amendments that would give profiteers "an open rate and a clear road," Carey said:

"Ten food chains, including several large ones, but not A&P, have increased their profit take 2.5 times over pre-war. Seven variety store chains, source of many household necessities for low-income families, made 1943 profits three times their pre-war figures.

"Fifteen clothing chains made in 1943 more than four times the profits they made pre-war. The combined profits of 13 meat packers in 1943 were almost 5.5 times their pre-war profits before taxes. Eight fruit and vegetable canners, including several large ones, made 4¼ times as much profit on their 1942 pack as they made pre-war."

Yet these same people are those who argue most persuasively for new loopholes in price control to bring their profits to even dizzier heights, Carey said.

A big source of these superprofits comes from cheating the consumers on quality, he pointed out.

"Low quality goods that should sell at low price ceiling sell at high ceilings, because manufacturers and distributors are able to pass off these goods on their customers," Carey declared.

"Let me point out that cheating on quality can add as much as 26 per cent to the retail cost of a can of peas. Cheating on both size and quality of eggs can add as much as 30 cents to a dozen of eggs. That's what evasion of OPA price ceilings can mean to the housewife."

In reiterating the CIO plea for renewal of the act, Carey ended his testimony by saying: "Let me say again, I have confidence that OPA wants to do the job. I have no confidence, however, that it will be able to do it unless Congress clearly and forcefully puts itself on the side of the people and against profiteering."

Egg Prices Soar, Even For Taft

Washington, April 22 — Talk about price control really got down to the price of eggs when CIO President Murray was testifying this week on renewal of the act before the Senate Banking Committee.

Murray was telling the Senators that workers felt they had the same right to protection from rising living costs that industrialists and farmers now enjoy, and had pointed out that farmers were guaranteed price increases on the things they sell as prices on the things they buy went up. No one, he said, had any objection to farmers getting protection—but workers wanted some too.

But not eggs, said Sen. Taft (R., O.). The price of eggs has been going down, so the farmer hasn't got anything like the maximum fixed for eggs over the past month.

Said Murray: "That may be true so far as it applies to the price of eggs today. But, Senator Taft, I am quite sure you will conceds that only a couple of months ago these eggs, recently down so low, were up very high.

"I know that my wife, and I am quite sure that your wife, if you do not own any chickens, and I do not, had to pay around 60 cents a dozen for eggs, and 65 cents a dozen only six or eight weeks ago."

Need More Control Not Less—Murray

WASHINGTON, April 22—"More vigorous price control, not less," is the need of the hour, CIO Pres. Philip Murray told Congress this week.

Leading a list of six CIO and Women's Auxiliary leaders, Murray testified for over three hours in a day long CIO session with the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, headed by Sen. Robert F. Wagner (D., N. Y.)

He was followed by CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey, UAW-CIO Pres. R. J. Thomas, UE Pres. Albert J. Fitzgerald and CIO Auxiliary Pres. Mrs. Faye Stephenson. Two rank-and-file witnesses, Mrs. Richard D. King, wife of an Ambridge, Pa., Steelworkers Union members, and Mrs. Annie Stein, Auxiliary member, also testified.

Murray's testimony, which was given extemporaneously and was preceded by a brief written statement, dealt in detail with the effect on living standards of the Little Steel wage formula in a situation of constantly rising prices.

BACKS FDR'S POLICY

In his opening statement, he made it clear that the CIO supports price control renewal and urges defeat of all weakening amendments that have been proposed or may come up.

"CIO has consistently supported and will continue to support the President's national economic stabilization policy," he said. "The October 2, 1942 law carried a mandate that wages and prices were to be maintained as of their relationship which prevailed on Sept. 15, 1942.

"This commitment has not been carried out. The cost of living has risen 43.5 per cent since Jan. 1, 1941. But wages have actually been stabilized. The promise that an extensive rollback of prices would be initiated to reestablish the relationship between wages and prices has not been fulfilled."

STEEL FORMULA RIGID

For these reasons, Murray pointed out, the CIO is asking for a general wage increase to make up the serious losses labor has suffered in the spiralling cost of living. Describing the rigidity of the Little Steel formula, Murray told the Senators:

"The application of the 15 per cent rule as it affects steelworkers definitely freezes those people to the 15 per cent rule of the WLB. It makes no difference to the Board under existing circumstances how far the cost of living goes up in the meantime.

"It is recognized by the BLS that living costs have gone up 23.5 per cent. Well, one would naturally assume that even if labor were prepared to accept the figures of the BLS and the law of Oct. 2 was applied, then labor would be entitled to an increase of approximately 8.5 per cent under the rigid application of this law.

"But the WLB has said. 'We do not care whether living costs have gone up 23.5 per cent, that makes no difference. It may be they've gone up 43.5 per cent. We intend to freeze wages and maintain them at the levels established according to the Little Steel formula.' "

PHILIP MURRAY

Citing the Bureau of Agricultural Economics study showing that farmers' living costs have gone up 42.6 per cent, Murray pointed out that farmers are compensated under parity (a formula for fixing farm prices) for this increase, which almost equals the 43.5 per cent rise in workers' living costs.

He was careful to point out that no one disagrees with this protection for the farmers, both under the law and in the price setting by the Agriculture Dept., but "the American farmer, operating under the Oct. 2 law, secures all of the benefits to which he is entitled under that law."

The workers, however, do not—not even the 23.5 per cent living cost increase as estimated by the BLS is returned to them. So, as Murray said:

"All that labor asks in seeking a continuation of the present law is decent treatment. It asks to be treated just as its neighbors are being treated. It is definitely opposed to inflation because it recognizes the dangers of inflation. It does not want to be placed in a position where it is going to be constantly discriminated against by agencies of the government in the administration of this law."

Sen. Taft (R., O.) one of the leading advocates of lynching price control by the amendment method, undertook to tangle with Murray in his discussion of profits—but quickly retreated when Murray threw the book at him, the book being U. S. Treasury figures and findings.

According to these figures, profits after taxes jumped 119 per cent in '41; 154 per cent in '42; 175 per cent in '43 and 198 per cent in '44. This, he added, was after re-negotiation of war contracts—the process by which the government tries to recapture some of the more flagrant excess rake-off.

Taft then undertook to argue against the facts of life in trying to knock down the figures on the share of the national income going to profits and wages. Here again Murray floored him with U. S. figures showing that industry's share had almost doubled in '43, while labor's share had gone down over five per cent.

Dipping into the guaranteed profits feature of the current tax law, Murray showed that corporations could not possibly lose money, no matter how much they operated in the red, because the Treasury would make up their losses.

Taft, in disputing this also, stumbled around to a half-hearted and grudging agreement with Murray, saying in the end: " . . . since the postwar period is the result of the war period also, that (the profit) was not really an earning and you would have losses the following year, but I quite agree there may be a discrimination there."

Set May 17-24 As 'Price Week'

WASHINGTON, April 22—May 17-24 was set as Save Price Control Week at the "Fighting 60" conference here.

The conference, attended by delegates from workers, farmers, auxiliaries, consumers, church and other civic groups, urged united community action to rally the nation for renewal of the price control act without crippling changes.

Battle for All American People

Auxiliaries Back CIO Testimony

Washington, April 22—In a dramatic demonstration of what every housewife knows, Mrs. Faye Stephenson, president of the CIO Women's Auxiliaries, showed Senators now studying Price Control Act renewal just what the phrase "quality deterioration" means.

Holding up two children's dresses, one bought in 1942 and one bought two weeks ago, she taught the Senators a volume about the way housewives and parents are being cheated by chiseling manufacturers.

Both dresses were the same kind—cheap cotton affairs. One cost $1 at Sears two years ago, the other cost $3 two weeks ago. The 1942 dress had been worn and washed and ironed for two years. It was still intact. The 1944 model had been laundered once—and was falling apart.

The seams were gone out of the new dress. It had shrunk so its five-year-old owner couldn't get into it. The stitching had given away. The hem had fallen out—and so on.

That's what the CIO means when it talks about "quality deterioration"—and why, as Mrs. Stephenson said "it's obvious that without some sort of tie between price and quality, you cannot hold the line."

The Senators were interested, looked at the dresses and shook their heads. All except Sen. Taft (R., O.), author of the amendment forbidding grade labelling of goods. He had to leave the hearings early, to go to the opening game of the baseball season, and Sen. Maybank (polltaxer, S. C.) who simply walked out when the dresses were produced, without saying where he had to go.

Says Bills Make Life Nightmare

Washington, April 22—"The financial problem hangs over us at all times like a cloud. We are very conscientious about our bills. At my house the bills are paid before the groceries are bought. Lately it is like living in a nightmare trying to keep up with them."

This is a letter from a CIO Womens Auxiliary member, wife of a CIO Textile Union man in Cumberland, Md. With it, Faye Stephenson, auxiliary president, closed an appeal to Congress to renew the Price Control Act without crippling amendments, with needed changes.

CIO Auxiliary interest in price control went back to 1941, when the national Auxiliary Congress was formed and took for its first task the job of mobilizing "the wives, sisters, daughters and mothers of our CIO members throughout the country to work for passage of the price control law."

Since that time, Mrs. Stephenson pointed out, CIO women have worked on volunteer price and ration boards, as checkers, as unpaid workers for effective control in the corner stores and neighborhoods where control policies must be made to stick.

Stressing the need to keep and extend dollars and cents ceilings, the only kind that can be readily seen and understood by the consumer, Mrs. Stephenson said:

"Food price increases have been less this year than before the dollars and cents ceilings went into effect . . . No other system enables the buyers to check on the legal prices that may be charged."

Price Control 'Must Aid' to War—Thomas

WASHINGTON, April 22—Labor is not fighting for price control because it wants more frosting on its own cake, but "because it is an essential part of the war program," R. J. Thomas, head of the largest union in the nation, told Senators studying renewal of the Price Control Act this week.

R. J. THOMAS

Before going into the main part of his testimony—which concentrated on the need for continuing rent control—the president of the CIO United Auto Workers Union took a crack at certain Congressmen who try to set workers and farmers against each other on the question of prices and wages.

Nearly a quarter of the 1,250,000 members of the UAW have their folks living on farms or live on farms themselves, he said. "The CIO and my own union, the UAW, have made abundantly clear that they stand for fair and adequate prices to farmers.

"We know some of the problems of farmers, we know the difficulties under which they now operate due to manpower, feed, fertilizer and other shortages . . . The milk farmers and the labor movement in Michigan have cooperated in an effort to get higher prices for milk producers and to maintain a low price level for consumers."

Schemes to jerk price lids "for the benefit of farmers" usually turn out to be schemes to give all the gravy to the monopolists "and reduce both the farmer and the worker to a sharecropper's standard of living," he said.

Turning to rent control, Thomas, who is chairman of the National CIO Housing Committee, revealed that no union witnesses were allowed to appear at the Smith Committee set up to "investigate" OPA while real estate agents were given a free hand to smear one of the most successful efforts at price control.

LOBBYISTS' PRESSURE

These high-pressure lobbyists were responsible for introducing a series of amendments that would completely wreck rent control, Thomas said. Three of the amendments would turn it over completely to local officials, thus breaking up any attempt at uniform, national control. Five would make it easier to evict tenants, and three would encourage sky-high speculation in buying and selling houses.

This pressure is put on despite the fact that real estate was never in a better profit position, he pointed out. Vacancies have dropped to zero in war areas. Repairs are no longer being made. Previous services the landlord had to give the tenant are forgotten.

On top of this, net income from apartment houses is up 27 per cent over 1939—on smaller properties (one to four families) it is up 45 per cent.

"Labor, industry and even the real estate lobby agree that present rent regulations do regulate," Thomas said. "Isn't that what Congress wanted? The rent control program can act as a foundation for other forms of wartime price control.

"We therefore urge that your committee turn a deaf ear to those few profiteering landlords who are seeking to undermine the stability of the program in an effort to increase their already inflated profits."

OPA Amendments Would Cripple Control

WASHINGTON, April 22—Innocent looking amendments to the Price Control Act are booby-traps that would blow price control sky-high if Congress lets them slip into the act, Albert J. Fitzgerald, president of the CIO United Electric al, Radio and Machine Workers, told the Senate Banking and Currency Committee this week.

Fitzgerald spoke as one of a series of CIO leaders following CIO President Murray at the witness table. Such amendments, he said, were simply "efforts to raise the cost of living" as frankly admitted by Sen. Taft, one of their leading sponsors.

"Over 35 bills have been introduced to amend the Act which would put a price on the continued existence of price control," he said. "Some would raise prices by direct legislative act, others by indirection.

"Many of the latter appear to be innocent, plausible proposals if you approach them from the point of view of a particular price or rent ceiling, if you disregard the basic inter-relationships of prices, profits, wages, taxes and savings that were so aptly set forth in the President's seven point program."

Briefly dissecting these amendments, Fitzgerald first pointed out that the scheme of taking the control lid off so-called "luxury" items would immediately result in a great rush of production on non-essential goods and an even greater dearth of the things workers and farmers need to buy to keep on the job.

Similarly, plans to have OPA allow a price increase to any producer who could show he was losing money under the ceiling would result "in inflation without limit," plus an impossible administrative situation.

The most serious of the phony amendments, Fitzgerald said, was the scheme to let the Federal courts take every individual appeal from an OPA ruling that might be made by any single producer or retailer. This would result in hopeless legal tangles, he said, out of which chiselling elements would produce a chaos of profiteering. A similar proposal was rejected when the act was first written in 1942, and should be rejected again.

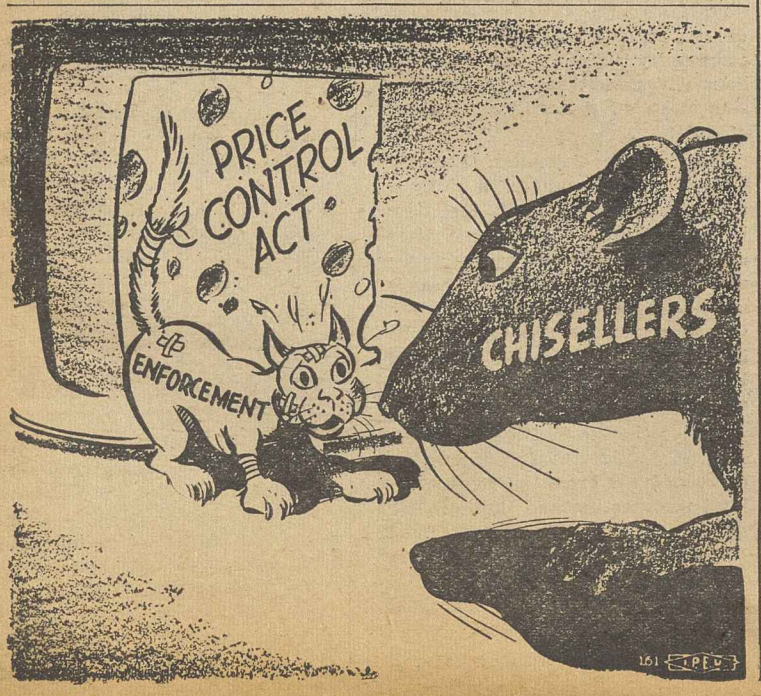
Under proposed schemes to weaken enforcement—already inadequate — Fitzgerald hit most sharply at the "block-buster" proposal to eliminate triple damage suits now provided to check violators.

"This is completely inconsistent with the task of cracking down on black markets and price chiselers," he said. "Any removal of the threat of triple damages would add tremendously to the enforcement burden of OPA."

Finally, Fitzgerald took a sharp crack at the bald proposal to lift prices on such things as milk, oil, corn and cotton. This, he pointed out, completely exposed the amendment boys for what they are—enemies of the whole idea of effective price control.

"I urge that you strip bare these various amendments, often complicated and technical in form, and reject them for what they are—efforts to raise the cost of living," he said.

"Re-enactment of the law, free of crippling restrictions, would be the greatest support that Congress could give to the efforts of our soldiers and sailors who are about to embark on the invasion of Hitler's fortress."



Farmers Speak for Control

Washington, April 22—Here's what farmers feel about price control—and it flatly contradicts the lies put out by the inflation bloc in Congress. It came out at the "Fighting 60" conference of workers, farmers and all consumers held here this week. Here's what officers of six leading farm outfits said:

"We know what inflation means as no other group in our country and we don't want to see another round of price rises now. The ceilings on farm commodities are now generally satisfactory.

"There is no other way to keep price control than by using subsidies judiciously applied, and our experience leads us to the firm belief that authority and funds for such subsidies must be continued and directed to increase production."

The statement was signed by M. F. Dickinson, Natl. Farmers Union; Ralph O. Brown, Agricultural Mobilization Committee; Father George Higgins, Natl. Catholic Rural Life Conference; Robt. Handschin, Farmers Union Grain Terminal Assn.; Meyer Parodneck, Consumer-Farmer Milk Coop., and Charles J. Coe, editor, "Facts for Farmers."

United to Back Price Control

TELLING THE SENATORS: Philip Murray tells the Senate Banking and Currency Committee the facts of price control. Seated opposite Murray are Sens. Taft (R., O.), Radcliffe (D., Md.), Wagner (D., N. Y.), Murdock (D., Utah) and Barkley (D., Ky.).

CIO, AFL, RR Unions Fight To Protect Act

WASHINGTON, April 22—The American people expect Congress to renew the Price Control Act intact, with enough money to OPA for enforcement, the three labor organizations of the nation said this week.

The statement, issued jointly by the CIO, the AFL and the Railway Labor Executives Association, linked "organized labor, the working farmer, the white collar and professional group" in the united demand for renewal without the weakening amendments that have been parachuted on Congress for weeks past.

At the same time, the three labor organizations said: "A restoration of the relationships between prices and wages which existed Sept. 15, 1942 is absolutely essential to make the law work equitably and build the morale of American workers to the highest degree of efficiency."

"Nobody in this country today dares to tell the people openly that he proposes to wreck price control," the statement said. "But today there are before this committee (Senate Banking, now holding hearings on the act) and the House committee scores of weakening amendments which, if passed, will do just that.

"Organized labor, like all other groups representing the people, repudiates all of these attempts and insists that Congress stand firm on continuation of the present law intact."

The joint statement made a strong plea for adequate enforcement funds to enable OPA to carry out rigid control, extend rationing and cut down on profiteering.

The American troops want to bathe, shave and clean their teeth immediately on return from front line action or battle. To meet their demand, the American Red Cross in the last year supplied them with 7,500,000 tubes of toothpaste, over 2,871,000 toothbrushes and 36,000,000 razor blades.

Explode Inflation Gap Theory

Washington, April 22 — More proof that the "inflationary gap" theory is merely a gap in some people's mental processes was furnished by the most conservative possible source this week—the current report of the governors of the Federal Reserve Bank.

According to the "gap" theory, inflation is caused by wages. People have wages and they can not buy things because consumers' goods are short, therefore they bid up the price of the things they can't get and you have inflation. The theory used to be more popular than it is now.

"This surplus spending power has been added to the public's large holdings of liquid assets (savings, bonds, stocks) and has not been used to bid actively for the available supply of goods."

This is caused, the governors say, by "increased taxes, government controls over prices and rationing, war loan drives, payroll savings plans, scarcity of many types of goods, and a public attitude that has favored saving rather than spending."

In other words, those that have spare money aren't spending it—they're hanging onto it.

Steelworker's Wife Tells of Price Hikes

WASHINGTON, April 22—Plain evidence that the cost of living—and simple living at that—has risen enormously since 1941 was offered to the Senators on the Banking Committee here this week by the wife of a CIO Steelworker, Mrs. Richard King

Mrs. King brought her grocery bills for comparable weeks in the two years 1941 and 1944 to the witness table and read to the Senators just what it takes now to feed a family of three compared to what it took three years ago. Here is part of that evidence—some of it showing even shocking differences in just one year:

Potatoes: In 1941, they were 31 cents a peck. Today, 63 cents.

Oranges: In 1941, 29 cents a dozen. Today, 65 cents.

Cheese: In 1943, two pounds for 54 cents. Today, two for 98 cents.

And on clothing, especially work clothes, the kind that steelworkers have to buy in large amounts:

Work gloves: In 1941, 21 cents a pair. Today, 35 cents—when you find them.

Safety shoes: In 1943, $4.75 a pair. Today, $5.50.

"And shirts have gone up, I know a dollar, just practically a dollar on a working shirt. Soap is another item that was 20 cents in 1941 and is 26 cents now."

The Committee wanted to know about wage increases—hadn't the Steelworkers got an increase to help cover these food price jumps? 5 cents an hour on the base rate in 1942. "Yes," she added with considerable understatement, "and if we were large eaters this would not cover it."

MRS. RICHARD KING

Need Strong Unions For Peace—Golden

Philadelphia, Apr. 22 — Strong unions must be built up in the conquered Axis countries after the war if the world is to be secure against another war in the future, Clinton S. Golden, assistant to Pres. Philip Murray of the United Steelworkers of America, said here in a speech before the American Academy of Political and Social Science.

Rebuilding of labor unions in Germany, Italy and Japan, Golden declared, would be the best possible guarantee that these countries would become democractic, peace-loving nations.

"Even during the transition period," he said, "unions will help police any disarmament arrangements in Germany or Italy or Japan. Unions will function in the factories and chemical plants. Workers know a tractor from a tank. They can distinguish poison gas and insecticide.

"The men in the plants will be much better informed on what is going on within their nation than any international commission or occupying force can hope to be."

Golden, who is now on leave from the CIO, is vice-chairman of the War Manpower Commission.

Barbers Win 48-Hour Week

Brooklyn, N. Y., April 22—A new era will open for the barbers on May 1 when the 48-hour, 6-day week goes into effect, the CIO Barbers & Beauty Culturist Union of America, Local 2, announced here this week.

This new gain, "not even dreamt about by many barbers," states the union, was won by CIO Barbers Local 2 as the result of a settlement of a dispute with the Kings and Queens Counties Master Barbers Assn., which was turned over to an arbitrator of the N. Y. Dept. of Labor.

The arbitrator's decision also called for one week's paid vacation after 51 consecutive weeks' work. In addition, the local has won a full day off on seven legal holidays.

Warns $'s Cents Ceilings Are Vital

WASHINGTON, April 22—Main problem of price control enforcement "rests on the community price lists, the dollars and cents ceilings," Senators at the Banking Committee were told this week by a volunteer OPA worker from the CIO Women's Auxiliaries.

The volunteer, Mrs. Annie Stein of the Federal Workers Auxiliary, told the Senators in detail just how local retail enforcement works—and added her plea for continuance and extension of the fixed ceilings.

Quoting from her experience with retailers, she cited grocers who have told her as an OPA worker: "OPA fixed ceiling prices are OK. They're fair and anyone can make a good living using these prices. They save me trouble in pricing my goods. The fellow who cannot make a living on OPA ceiling prices should not be in business. Give me more dollars and cents ceilings and I'll guarantee you 100 per cent compliance."

Consumers like this kind of price fixing too, Mrs. Stein said—and as a housewife and mother, she added: "When a housewife knows just what she should pay she can do the best job of anybody in getting compliance right there in the store."

Mrs. Stein's testimony drew praise from the Senators, one of them, Sen. Murdock (D., Utah), said: "As one member of Congress I am very much impressed with the contribution you are making." The praise was echoed by Sen. Wagner (D., N. Y.), the chairman, and Sen. Hawkes (R., N. J.).

Australian Delegates To London Parley

Sydney, April 22 (ALN) — After keen balloting, the Australian Council of Trade Unions this week elected Charles Crofts, recently retired ACTU secretary, and Ernie Thornton, general secretary of the Ironworkers Union, as delegates to the world labor congress opening in London June 5. Until his retirement last year, Crofts was secretary of the ACTU since its formation in 1923.

Give War Plants To Vets—Ickes

San Francisco, Apr. 22—A novel idea for a war bonus for returning veterans was advanced last week by Harold Ickes. The Secretary of the Interior suggested that Government-built war plants worth billions of dollars be turned over after the war as a bonus payment to veterans for ownership and operation in competition with private industry.

Such a step, he said, would give the 10,000,000 young people a share in the stock for which they had risked their lives.

The People Call On Their Congress

WASHINGTON, April 22—A real people's lobby walked into Congress this week, sat down in the House Caucus Room, and told their Representatives just why and how much they wanted price control.

The meeting called by the "Fighting 60," more formally known as the Congressional Committee to Protect the Consumer, brought more than 300 men and women from unions, auxiliaries, churches, veterans, consumers groups, farms and big and little cities to a capital that all too seldom sees lobbies that are for the people, not against them.

The meeting was actually a fighting convention, with rank and file delegates taking the floor to tell what they had done in their communities, what they proposed to do, and to urge and re-urge united community action of all—workers, housewives, farmers, businessmen—to stave off the military disaster of inflation.

One of the delegates, Leonard Coolidge of Baltimore, a seaman and member of the Nat'l. Maritime Union, told of coming home after a six-month trip during which he was bombed four times. His wages amounted to about $1,000 for the voyage. How, he asked, could he be expected to keep his wife and two kids ashore if price control was smashed.

Father George G. Higgins, of the Natl. Catholic Rural Life Conference, said his organization was behind the meeting and the fight for price control 100 per cent, and that he and the conference were working to dispel the myth that labor and the farmers were divided on this or other issues.

The meeting also heard from a wounded veteran of the Cassino fighting, Christian Topal of Toledo, O., who said: "If we don't hold the line, what will become of the dependents of servicemen? We cannot break down the morale of the soldiers."

The meeting was chaired by Reps. Scanlon and McMurray, who head the committee, and was endorsed by Sens. Wagner, Barkley, and Guffey, and many Congressmen. Rep. Wright Patman (D., Tex.) was a featured speaker, warning of the disaster that would come if we had inflation.

Further expressions of farmers support for price control came from E. F. Dickinson of the Natl. Farmers Union, Ralph O. Brown of the Natl. Agricultural Mobilization, Meyer Parodneck, Milk Cooperative, New York, and Charles J. Coe, editor of Facts for Farmers.

The meeting set May 17-24 as Price Control Week, with the main theme stated in the resolution: "We pledge ourselves to bring home to the American public an ever sharper understanding that effective price control is an essential part of the war effort. Interference with our price control program is a direct blow at the war."

Hail Jews For Heroic Ghetto Fight

New York, Apr. 22—The first anniversary of the Battle of the Warsaw Ghetto was solemnly observed by thousands of organized workers in New York City last week.

On April 19, 1943, 40,000 heroic Jewish men and women took to the streets of the Warsaw ghetto, and armed only with small arms and a few light machine guns smuggled in by the underground, fought savagely and bitterly against Nazi tanks, flame throwers and cannon.

More then 300,000 Jews lived in Warsaw before the war. In desperation at the horror they were living through, those who were left revolted. Only old men, women and children survived the battle. They were slaughtered by the Nazis. the Nazis.

CIO Pres. Philip Murray, on the occasion of the anniversary, said:

"I should like to renew the pledge of the CIO to support the Jewish people in their fight for survival and freedom.

"In memory of our valiant brothers who dared defy the terrible Nazi military machine with their small amount of smuggled rifles and their unequaled amount of courage, we should at this time resolve to complete the job they so bravely began, by so eliminating their torturers that none shall ever rise again to mock their heroism.

"In the name of humanity and common justice we shall restore the dignity of these people who died to preserve freedom and equality by restoring the hallowed ground on which they met their death to freedom and peace."

Unions Form 4 Freedoms' Cornerstone

Washington, April 22—The right to organize in democratic unions is a cornerstone of the Four Freedoms, CIO Pres. Philip Murray told the newly revived Italian Confederation of Labor this week.

"After our common victory is won, it is the purpose of American labor, as it is the purpose of labor in all the United Nations, to assure our brother workers in all enemy-occupied countries the full guarantees of the Four Freedons—freedom of speech, of worship, of press and assembly.

"A cornerstone of these freedoms is the right to organize in democratic trade unions of the workers' own choice. At the coming United Nations Labor Conference in London, the CIO will take a leading place in the discussions and proposals to this end that will be placed before the United Nations for action.

Re-Employment of Veterans

A Statement to the Families and Friends of 15,000 Harvester Employes in Service

(From an address by Fowler McCormick, president of International Harvester Company, to Company executives, meeting at Chicago.)

"I WANT to talk about one of the war jobs that we have to do and are going to have before us for many, many months. I am speaking of the question of the re-employment of servicemen in our organization. The only thing I want to do this evening is to outline to you the broad aspects of the policy that I think you should follow. That policy divides itself very simply under three headings.

"In the first place, there is the attitude we should have towards these returning men and women. I am going to try to characterize that attitude and I know I shall not do it adequately, but I am going to say that the first characteristic of that attitude should be that we naturally want to welcome those veterans back. We will be glad to have them back. We appreciate what they are doing for us in their service, and the first thing for us to express to them, in the deepest sincerity, is the fact that they are welcome back.

"The second characteristic of our attitude should be naturalness. Our attitude should not be one of curiosity. It certainly should not be sentimental.

"After all, what those men want and what they certainly are entitled to is that we help them to become again self-supporting civilians. That must be our goal—to help them become civilians and self-supporting.

"You men know as well as I do the difficulty of the transition from civilian to army life, and you know that it is almost as difficult to become a civilian again after you have been in military service for a long time. Just that job itself is difficult enough.

"The thing we have to try to help them do is to become self-supporting. They do not want charity, God knows. They do not deserve so little. They deserve our help to become self-supporting again.

"So, to sum up, the first point in regard to returning servicemen is the matter of our attitude. Let us make it human. Let us make it healthy. Let us make it natural. Let us not have any sentimentality. Let us make it realistic and natural and warm.

"THE second point, I think, is that when this man comes back we must sit down and talk with him. First we must study his previous record with us. What did he do before he went away? What position was he in? What kind of a fellow was he? That is the first thing I think we should know.

"The second thing I think we should know, and this is more difficult to get, is the man's record and his experiences while he has been in the service. We will get fragmentary records from the services. At a recent meeting in New York I heard that the Army was not going to put out detailed medical information. They may change that, but at any rate we can get some records. But more difficult yet is to find out what happened inside that man, through his experiences.

"And the next thing we should determine is what does this man want to do? What kind of work will he fit into best? What would make him the happiest?

"I just want to cite you a couple of examples to illustrate the difficulty of the task before us. I will take a couple of extreme cases. You are going to have some men who, at your factories or branches, were performing some rather unskilled tasks. Maybe the man was a young warehouse man. Maybe he was in the repair department. Possibly he worked in the service station. He got into the Army or he got into the Navy. He got good training. He was under a good commander and something within him clicked and he went ahead. He was promoted. He went into further training. He went to school, became an officer. He did well. Let us say he was under fire and distinguished himself in action.

"He comes back to you a captain, a major, even a lieutenant-colonel. Now, what are you going to do with that man? There is part of your problem. That is part of what you have to think about, what we all have to think about.

"Now let us take a reverse case. Here is a man who perhaps was a young factory foreman, or an office manager, intelligent and a fine fellow. He was unfortunate in the service. He did not click. He had a discouraging time. Maybe he had experiences he could not quite adapt himself to, could not quite get up to. He comes back to you not as good a man as he was when he left you. That is possible. What are you going to do with him?

"Those are two kinds of cases. There will be an infinite variety and I think, gentlemen, one thing this problem is going to require is that you give these men your personal attention. You cannot put these men through some kind of wringer or machine. You are going to have to see that these veterans are treated as they deserve to be.

"THE third point is that, when you have gone through the process of inquiry, you have the question of where you are going to put that man. Does he need training? Has he been injured? You will have to have some rehabilitation training and there are a lot of problems involved which I am not going into this evening because all that will be taken up with you in detail later.

"The thing I do want to leave with you is the fact that those men were and are Harvester men. They are Americans who served their country. They fought for us, they served for us and they deserve the best that we have got. I know you will give it to them."

International Harvester's policy for the re-employment of veterans, as expressed above, has been translated into a definite program which is now in operation at every Harvester plant, raw materials operation and sales branch. Briefly, our program is:

Every Harvester employe honorably discharged from military service, desiring re-employment by the Company, and making proper application, must be offered (1) his former position or a position of like seniority, status and pay; or if this is not possible, (2) some other available position for which his seniority and ability qualify him, at the same location where he formerly worked; or if this is not possible, (3) some other available position for which he is qualified, at some other Company location; or (4) if he is physically or otherwise handicapped by reason of his war service and cannot qualify immediately for employment, he shall be offered special training or other appropriate rehabilitation designed to prepare him for eventual employment. It is the Company's objective to provide a job for every qualified Harvester veteran and to try to help every Harvester veteran qualify for a job. INTERNATIONAL HARVESTER COMPANY, 180 N. Women's Stake in The Elections

By VERDA W. BARNES
Director, Women's Division, CIO Political Action Committee
(Special to The CIO NEWS)

New York, April 22—Many people have asked me: "What makes you think more women will vote in November than ever before?"

Here's what I have told them: Women are more aware of the need to vote than they ever have been before. In 1940, about 42 per cent of the voters were women. In 1944, it has been estimated that 60 per-cent of the voters will be women.

This is not due solely to the large numbers of men in the armed forces and the merchant marine who will be unable to vote under existing state and federal legislation. It is also due to the increasing interest of women in the political life of the nation. More than ever, they are aware of their political responsibilities.

What causes this increasing interest? First of all, millions of women are going into industry to help produce the materials of war. For the first time, they are facing the problems which men in industry and agriculture have always faced—problems of wages and hours, of working conditions transportation, housing.

In addition, they have to meet special problems due to their sex. Will they receive equal pay for equal work? Will they have the special facilities and medical care which they need? Will they find child care centers for their youngsters?

Working mothers know the pressing need for more child care centers, supervised recreational facilities, more school lunch programs, adequate medical facilities. And for Negro women — and other women faced with racial discrimination — these problems are increased hundredfold.

Working women do not want national leaders who either ignore these problems or turn them into attacks on labor with cries of "absenteeism," "Juvenile delinquency" and so on. they want leaders who recognize unhealthy conditions and work toward their solution.

But it is not just women in industry who are taking a greater interest in the political life of the nation. Every woman who tries to stretch her household money to buy adequate food and clothing for her family has a stake in the November elections. Every housewife knows first hand the need for effective price control, subsidies to the producers who need them and adjusted wages to the workers to fulfill the promises of the Price Control Law of Oct. 2, 1942. And she knows that stabilization depends upon the election of a government that wants stabilization.

These housewives and working women have still another interest in what leaders are elected in November elections. Most of these women have husbands, sweethearts, brothers or sons in the armed forces. In many homes, women will have to voice the vote for the entire family unless legislation is passed making it possible for servicemen to vote.

They will have to say for their men as well as for themselves what leaders they want. And they will want leaders who will map an extensive program of rehabilitation for returning servicemen. Wives and mothers want to make sure that war veterans can work and live as free men in a democracy — not as apple peddlers on windy street corners.

People Want Price Control—No Fooling

By ELEANOR FOWLER
Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

This week has been save-the-price-control-act week in Washington, and the CIO auxiliaries have been doing their part.

Faye Stephenson, national president of the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO, made quite an impression on the Senate Banking and Currency Committee when she showed the Senators two dresses bought by an auxiliary member.

One cost $1 in April, 1942. It had been washed about 50 times and still had a lot of wear in it. The other, of very similar material and design, was bought in April, 1944, for $3. It had been washed once and the seams had parted in two places.

This was part of the auxiliary plea to the Senators to strengthen, not weaken price control. Following the wonderful testimony of CIO Pres. Philip Murray and other CIO leaders, the auxiliary witnesses urged the reenactment of the price stabilization act with no weakening amendments.

They also pointed out that price control has been most effective on food, where dollars and cents ceiling prices had been put on commodities, and least effective on household goods where there have been few such ceilings.

Annie Stein, Federal Workers Auxiliary member of Washington, D. C., showed the committee from the practical experience of her ten months work as labor representative on a price panel how effective dollars and cents ceilings are.

VICIOUS CIRCLE

She told them that her panel had given up checking prices not under dollars and cents ceilings unless they got consumer complaints. And pointed out that there was a vicious circle because consumers didn't often complain because they had so little idea what the price should be.

There are 105 grocers in her area, Mrs. Stein told the Senators and only about four of them are conscious violators of the regulations. The rest make mistakes and about 20 of them are not very careful in observing regulations. One reason they're not more careful, she thought, is because the OPA enforcement staff is so small that it just can't spend any time on these small violators. It's also hard to prove a case in court because OPA can't make test purchases to use as evidence.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Stephenson urged the committee to consider giving OPA authority to bring civil suits in small claims courts on the basis of test purchases made by enforcement officials. This, they felt, would strengthen observance of regulations by retail stores enormously.

CONGRESSWOMAN CITES INCREASES

Congresswoman Mary T. Norton, in addressing the conference to save the Price Control Act, on April 19, the day after the CIO witnesses testified in the Senate, emphasized some of the very same points.

"Many foods have been under dollars and cents ceilings," she said, "and they haven't gone up much this past year, but look at my pocket book. I bought this bag two years ago. I know I didn't pay more than $6 for it. The other day I priced one like it. It was $15.95."

In fact, all over the country women are burnt up about the way prices on clothing and essential household items have skyrocketed.

Unite Against VD

Go to Good Doctor, Not Quack, for VD

By WALTER C. CLARKE, M. D.

(Third of a series of articles on venereal disease by the Executive Director of the American Social Hygiene Association, a national voluntary health agency closely teamed up with the Army and Navy in the wartime campaign to combat syphilis and gonorrhea and all conditions favoring their spread.)

It cannot be stressed too often in this series of articles that good health is not served up on a silver platter. You must take a lively interest in your own well being and do something about it. You should seek the most benefit to yourself and your family from the health program of your local health department and of your trade union. You should go to your private doctor for regular physical check-ups.

People do not expect bone fractures to mend by themselves. They immediately go to a doctor. There is every reason to act in this sensible manner when gonorrhea is contracted. Medical authorities can put to use their effective method of treating gonorrhea only when people come to them for examinations and treatments.

SIGNS OF TROUBLE

Gonorrhea, which is mainly a local disease of the sex organs, is caused by a germ known as the gonococcus. It strikes at least three times as many people as syphilis and is highly contagious until completely cured. Cured once, it can be contracted again and again. A burning sensation on passing water, followed by a discharge within two to ten days after infection are the usual first symptoms.

Found and treated in its early stages, gonorrhea can be cured in almost all cases, and the danger of serious complications is avoided. People get gonorrhea through sexual relations with someone who is infected. Neglected gonorrhea often prevents men and women from having children. It can also lead to serious internal disorders.

Gonorrhea is able to do so much damage because of its deceptive nature. After its acute stage, it tends to pass into a quiet period, often leading to the mistaken belief that the danger of infection has passed. Only a doctor—after thorough tests—can tell whether gonorrhea has been cured.

EFFECTIVE TREATMENT

By use of the sulfa drug, great advances have been brought about in the treatment and cure of gonorrhea. Today, where these drugs are administered by a physician, early cases of gonorrhea can be cured within one to two weeks. But it takes much longer to make sure that a cure has really been achieved. Furthermore, these drugs may cause serious damage—even death—if used without the supervision of a physician.

The fight of the United Steelworkers of America to change the "Little Steel" formula is the fight of all American Labor. The inequities are so glaring and the case has been ably presented by Pres. Philip Murray and associate officers of this splendid organization. Labor everywhere is affected and will support this fight.

Pa. CIO Backs 4th Term, Urges Political Action

By JACQUELINE BROPHY

YORK, Pa., Apr. 22—Political action was the keynote this week of the Pennsylvania CIO Council convention, both in the addresses of John Brophy, Van A. Bittner and other speakers, and in the resolutions adopted by the delegates. The convention urged President Roosevelt to seek a fourth term.

Labor must make its influence felt "as never before in the councils of the great political parties," stated Brophy, national director of CIO Industrial Union Councils. "We can see to it, and we must see to it, that the programs of those parties are brought nearer and nearer, as we organize more and more effectively, to the announced programs of organized labor in America."

Bittner, assistant to the president of the United Steelworkers of America, declared that the 1944 elections would "not only determine the life of labor and all the people of the United States, but may well determine the life of all the people throughout the world after 1944."

Joseph Donoghue, state director for the CIO Political Action Committee, and Victor E. Moore, registration secretary of the Philadelphia district, outlined specific actions which could be taken to get out the vote in the coming election.

ASK FDR TO RUN

The convention enthusiastically backed a resolution "to ask Pres. Franklin D. Roosevelt to become a candidate to succeed himself" and to request all of the Council's affiliated bodies to "not only support Pres. Roosevelt in the forthcoming election but also to support those candidates for the U.S. Congress who are pledged to support Pres. Roosevelt and Vice-Pres. Henry A. Wallace in their program for the war and for the peace to come"

The convention adopted other resolutions condemning the Dies committee and urging its abolishment, supporting the anti-polltax bill now before the Senate, favoring the repeal of the Smith-Connally Act and the provision of child care centers

OFFICERS RE-ELECTED

The Council unanimously re-elected Pres. John Phillips and Secy.-Treas. Harry Boyer. Reuben Block was elected vice-president representing the needle trades, and Carl Bersing, vice-president for the radio industry. The remaining vice-presidents were re-elected: James Thomas (Steel), Joseph Hueter (Textile), Robert Reed (Aluminum), Leon Bouchat (Glass), Jack Strobel (State, County and Municipal), George Craig (Eastern miscellaneous unions), and Anthony Federoff (Western miscellaneous unions).

Council Secretary Harry Boyer reported an increase of 79,424 members during the past year, of which 71,374 are from the United Steelworkers. He said the total council membership was now approximately 325,000.

Co-ops Back British Unity

London, April 22 (ALN)—The annual conference of the British Co-operative party, meeting here this week, pledged its full support to the Churchill administration during the war but declared that it will have "no truck with a Tory-dominated coalition government" as soon as Nazidom has been defeated in Europe.

The conference, marking the centenary year of the British co-operative movement, was attended by 634 delegates representing 616 societies with a membership of over 7,000,000. The Co-operative party is the political arm of Britain's strong cooperative movement, which has a membership of nearly 9,000,000.

In order to insure a labor government after the war, the conference instructed its national executive to negotiate with the Labor party for the purpose of securing a united working class movement, comprising the Labor party, the Trades Union Congress, the Communist party and the Cooperative party. The Cooperative party will put forward a minimum of 21 parliamentary candidates at the next general election.

HAIL TEHERAN PACT

The conference welcomed the decisions of the Teheran conference and commended the 20-year alliance between Britain and the USSR.

A resolution demanding the release of all anti-fascist political prisoners in India and the establishment of an Indian provisional government was passed unanimously, together with an amendment declaring that Col. Leopold Amery has demonstrated his unfitness to be Secretary of State for India.

Another adopted resolution demanded the removal of all people in Italy directly associated with the previous fascist regime.

Other resolutions called for government control of coal mines and extra food rations for miners; a national minimum wage of four pounds ($16) a week for all agricultural workers; increased service pay allowances; and equal pay for women workers.

'Get Into Politics,' Texas CIO Program

DALLAS, Tex., Apr. 22—Need for active participation in the state political scene was stressed by State CIO Director Timothy F. Flynn in his opening address and report to the eighth annual convention of the Texas CIO Council held here last Friday and Saturday. Some 200 delegates representing more than 150,000 CIO workers in the state attended the parley, the biggest since the state Council was set up.

The delegates were welcomed by Mayor J. Woodel Rogers, who told them that "the people of Dallas are honored that the CIO has selected the city as a meeting for its convention."

Citing the great strides labor has made in Texas during the last few years, Flynn said that "the CIO's No. 1 objective for 1944, after pledging ourselves to do the utmost to win this war against fascism, is the same as our objective was in 1935—the organization of the unorganized.

"We are going to do our best to guarantee that the people of America will not only win the war, but the peace, too," he said.

CIO Secy.-Treas. James B. Carey and Anthony Wayne Smith, assistant director of Industrial Union Councils, represented the National CIO office at the convention. Other CIO speakers included Pres. O. A. Knight of the Oil Workers Intl. Union and Leo Perlis, director, National CIO War Relief Committee.

Para; CIO Rep. W. A. Cope, and Conference Sec. Catherine Winston, Natl. Farmers Union. (Federated Pictures.)

Tenn. Labor Unites In Registration Drive

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Apr. 22—Plans for all-out registration of voters in machine-ridden Tennessee were under way following a state convention here of 500 delegates and visitors representing the CIO, Railroad Brotherhoods and Natl. Farmers Union.

A resolution terming it "the solemn duty of every union member to qualify and vote in the coming elections" was adopted at the meeting, called by the Federated Labor Committee for Political Action in Tennessee.

Chief speaker at the meeting was Van A. Bittner, assistant to the President of the United Steelworkers, who warned:

"There are many men in the U. S. congress who are more interested in defeating Franklin D. Roosevelt than they are in defeating Adolf Hitler."

Declaring that the 1944 elections will be "the most important in history," Bittner praised the U. S. supreme court for outlawing the white primary in the south and pledged continued cooperation of the CIO in abolishing the polltax as a qualification for voting.

Bittner called for unity of all workers at the ballot box, declaring: "What happens in the 1944 election may mean not only what happens to you, but what happens to your children's children and all the peoples of the world. You can not hurt a CIO man or his family without hurting an AFL man and his family and vice versa."

HAIL FDR

Enthusiasm for Roosevelt reached a high peak when Tom Davis, former Farmer-Labor party member of the Minnesota legislature and now attorney for the Bro. of Railroad Trainmen, said the President's record "ought to make any laboring man ashamed not to support him."

"The democracy of the nation must demand that Pres. Roosevelt run for reelection," he said. "The democracy of the nation must see that he is reelected. We must uphold the principles of Pres. Roosevelt for which our boys are dying in Italy, the Solomons and all over the world."

The convention adopted a 13-point program embodying the main principles put forth by the Roosevelt administration. It included polltax repeal, expansion of federal and state social security laws, more effective price control, farm price stabilization, protection of family ownership, cooperation with plans to rehabilitate war veterans and guarantee of full postwar employment through an expanded public works program.

Other speakers were Regional CIO Director Paul R. Christopher and Organization Director Aubrey Williams of the Natl. Farmers Union. Executive chairman of the Federated Labor Committee is Hollis V. Reid, legislative representative of the Bro. of Locomotive Firemen & Enginemen.

Woman Wins CIO Political Post in N. Y.

New York, April 22—Miss Charlotte Carr, nationally noted independent liberal, today was named New York Regional Director for the CIO Political Action Committee.

The appointment was announced by Sidney Hillman, PAC chairman, who is also State Chairman of the American Labor Party.

"It is quite possible that New York may be pivotal in determining whether this nation is to continue on a level of social, economic and international liberalism, or is to revert to isolation and reaction," Miss Carr said, in accepting the appointment.

"The coming election is a challenge to all Americans. It is particularly a challenge to those liberals who have seen their ideas under increasing fire in recent months. The apathy that has lent strength to the enemies of liberalism must be combatted between now and election day to arouse the American people to the danger of a home-front destruction of the principles our men and women in military service are fighting to achieve."

For five years Miss Carr was Director of Hull House in Chicago. Her latest job, resigned to accept the political action committee's regional directorship, was assistant to Vice Chairman Clinton S. Golden of the War Manpower Commission.

Call Parley To Help Solve Unemployment

St. Louis, Apr. 22 — This city's community attempt to solve unemployment problems caused by production cutbacks will feature a conference in early June that is expected to draw national labor, industrial and government figures.

The conference is one phase of the campaign being waged against unemployment and war dislocations by the mayor's committee on labor and management, which was set up recently following the dismissal of 37,000 CIO and AFL workers due to the sudden cancellation of war contracts.

CIO, AFL Unity Strong in Local Political Action

WASHINGTON, Apr. 24—Joint CIO, AFL and R. R. Brotherhood political action in preparation for the crucial 1944 elections is going on all over the country despite President William Green's order to AFL affiliates barring them from cooperating with CIO Political Action Committees.

Dissatisfaction with the short-sighted AFL policy on political action and a blanket refusal in many cases to comply is revealed by reports of joint action in scores of communities.

Throughout New England steps have been taken by AFL affiliates for political cooperation with the CIO. In Providence, R. I., 30 lodges of the Int. Assn. of Machinists voted for joint action. The Hartford, Conn., Central Labor Union rejected Green's letter and for the first time appointed 5 delegates to a United Labor Committee which has been in existence for a number of years. The Committee represents 35,000 CIO, AFL and R. R. Brotherhood members, and has recently increased its political and legislative activity.

The Delaware Federation of Labor at its recent quarterly convention in Wilmington vigorously rejected the ban on cooperation. In Springfield, Mass., the AFL Central Labor Union voted full power to delegates to enter into political action with the CIO.

MASSACHUSETTS TOO

The Lynn, Mass., Council of Labor now has 22 CIO, AFL and independent union affiliates represent-

In Elizabeth, N. J., joint conferences between CIO, AFL and R. R. Brotherhood organizations have been held on the question of cutbacks, veterans' rehabilitation and the soldiers' vote. The Central Labor Union of Jamestown, N. J., dismissed the Green directive and joined the CIO unions in a two-day conference, while in Queens County, N. Y., 14 AFL unions agreed to cooperate with the Queens CIO Community Council in parallel political action.

In the south and southwest, the reaction to Green's edict is just as emphatic. Plans for concerted political action are well under way in Tennessee as a result of a call issued over the signatures of the legislative chairman of the Tennessee Federation of Labor and CIO officials.

TEXAS UNITY

Texas reports that representatives of more than 500,000 members of the AFL, CIO, Railroad Brotherhoods and farm groups have organized a joint council to, among other things, "secure better representation for the citizens of Texas in state and national legislative bodies."

The CLU of Norfolk, Va., gave "file and forget treatment" to Green's letter saying ". . . only the die-hard Republicans and their stooges within labor's ranks desire such division."

Both Maryland and Kentucky report solid support for concerted political action with committees in both stats having strong AFL backing. In St. Louis, Mo., Lloyd Weber, president of District 9 of the AFL Machinsts, the largest AFL union in the city, characterized the Green letter as a stab in the back. The St. Louis Central Union, while accepting the letter, clearly indicated that its contents would be ignored.

PENNA. COMMITTEE

Action in Pennsylvania has resulted in the formation of Labor's Committee for Political Action in which 24 unions from the CIO, AFL and independent groups are active. The committee represents 50,000 trade unionists in Northampton and Warren counties.

Murray Blasts NLRB Decision Banning Protection to Workers

WASHINGTON, Apr. 22—Members of the National Labor Relations Board who issued the decision in the American News Co. case are launching "the Board into the field which is filled with danger to sound labor relations and to the basic policy of the Act which the Board is supposed to administer," CIO Pres. Philip Murray warned this week.

Murray's comment was made on a decision signed by NLRB members Gerard Reilly and John M. Houston, which held that workers striking to secure a wage increase not granted to them by the War Labor Board could be discharged and need not be reinstated by the employer.

NLRB Chairman Millis dissented, in an opinion which President Murray said is "legally sound and provides the sensible remedy for the unfortunate action of the employes involved.

Murray said that Reilly and Houston "have arrogated to themselves functions which are not properly theirs and which are based on principles antagonistic to the objective of the statute under which they were appointed.

"In the earliest days of labor organization employes were forced to struggle against the doctrine which challenged even the more existence of labor organizations and tested the legality of their existence on the basis of whether the courts liked the objectives sought by the employes," Murray stated.

"Today even those courts most hostile to labor have abandoned these archaic doctrines. Yet these two members of the Board have now undertaken a step which moves in the direction of turning the clock of labor law back almost a century.

"Nothing in the legislative history of this statute supports this move. Everything in the legislative history of this statute indicates the very definite Congressional intent to preserve to American working men and women their normal right to strike.

"In this war period responsible labor organizations have joined in a pledge to the nation to forego for the duration the exercise of their right to strike. Board Members Reilly and Houston make no contribution to the war effort when they convey to American workers the threat that the necessities of the war situation may be used as a means of undermining the statue which protects American labor against employer interference with its basic rights.

"Responsible employers will recognize that the avoidance of hot-headed walkouts by undisciplined groups of employes will not be aided by condoning discharge in violation of the Natl. Labor Relations Act. The decision is an unfortunate invitation to that other group of employers ever anxious to discover a loophole permitting anti-union campaigns."

Fish Smells as Bad To Legion as to CIO

LOS ANGELES, Apr. 22—Long the target for hit or miss shots fired at his defeatist attitude and actions, Rep. Hamilton Fish, tory Republican from New York, had the whole works thrown at him at once in a heavily documented report issued here this week by the California American Legion's 17th District.

The report is of particular interest at present in view of the trial of 30 defendants charged with sedition which opened in Washington this wek. Evidence is presented in the report showing that among those whom Fish permitted to use his franked envelopes by the hundreds of thousands are several of the persons now on trial, including Mrs. Elizabeth Dilling and George Sylvester Viereck.

Against a background of growing Axis aggression, the report traces Fish's efforts to oppose the Administration's preparedness to meet the coming holocaust.

A chronological record is given of how Fish opposed the fortification of Guam; advocated an arms embargo; supported Germany's "White Book" which declared that William C. Bullitt, then Ambasador to France, had committed America to assist Poland against Germany; opposed the Selective Service Act; fought repeal of the Johnson Act which would have permitted he U. S. to make loans to Britain for purchase of war material; later opposed the Lend-Lease Bill, and declared the extension of the U. S. neutrality patrol "was for the purpose of aggression, to jeopardize our security, possibly to deliberately involve us in war."

CIO Challenges Hatch Act In Court Test

WASHINGTON, Apr. 29—A court case to test the constitutionality of the Hatch Act, which prohibits employes of the Federal government from engaging in political activity, was filed today in the U. S. District Court for the District of Columbia, it was announced by Miss Eleanor Nelson, secretary-treasurer of the CIO United Federal Workers.

CIO General Counsel Lee Pressman filed the complaint requesting that the Civil Service Commission be enjoined from enforcing Section 9(a) of the Hatch Act.

"We are convinced that Section 9(a) of the Hatch Act which forbids Federal workers to engage in political activity on their own time is contrary both to the spirit and letter of the Constitution, and that it abrogates the right of free speech for three million Federal workers," stated Miss Nelson.

"It is the opinion of our legal advisers that the framers of the Constitution and the Bill of Rights probably considered the right to political expression so fundamental as to require no explicit guarantee in the Constitution.

SPOILS SYSTEM DANGER

"Federal workers have no objection to those parts of the Hatch Act which bar officials or employes from using their official positions to influence the votes of others, and we are therefore not contesting those sections of the Hatch Act which forbid such activity.

"However, we are firmly convinced that there is more danger of reverting to the old spoils system if Government employes have no political rights than if they are permitted to take an active and informed part in the selection of national and local candidates for office. I think that if Section 9(a) of the Hatch Act is declared unconstitutional the merit system will be advanced."

The Union filed the suit on behalf of Patrick T. Fagan, official of the CIO United Steelworkers, who is now Director of Area IX, War Manpower Commission, and 11 active leaders of the Union in various parts of the country.

The action was hailed by Rep. Emanuel Celler (D., N. Y.), author of H.R. 3317, a bill to repeal the Hatch Act.

We'll Back Invasion With All-Out Production—CIO to Eisenhower

WASHINGTON, Apr. 29—The all-out support of more than five million CIO members and their families is lined up solid behind America's fighting men as they mobilize their forces for the invasion of Nazi Europe.

That was the message cabled this week to General Dwight D. Eisenhower, who will lead the assault.

Murray's complete cable said:

"More than five million CIO members and their families join with all other Americans in heartfelt hope for overwhelming success in the coming attack by American and British forces on Fortress Europe.

"We trust that you and your men will find that the weapons hammered out by American workers will prove equal to your difficult task, and superior to those in the hands of the enemy.

"We pledge that the all-out production record which has made these American weapons possible will be continued wholeheartedly in complete support of the invasion and the mighty battles that will follow it until the Nazis are completely crushed."

Court Rules Newsboys Employes

Washington, Apr. 29—Full-time newsboys are employes and not "independent contractors" under the Natl. Labor Relations Act, the U. S. Supreme Court ruled this week in an 8-1 decision, with Justice Owen J. Roberts dissenting.

The decision over-ruled one made by the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals which held that the newsboys of four Los Angeles daily papers were "independent contractors."

The Supreme Court upheld a Natl. Labor Relations Board order for the publishers to bargain collectively with Los Angeles CIO Newsboys Industrial Union, Local 75.

Rankin Pipe Dream Slows GI Bill's Passage

WASHINGTON, Apr. 29—In a move as phoney as the polltax that keeps him in office, Representative John E. Rankin (D.) of Mississippi attempted to excuse his own stalling by attacking the CIO for its "pressure" on behalf of the GI Bill of Rights. He claims that the CIO is trying to "stampede" the Congressional Committee on Veterans Legislation, which has had the bill before it over a month, into "ill-considered action."

Rankin is chairman of the committee and his opposition has prevented a vote on the bill, which provides for increased hospitalization for veterans, better educational facilities and loans up to $1,000 for the purchase of homes and businesses. In addition, the bill makes provision for unemployment compensation for a maximum period of 52 weeks in amounts ranging from $15 to $25 per week, plus dependency allowances.

It's against this last provision that Rankin's main attack is directed. He trots out the old and completely untenable argument that the payment of unemployment compensation may cause many "to refuse employment." What he's really worried about is the fact that payment of the minimum rates under the terms of the bill to veterans will encourage workers in his and other polltax states to demand increased compensation under their own state laws. In certain cases these rates now are as low as $5 per week.

In a blast at Rankin, Senator Clark, southern Democrat from Missouri, who was in charge of the oill in the Senate, said, "The resistance to the Senate bill is, in my judgment, based entirely upon the hatred of certain Congressmen for the colored portion of our armed forces. They are so unwilling to allow the colored troops to have the unemployment insurance to which they are entitled that they would be desirous of withholding absolutely-deserved benefits from all of our troops."

Warren H. Atherton, national comamnder of the American Legion, severely criticized Rankin's point of view.

"If Rankin means," Atherton declared, "that he wants to deny unemployment insurance to the men now carrying a bayonet for Uncle Sam, the veterans of the American Legion intend to fight him down the line and take the issue to every voter in the country."

Scoffing at Rankin's estimate that the GI bill would cost 5 billion dollars, Atherton pointed out that it wouldn't cost the nation a nickel if we return to a prosperous economy after the war.

"To the men on the combat fronts, the GI Bill of Rights represents a definite move on their behalf. Its concrete provisions give them something to tie onto, a lift for their morale," the Army Times said this week.

MINIMUM PROTECTION

Senator Clark pointed out that the bill was so carefully drawn that goldbrickers and coffee coolers would have a hard job getting any insurance. "We regard the provisions of the GI Bill of Rights with reference to unemployment insurance as the absolute minimum to which all men and women who serve in the armed forces should be entitled," he said.

"Speaking for myself, if the policy of undertaking to prevent ordinary rights to colored troops should be adopted by the House, I will oppose, as Senator in charge of the bill, even submission of the bill to a conference," Clark declared.

"I would prefer to leave it in the lap of Mr. Rankin and the House of Representatives and see how long they will keep the bill."

Blast Cudahy For Stalling CIO Union

Milwaukee, Apr. 29 — A "Montgomery Ward" crisis in the packing industry drew sharp criticism this week from the Milwaukee JOURNAL, a leading daily paper, which praised the restraint exercised by the CIO Packinghouse Workers as evidenced by their continued observance of labor's no-strike pledge.

Object of the criticism was Cudahy Bros. Co., which has bitterly fought since 1942 the attempt of the union to obtain a contract. The firm has used every legal trick in the books to stall the case, the JOURNAL commented editorially, in an effort to avoid granting a maintenance of membership clause and other demands of the union that have been approved by the War Labor Board.

Sharply questioning the patriotism of the Cudahy management, the JOURNAL stated:

"Unions, where they are honestly trying to do their job and have otained a government decision, ought not to have to bear the injustice of procrastination.

"We should like to see President Roosevelt, as the enforcer of WLB orders, clamp down hard with whatever steps are necessary to bring such companies into line."

Murray Tells French Of CIO Policy

Washington, April 29—CIO is working to guarantee the four freedoms, including the right to organize unions and to choose democratic governments, after victory, CIO President Murray told French workers in a shortwave OWI broadcast this week.

"American labor is working, fighting and giving without stint and without limit to back up the forthcoming invasion of Europe which will deal the death blow to Nazi tyranny," he said.

"At the World Labor Conference in London next month (June 5) the CIO will seek an international agreement for the immediate establishment of freedom of speech, press, assembly, religion, political association, and to organize labor unions in all liberated territories; and for the creation of governments in such territories that have the full support of the people."

Opportunity Seen as Weapon Against Bias

Columbus, O., April 29—Equality of opportunity is a first step toward elimination of racial and religious intolerance, James B. Carey, secretary-treasurer of the CIO and chairman of the CIO Committee to Abolish Racial Discrimination, said here this week.

Carey spoke at the first Ohio CIO Anti-Discrimination Conference in this city, attended by more than 200 CIO leaders from central parts of the state.

"The root of discrimination is insecurity," Carey said. "Remove that pressing sense of insecurity, and the battle for tolerance will be well on its way to victory."

"There is an ever-growing awareness on the part of Americans that the Negro has added richly to the culture, welfare and wealth of America. This means that every worker, whatever his race, color or creed must unite politically in 1944.

"Otherwise, we shall find ourselves in the situation of having defeated Nazism and fascism aboard, but succumbing to its vicious poisons at home."

CIO Men Named On WPB Auto Policy Group

Washington, Apr. 29—Labor this week won eight position on a War Production Board policy committee which will have the responsibility for determining how the automobile industry will change from war to civilian production.

The eight-man group consists of six representatives of the CIO United Auto Workers Union and two from the AFL. The CIO members are:

R. J. Thomas, UAW-CIO president; George F. Addes, secretary-treasurer; Richard T. Frankenstein and Walter Reuther, vice-presidents; and William C. Stevenson and Richard E. Reisinger, board members.

CIO says living costs are up 43.5%. If that's not enough for you, then let the inflation-hungry Congressmen wreck price control and you'll get all the price rises you want.

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—Apr. 29—Continuing its policy of making public an accounting of its funds, the CIO United Steelworkers of America last week issued its third semi-annual audit. The report, which covers a six months' period ending Nov. 30, 1943, shows a net worth of $3,313,077.20, a gain of $766,843.89 during the six months.

"During this past year unprecedented progress was made in advancing the cause of our members along lines which, in years to come, will do much in maintaining a decent standard of living, with corresponding advantages to industry," the union's officers say in an opening statement included in the report.

The statement submitted to local unions and members, is signed by Pres. Philip Murray, Secy-Treas. David J. McDonald and the two assistants to Pres. Murray Van A. Bittner and Clinton S. Golden.

Listed among the items expended during the six months period is a contribution of $102,500 to the CIO Political Action Committee.

The union's investment in U. S. Government Securities was increased by $300,935, including the increase in redemptive value of War Saving Bonds, and in Canadian War Bonds, the report shows.

Initiation fees totaling $330,992.75 and dues totaling $3,979,655.18 are listed in a summary statement of receipts. Excess of income over expenses for the six months' period was $871,328.12.

Radio Talk Feature Of Steel Parley

Washington, Apr. 29—A national broadcast over the regular Sunday Labor for Victory radio show will be one of the features of the second constitutional convention of the CIO United Steelworkers of America, which will be held at the Public Auditorium at Cleveland, O., from May 9 to 13 inclusive.

Chief speaker on the program, which will be heard over the NBC Red Network at 1:15 p.m., May 7, will be David J. McDonald, secretary-treasurer of the union, who will tell of its tremendous progress in the field of collective bargaining and its growth to nearly a million members in less than ten years.

The call to the convention, signed by Pres. Philip Murray and McDonald, said:

"This convention is being called at a time when our nation is undertaking tremendous offensives against the Axis powers. In it will be assembled the leaders of a labor union which has compiled a great record of production for victory, and whose efforts will not diminish until the enemies of democracy are destroyed forever."

Two weeks later on Labor for Victory, the CIO Political Action Committee will hold the spotlight. Expected to be a feature is a dramatic presentation of labor's fight for a better life, tied into the nation-wide celebration of "I Am an American Day."

Back Annual Wage Plan, Murray Urges Congress

Frozen Pay Hit In Senate

Washington, Apr. 29—Senate backing for CIO's demand that the Little Steel formula be junked as useless came in today's release of the Pepper (D., Fla.) report on the conditions of white collar workers in wartime.

The Pepper report also backed up CIO's cost of living arguments, agreeing that the Bureau of Labor Statistics Index is faulty and urging Congress to give the BLS enough money to make a study that will "accurately reflect changes in living standards as determined by current relationships between prices and income."

"In judging the validity of the BLS Index, it should be borne in mind that it is, in the words of its own apologists, 'a price barometer, not a measure of changes in the total amount spent for family living,'" the report said.

"Despite these limitations, the BLS Index has been used by the WLB as a basis for determining the ability of workers to cope with the rising cost of living."

The report was signed by Sens. Pepper, Thomas (D., Utah). Tunnell (D., Del.), and LaFollette (P., Wis.). Sen. Wherry (R., Neb.) did not sign.

Main recommendation on scrapping the Little Steel Formula read: "That the WLB cease applying the Little Steel formula to substandard wages and conditions and that a sound simple and expeditious procedure for raising such wages and salaries be developed within the WLB.

"As a concrete proposal, the committee suggests the removal of all controls from incomes of $200 or less per month for heads of families and $150 per month or less for unmarried persons."

LOW EARNINGS

Citing low earnings of white collar people, the committee report showed the 1943 average to be $28.69, well below the $50 a week needed for "a very narrow margin of living." Three million workers in retail trade got $24.88 on a weekly average in 1943.

The committee also urged more vigorous price control, especially needed by people on low and more or less fixed income. It urged states and municipalities to raise wages of their workers, among the worst exploited in the country. It also called for extension and increases in social security for white collar people.

The big city newspapers, notably The New York Times, played up the Pepper report on their front pages. The sudden interest and concern for the plight of the white collar workers shouldn't fool anyone, however. The newspapers think they see in the report a chance to play off one section of labor against another—in this case the white collar workers against the industrial workers.

The same day, the U. S. Labor Dept. released figures showing that average weekly earnings of U. S. workers average $45.54 weekly. This was broken down to $51.48 for durable goods workers, where most of the war workers are, and $36.33 for the non-durable goods workers.

Asks Broadcasts

New York, Apr. 22—Support for the campaign to have proceedings of Congress broadcast daily to the American people won support within Congress recently with announcement that Rep. James M. Fitzpatrick had filed a petition urging the broadcasts.

The petition contained a resolution passed by the Greater N. Y. CIO Council, according to Saul Mills, council secretary.

Figures Tell Story of U. S. Potential

Washington, April 29—Here's some pretty challenging figures on war output and employment, cited by Pres. Murray in testifying on postwar economic problems before a Senate sub-committee here.

They deal with jobs and production in 1939 and 1943, and they show not only that we can do the war job but that we can and must do the same and a better job in the peace.

In 1939 the U. S. had 40.9 million people employed; in 1943, 57.4 million—including the armed forces.

In 1939 the national output was $88.6 billion; in 1943, $186.8 billion.

In 1939 basic steel employed 388,400 workers; in 1943, 516,000. Shipbuilding employed 70,000 in 1939; 1,040,000 in 1943.

"In short, we cannot consider what we have today as full employment," Murray said. "We must regard those in the armed services as additional workers in need of jobs, as indeed they are.

"If we do that, we shall realize that we need to provide millions of new jobs after the war. Our productive economy must run at high levels indeed if we are to have an orderly transition to an expanding postwar economy."

Auto Profits Up 18 Pct.

Washington, April 29—Auto industry profits—after taxes and after huge "postwar reserves"—are up 18 per cent between 1939 and 1943, the UAW-CIO showed in its monthly Research Report issued this week.

To show how big these "postwar reserves"—subtracted by the companies before they make their figures public—are, the net income increase without the reserves is 173 per cent above 1939, 90 per cent above 1940.

At the same time, workers' individual output has increased tremendously. Thus, in 1944 the average auto worker will turn out about $12,000 worth of goods, while in 1941 he turned out around $7,400 worth.

Concrete Action Asked to Guarantee Full Employment

WASHINGTON, Apr. 29—"Concrete and creative" plans, not just slogans, are needed for full employment after the war, President Philip Murray said this week in Senate testimony on reconversion problems.

Murray spoke at the Senate sub-Committee on Wartime Contract Termination, headed by Sen. James Murray (D., Mont.), which is considering a series of three bills on postwar problems. Sen. George (D. Ga.) was a close listener throughout Murray's testimony.

In his testimony, Murray made it clear that he did not favor passage of any particular one of the three bills, but that CIO is seeking a general measure that will protect labor as well as business. S 1718, Sen. Murray's bill, for example, deals only with contract termination and does not mention the need for unemployment for workers on the war jobs that come to an end.

As one of the main concrete ideas of labor on postwar employment, Murray offered the annual wage plan proposed by the United Steelworkers and other CIO unions. This, he pointed out, "would stimulate peak production, would save the government and the taxpayers money, and would keep purchasing power up."

He urged Congress to pass a policy statement endorsing the annual wage plan, which would be a tremendous lever in helping labor win it through collective bargaining. Congress, he said, could not legislate the annual wage into existence, but could help by approving the idea.

SENATOR BACKS PLAN

Senator George, who, as head of the Finance Committee handled the tax bill giving industry postwar profit guarantees, agreed with Murray that Congress should pass such a resolution.

Continuing the concrete ideas and plans for full employment, Murray suggested programs for aircraft, housing, railroads and public works to maintain a $150 billion national income.

"A combination of private investment and government loans, plus thousands of local landing fields will keep the aircraft industry, at present levels, if the ingenuity of government and labor are fully utilized."

Similarly, private and public programs will put housing at high levels. Railroads, which need new and modern equipment, can also contribute to employment and the national income. Fifty percent of present freight cars are 25 years old or older, he pointed out.

MUST KEEP WAGES UP

Wages are the key to these and other projects, he said, and must be kept at constantly increasing levels through collective bargaining. Despite newspaper propaganda about the "alarming heights" that take-home wages have reached, "the American people expect that the workers in war industries, the workers throughout our economy today, and the returning servicemen will be able to maintain themselves after the war at constantly increasing levels of income."

Turning to the obligations of business under "free enterprise," Murray warned that "we propose the responsibility shall be placed where it belongs. Let industrialists either deliver the goods with America's gigantic war-born productive capacity or be prepared to give others the chance to use it."

A national board of labor, big and little business and agriculture is needed to achieve both war industry mobilization and reconversion after victory, he said. Such a board should have three main functions:

1. The establishment of voluntary goals for maximum production, employment and capital investment in the transition and postwar periods.

"2. The termination of war contracts.

"3. The utilization or disposition of war property."

Government should be placed squarely behind all programs for high production and full employment, and "the more the government succeeds in achieving its goal by merely acting as the intermediary for bringing the various groups in the community together for cooperative action, the less will actual government intervention be needed.

UNEMPLOYMENT PROTECTION

"The less successful the cooperative undertaking, on the other hand, the more will government have to intervene. This means that heavy unemployment benefit payments, large-scale make-work projects and the like will be a confession of failure, not of the government necessarily, but especially on the part of the dominant industries."

At the same time, workers and servicemen must be protected from temporary unemployment during re-conversion by benefit payments with full coverage for all the time they may be jobless.

"We repudiate any proposals for dropping the American war worker or serviceman into the relief brackets, and insist on adequate benefit payments," he said.

In his final plea to the Senators for full mobilization of the war and postwar economy, Murray said that workers, servicemen, housewives "all have their eyes fixed on the great new promise of America after the war.

"They ask only for the means to create a new postwar world. They know it is possible and they know the time to begin is now. The knowledge that it is in the making will strengthen our whole war effort."

How 'Poor'?

"Steel Producers Assert Wage Rise Would Bring Ruin" reads one newspaper headline on the steel companies' reply to the wage case f the United Steelworkers of America.

Yet on the financial pages of the same paper are reports of increased steel earnings and dividends to stockholders.

In fact, "Big Steel's" common stock dividends during the four years from 1940 to 1943 were 16 times greater than the single common stock dividend paid from 1936 to 1939.

At the same time the steel industry's total assets have increased over a billion dollars during the war, and its undistributed profits and reserves have risen by hundreds of millions of dollars.

Few people will be fooled by the "poverty" pleas of war industries reaping a golden harvest of war profits, guaranteed "normal" profits for two years after the war, and with bulging stores of profits set aside to assure security-plus to their stockholders.

Most people will want to know, as labor wants to know, why some of these superprofits can't be used to grant a little security to the war workers whose labor creates them.

Ward vs. U. S.

The private war declared by Montgomery Ward and Co. against the United States is far more serious than an ordinary labor dispute.

Sewell L. Avery, the company's head, has repeatedly disobeyed the War Labor Board in his union-busting campaign against the CIO United Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employes Union.

He has done it deliberately, defiantly and as provocatively as possible, spending huge sums of money to advertise his defiance.

In 1942, Avery refused to sign an agreement with the union chosen by his employes, defied the War Labor Board and had to be twice ordered by Pres. Roosevelt to comply.

This year he went on strike against the government, causing a shutdown of his Chicago plants by his refusal to continue dealing with the union, as ordered by the WLB.

When Pres. Roosevelt had again to step in, the union immediately complied with his orders. But Montgomery Ward continued to thumb its nose at the Commander-in-Chief, as it had done at every lesser government authority — forcing government seizure of its plants.

Obviously Avery's disruptions of wartime morale and orderly industrial relations cannot be tolerated by a nation at war.

Public opinion is already aroused against the provocateur who carries his fight against labor, against the administration and against our democratic procedures to the point of open rebellion.

There are a section of rabidly anti-union employers who hope to follow Avery's example, if he gets away with anything, and who look on his actions as the opening shot in the union-smashing open-shop drive they hope to see launched.

There are also reactionary, isolationist and anti-war political forces that hope to fan Avery's rebellion into a more general revolt against the administration's war leadership and domestic policies.

Labor wholeheartedly applauds the President's firm action against Montgomery Ward, and so do all other patriotic citizens who want to see this rebellion against the United States nipped in the bud.

No Turning Back

If the United States can perform miracles of production and provide millions more jobs during time of war, who can say it is impossible to increase production and employment similarly in time of peace?

That is one of the questions CIO Pres. Philip Murray has put to Congress.

He pointed out that the number of Americans gainfully employed, including the armed forces, was increased from 40.9 millions in 1939 to 57.4 millions in 1943.

Steel production in the same period increased from 52,799,000 net tons to 88,837,000 net tons; the number of military planes from 2,141 to 85,920; and merchant shipping from 341,219 to 19,296,000 deadweight tons.

For full employment after the war, it will be necessary to provide jobs for millions more than are employed now, since returning servicemen as well as war workers will have to earn a livelihood.

Murray's proposal for a central administration to seek full production, full employment and full consumption, on a rising standard of living, suggests the machinery whereby government, labor, business and agriculture can work together in planned fashion for the achievement of these goals.

To turn back after this war to deflation, curtailed production and wholesale unemployment would be to lose the peace. The CIO points the way forward to the economy of plenty whose possibilities have been demonstrated by our war effort.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

WAR IS THE great shaker-upper. It takes millions of men from their accustomed grooves and puts them face to face with death in their early prime. It changes their thinking and the course of their lives.

Millions of civilians too are shaken out of their ordinary pursuits. They undertake activities they never dreamt of before. They become subject to countless war regulations.

Our whole economy is shaken up. Most of the machinery for producing and distributing goods is transformed into a national arsenal for war. Total production and employment shoot up to record heights.

But we become most acutely conscious of war's shake-ups when war comes to an end. Even the thought of return to peacetime pursuits stirs endless doubts, fears and hopes.

There is really no such thing as a return to "normalcy." The old grooves have been destroyed. New patterns must be created.

The serviceman may dream of finding things just as they were. But actually he will be restless, dissatisfied, rebellious unless he finds more security and opportunity than under the periodic depressions of pre-war "normalcy."

War workers and farmers, working to the limit to meet war's demands, are filled with doubts and fears of layoffs, reduced earnings, breadlines and foreclosed mortgages, when these demands shall cease.

Some industrialists may hope to return through the valley of deflation to normal profit-making with curtailed operations. But to most Americans this would mean not "normalcy" but catastrophe.

We have all seen the tremendous production and increased employment resulting from the mobilization of our resources and energies for war. We have the right to hope, expect and fight for a better and more prosperous post-war America through similar effort and planning for peacetime production.

★ ★ ★

CIO Pres. Philip Murray faced squarely up to this problem in his testimony on war contract terminations before the Senate military affairs committee.

The test of our economy of so-called "free enterprise", he declared, will be in the degree to which it can expand production, employment and consumption after the war.

The CIO will work with all elements that desire and can help achieve an expanding economy, but will resist all tendencies to an economy of scarcity.

"There are within the American business community," Murray said, "important elements capable of running an expanding economy with the cooperation and assistance of representatives of the entire American people. These elements must be given an opportunity to demonstrate the productivity of which they are capable."

But America's industrialists must "either deliver the goods with America's gigantic war-born productive capacity or be prepared to give others a chance to use it."

Government as Murray sees it, should stimuate increased production and employment and "bring the various groups in the community together for cooperative action."

The more successful such action is, the less government will have to intervene. But in proportion as industry may fail, government will have to step in.

★ ★ ★

To make possible a greatly expanded economy after the war, in which millions of new jobs will be provided for returning servicemen as well as present war workers, Murray suggested a number of definite steps.

He asked Congress to create "an administration directed to seek full production, full employment and full consumption, on a rising standard of living."

This should include a national production-employment board, on which labor, business large and small, and agriculture are represented; and a director to centralize the work manpower demobilization, disposition of war plants and property, direction of war production, and allocations and priorities of materials.

There should also be a bureau for the formulation of programs; and a system of industry councils, including management, labor and, where appropriate, agriculture, in each of the basic industries.

But while free enterprise and cooperative action should be thus stimulated under planned direction, many other steps should also be taken to protect the people against lags and failures and dislocations.

Among these Murray listed emergency unemployment benefits and educational opportunities for returning servicemen and dismissed war workers; acceptance by industry of the guaranteed annual wage; a big program of public works; and a comprehensive system of social security and public assistance.

Push for Soldier Vote in N. Y.

New York, April 29—All elected public officials here are being quizzed on their stand for against liberalizing the soldiers' vote setup, the CIO City Council announced this week.

The Council, which has been putting on a mass campaign to get the ballot to New York's million men and women in the armed forces, has urged that the state system be altered in four ways to:

1. Allow soldiers to use the Federal ballot if the state ballot doesn't reach them by Oct. 3.
2. Advance the date for mailing ballots by the State War Ballot Commission from Sept. 7 to Aug. 15 to make sure the soldiers get them.
3. Eliminate the requirement of a signed application by the soldier and allow any relative or friend of the soldier to apply for the ballot.
4. Grant similar full voting rights to men in the Merchant Marine and to Red Cross personnel serving overseas.

Rankin Stalls On GI Bill of Rights

If you get a little tired reading about Congressman Rankin of Mississippi and wonder why we give him so much publicity, just remember that Rankin (a polltaxer) is chairman of the Congressional Committee on Veterans' Legislation. All bills affecting veterans have to hurdle Rankin and this committee before they can be acted on by the House of Representatives. With 15,000 men getting medical discharges and CDDs weekly, you can see Rankin's importance to vets.

Just now Rankin is doing a job on the GI Bill of Rights. The bill passed the Senate by an overwhelming vote back in March, after organized labor and all veterans' organizations had marshalled strong support for it. The bill provides for increased hospitalization facilities, free tuition, loans up to $1,000, better vocational training and unemployment insurance ranging from $15 to $25 per week plus dependents' allowance for a maximum period of 52 weeks.

But the bill hasn't yet hit the deck of the House, simply because Rankin is opposed to unemployment insurance and is stalling on a committee report. He thinks it might "encourage unemployment". He ignores the fact, stressed by Warren H. Atherton, commander of the American Legion, that "un-

Combat Pay Up in Congress

Washington — Ernie Pyle's idea of a 50 percent boost for combat pay has moved nearer to reality with the introduction of a bill In Congress by Rep. Sam Weiss of Pennsylvania.

Weiss, who comes from a union district near Pittsburgh, put his bill into the Congressional hopper with CIO support. The bill now goes to the House Military Affairs Committee.

In originally proposing the 50 percent bonus for combat pay, Pyle, wrote from Italy: "Combat pay would mean a lot to the fighting man.

"It would put him into a proud category and make him feel that somebody appreciates what he endures. Obviously no soldier would ever get into combat just to get extra 'fight pay'. That isn't the point. There is not enough money in the world to pay any single individual his due for battle suffering. But it would put a mark of distinction on him, a recognition that his miserable job was a royal one and that the rest of us were aware of it."

The bill is now before the House Military Committee, and early action is expected. The CIO is rapidly organizing support for its passage.

Boost Service Pay

At least 500 soldiers and sailors got a boost in their income of $5 a month, following action this week by Local 10, CIO Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, at San Francisco. The raise was the result of a unanimous vote to assess members $1 a month for five month to send each Local 10 member in the armed forces the $5 bonus.

CIO Pitching for Invasion—Murray

America's fighting men can count on the all-out support of CIO's more than five million members and their families in the coming assault on Nazi-held Europe, CIO Pres. Philip Murray this week cabled General Dwight D. Eisenhower, who will command the invasion. Murray's complete cable follows:

"More than five million CIO members and their families join with all other Americans in heartfelt hope for overwhelming success in the coming attack by American and British forces on Fortress Europe.

"We trust that you and your men will find that the weapons hammered out by American workers will prove equal to your difficult task, and superior to those in the hands of the enemy.

"We pledge that the all-out production record which has made these American weapons possible will be continued wholeheartedly in complete support of the invasion and the mighty battles that will follow it until the Nazis are completely crushed."

Increase In Mustering-out Pay Asked

Letters to Yank and Stars and Stripes from GIs all over the world indicate justifiable dissatisfaction with the present mustering-out pay law.

Under the present plan, $100 is paid on honorable discharge to those who have been in the service for 60 days or less; $200 to those who have more than 60 days of service; and $300 is given to the soldier who has been on duty overseas regardless of length of service.

Obviously, a GI who has been in the thick of things overseas for a long period of time, is entitled to more in the way of mustering-out pay than one whose period of service is much shorter. The same is true of the amount paid to those who've seen only domestic duty.

The CIO is at present supporting a bill which provides $3 a day for service within the states, $4 for foreign service plus $500 if wounded. Minimum payment is $100, maximum $3,500 for home service and $4,500 for overseas duty to be paid in bonds.

Aid Vets To Get Jobs

A plan for hiring rehabiliated Servicemen has been formulated by CIO Rubber Workers Local 134, in New York City, and the L. E. Waterman Co.

The plan provides for hiring such workers in the grinding and fitting departments, with the company to start a school to train the veterans. They will be paid a minimum guaranteed training rate.

Those who make a success within 12 weeks will be placed on regular piece work rates.

Ask Your CO for Your GI Ballot

By the time you read this, your CO will probably have available for you the postcard application form which, if properly used, will enable you to vote in the coming elections. Below is a copy of that form.

Apply now to your CO for a voting postcard. If he hasn't as yet received a supply, he will have them soon.

Fill out the postcard in accordance with instructions on the card, but note the following additional suggestions:

(a) Indicate whether you want a ballot for a general, special or primary election. Because of lack of sufficient time, in most cases it will be best to apply for a general election ballot.

(b) You may not remember the voting district where you last voted. It may have been the 2nd Ward or the 5th district or the 11th precinct. If you haven't any idea, write "do not remember."

(c) Answer (6) only if you want to vote in a primary. In that case, indicate the name of the political party in whose primary you want to vote.

(d) Give your miiltary address.

(e) PRINT your name and serial number.

(f) SIGN your name.

Then take the postcard to a commissioned officer or to your sergeant and have him sign it. After that, mail the card to the Secretary of State at the State Capitol of your state. No postage is required.

After a while you should receive an election ballot. Fill it out as soon as you get it and then mail it back in accordance with instructions on the ballot.

This postcard application will not work in all cases. That's because certain states do not make provision for absentee voting.

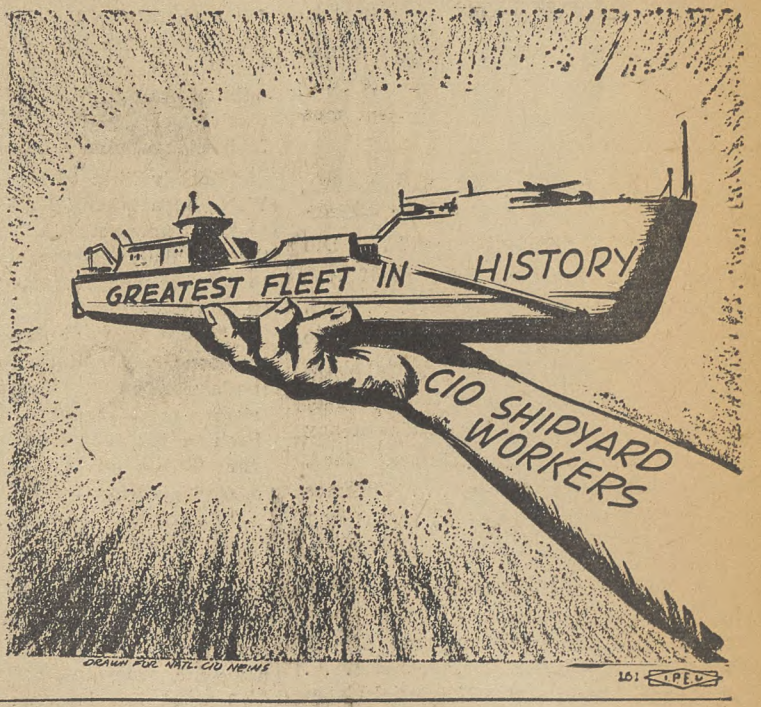
Introducing The Union Folks Who Build Your Ships

By SAMUEL J. KRAMER

KEEPING faith and keeping in touch—these are the keynotes of the relationship between the 370,000 members of the CIO Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America and the men and women in the armed forces.

This is the fourth in a series of articles about CIO unions and the part they are playing to help win the war. The articles are published to acquaint servicemen and women with CIO's policy of backing to the limit all-out production of the weapons needed for victory over the Axis.



These phrases have a real significance to the CIO Shipbuilders Union, for almost 20 percent of its members are now in uniform.

This union's members were in the war long before Pearl Harbor. Our men and women started then to build the bridge of ships to carry arms to those United Nations who later became our Allies in the war long before we were actually drawn into hostilities We have built the vast cargo and fighting fleets and numerous types of specialized vessels which today have made it possible for the United Nations to undertake the final great offensive for victory.

INVASION SHIPS

How close we CIO shipyard workers are to the men in the armed forces is brought out by the fact that the invasion ships which you may have used or will be using—the thousands upon thousands of these vessels — the cargo ships, the troop transports, and the tankers, and all the fighting and fleet service vessels of the Navy from the mighty battleships down to the fleet tugs and oilers — were probably built by members of our union, the largest single organization of American shipyard workers.

These are good ships, among the best ever built. We have put in them everything we can to make them fulfill your needs.

But our share in the war effort is wider than that which we have done directly for the war. An important part of our work is to make sure that all returning servicemen and women will be able to come back to jobs and security after the shooting is over.

One way we are doing this is in our union contracts, every single one of which, signed with the leading employers in the shipbuilding industry, contains clauses continuing the seniority of our members while they are in the armed forces.

A large number of the contracts held by the CIO shipbuilders union also provide a military service bonus. This is a sum, usually a week's wages, payable to the union members entering the armed forces.

Our union has extended a welcoming hand to returning veterans by waiving all initiation fees for men and women leaving the armed forces to take employment in the shipbuilding industry.

To keep in touch with the servicemen and women, the union has made big contributions to the CIO American and Allied War Relief Committee, to various relief and welfare funds such as the Red Cross, Army and Navy Relief, etc.

Hundreds of thousands of cartons of cigarettes have also been sent by our union to the men at the fighting fronts, while union members receive periodic gifts of cigarettes and cash as a token of the fraternity which binds them to their former co-workers in the shipyards.

CIO in Politics To Aid War, Help Guarantee Jobs

Major political development of the labor front this year is CIO's Political Action Committee, set up last November and now operating in every state where labor is organized.

When the PAC was set up, CIO Pres. Murray stated its main objectives to be 1) mobilizing to win the quickest possible victory over the Axis and 2) jobs for everyone after the war, plus good homes, education and security from unemployment, old age and sickness.

The principal job of the PAC right now is to get the largest number of voters registered and out to the ballot boxes in November. This includes all voters, not just union men and women, on the principle that the people will vote for a progressive program if they vote. Reactionaries get into power chiefly because people stay away from the polls.

Army Paper Says Press Lies About Labor

A lot of servicemen have been "taken for suckers" by the big daily newspapers that "have been lying to fighting men overseas for many months," That was the frank opinion printed in John Lord's column, "Exclusive," carried in a recent edition of the Midpacifican, Army newspaper in Hawaii.

"It is now possible to prove that most of the big daily newspapers have been lying to fighting men overseas for many months," he continued.

"Front-page stories, feature stories, cartoons, and editorials have given us to understand that our brothers, fathers, sisters, mothers, aunts, uncles, and friends back in the States have been sabotaging the 'Battle of Production' with widespread strikes.

"We thought it was so, and raised plenty of hell about it.

"But it isn't so.

"While our leaders have been begging for 'unity' almost daily in newspaper stories . . . newspapers have been sabotaging that powerful war-winning force by driving wedges of lies between us and our folks back home.

"Here's the proof:

"The recently released annual report (1943) of the U. S. Dept. of Labor says,

" 'The no-strike pledge of labor leaders . . . was kept at a rate of better than 99 per cent during the year; the ratio of man-days lost through strikes to time worked was 8/100th of 1 per cent. That is a good record in any field of human relations."

Rankin Stalls

employment insurance has become a deep rooted part of the protection afforded to every working man in this country against periods of unemployment".

Rankin doesn't like the pressure being put on him and his committee by the CIO. He prefers to stall and delay on something that's of vital necessity to every serviceman. That's real brass. But then don't forget that Rankin led the fight against a real vote bill for men and women in the armed forces.

Here's Lineup On Furloughs

Since the beginning of the war, more than 200,000 GIs, exclusive of sick and wounded, have been sent back home from overseas. We've been trying to get a simple explanation of the policy of the WD and the Navy in regard to furloughs for men who've seen overseas duty and who are still waiting their turn to get back home for a while. This seems to be the lineup at the moment.

Most GIs are now being sent back under the policy of rotation. Each theater commander establishes the period of service which a serviceman has to have before becoming eligible for consideration for rotation. For example, in the North African theater, it's 18 months. In the Alaskan and Caribbean zone, it's two years. Some commanders haven't yet established a period for their particular area. This is true in the Southwest Pacific.

Normally, after the minimum period has been served, the man with the longest service record in the particular overseas command will be sent back. But this in turn will depend on three factors. First, the question of available replacements in ac-

Push Price Control Drive

The campaign for price control opened up in Congress this month with CIO leaders taking the witness stand to tell Congressmen and Senators just why the price control act must be renewed.

Led by Pres. Philip Murray, the CIO witnesses cited experiences of men in the shops and their wives in the grocery stores showing that living costs had already jumped 43.5%, couldn't go higher without completely flattening the family paycheck.

One woman, Mrs. Richard King of Amridge, Pa., wife of a CIO Steelworker, showed the Senators her grocery bills for Jan. 1, 1941 and Jan. 1, 1944, proving CIO's contention that living costs are way up and still climbing.

Speaking for the Steelworkers and the entire CIO, Murray told the Senators: "CIO has consistently supported and will continue to support the President's economic stabilization policy. The Oct. 2, 1942, law carried a mandate that wages and prices were to be maintained as of their relationship on Sept. 15, 1942. That commitment has not been carried out."

Citing the failure of Congress to keep this pledge to the nation, Murray argued both for more rigid price control and an easing of the wage freeze to let pay checks catch up with grocery bills.

Speaking for wives of union men in the amed forces, Albert J. Fitzgerald, president of the Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, CIO's third largest union, told the Senators:

"Re-enactment of the law, free of crippling restrictions, would be the greatest support that Congress could give to our soldiers and sailors who are about to embark on the invasion of Hitler's fortress."

LOOKING AHEAD

By LEN DE CAUX

JOB OPPORTUNITIES for returning servicemen—and indeed the whole future of post-war America—are at stake in some little publicized discussions now taking place before Congressional committees.

How are we going to change over our factories from war to peacetime production?

Are there to be wholesale layoffs as plants are closed down? Is American industry to return to pre-war "normalcy" with half as many jobs as during the war? Or can we expand production so there will be jobs and opportunity for all?

Can we get the best results by leaving "free enterprise" alone or must the government intervene—and if so, how much?

These are some of the fundamental questions behind current bills for the "termination of war contracts" and "reconversion." Upon the answer to them depends the livelihood and future welfare of most Americans.

★ ★ ★

Here are some answers suggested by the CIO through Pres. Philip Murray and other leaders:

(1) The same kind of planning and energy that have created millions of new jobs during the war can, and must, create millions more after the war. Any return to "normalcy" would mean mass unemployment and misery.

(2) "Free enterprise" should be given every encouragement to expand production, with government assistance in promoting the cooperation of all elements to this end.

(3) But labor will not tolerate an economy of scarcity in the name of "free enterprise." If capitalists fail to deliver the goods, others must be given a chance to do so. The goal must be full employment, full production and full consumption, on a rising standard of living.

(4) Central planning for peacetime production must begin now. The CIO asks Congress to create a national production-employment board, with labor, business and farmers represented, and with industry councils in every basic industry, to plan and supervise orderly reconversion and expansion of production.

(5) Congress should immediately provide for adequate emergency unemployment benefits, educational opportunities and improved job placement services for returning servicemen and dismissed war workers.

(6) Security against all hazards must also be provided through expanded social security legislation. Industry should adopt the principle of the guaranteed annual wage. And a big program of public works will be necessary to meet the people's needs and to provide useful employment in the transition period.

What Red Cross Can Do For You

The Servicemen's Edition of the CIO NEWS, in cooperation with the Red Cross, starts with this issue a series of questions and answers on problems that are vital to members of the armed forces. We don't pretend to know it all, but any GI with a personal problem is welcome to write to this column for a possible solution. We'll work hard to try to find the answer, and will say so frankly if we can't.

Q. Can Red Cross obtain a furlough for a serviceman in case of an emergency at home?

A. The man must first request a furlough through his commanding officer. Red Cross may then assist by verifying the need at the CO's request. In case of illness in the family the verification includes the doctor's statement giving diagnosis, prognosis, and whether or not the man's presence at home is necessary.

Q. If the family wishes to notify a serviceman of an emergency at home, can he be reached through Red Cross?

A. If critical illness or death or other serious emergencies occurs in a serviceman's family and common means of communication are not available or effective to the area where the man is stationed, a message may be sent through Red Cross.

Q. What means of communication are available between prisoners of war and their families?

A. Regular postal channels are open. However, no mail should be sent until instructions for addressing letters have been received from the Prisoners of War Information Bureau.

Q. Does Red Cross provide financial assistance to ex-servicemen discharged for disabilities?

A. Disabled ex-servicemen and their dependents may apply to Red Cross chapters for financial assistance if needed during the temporary period in which claims for pensions are pending.

Q. Does Red Cross assist ex-servicemen in filing claims?

A. Red Cross is authorized by law and by executive order of the President as one of the agencies to assist the disabled ex-serviceman and his family in presenting claims to the Veterans Administration for disability and death pensions, government insurance, hospitalization or other government benefits.

Radio Man Honored

Washington, April 3—Heroism beyond the line of duty that cost a member of the CIO American Communications Assn. his life was honored this week by the U. S. War Shipping Administration.

The ACA member was Peter A. Carrier, a radio operator on the SS Melville E. Stone, which was torpedoed and sunk. The WSA said that Carrier, a resident of Columbia, Mo., stayed at his radio key until the last to attract the attention of rescuers for the ship's crew. Carrier went down with the ship.

Union Newsletters to Servicemen

As a means of keeping in touch with union members in service, the American Federation of Hosiery Workers sends them newsletters signed by the union's national officers, containing highlights about union activities and trade development.

In addition, some of the individual locals have set up "letter-of-the-month" clubs, with local members in the Armed Forces often receiving from 10 to 20 letters a month from fellow workers back home.

Most of the locals also send money, Christmas boxes, and smokes at regular intervals. Some of the manufacturers under contract with the union keep in close touch with the workers in service, sending out a monthly newsletter and gift boxes. Quite a few send vacation and Christmas checks.

Union agreements signed by the companies carry provisions protecting the worker's job and seniority while he is in service.

CIO Auxiliary Aid To Fighters Hailed

Work of the CIO Women's Auxiliaries in backing up the fighting men by work on the home front was hailed this week by CIO Pres. Philip Murray. In honoring mothers and wives of Servicemen and merchant seamen during Blue Star Mothers Week (Apr. 16-23), Murray said:

"I am delighted to note the activities of our Auxiliaries in mobilizing women to back up our fighting men in every way possible, and I know that nobody feels the need for this more intimately than to their own womenfolk."

cordance with the military needs of the area. Second, the maintenance of proper military efficiency and third, the availability of shipping for transportation.

Both the WD and the Navy make it clear that the policy of rotation cannot be considered as a definite right of servicemen. But it is the purpose of the policy to give furloughs to those who, while not requiring hospitalization, have been so affected by long periods of service that their health and morale are at low ebb. Special consideration is to be given to personnel on duty at remote or small stations.

Ex-GIs Get First Crack At OPA Jobs

Returned veterans will get first crack at U. S. Office of Price Administration jobs, OPA head Chester Bowles announced in Washington this week.

OPA has a total paid staff of 55,600, of whom all but 4,000 are outside Washington. OPA is now hiring about 2,500 new employes a month, chiefly in the field.

Under this policy of veterans' preference, OPA regional offices and local War Price and Rationing Boards (there are 5,400 of these) will ask the Civil Service Commission to place veterans in openings as they come up.

Jobs available are principally clerical, with the local boards. In addition, OPA hires substantial numbers of investigators, who help stamp out black markets, check on price violations, etc.

For 2 Bucks, You Can Learn Anything!

An important addition to the list of agencies which can help Servicemen prepare for better jobs after the war has been sent in by Lt. H. R. Sacks, an Army orientation officer at Camp Davis, N. C.

The U. S. Armed Forces Institute, Madison, Wis., offers more than 60 correspondence and self-teaching courses to soldiers, sailors and marines, states Lt. Sacks. For the small sum of $2, the servicemen can take as many subjects as he wants.

In addition, says the Lieutenant, "the Armed Forces Institute cooperates with several score colleges in offering correspondence courses on the college level, and the government will pay half the cost of such courses up to $40."

Memo to Gen. Hershey—Here's Tip on Draft

Worshippers of the simple life, facing the frustrations of complicated wartime living, were cheered this week by publication in a New York newspaper of the ultimate in simplicity affecting a subject that has become as complicated as a Rube Goldberg cartoon.

Harassed New Yorkers, who have watched the draft regulations do right about face so often that almost no one over 26 years old knows how he stands with the Army, were encouraged by the following notice:

"When this order is received all men and boys able to carry a spear will go to Addis Abada. Every unmarried man will bring any unmarried woman he can find to cook and wash for him. Women with babies, the blind and those too aged or infirm to carry a spear are excused. Anyone found at home after receiving this order will be hanged."

The order, of course, dates back to 1935, and was issued by the Ethiopian government following Mussolini's invasion of that country.

Says Wrangling Jeeps Is As Easy as Knitting

"It's as easy as knitting," says Pvt. Eva "Bill" Wagner of the WACs when her amazed civilian friends learn that she's not only mastered the intricacies of practically every type of Army vehicle but the gadgets that make them run as well.

Pvt. Wagner has just returned, from a brief Washington D. C. furlough, to her job as an instructor in the Motor Transport course at Fort Ogelthorpe, Ga.

In civilian life, Pvt. Wagner was an executive secretary in the CIO Gas, Coke, & Chemical Workers. Her home is at 220 Emerson St. Washington, D. C.

Gives 17 Pints Of Blood

A "kinfolk" interest in at least 17 servicemen is felt by Basile T. Gaboury, a member of San Francisco local 10 of the CIO Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union. Gaboury this month donated his 17th pint of blood to the Red Cross.

GI opinion is what we want—and we're getting plenty of it, as excerpts from letters that follow show. I am using what to me is a precious piece of V-mail and writing you from a slightly muddy foxhole somewhere in Italy to ask you to put me on your mailing list for the servicemen's edition—CIO News. A friend sent me one which I just finished reading and it was a real pleasure.

Received the first copy of your servicemen's edition just before sailing for overseas duty. It was a splendid morale booster not only for me but for my buddies who also read it.

It is refreshing to read a paper that gives a concise, factual picture of the really vital events on the home front from the common man's point of view. . .

I'll be looking forward to the next edition and promise that my copy will get the widest possible circulation. Urge every CIO member back home who has a friend in the service to see that he receives it.

Just read the first edition of your new paper. I think it is a first rate job. Congratulations upon your wisdom in publishing it because it is much needed. * * *

As a new campaign I suggest plugging for more and better entertainment for combat soldiers. After several months in the United Kingdom which is removed from combat, I can tell you that we have only had Class B movies up to two and three years old and an occasional USO camp show with fair entertainment. This is true despite all reports to the contrary. The best show we have seen was one that was written and put on by guys in our own outfit. * *

Labor's record on war production should be quite clear to any serviceman who takes time out to think of the vast quantity and variety of materials which daily pass under his hands and eyes. But in face of the employers' propaganda offensive, it does need reiteration. * * *

This is to request that my name be put on the mailing list of the Service Edition of the News, if that is possible.

I shall appreciate receiving the News, and thus keeping in touch with Union affairs. As you might surmise, Southern newspapers carry very little concerning activities of labor. Those items of national interest, concerning labor, are sometimes garbled. Today's Savannah Morning News, for example, ran the story of the breakdown of negotiations between John L. Lewis and the AFL under the head "CIO-AFL Breakdown."

Back Bullets with Letters

New York—A union letter writing campaign to back up men on the fighting fronts by demanding that Congress pass win-the-war legislation has been started by Local 16, CIO Office & Professional Workers.

An attractively printed letter is being circulated by the union, to be signed by members, who express their opinions on subsidies, taxes, polltax, etc. On the bottom of the letter is a stub, to be torn off and sent to a man in service as evidence that the people on the home front are doing their part in helping him win the battle for democracy.

U.S. Seizes Monty-Ward Plant

Oust Co. Head For Defiance

Chicago, April 29—Sewell L. Avery's high-handed defiance of the U. S. Government, his contempt for obedience to necessary wartime measures, his deliberate anti-labor and anti-New Deal provocations came to an abrupt climax when he was bodily carried out of his Montgomery Ward office by two steel-helmeted soldiers for refusing to comply with the terms of President Roosevelt's seizure order.

Latest report from officials of Local 20, United Retail, Wholesale & Department Store Employes, CIO, representing Montgomery Ward workers, indicate that certain executives and supervisors of the company are continuing Avery's fight against the Government.

Workers are being shifted from job to job, discrimination is rife and seniority and the grievance procedure are being totally ignored.

REFUSES BOOKS

Just before Avery was ejected, he had arrogantly turned down the request of Under-Secretary of Commerce Wayne C. Taylor, who had been designated to take over the company's property, for the books and records of the corporation.

He had similarly rejected a request to call a meeting of executives and supervisors so that plans could be made to continue the business of the company under Government control with a minimum of confusion.

Finally, Attorney General Francis Biddle, who had flown to Chicago from Washington to take personal charge of the situation and was present in Avery's office at the time, was forced to ask Maj. John R. Weber, in command of the troops, to "conduct" Avery out of the building.

NLRB ELECTION

Avery's actions were in striking contrast to those of Local 20, which had promptly accepted President Roosevelt's directive to return to work. At the moment the union is preparing for the NLRB hearing to determine the bargaining unit at Montgomery Ward and the date of a Board election on the question of representation. The hearing was scheduled for Saturday, April 29, in Chicago.

Meanwhile, Attorney General Biddle brought suit in the Chicago Federal District Court to enjoin Avery and 15 other Montgomery Ward officials from further interference with Government operations in the mail order house.

Indications are that the Federal Court will grant such an injunction since the legality of President Roosevelt's seizure order was completely upheld by the Attorney General in a long advisory opinion submitted to the President prior to Government action.

BIDDLE'S OPINION

In this opinion, Biddle clearly demonstrated that Montgomery Ward is engaged in business essential to the maintenance of our war economy.

He further pointed out that "there is a real and present danger that the labor dispute that is now interrupting the operations of the plants and facilities of the company in Chicago may extend throughout the nation . . . and that the dispute will breed other labor controversies that will interrupt the operations of plants and facilities of other companies, both in the Chicago area and elsewhere, that are engaged in making or distributing goods or performing services that are essential to the war effort."

This, of course, is precisely what Avery and some of his America First friends on the Chicago Tribune are driving at in order to create disunity and disharmony at a time when the nation's entire effort is geared for overwhelming offensive action.

PRES. HAS POWER

Biddle concluded that under the Smith-Connally Act and under the broad constitutional and statutory powers which President Roosevelt has as Chief Executive and Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy, the seizure of the Montgomery Ward plants and facilities was completely necessary and proper.

Many of the leading newspapers in the country condemn Avery for his defiance of the War Labor Board in refusing to extend the contract with Local 20 for a brief period of time. The New York Times says that "the chairman (of Montgomery Ward) and the directors have not acted wisely from the national standpoint. It is one thing to make one's point; it is another to act in wartime with unnecessary belligerence and defiance." The Washington Post takes practically the same position.

More than 15,000,000 soldiers in Army hospitals in this country saw motion pictures provided by the American Red Cross during the last year. Millions more saw them in hospitals overseas.

Diaper-Girdle-Sprouts 'Prof' in Ham Act Before WLB Steel Case

WASHINGTON, Apr. 29—Diapers, two-way stretch girdles and brussels sprouts are three items that a New York University professor this week wishes he never had heard of—or mentioned.

The "prof" is Dr. Jules Blackman. The setting which led to his rejection of the items was a staid hearing of the War Labor Board Panel considering the CIO steel wage case. And the immediate cause of his undoubted embarrassment was an unidentified AFL musician with a sympathetic ear for the CIO's position.

Backman, who acts as a trained seal for the steel industry, was attempting to tear into shreds the CIO-AFL cost of living reports, which shows that the real increase in prices has been 43.5 percent instead of the 23.4 percent reported by the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

"Take diapers," said Backman to the 100-odd and very serious members of his audience. "Twelve for 49 cents, now up to 12 for $3.19 — 551 percent increase. Fantastic!" he sneered. "We can forget about them.

"TAKE GIRDLES"

"Take two-way-stretch girdles — 49 cents to $2.69 — 449 percent increase. We can forget about them too," he belittled, attempting to discredit the basic figures which combined to make up the average price increase reported by the unions.

Backman turned to food. He cited brussels sprouts — 10 cents to 25 cents — a 150 percent increase. Just as he was reaching the nastiest note in his sneering tone, he was rudely interrupted by a raucous note from a cornet —the most perfect sample of a bronx cheer — and sounded by an AFL musician, preparing to practice in another room, who had stopped by to listen to the hearings and who could apparently contain himself no longer.

Dr. Backman was so flustered and the audience was so consumed with laughter that the hearing had to be adjourned. The diapers, girdles and brussels sprouts carried the day for the steelworkers.

Steel Firms Plead Poverty, Boost Stock Dividends

WASHINGTON, Apr. 29—A case so riddled with inconsistencies that it appeared to be suffering from a rash was presented this wek by the steel magnates of the nation to the Natl. War Labor Board panel which is hearing the demands of the CIO United Steelworkers of America for a 17 cents an hour pay raise, an annual wage and other gains.

The steelmasters:

1. Pleaded poverty and said the wage demands would ruin the industry, but failed to note that common stock dividends paid by "Big Steel" during the four war years from 1940 to 1043 were 16 times greater than the single common stock dividend paid from 1936 to 1939 (the '36-'39 dividend was $8,703,000 and the '40-'43 dividends totalled $140,000,000).

2. Cried that an annual wage would mean the "eventual insolvency" of the industry but admitted that they were "optimistic" about postwar employment, and failed to answer the USA-CIO's point that the industry would have to operate at less than 75 per cent of capacity before it would have to pay a nickel under the suggested annual wage provisions.

3. Screamed that wage increases would mean inflation, but failed to comment on statements by the Natl. City Bank that inflation is caused by the way people spend their money. Pay boosts are not responsible.

The main attack on the wage demands was made by Benjamin F. Fairless, president of the U. S. Steel Corp. ("Big Steel"), which this week declared another quarterly dividend on both preferred and common stock, maintaining its war record of regular dividends which are 16 times larger than those paid in the peacetime years of 1936 to 1939.

SAYS INDUSTRY "POOR"

Speaking for the industry, Fairless pleaded poverty, but conveniently forgot to mention the Steelworkers' wage brief, which shows that the industry's total assets have increased over one billion dollars during the war, that its undistributed profits have mounted by over one-third of a billion dollars during the war, and that its reserves have increased during the war by 161 million dollars.

Fairless, in opposing an annual wage, apparently rejected all suggtions for sensible planning of steel production, and indicated that his firm, at least, is committed to a peak-and-valley production policy that has made the lives of thousands of steelworkers and their families into a hell of insecurity.

In support of its position for an annual wage, the USA-IO has pointed out that "the industry would have to go below 75 per cent if it were on a 40-hour week before it would have to lay off any of its present employes and incur an obligation under the guaranteed wage."

The inflation bogey was trotted out by Dr. Jules Backman of the N. Y. University, a trained seal of the steel industry, who said that wage increases would cause pressure for price increases, but did not mention a report of the highly "respectable" Natl. City Bank, of New York City, which said recently:

"Inflation is not a direct product of excess money; it is a product of human behavior. Money does not become wild by itself. It could be dangerous only when used wildly by the people who have it; and the significant thing that is happening now is that with some conspicuous exceptions, the financial behavior of the great bulk of our people has thus far been characterized by common sense."

The panel is to continue hearing the employers' side of the case the rest of this week and possibly longer, with rebuttal by the union to follow.

To Arbitrate UAW-MESA Case

Washington, Apr. 22—In line with its policy of utilizing arbitration procedures in cases involving inter-union disputes, the War Labor Board has appointed Ralph Seward to arbitrate the dispute between the CIO United Automobile Workers and the Mechanics Educational Society of America, at the Toledo, Ohio plant of the Electric Auto-Lite Co.

Polltax Repeal Bill Set for May 9 Action

WASHINGTON, Apr. 29—Rumors of a Senate "deal" to hold a quick cloture vote on polltax repeal (HR 77), lose it, and then shelve the bill were denied to newsmen by Sen. Alben Barkley (D., Ky.) after a meeting of the Senate Democratic leaders here this week.

At the same time, Barkley said the bill would come up on the Senate floor for debate May 9. This is the third postponement from the originally announced date of April 17.

Senators at the conference, besides Barkley, included three polltaxers, Eastland (Miss.), Byrd (Va.) and Russel (Ga.). Sen. Mead (D., N. Y.) who is expected to lead off the debate, was also in on the meeting.

Barkley's denial of a "deal" to bury the bill the way it was buried in 1942 was prompted by a series of daily newspaper stories repeating the defeatist rumors.

The answer to these rumors is to keep writing, wiring your Senators to be on the floor when debate opens, to vote for cloture (end of debate), to gag the expected filibuster, and to pass HR 7 without amendments.

Note: Republican Senators should get special attention. They are the key to victory on cloture and final passage of the bill.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

Price control renewal is getting close to final action. This week (May 1) the Senate Banking Committee goes into closed session to start writing the new bill. House Banking Committee hearings are set to end May 9; CIO will be heard May 3.

Polltax repeal (HR. 7) got another time setback with postponement of Senate debate to May 9. Majority Leader Sen. Barkley (D., Ky.) told newsmen that no "deal" to shelve bill has been made. Cloture (end of debate) to kill filibuster is still the key to passage.

Led by Pres. Murray and UAW Pres. R. J. Thomas, CIO testified on postwar conversion bills (S 1823, S 1718 and S 1730) in Senate sub-committee. Watch for an omnibus bill combining all three, plus added safeguards for labor.

Watch also for a Congress resolution endorsing annual guaranteed wage, soon to be offered in Senate.

Price Control Fight In Zero Hour Stage

WASHINGTON, Apr. 29—Price control renewal, due by June 30, is moving up closer to the final action stage with an announced meeting of the Senate Banking Committee to begin drafting a bill May 1.

This session, which will be closed, will precede the ending of testimony before the House Banking Committee the same week, with CIO scheduled to appear May 3. The House is set to start its bill May 9.

Well timed with the close of open hearings, the Smith Special Committee in the House (Rep. Smith, polltaxer, Va.) issued a lengthy report advocating a series of amendments to completely cripple the act and its enforcement.

The Smith report, to which Reps. Delaney (D., N.Y.) and Voorhis (D., Cal.) dissented, would junk rent control, knock out sections of the act guarding against profiteering, throw OPA regulations into endless court litigation, and freeze wages by law.

On top of that, the Smith report also took a heavy swipe at the War Labor Board, recommending laws to end retroactive payments beyond 90 days, cutting off arbitration, making wage increases only under rules to be issued by the President, and again throwing all WLB operations into the courts.

Replying to the Smith attempt to hamstring OPA and price control, Rep. Thomas E. Scanlon (D. Pa.) head of the Congressional Committee for the Protection of the Consumer, said:

"The suggested amendments would turn OPA into a price relief agency instead of a price control agency. No one must be fooled by the pious promises that adoption of these amendments will not injure or hamper administration of the act. The nature of the amendments is clear. They are a guarantee of only one thing —inflation."

All the amendments, Scanlon said, were "booby-traps" designed to "rip wide open the President's stabilization program." They were proposed, he said, despite the clear indication from labor and all the American people that they wanted renewal of price control without any shackles.

This is the position that CIO has taken all along, and which was emphasized by Pres. Murray and other CIO leaders at last week's hearings before the Senate Committee.

Hillman Names Texas PAC Chief

Dallas, Tex., Apr. 29—C. A. McPeak, veteran official in the Oil Workers Union, has been named CIO Political Action Director for Texas.

McPeak resigned as assistant regional labor representative of WPB to accept the appointment, by Sidney Hillman, chairman of PAC.

As an early member of the Oil Workers, McPeak was secretary of his local, three-term president of Oil Workers Council, District 5, and president of the Oklahoma State Industrial Union Council. He is 39, married and has a son who recently enrolled in the air cadets.

Why Steelworkers Need a Wage Hike

By ELEANOR FOWLER

Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

Do people say to you, as they sometimes do to me: "The CIO has a nerve asking for strong price control and at the same time asking for a 17c an hour wage increase for steelworkers."

I wish all the people who talk that way could have been at the Senate Banking and Currency Committee hearings last week to hear the brilliant testimony of President Philip Murray. They'd understand how the steel wage case ties in to the whole stabilization picture.

The United Steelworkers of America, CIO, made a scientific study of the cost of living of the families of their members. The Bureau of Labor Statistics approved the method they used. And they found that the average steelworkers family isn't making ends meet. They're running in the red 79 cents each week.

The Steelworkers have had the 15% wage increase allowed under the little steel formula. But the cost of living has gone up much more than 15%. The CIO-AFL cost of living study, you remember, shows that it takes $1.43½ today to buy what $1 would buy in January 1941.

It's important to know, too, as that the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, which studies the living costs of farmers, says that farmers must spend $1.42½ today for what $1 would would buy in 1941.

Housewives in CIO families know from day to day experience the truth of these figures. They know that today they have to spend two and three times what they needed even two years ago for essential clothing for themselves and their cost under dollars and cents ceilings have not increased very much in the last year but when they look back to 1941 they find many items that have doubled in price.

GROCERY BILLS

Mrs. Richard King, the wife of a steelworker, presented photostated copies of her grocery bills at the hearings. They showed potatoes up from 31 to 63 cents a peck, crisco from 49 to 71 for three pounds, oranges from 29 to 65 cents a dozen.

What does that mean to our families? It means cutting down on essentials. For many it means not enough milk for the children, inadequate lunches for the wage earner, daily washing to keep the children in clean clothes.

One of the Senators quoted government figures to show that workers weekly take-home pay was up even more than living costs because of overtime and incentives. President Murray pointed out that those figures do not give a true picture because they have singled out one week of the year. They don't take into consideration the weeks when there are cut-backs and layoffs. They overlook the fact that overtime with its long hours has increased loss of time and pay through illness.

Anyone who understands these facts will realize that it isn't enough to peg living costs where they are now. Already millions of American families are living on a standard so low that their health is in danger. To enable our workers to continue the tremendous job they're doing of speeding the output of arms and munitions, of planes and tanks and guns, we've got to increase wages in line with living costs. And all of us can thank the Steelworkers for making that clear.

At the same time, we've got to hold living costs at present levels through strong price control so that necessary wage increases will mean increased buying power. Once we've really brought wages into line, we've got to hold the line. That's the fight the CIO is making.

In the next few weeks all over the country we'll be carrying to the people the message of the need for renewing the price-control law with no weakening amendments as an essential part of our win-the-war program. Let's make sure that they understand, too, why some wage increases are essential to our war effort.

OPA OK, Grocers' Magazine Says

WASHINGTON, Apr. 29—Grocery store owners have "fared well under price control" and want it continued now and as long after the war as necessary.

This was the main point of an argument for renewal of the Price Control Act, not from CIO or consumers but from the grocers themselves. It appears in a recent issue of the "Independent Grocer" organ of the smaller retailers.

"On the price front," the editorial says, "the grocers of the city are farsighted enough to know that they would have lost much of their volume had it not been for ceilings on many food items.

"Had these items been allowed to climb to unreasonable heights, the average family would have found it well-nigh impossible to buy a well-rounded menu and would have sought specialized fields in foods.

"It is generally admitted that the retail grocer has fared well under price control. While there have been, and still are, several items in which the grocer may feel a pinch, nearly all of the price-controlled items in today's grocery store provide a fair mark-up—a margin equal to or better than that provided by independent operation in the prewar period."

Happy Birthday

Washington, April 29—The telegraph industry, long reluctant to cut out singing telegrams, greetings, racing news and such nonessentials, is trying to sneak them back onto wires seriously overloaded with war messages.

This attempt, under way for some weeks now, has prompted a resolution (S Res 285) put in by Senator Downey (D., Calif.) to set up a five-man board to investigate the industry and recommend action to keep it on its war job.

Brophy Urges Backing For Price Control Week

WASHINGTON, Apr. 29—CIO support for "Save Price Control Week," set for May 17-24, was urged in a letter to all CIO Councils this week by John Brophy, Industrial Union Council Director.

After describing the highly successful Citizens' Conference called last week by the "Fighting 60" (Congressional Committee to Protect the Consumer), Brophy said:

"This drive is of vital importance to every CIO union. President Murray has stated our demand for genuine stabilization — to hold prices and bring wages into line with prices at the relationship prevailing in Sept. 1942."

Th price line will break completely if proposed amendments to the act are pushed through, Brophy warned. Food prices will shoot up to the stratosphere and rent control will cease to exist.

Brophy suggested two main steps during Price Control Week: 1) "Join with other organizations of consumers in your city to form a Price Control Week Committee" and 2) "Have this committee wait on your mayor to ask him to proclaim May 17-24 as Price Control Week in your City."

Blood Tests Help Prevent Tragedies

By WALTER C. CLARKE, M. D.

(Fourth of a series of articles on venereal disease by the Executive Director of the American Social Hygiene Association, a national voluntary health agency closely teamed up with the Army and Navy in the wartime campaign to combat syphilis and gonorrhea and all conditions favoring their spread.)

The first article in this series touched upon the tragic toll exacted of babies by syphilis. A woman may pass the disease on to her unborn child. A child born with this disease is said to have congenital syphilis. At least 5 out of 6 of the pregnancies of untreated syphilitic women end in babies dead or syphilitic. Ten out of 11 babies born of syphilitic mothers who have had adequate treatment during pregnancy are free from syphilis.

In the United States, the best estimate is that 30,000 babies are born each year with syphilis. This does not include the number born dead. This is the sorry truth, in spite of the fact that congenital syphilis is 95 per cent preventable.

It is gratifying to be able to report, in this connection, that continued progress was made during 1943 in the enactment by state legislatures of laws requiring blood tests for expectant mothers and for people applying for marriage licenses.

A legislative survey made by the American Social Hygiene Association shows that Indiana, Nebraska, Missouri and Wyoming passed premarital laws requiring examination by a physician of both applicants for a marriage license. Idaho, Georgia, Kansas and Nebraska adopted prenatal laws requiring a physician to perform blood tests as a part of his examination of expectant mothers.

This means that there are now 30 states which have premarital laws for the protection of marriage from syphilis and 30 states which have prenatal laws protecting babies from syphilis. The first premarital examination law was passed in May, 1935, by Connecticut. New York and Rhode Island enacted the first prenatal examination laws in 1938.

The purpose of these premarital and prenatal laws is to enable physicians to find cases of syphilis, and to give the treatment which will protect families. Experience has proved that such legislation results in the finding of a much larger number of cases, and certainly in the prevention of a large number of cases of syphilis among children.

IT CAN BE LICKED

One of our leading health authorities indirectly emphasized the importance of these laws when he said:

"The first thing to do completely, in my opinion, is to wipe out congenital syphilis. That is one job that doesn't need to take a generation. There is less guesswork in it than in almost anything else known to medicine. We know absolutely that with good treatment started before the fifth month of pregnancy there is only one chance in 11 that the syphilitic mother will not bear a healthy child."

Trade unionists would do well to find out if their states have premarital and prenatal laws. If not, they should consider joining forces with local social hygiene agencies and other community groups to gain public support needed for the passage of such laws.

CORRECTION PLEASE: In the April 15 issue of The CIO NEWS an error was made in reporting election returns at the VIRGINIA CAROLINA FERTILIZER & CHEMICAL CORP. S. L. Avery of Montgomery-Ward Co. elects to continue to defy the President of the United States, our Government and the War labor Board. This has been Mr. Avery's conduct consistently. The workers have responded to the call of the President of the U. S. and are now waiting for action being taken to bring Mr. Avery in line with American public policy and the Nation's war effort.

Potofsky Hails ILO Ouster Of Argentine Delegates

PHILADELPHIA, Apr. 29—Ouster of Argentine delegates from the workers' section of the Intl. Labor Organization conference here "is a splendid demonstration of labor's determination to fight fascism in every form wherever it manifests itself," Jacob S. Potofsky, chairman of the CIO Latin-American Affairs Committee, said here this week.

Potofsky's comment came after action of the ILO workers' section in refusing to seat the Argentine delegates who, he said, had been "handpicked by the Fascist-controlled Peron regime."

The action was taken on the initiative of Lombardo Toledano, head of the Latin-American Confederation of Labor (CTAL). It was, Toledano said, "a demonstration to the people of Argentina and of all Latin America that they have genuine support from the workers of other countries."

The CIO is not represented at the ILO meeting, since President Murray withdrew a request for a CIO delegate following bitter-end opposition by the AFL. The AFL, William Green made clear, regards the ILO as its own particular preserve and will not tolerate any other U. S. labor organization in it. Murray had asked President Roosevelt to secure CIO representation, but withdrew the application rather than burden him with such a problem in the midst of war.

"The so-called Argentine 'labor representative' was in fact handpicked by the fascist-controlled Peron regime which has deprived the Argentine people of their basic civil rights and ruthlessly suppressed their free labor movement, imprisoning or exiling its leaders," Potofsky said.

The AFL delegate to the ILO conference was one of three who voted against the Toledano motion to oust the Argentine representatives.

India Unions Protest ILO Delegate

Bombay, April 29 (ALN).—The All-India Trades Union Congress this week sharply protested the appointment by the British government of a representative of the Indian Federation of Labor as workers' delegate to the ILO conference in Philadelphia.

The IFL split away from the AITUC in Nov., 1941. The explanation given by the government for its choice was its inability to ascertain which of the two organizations was more representative of Indian labor.

Comenting on this explanation, AITUC president, S. A. Dange said: "The AITUC wrote to the government last January 5 asking that it examine the credentials of both organizations before making the appointment. If, even so, the government did not have time to explore which organization was more representative, it should have given the nomination to the AITUC, which for the last 20 years has almost continuously represented Indian labor at ILO conferences."

Alleging that the government's choice was dictated "by political considerations," Dange said that the IFL, as a staunch supporter of British policy, has upheld the imprisonment of Indian national leaders and the prolonging of the political deadlock so as to thwart independence.

B. R. Ambedkar, Labor member of the Viceroy's executive council, recently revealed in the Assembly that the IFL receives a monthly grant of 13,000 rupees ($4330) from the British "for doing propaganada to keep up industrial labor morale."

British Labor 'Uneasy' Over Anti-Strike Laws

LONDON, Apr. 29 (ALN)—Workers in war production factories throughout Britain are holding special meetings to discuss the new anti-strike legislation, decreed by the government this week in an effort to curb wildcat strikes.

Under the new regulations, anyone who advocates or incites strikes or lockouts which interfere with essential services—unless he does so at an authorized union meeting—is now liable to five years of penal servitude, 500 pounds ($2,000) fine, or both.

The wildcat strikes, which reached their peak in March, were largely fomented, according to government spokesmen, by "members of the Fourth International and other outside agitators."

While British workers emphatically uphold the no-strike pledge of the Trades Union Congress, and while the regulations were imposed after consultation with the TUC as well as the British Employer's Conference, uneasiness is being expressed over two points.

First, it is felt that the regulations may prevent free discussion in plant meetings called by shop stewards. These meetings are regularly held in order to dispose of grievances quickly. Second, it is wondered what the government proposes to do to deal effectively with provocative employers.

Ken White, secretary of the Engineering and Allied Trades Shop Stewards' Council, declared that the most effective way to prevent strikes in war industry is for the government to deal firmly with provocative managements, grant full freedom to shop stewards to call meetings when grievances arise, and speed up negotiations for the settlement of trade union disputes.

The new legislation met with strong opposition from some Labor members of Parliament, who demanded that it be annulled. Aneurin Bevan, Labor MP from Wales, led the opposition, contending that the law places trade unionists completely under the dominance of union officials, that it is anti-labor and enacted without consultation with the House of Commons.

Charge Spain Lies About Aid to Nazis

MONTEVIDEO, Apr. 29 (ALN)—The denial this week by the Spanish Legation here that Chilean nitrate, transferred in this port to Spanish ships, is being forwarded to Germany was sharply countered by the General Union of Workers of Uruguay (UGT).

In its denial, which followed disclosures by Allied Labor News that the nitrate was being sent to the Nazis by Spain, the Legation declared that the nitrate is used exclusively for fertilizer to help feed Spanish people "of all ideologies."

"The denial of the Falangists fully justifies labor's campaign," said UGT general secretary Enrique Rodriguez. "Chilean nitrate is used for Nazi armaments and not for Spanish agriculture, for the destruction of democracy and not for the feeding of the Spanish people. Not a single gram of nitrate for Hitler: such is our reply to the Falangists."

Other labor spokesmen point out that the fertilizer requirement of Spain increased tremendously as soon as it became difficult for Germany to obtain the nitrate directly.

By the terms of a treaty signed between Germany and Spain at Burgos in June, 1938, Franco assured Germany of 60 percent of all Spanish imports in case of war emergency. According to reliable information, the nitrate is shipped from here to the Spanish port of Bilbao, from there to the French port of Bordeaux and then to Saint Gobain.

In 1943 the Franco government received 80,000 tons of Chilean nitrate and the quantity is to be increased this year.

The terms of the agreement, revealed in a joint statement by the Ford management and the unions involved, provide for the establishment of a labor-management negotiating committee which will continue as a consultative body.

Harrison, national industrial officer, General and Municipal Workers; and J. R. Scott executive board member, Amalgamated Engineering Union. The agreement will run for a minimum of two years.

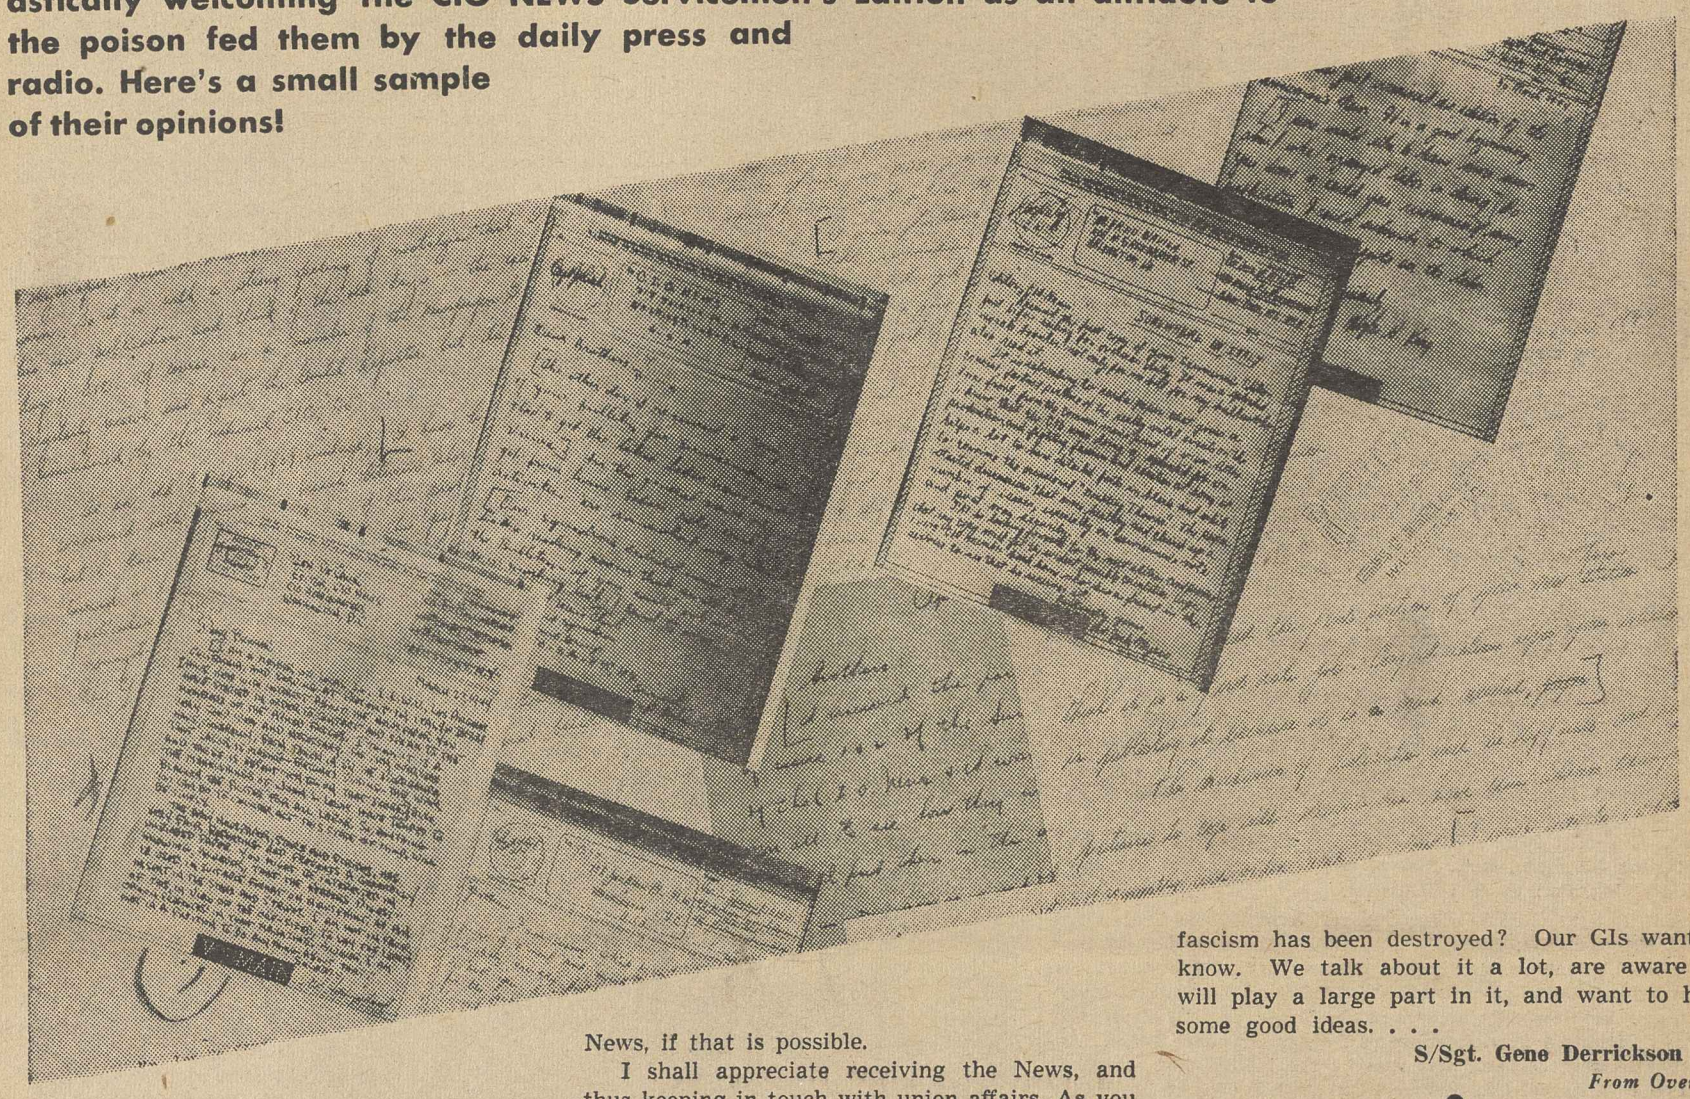
GIs Hail CIO News Servicemen's Edition

Here's What Some of the Boys Have to Say!

From foxholes in Italy to machine gun nests in Burma, American servicemen and women are enthusiastically welcoming The CIO NEWS Servicemen's Edition as an antidote to the poison fed them by the daily press and radio. Here's a small sample of their opinions!



I have just examined an edition of the Servicemen's News. It is a good beginning. I sure would like to have more news about what organized labor is doing.

I am using what to me is a precious piece of V-mail and writing you from a slightly muddy foxhole somewhere in Italy to ask you to put me on your mailing list for the servicemen's edition—CIO News. A friend sent me one which I just finished reading and it was a real pleasure. I am not a member of any CIO union but I think the CIO's record of backing Pres. Roosevelt's war program is excellent.

This is to request that my name be put on the mailing list of the Service Edition of the News, if that is possible.

I shall appreciate receiving the News, and thus keeping in touch with union affairs. As you might surmise, Southern newspapers carry very little concerning activities of labor. Those items of national interest, concerning labor, are sometimes garbled. Today's Savannah Morning News, for example, ran the story of the breakdown of negoitations between John L. Lewis and the AFL under the head "CIO-AFL Breakdown."

Just read the first edition of your new paper. I think it is a first rate job. Congratulations upon your wisdom in publishing it because it is much needed. . . .

I urge you to exhort every CIO member to do his part and mail a copy to a serviceman. . . .

Give us some concrete ideas and plans couched in simple language about jobs for workers and farmers after the war, general employment or unemployment prospects, security, education and health.

What kind of a world will we live in after fascism has been destroyed? Our GIs want to know. We talk about it a lot, are aware we will play a large part in it, and want to hear some good ideas. . . .

Received the first copy of your servicemen's edition just before sailing for overseas duty. It was a splendid morale booster not only for me but for my buddies who also read it.

It is refreshing to read a paper that gives a concise, factual picture of the really vital events on the home front from the common man's point of view.

Although I knew that the CIO was doing a splendid job on production and fighting fascism and reaction at home, it helps a lot to have detailed facts in black and white to convince the occasional "Doubting Thomas." The paper started discussions that were healthy and cleared up a number of issues, especially on servicemen's vote and post-war security.

I'll be looking forward to the next edition and promise that my copy will get the widest possible circulation. Urge every CIO member back home who has a friend in the service to see that he receives ti.

CIO BACKS WARD WORKERS

FAREWELL to arms was waved by charming Montgomery Ward girls as soldiers, stationed in Chicago to check management's defiance, left this week after the U. S. Government's war authority was fully established.

See CIO Victory at Monty Ward in Vote Set for Tuesday

CHICAGO, May 6—An impressive majority for the union in the National Labor Relations Board election to be held at the government-held Montgomery Ward plant in Chicago on Tuesday, May 9, was predicted today by officials of Local 20, United Retail, Wholesale & Department Store Employes, CIO.

The drive to insure complete victory for Local 20 in the election to determine the question of collective bargaining representatives at Ward's is being strongly backed and supported by the CIO and its various International Unions.

The United Steelworkers of America and the Textile Workers of America have loaned seven of their crack organizers to Local 20 to help in preparations for the election.

The United Auto Workers, at a meeting of its Executive Board in Minneapolis a few days ago, voted full support to the Montgomery Ward workers and contributed funds for this purpose and to support the organizing campaign of the United Retail Wholesale & Department Store Employes.

National CIO support for the union had been indicated early in the dispute with Montgomery Ward when James B. Carey, CIO

Urges Full Support For United Retail, Wholesale Union

Pres. Philip Murray has thrown the full weight of the Congress of Industrial Organizations behind the Montgomery Ward employes in their fight for the right of collective bargaining through a union of their own choosing.

When Sewell Avery defied the War Labor Board and the government of the United States, he broadened his fight against the CIO United Retail, Wholesale & Department Store Employes in his Chicago plants to take on all of labor all over the country and the whole American people.

Pledges of support have come from all sections of labor in all parts of the country, and the whole labor movement as well as all other patriotic Americans want to see Montgomery Ward restored to constructive participation in the war effort through compliance with the laws of democratic procedure.
